Within the past fortnight details have been given of various failures in London and Liverpool. They were mostly connected with the Honduras timber trade, and have more or less presented the old features observed in the majority of cases during the panic of last year. The first on the list was that of Messrs. Hyde, Hodge & Co., of London, for £160,000. Then came Messrs. Carmichael, of Liverpool, for £325,000; then Messrs. A. Montgomery & Co., of London, for £81,000, followed by a number of small hangers on. At first some of the friends of Messrs. Hyde, Hodge & Co. endeavored to represent that the firm had abundance of assets, and had been permanently stopped merely by publicity having been given to the fact of their having been unable to meet certain engagements on a particular day. Messrs. Carmichael, it was alleged, were of such undoubted solvency that they would get assistance even from the Bank of England. It seemed strange that with the rate of money at 2½ per cent. any respectable firms should find themselves in insurmountable difficulties, and that, supposing such an event to have arisen accidentally in one instance, it should have fatally compromised a whole circle. But the modern commercial world, for reasons best known to themselves, always obey the injunction to think no evil, and between the day of a stoppage and the period for the presentation of the balance-sheet there is never any doubt of 20s. in the pound and a surplus, and that it is a shameful thing for any one to refuse to join in a general chorus of sympathy. Simultaneously with the disasters in the Honduras trade, Messrs. Portelli, Schembri & Co., a house connected with Malta, were announced to have failed, and in this instance, also, there was great readiness to testify to their respectability. The records of insolvency, in fact, like that of a cemetery, seem only to comprise model individuals, the inference thus inculcated, being that sagacity, prudence, and honesty do not commonly bring any regard, and cannot in commercial transactions be relied upon as safeguards. Happily the publication of the hard figures in the reports of accountants tends, although at the cost of destroying a great amount of sentiment, to check this dangerous illusion, and to show that in trade as in everything else, the "unavoidable" misfortunes upon which people set up a claim for consideration are usually the results of improvidence or misconduct. In the Liverpool case which has just occurred it turns out that there has been a regular resort to the accommodation system on the usual magnificent scale—that is to say, to the habit of putting bills in circulation falsely purporting to be drawn for value received. In the other case—that of Messrs. Portelli—the chief partner has deemed it expedient to proceed to the Continent without favoring his creditors with his address. And these are the details which still constitute an ordinary chapter in the mercantile life of England! The question is, how is it that such houses gain repute or credit? Is it possible for firms to go on and incur liabilities ranging from £50,000 to £350,000 without those who trust them having some opportunities for observing if their business is conducted properly? During the late panic it transpired that the fictitious credit obtained by reckless traders was to be attributed almost solely to the operations of the provincial joint-stock banks. If any given house was known to be in favour of one of these concerns it was always assumed that, happen what might, it would not be allowed to stop, and that third parties therefore might safely venture upon any dealings with it. Is this solution open with regard to any of the cases which has just happened, or must we seek for some new one? How came the congeries of accommodation bills lately floating between London and Liverpool to get the character of good paper? These matters are now carried on for years without an occasional hitch, and when the difficulty occurred where was the helping hand? It would be useful if the whole history could be known, but the common desire of creditors to hush up such affairs is said in this instance to be manifested with more than usual keenness. Certain it is that at the meetings of creditors which have taken place not a single resolution has been adopted for the condemnation of the conduct of those who have been parties to the issue and circulation of the fictitious bills proved to be in existence.—The proceedings in such case appear to have been smooth, and a friendly winding up under inspection will finish the affair.—Times' City Article.

Who Is He?

Who is Cyrus W. Field? What has he done? Is he a genius? Is he an inventor? Has he made important mechanical or scientific discoveries? Did he make or assist in making the Atlantic telegraph? Did he invent, or aid in the invention, of any of the machinery for paying it out?—Did he render vital assistance in the laying thereof? Has he contributed any mechanical or scientific aid in the enterprise from beginning to end? Has he done anything to warrant him in arrogating to himself personally a grand public ovation, intended to commemorate a great historical event?—So far as we can learn Mr. Cyrus W. Field's career has not pre-eminently fitted him to play a conspicuous part, on any stage whatever, before well-informed and discerning critics. In the great telegraphic enterprise, wherein his name, by some fortuitous legerdemain, has been shuffled to the top of the pack, although he certainly displayed much energy and tenacity in urging it on, he yet seems to have played a speculator's part, risking the money of his creditors, and leaving people holding his paper to go hawking it about the streets on such terms as they might. This is not an unforgivable offence, to be sure, did the offender show himself to be a modest man, and chiefly anxious to atone therefor. But when he writes himself down, or his relations, with his approval, writes him down, as the compeer and brother in science and fame of Franklin, one becomes so disgusted at the effrontery of the proceeding, that the pen cannot be restrained from denouncing such an association of names. And when, in the midst of a grand public ovation, in honor of the laying of the cable, Mr. Field rides along the highways of the metropolis of the New World, with his hat in his hand, bowing to the right and to the left, to the front and to the rear, arrogating all the honors to himself, as though he were the god of the great deep, the genius of the cable, and the Magnus Apollo on the occasion, thereby mortifying his friends and causing the pallikars to grieve, it is time that, like the real hero of a Roman triumph, he were reminded of the proofs of his fallibility.

It is due to ourselves to say, that we have never had any personal dealings, intercourse, or acquaintance with Mr. Field, and that we have no personal ill-will towards him. We have confined our remarks to the naked facts of the case, and spoken of him merely with reference to the ridiculous position into which he has forced himself, or permitted to exhibit him, as "the great man of the age." Out upon such assumption—such impudence!—N. Y. Ledger.

Cuba and the Slave Trade Again

There could be little doubt that the immediate result of the withdrawal of the British squadron from the coast of Cuba would be a revival of the slave trade. There has been increased watchfulness indeed, on the part of the American cruisers, as the capture of the Echo proves; but, on the other hand, there has been greatly increased activity on the part of the traders, and the case of the Haidee is one instance of the success with which the traffic is now carried on.—This vessel, which was found scuttled, the other day, within a few miles of New York, landed nine hundred slaves on the coast of Cuba, not only without interruption from the authorities of the island, but, it is alleged, with their full concurrence in regular form; and it is stated that this is not the only case of the kind that has occurred within the last few weeks.

It is in this way that Spain profits by the lessons she receives from her neighbors.—This is the first result of the pressure said to have been applied to her by the British and American Governments. What the nature of this pressure has been has not yet appeared, but it would seem to be requisite that the interference of the two Governments should be exercised in a much more decided way before any good effects can be produced. Advice, remonstrances, even threats, seem to be quite thrown away in that quarter, and it will be very surprising if we do not hear more effectual measures have been taken to exact satisfaction from the faithless Spaniard. The Governments, both of Britain and America, have the strongest claims to redress. Their maintenance of expensive slave-squadrons, for an object which is openly defeated by the selfishness of the Spanish authorities, is either an outrageous mockery kept up to boodwink the anti-slavery sentiment of the people of both countries, or Spain must be called upon in right earnest to relinquish the position which renders their maintenance necessary. How this is to be done we need not say. There is no way now, it must be quite apparent, but the surrender of Cuba to this country. If there is, let it be pointed out. Can the slave trade be suppressed, and the expense of these squadrons saved in any other way? Not that we have heard of. The people who think of nothing else than anti-slavery may prefer to have things as they are. They would, doubtless, feel as if a part of their very creed were taken from them, if there were no longer slavers to catch, and cruisers to catch them. One of their most exciting topics would be forever taken from them, and so they would fain keep up the sport and delude themselves by indulging in this particular branch of negro philanthropy.—The objection of the addition of Cuba to the Union on political grounds can be perfectly well understood; but we can as well understand, and we firmly believe, that this system of regarding every national question through these nigger spectacles is a most pernicious one, and more detrimental to the national interests than anything else that we know of, unless we except the equally fanatical and insensate extreme of the pro-slavery party, as instanced in such proceedings as those relating to Kansas. At the case of Cuba, as at that of Kansas, we do not look through either a Republican or Democratic medium. We consider the best mode of settling a perplexing difficulty, and getting rid of a delusive mockery in the shape of slave hunting, which is maintained merely for the benefit of Spain, and for no good purpose whatever. It costs altogether little short of a million sterling per annum, we suppose, and the continuance of it is merely deferring the suppression of the slave trade by effectual means. That means, the only means possible or conceivable, is to deprive Spain of Cuba. That Cuba must, in that event, fall to the share of the United States, we regard merely as an incident that cannot be avoided. At the same time it will be a source of great gain to this country; for, let people say what they will, such an acquisition, even in the South, must be a source of great additional wealth. Republican politics cannot check American growth in that direction, for, however preferable the regions of the West may be for agricultural settlement, the South will infallibly appeal to the national desire for riches, till the sway of the Republic reaches, without interruption, to the Isthmus, and perhaps far beyond it.

No European power, least of all Britain, has any interest to oppose to such a southward movement. British interest, indeed, is now seen to be rather favorable to the Monroe doctrine, if it is carried out in a reasonable spirit. At the present moment Britain encourages an American protectorate of Mexico. Nor should there be any insuperable objection from that quarter to the acquisition of Cuba on proper terms.—The possession of the island by Spain is regarded as almost the only available guarantee to the British creditor, and the transference of it to America while these claims are unsatisfied, or otherwise unsecured, is looked upon very much in the light of the sale of preferential assignment of assets to a third party by a trader who has not arranged with his creditors. But let the interests of the British creditors be duly consulted: there is no need that they should come to loss if Spain is to receive a hundred millions of dollars for the bargain. One thing is certain, the business will have to be settled, and that before long. America has now commenced to catch the negroes and to send them back to their native shores, apparently regardless of expense.—The cost, direct and indirect, of capturing the Echo, and returning her cargo to Africa, cannot be less than a quarter million dollars when all is counted up. Now, whatever Britain may have done for the last forty years in maintaining, at enormous cost, the humbuggery of slave-hunting, Jonathan calculates he won't go into the same line of business, without getting some one to pay the bill in the end. The new Minister will doubtless have something to say about the trip of the Niagara to Africa. In such expense to be incurred merely for the gain of Spain, the secret satisfaction of Mr. Buchanan's Black-Republican friends, and the humbuggery of the thing generally? We fancy not; and we are much mistaken if, as the first fruits of Mr. Preston's mission, we do not hear something of this business in a more practical shape than it has hitherto assumed. Things have been tending that way for some time, but now the sooner they come to a head the better.—Let Cuba be sold forthwith to the highest bidder, under the condition of closing its ports against the admission of slaves, as the Southern ports of the United States have been for the last fifty years; let the Governments of Britain and America devote the money they have been literally throwing into the sea, and the ships they have employed on this wild-goose chase, to the more worthy object of effecting telegraph communication between the two Continents; and let Spain, as she deserves, suffer for her perfidy and crime.—Scottish American Journal.

Visit to Formosa—The Savages of the Island.

On the Inflexible's return to China, commander Brooker made preparations for his projected visit to Formosa; calling at Amoy to obtain interpreters, he proceeded to that island, and visited Kok-si-kan, Taiwan, Apes Hill, and other places on the south and west coast, without gaining any information that he sought. The only wreck known of was that of the Lirpent, in 1858-9. The crew of that ill-fated vessel were all murdered except three, who, it will be remembered, eventually got to Hong-Kong. The eastern side of the island was closely examined, its bold coast allowing the steamer to approach within half a mile of the shore. On one occasion a communication was tried to be effected with some aborigines who were seen on the beach, but a heavy surf prevented a boat from landing: however, enough was seen of the savage nature of these people to convince one that any foreigners who have ever fallen into their hands were instantly murdered, the frantic manner in which these savages tore along the beach, brandishing their long shining spears, and waving a long ugly-looking knife, is beyond all description. Fortunately for those in the boat the surf was too heavy for these fiends in human shape to come out, although they made an attempt to get through the surf, so eager were they to attack the boat in spite of being under the protection of the steamer's guns. These savages would not hear of conciliation; money and presents were offered them, but nothing could satisfy them but the lives of the boat's crew. There were some Chinamen amongst them who prevented them from launching a sort of sampan; they said their own lives would be forfeited if one "Tche whan" (raw savage) was killed. They had never seen white people before or heard of any being on the island. The aborigines are tall and well made, and have a cast of countenance quite different to the Chinese; it has more of the Malay—by no means prepossessing—and their long loose straight black hair flying over their shoulders adds to their naturally wild and ferocious appearance; their complexion is nearly as light as the Chinese; they were quite naked except a small cloth round their loins, which also served to secure their bowie-like knives. The Chinese who were among those savages, wore the appearance of those we see elsewhere; they spoke with the interpreter, at a distance, but appeared to use signs and gestures as well as words in communicating with the aborigines. They have probably been banished from China, and earn their safety by services, which their superior intelligence enables them to perform. Further north, and out of the dominion of these savages, a fine harbour was discovered and surveyed; it is about 40 miles south of Kidnap, and marked on the chart of Formosa as Soosan Bay; this harbour is quite large enough to hold several ships of size and is well protected from the winds in both monsoons—there are three villages in it, inhabited by Chinese and a race of aborigines called Sidk-whan (domesticated savages), a very interesting tribe; even they had a great horror of the aborigines who live in the hills. A few miles north of Soo-an, a beautiful river was explored, the land on either side of the banks is richly cultivated. Every civility was shown by the Chinese and the Sidk-whan people; their curiosity knew no bounds as they had never seen foreigners before. It is a great pity this river has a bar right across the entrance, as it is well adapted for small craft, there being not less than six feet all the way up. From Kilung, a three day's journey was made into the interior of the northern part of the island to search for sulpher mines, which were found in the heart of some hills of 1,800 feet high, where there were hot springs and large quantities of sulphur. The mines have not been worked by authority of the government for a long time. No trace of any Europeans could be found. Huts were closely examined for any relics, but nothing of the kind was seen, and the people who lived near said they had not seen foreigners before. After completing coals at Ki-lung, the Inflexible continued round the northern end of the island, communicated with Tamsui, and returned to Taiwan, examining the low coast on the way. On the way back to the Amoy, Makung, of the Pescadore Islands, was visited, but no clue of any description could be gained.

GREAT POLITICAL MEETING at Peterborough.

The Government Emphatically Condemned!

DEMAND FOR THE GOVERNOR'S RECALL!

A RESOLUTION IN HIS FAVOUR NEGATIVED BY THREE TO ONE!

From the Toronto Globe.

The open air meeting for the County of Peterboro' took place on Saturday, in front of the Peterboro' Court House. Shortly after the appointed hour, between 400 and 500 people had assembled, fully three-fourths of whom were in favour of the requisitionists. Among others we noticed Thomas Short, Esq., M.P.P. for the county, William Lang, Esq., Reeve of Otonabee, Andrew Jackson, Esq., Deputy Reeve of the same township, Daniel Hopkins, Esq., Deputy Reeve of Peterboro', Dr. Burnham, E. Burnham, Esq., Dr. McNabb, James Harvey, Esq., James Fife, Esq., William Elliott, Esq., William Armstrong, Esq., Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., Andrew Tully, Esq., Thomas Graham, Esq., Robert Harrison, Esq., Gerrard Patterson, Esq., Duncan McFarlane, Esq., Matthew Walton, Esq., David Armstrong, Esq., John R. Mulburn, Esq., J. W. Gilmour, Esq., D. Sutherland, Esq., William Learmouth, Esq., A. B. Downer, Esq., William Coulter, Esq., John Paul, Esq., F. Ferguson, Esq., James Jack, Esq., John Walton, Esq. William Lundy, Esq., Joseph Dickson, Esq., Malcolm Campbell, Esq., William Rutherford, Esq., William Morgan, Esq., John Tully, Esq., &c., &c. The Ministerialists were represented by Mr. Conger and most of the office-holders and place-expectants about the town. The people from the country were almost to a man supporters of the Opposition. The object of the meeting, as expressed in the numerously and respectably signed requisition by which it was convened, was "to take into consideration the political and financial condition of the country, and to pray for the recall of his Excellency the Governor General."

At the outset the numerical strength of the two parties present at the meeting was tested by the appointment of the chairman. Mr. Lundy was nominated by Mr. John Walton and seconded by Mr. James Harvey. In amendment Mr. Conger proposed and seconded by Mr. S. Strickland, Mr. Robert Dennistoun. Upon the question being put to the meeting, Mr. Lundy was elected chairman by at least five votes to one. It was then agreed that the respective speakers should be restricted to half-an-hour each in the first instance, a quarter of an hour being afterwards allowed them for reply.

Mr JOHN WALTON, in a speech full of loyalty and devotion to the Queen, moved the first resolution, as follows:—"That we avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our attachment to her Majesty's person and Government; and our earnest desire is that the connection which now so happily exists between this Province and the Mother Country may be perpetuated."—(Cheers.)

Mr. WILLIAM LEARMOUTH, in seconding the resolution, said that than Canada there was no more loyal colony under the British dominion. (Cheers.) He was happy to see a better feeling prevailing in the country than when he first came to the Province. Canada was at that time ruled by an irresponsible Family Compact; but since then the people had contended for Responsible Government, and having obtained it, he hoped yet to live to see its principles faithfully carried out. (Cheers.) That the rights and privileges of the people had recently been violated by an unconstitutional Governor General no one acquainted with the facts would doubt; and under these circumstances there could be no disloyalty in the demand for his recall. (Loud cheers.)

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Mr. SHORT, M. P. P., then came forward and moved the following resolution:—"That we view with alarm the present financial condition of the country. And we feel that we cannot too strongly condemn the reckless conduct of the present Ministry, who, by their extravagance and wasteful expenditure, and for the mere sake of office, have sacrificed those great public interests which it was their duty to uphold and protect." He could assure the meeting that from the opportunities he had had of observation during the last six months, he heartily concurred in this resolution. Before discussing, however, the principles contained therein, he would take this the first opportunity which had presented itself since the Declaration of expressing the pleasure he felt at publicly meeting the electors of Peterboro'. Previous to the election he had placed before them his views unreservedly and candidly, in refence to the leading questions of the day, and the result of the contest showed that the principles enunciated by himself were those entertained by the great majority of the electors of this county. (Cheers.) His pledges were at that time before them; since then he had placed on record his votes on the leading questions of the day, and by those votes he was prepared to stand or fall. (Hear, hear.) Having supported the measures to which he pledged himself, and having throughout the session sought on every occasion, to the best of his ability to promote the great and important interests which were then committed to his care, he came before them that morning with confidence, appealing to facts to show that in no one instance had he departed from his promises and declarations. (Cheers.) If there had been any change of opinion with them since that time, he must emphatically tell them that there had been no change with him. (Cheers.) If he was convinced before he entered Parliament, as their representative, of the necessity for retrenchment and economy, and for more careful administration of the affairs of the country, he was doubly so now that he had had opportunities of obtaining fuller information on the subject. (Hear, hear.) He would here desire to allude to another matter. He wished to say that although he had been one of her Majesty's Opposition who in the late session of Parliament were charged with disloyalty because of the votes they gave on the Seat of Government question, yet he yielded to no man in loyalty or in affection for the Queen. (Cheers.) The Government of the Queen of Great Britain had won—and most deservedly so—the esteem and admiration of the civilized world. Not only had we cause to feel proud of the Queen for the example she had set the country in the domestic relations of wife and mother, but we had still greater cause for pride and rejoicing that throughout her long and happy reign she had at all times and under all circumstances respected the constitution of the country. (Cheers.) Whatever public opinion had been, when it had been fairly expressed, she had endeavoured to give full effect to it—she had always acted as a constitutional Sovereign should do, and she might therefore be said to live in the hearts of her subjects. (Cheers.) While in 1848, the thrones and dynasties of continental Europe were shaken to their very centres, and crowned heads were fain to abandon their thrones or to surround themselves with bristling bayonets to secure their lives, the Queen of Great Britain, strong in the affections of a free people, could pass from one end of her kingdom to the other with only a single policeman—official guardian to protect her, and even that one unnecessary. And why, because her people in Great Britain met, as her subjects in Canada were doing to-day, and considered the affairs of the Government, knowing that their Sovereign was ever ready to accede to their wishes and redress their grievances when brought constitutionally before her. (Cheers.) As free subjects of her Majesty, the people of the county of Peterboro' were met that day to express their sentiments and opinions, and although their views might be distasteful to some, yet he trusted if they were acted upon, the result would be to the advantage of all classes. (Hear, hear.) Meetings such as the present had been and would continue to be called throughout the length and breadth of the land. Expressions of opinion might be fairly invoked, and when they were fairly placed before the Throne in a respectful and constitutional manner, her Majesty would give due effect to them, and use her power to redress the wrongs under which the country suffered. (Hear, hear.) To proceed now to the discussion of the resolution. He wished as briefly as possible to state some of the leading facts that had been brought under his attention during the late session; and those, he thought, were sufficient to convince every right-thinking man that a radical change was necessary in the Government, and that there was well-grounded cause for alarm at the financial condition of the country. The embarrassments which were felt throughout Canada were the result of the recklessness and extravagance of the ministry that had undergone several changes during the last four or five years, and whose last shuffle—clever though they might themselves affect to regard it—was the most disreputable dodge of all. (Cheers.) He must, therefore, be understood, in speaking of the late and present Government, as referring to one and the same, for as to the personnel of the Government there had only been a change of two individuals, and with regard to principles, there had been no change at all.—(Hear, hear.) He thought we had even more cause for alarm with Mr. Galt, the managing director of the Grand Trunk Railway, as Finance Minister, than with Mr. Cayley, the late Inspector General. [A Voice: "Do you say that Mr. Galt is managing director of the Grand Trunk?] He was not ostensibly so. He had been declared not to be so, because it would be illegal were he to occupy the two offices of Inspector General of Canada and managing director of the Grand Trunk, but at the same time it was well understood that he had just as much influence as before at the railway board, and that he would give as much attention as ever to the affairs of the Grand Trunk; and it was also well known that the Hon. Mr. Ross, another Minister of the Crown, had been and was still the President of the Grand Trunk Railway.—(Hear, hear, and some confusion.) [A Voice: "Assertions are nothing."] It had been said that assertions were nothing, and he therefore proposed to give them some facts relative to the finances of the country. [Hear, hear, and laughter.]—The figures he was about to quote were on the authority of the Auditor General. Mr. Langton set down the gross expenditure for 1857 at £2,315,233, and the total income at £1,458,726—leaving a deficiency for that year to be made up by other means of £856,507. (Hear, hear.) This excess of expenditure must be made good, whilst at the same time public credit was maintained and the public character supported. They would scarcely have supposed, had they not become familiar with the fact, that a Ministry said to be responsible to the people would have taken the course which the Government adopted to make good this deficiency. Mr. Cayley came into power in 1854, and during the period he continued in office certain amounts were authorized to be expended on the public works of the Province, for which the Government had power given them to incur loans. Availing themselves of the provisions of the statutes passed for this purpose, they borrowed money, but not always to the full extent. Notwithstanding this the Acts remained unrepealed. The sum of £150,000 was voted in 1852 above what was actually required for carrying on the works for which it had been set apart, and in 1854, the sum of £350,000 remained under similar circumstances. In addition to these amounts, during the years 1849, 1850, and 1851, the country was in so prosperous a state that a large surplus revenue arose, by which the Government of the day were enabled to pay off £146,000 of the public debt, for the discharge of which the Hincks' Administration had the power of issuing new debentures, but of which power they did not avail themselves. Mr. Cayley, however, fell back upon all these old statutes to provide the ways and means to make good the deficit for the years 1856 and 1857. But he went beyond that. In 1849 debentures to a large amount were ordered to be issued for the payment of the claims against the Government under the Rebellion Losses Bill. These claims were satisfied, and £68,000 of the debentures authorized to be issued under the Act remained undisposed of. Mr. Cayley, in addition to the funds he had raised in the manner before stated, availed himself of this statute also, and borrowed to the amount of £68,000. These sums represented a total of £714,000, which was new debt added to the burdens of the Province. (Hear, hear.) The Ministry had disposed of this large amount of money in the most extravagant, wasteful and careless manner. Indeed, so reckless had been their management of the finances, that those best acquainted with the monetary affairs of the country asserted that if their ruinous course was persisted in, before this time three years our credit would have gone, and we should be quite unable to borrow any more money either in England or elsewhere. (Hear, hear.) The deficiency for the last year was over £800,000. Well, with the very best arrangements that could be made, and provided also the revenue for the current year was as great as during the past year, (of which he regretted to say there was very little prospect) there would still be a deficiency on the year of at least £600,000. Again,—the Ministry came into power in 1854. The expenses of the Government for the preceding year were $133,933; but by the end of the 1857 they had been more than doubled. They had been raised to $291,691—making an increase in four years of $157,000. (Hear, hear.) The amount appropriated by Parliament for the works on the St. Lawrence was £32,000, and the sum actually spent was £183,744. That amount was expended on what was called the "Baby jobs." (Cheers and laughter.) He now desired to refer to another matter, which in comparison with those figures might be considered of small moment, but which was nevertheless of great importance. A friend of a member of Parliament out West applied to the Governor General, offering to sell to the Government a parcel of debentures issued by the city of Hamilton, and amounting to £20,000. These bonds were of the market value of £80 to the £100; but the Inspector General paid him £97 10s, thereby putting into the pocket of the pliable M. P. P. the sum of £3,500. (Hear, hear.) This was only one of the many acts of corruption proved against the Government before the Public Accounts Committee. During the last four years the Provincial debt had been nearly doubled; and, certainly, whilst so much had been borrowed, the taxes might have been reduced. But what were the facts? Instead of the taxes being reduced, they had been increased, they had been increased from 12½ to 15, 20, and in some cases 25 per cent. (Hear, hear.) Then, too, the largest amount ever paid as interest for public debt and other Provincial liabilities before the advent of the present Ministry to power did not exceed £300,000 per annum, the sum paid last year was £850,000; and with all the reductions that could possibly take place during the current year, not less than £600,000 would have to be raised to pay the interest on the Provincial obligations. (Hear, hear.) There would, therefore, be a necessity of large revenues, and, as a consequence, high taxes would be imposed upon all classes of the community, thus increasing the expenses of living, mortgaging farms, reducing the value of real estate, and driving from our midst all who were fortunate enough to be able to escape from a country which was overwhelmed with debt. Surely these things were sufficient to create alarm, and to call for the condemnation of the imbecile Ministry who had thus brought to the verge of bankruptcy one of the most fertile and most favoured countries in the world. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. WILLIAM COULTER briefly seconded the resolution.

The CHAIRMAN then put the motion to the meeting, and a forest of hands having been held up in its favour, and only a few against it, he declared it carried almost unanimously.

Mr. CONGER thereupon stood forth, elevated upon a box, and was reserting upon the very great pleasure he had in addressing the meeting, when an elector asked him what he was speaking to. "To the resolution," replied Mr. Conger. "It has been passed," said the elector. "Then I intend to offer an amendment," rejoined Mr. Conger; and he went on to say that they had been called together for the express purpose of condemning the Governor General, and there was not a single line in the resolution bearing upon the only subject that ought to be brought before the meeting. (Oh! oh!) The whole thing had been a subterfuge and an evasion of the subject. (Cries of "Wait a while," and "We have not half done yet.") He was ready to speak of the course taken by the Governor General; but he was not prepared to discuss the conduct of the Administration, with which this meeting had no more to do than they had to do with an longed to their forefathers who at the battle of Runnymede wrung from King John that palladium of their liberties, Magna Charta! [Cheers.] If the Viceroy of Ireland acted unconstitutionally, were the people of Ireland so meanly-mouthed that they feared to tell him so and to demand his recall? Not a bit of it. They came forward without hesitation, and condemned him plump and plain. [Cheers and laughter.] Their efforts were unceasing, until the object of their dislike was removed. And ought the people of Canada at this critical juncture in the country's history to be less earnest and less determined? He conceived not. It was their duty to be up and doing, and to suffer not the least innovation upon their rights. (Cheers.) He desired to speak with all proper respect of the Representative of her Majesty. He loved, adored, revered, the Queen as the best Sovereign who had ever ruled over the greatest nation under the sun; and his earnest prayer was that the day might be far distant when the bond which bound us to the parent state would be severed. But when saying this, he said that he had come there that day to exercise all the rights and privileges of a freeman, and without any "beating about the bush" he was bound to say that the Representative of the Queen had stepped from his high and exalted position, and had thereby destroyed his future usefulness in this country. (Cheers.) And he trusted as he believed, that when the truth was brought home to the Queen her Majesty would withdraw Sir Edmund Head and give us a nobleman who would command the respect and confidence of the people, and be more suited to represent to the Crown the wants and requirements of this growing and progressive country. (Loud cheers.) He then moved the resolution:—"That His Excellency, Sir Edmund Head, by his refusal to grant the Brown-Dorion Ministry their constitutional privileges of an appeal to the people, and by his sanction of and participation in the recent disgraceful conduct of his present advisers in returning to office, and carrying on the government without the sanction of their constituents and in violation of the law, has forfeited our confidence; and that an humble address be presented to her Majesty for his recall, and signed by the Chairman on behalf of this meeting, and that the same be forwarded for presentation."

Mr. E. BURNHAM, who seconded the resolution, said he did so because he believed the Governor General had acted unconstitutionally in refusing the advice of Mr. Brown and his colleagues after he had sworn them in as his counsellors. The request made by Mr. Brown that the people should have an opportunity of determining whether or not the Cabinet which he had succeeded in forming represented their views, was a perfectly right and constitutional request, and by the partizan course the Governor General took in withdrawing from them that just demand he had deprived himself of the respect of the people.—(Cheers.) He held in his hand extracts from many leading London newspapers condemning the Governor General's conduct; but he would not occupy their time by reading them. It was a blessed thing that almost every man in this Province could read for himself; and possessing that privilege, he rejoiced to say that there were few people in Canada but who understood the great issues before the country. (Hear, hear.) It was contended by the advocates of good government that the present Ministry having become corrupt and unpopular with the people, they ought to give place to better men, who on their part had a right to demand every facility for carrying on the Queen's Government. So said the upholders of popular rights in Canada, and so said the people of England through their journals. The British press spoke out plainly and decisively; and declared that high-spirited people like Canadians would not brook the insult to which they had been subjected. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Burnham) had for many years known those who were now assembled. He had been an active politician; but he was not so now. He had retired from political life. Nevertheless, he felt that, setting aside personal comfort and private interests, it was the duty of every man, and himself amongst the rest, at this period in our history to stand forth boldly in defence of constitutional rights and constitutional liberty. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. CONGER supposed that they had now come to the gist of the thing, and as they were entering upon the consideration of the subject for which they had been convened, he had to offer the following amendment:—"That this meeting cannot too strongly condemn the agitation now being attempted throughout Upper Canada having for its object the petitioning of the Queen for the recall of His Excellency Sir Edmund Head. That this meeting, regarding as it does, the course pursued by His Excellency in the late crisis as being constitutional, and in strict accordance with Her Majesty's Royal instructions, consider the agitation as insulting to Her Majesty and her Representative, unworthy of loyal men, and injurious to the best interests of Canada, the brightest gem in the British Crown." (Groans, hisses, cheers, mingled with cries of "Oh that's all humbug!") Mr. Conger went on to assert that His Excellency dealt with the Brown-Dorion Government in a candid, upward and straightforward manner, in proof of it he appealed to the present meeting. (Loud and indignant cries of "No, no.") Having read the instructions of the Imperial Government to the Governor-General, Mr. Conger averred that His Excellency had acted in strict accordance therewith.

Mr. STRICKLAND seconded the amendment, and remarked with regard to the Seat of Government that it ought not to be at Montreal, at Toronto or Quebec; but at Peterboro'! (Cheers and laughter.) He admitted that the Governor General had acted in a perfectly constitutional manner and concluded by proposing three cheers for him and three for the Queen. (The meeting gave three cheers for the Queen, but three groans for the Governor General.)

Mr. E. BURNHAM replied to the observations of Mr. Conger, showing how little they were in accordance with the real facts.

Mr. THOMAS WHITE, of the Peterboro' Review next presented himself, and was received with a storm of hisses and groans.—He desired to detail as briefly as he could the circumstances connected with the negotiations between the Governor General and the Brown-Dorion Administration and he would first have it to say candid man as to whether they ought to pass the resolution or the amendment. [A VOICE—"Bury your speech in the Review—it will do quite as well."] (Laughter.) Mr. White then charged the Chairman with partizan conduct, and a disturbance ensued which threatened to break up the meeting; but order was restored on Mr. White apologizing for the disrespectful manner in which he had spoken. The meeting then patiently heard Mr. White utter for half an hour in support of the many arguments employed by the Hincks Ministry during the crisis to vindicate the Governor and the Ministry.—He particularly referred to the Queen's memorandum to justify the course which Excellency had followed, and affirmed that the folly of a policy on the part of the Ministry, Governor-General had sufficient to call for the vote of want of confidence.

Mr. JAMES HARVEY made some pertinent remarks. The time was when the kings and queens of England took parts in politics; but those days have long since disappeared; and if the Queen of Great Britain had been in the place of the Governor General of this Province, she would have acted in a very different manner to what His Excellency had done. Civil war was now happily unknown in England; but if the Governor General of Canada were allowed to interfere in politics, civil war would inevitably take place in this Province. (Hear, hear.). Such a calamity would be deplored by every "good man and true." They, therefore, did right in petitioning for his recall, and in desiring that the next representative of Royalty in Canada would be a man who would mind his own business, and follow the example of his Royal Mistress. (Cheers.)

Mr. FERGUSON spoke in reply to Mr. White, who, he said, had put a false coloring upon every matter on which he had spoken, and set up straws which could be very easily knocked down. For what purpose did the Governor General call in Mr. Brown It was plain to every one's common sense that he called him in by the advice of Mr. Macdonald with the pure and individual object of keeping him and his colleagues out of the House until the old Ministry had done what they wanted. (Cheers.) Then he made this memorandum. Now the Governor ought never to have made the memorandum. His Royal Mistress would not have done so. When the Queen called upon a gentleman to form an Administration no matter if it was Lord John Russell, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Palmerston, or the Earl of Derby, she placed herself in the hands of her advisers; and therein lay the secret by which she governed so peacefully and successfully her world-wide empire. (Cries of "Hear, hear.") The memorandum which Mr. White had held up as a great state paper he (Mr. Ferguson) regarded as a most unfortunate document, and maintained that it was the duty of the Governor General to have conceded to Mr. Brown all the privileges which he had given under similar circumstances to his other Ministers. (Hear, hear.) Mr. White had said that Mr. Brown would never have been able to command a majority in the House. He (Mr. Ferguson) on the contrary, asserted that had the right of an appeal been given to the Ministry, they would have received the support and confidence of the people in all sections of the country. (Cheers.) Of that there was incontrovertible proof. [Mr. WHITE—"Shew it up."] He asked if there could be a stronger evidence of it than was presented by the fact of every member of the Brown-Dorion Government being returned to the House? (Cheers.) The present Opposition were also receiving more than an equal proportion of the members who were now being elected for the Upper House; and were the country asked for its verdict, the Brown-Dorion Government would be upheld in Parliament by a very large majority. (Loud cheers).

Mr. CONGER then commenced to speak against time, with the evident purpose, as it was growing late, of wearying the farmers who were present from the distant townships and driving them off the ground. Most of the people, however, maintained their position; but becoming impatient of delay, an end was put to Mr. Conger's eloquence.

The CHAIRMAN having called upon the meeting to divide upon the amendment and resolution, fully three-fourths of those present voted for the resolution. The Chairman, refering to the resolution, said, "I declare it carried." Mr. Conger then affecting a belief that the Chairman had declared the amendment adopted exclaimed, "The amendment is carried."—The amendment is carried!" and called loudly upon his party to cheer. The "boys" at once emitted some very discordant sounds, which were a mixture of yells and cheers, and tossed up their caps; but these demonstrations were completely silenced by the hearty cheers from the other party, when it was announced that the resolution was carried and the amendment negatived by a very large majority.

An attempt was again made by the Conger party to invoke a popular expression of opinion in favor of the Governor General. They a second time associated his name with that of the Queen, for whom three cheers were demanded. The device was however, seen through, and the cheers having been given for the Queen, groans followed for the Governor General.

The meeting then terminated.

The following is the address:—

"TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY:

"The humble petition of the inhabitants of the County of Peterboro', in the Province of Canada, in public meeting assembled,

"MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH,—

"That we approach your Majesty with an expression of loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's Person and Government.

"That we feel proud of the connection which so happily exists between this Province and the mother country, and grateful for the many benefits and for the many acts of kindness which, by means of that connection, we have so often received.

"That because thereof we are slow to complain, and it is only under circumstances of great hardship, and aggravation, and wrong, that we now, and now reluctantly, come before your Majesty, asking your Majesty's attention to our present political condition, and praying your Majesty to investigate the recent unconstitutional conduct of your Majesty's Representative in this Province, of which we so much and so justly complain, and by means of which the peace and prosperity of our country is disturbed, and a great and serious crisis in our government has caused.

"We therefore feel that any longer continuance of Sir Edmund Head as Governor General of Canada would not be conducive of advantage to us, and we most respectfully and earnestly pray your Majesty for his recall.

"And as in duty bound will ever pray.

"Signed in behalf of the meeting.

"WILLIAM LUNDY,
Chairman.

Electricity in Tooth-Drawing.

The application of electricity for producing local anæsthesia in tooth-drawing is creating a considerable sensation. The modus operandi in this described by Mr. Kneely Bridgman, of Norwich. The apparatus is simple, and consists principally of the common electro-magnet machine used in medical electricity, a single cell and pair of plates constituting a Smee's battery, and a small electro-magnet coil with a bundle of wires for graduating the strength of the current. One end of the thin wire conveying the secondary current is attached to the handle of the forceps, and the other end of it to a metallic handle to be placed in the hand of the patient. The instrument touching the tooth completes the circuit, and the current passes instantaneously. The wire attached to the forceps should be made to pass through an intervening boothead, so that the continuity of the wire may be made or broken in an instant, by a movement of the right foot of the operator. The advantage of this arrangement is, that it allows the instrument to be placed in the mouth without risk of producing a shock in coming in contact with the lips, cheeks, or the tongue which would interfere with the quiet of the patient. A hole drilled in the end of the left handle of the forceps and the end of the wire tapered to fit rather tightly allows the substitution of one pair of forceps for another with scarcely a moment's delay. The importance of this subject is so that great numbers will, doubtless immediately have resource to it, so that we may soon expect its real merits to be fully ascertained.—Athenæum.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Copy of By-law—G. A. Hill.
To the Trade—S. E. Curry & Co.
Property in Ashburnham to Rent—John Craigie.
Important Notice—John Might.
Accurate Portraits—John Nelson.
Public Notice—F. Ferguson.
Notice—Pat. Wood.
Painting and Paper Hanging—R. Stevenson.
Notice—Dr. McKeon.
Orange Dedication.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, OCT. 21, 1858.

The Legislative Council.

Following every new infusion of the popular element into this branch of the Legislature, the anxiety to understand how it will be possible to carry out our system of responsible government is perceptibly on the increase. One of the metropolitan journals, the Toronto Globe, approaches the subject, but with so much apparent diffidence in its own judgment, that its readers are still left to work out the problem after the fashion of their own reasoning; while the other great centre lights refuse to accept the occasion, as one upon which to enlighten the minds of the people concerning the working of the constitution in its present shape. Provincial journals are not commonly accepted as authority on constitutional questions, their conductors being classed, with much show of reason, as inferior to the contributors of the metropolitan press. This distinction arises not merely from that peculiarity in the temper of mankind, which inclines them to dispute that with which they are most familiar, and accept, as more reliable, that which comes from a distance, but it also proceeds from the undeniable fact that the city is the field for literary enterprise, and, consequently, draws its recruits away from the ill-requited employment in the country towns. This distinctive feature is so well understood in the profession, that he who, being out of the pale of the upper ten, ventures to stretch his pen out of the record of the passing events of his own neighbourhood, exposes himself to the danger of a general overhauling from his elder brethren; nor will the disparity be removed until the local pride of each division, rejoicing in the possession of a home journal, shall be moved to the support of its paper, to such a degree as will keep its own talent in its own service, and avert the necessity of its possessor looking around for a more genial climate, or enjoying himself in the anomalous business of editorial manager, boot and shoe depositary and dealer in candles. When the electoral element was first proposed as a constituent part of a second chamber, to succeed the nominated body which in every material respect, save that of hereditary descent and judicial character, resembled the first estate of the realm of England, it appeared to us, as to many others, that the change was not such a one as would accord well with the other balances of our body politic. As time wears on, and the difficulties which were then anticipated, come more to the surface, the general public become perplexed, and ask how it is going to work. There is but one answer: it will not work at all. First, because, men elected by the people to legislate for them in the Council, go there with the same powers and under the same obligations as attend those who sit in the Assembly. They are there as representatives, to do that for their constituents which, by reason of their great numbers and separation, they cannot conveniently do for themselves. Now we take it, a representative of a constituent body, like the agent of a corporation, or of an individual, accepts his task, with the understanding that whatever he does in his representative character should be consonant with the feelings expressed or implied of the party he represents. Therefore, if an elected councillor, coming from the people, represents them, and is responsible to them, which no body with any power of reasoning will dispute, (though it was argued by Mr. Conger before the country, on the floor of the House of Assembly, that an elected councillor would represent the property and territory, and not the inhabitants of the country) then, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, which indeed would be nonsense, the Legislative Council is as much the reflector of public opinion as the House of Assembly. Accepting this view, who shall say that the advisers of the Crown are independent of the opinion of the Council? They are as much subject to the opinion of that body as of the Assembly, because the will of their masters, the people, are expressed in each, and, consequently, it must be plain that a question of disputed authority will sooner or later solve in one house or the other; since it cannot be expected that the confidence in the ministry, expressed in one chamber, will be always echoed by the other. When this topic is brought out, there will be a stand still, for, though the Assembly may be overpowered by the threat of dissolution, the Council is not subject to such a course, and will therefore be able to defy all opposition. No confidence need be placed in the moderate tempers of the Councillors. When their passions are aroused, the party they support will give them every encouragement to act with independence, as they are bound to do, by virtue of their relation to the country. Thus, in the matter of supply, it has been the custom to refuse to the Council all interference with the taxation of the people. The reason of this may have been because, representing nobody but themselves, the nominated councillors ought not to be allowed to tax the property of other people; or it may have been that the country was jealous of a stranger hand, indebted to the Crown for the power it possessed, reimbursing its patrons for the favor it received. These speculations are now no longer applicable to the Council. The representative character of its members makes them as capable as members of the Assembly of disposing of the property of the people, and we see no reason, upon which the right allowed to the Assembly, of originating money bills, shall any longer be refused to the Council. These remarks are respectfully submitted to the people, in the hope that they may pave the way to the solution of a question which must soon occupy public attention, and may give rise to the consideration of a written Constitution, an executive directly responsible to the people, or a new political existence. There is one peculiarity of our legislation, upon which we can speak with assurance, it is that our legislators are too prone to alter the existing state of things, for the apparent idle purpose of connecting their names with the records of the statute book. In England, such alterations are made, only upon the gravest necessity. In Canada, the laws are altered, with as little compunction as the By-laws of a debating society. The remedy lies with the electors. Let them eschew demagogues as dangerous innovators; and let them avoid candidates who ask to be elected, not upon their own merits, but upon the borrowed plumage of a party leader. If the first are quacks, the latter are tools.

The Feeling of the County.

On Saturday last the adjourned meeting for taking into consideration the political and financial condition of the country and pray for the recall of His Excellency the Governor General" was held on the Court House Hill. The meeting had been adjourned from Thursday the 16th inst., on account of the unpropitious state of the weather on that day, and though more fortunate in this respect on Saturday last, the day was still lowering and not well suited for an open air meeting. However a pretty large attendance of the farmers from the townships assembled, and notwithstanding the excitement of the Horse Races (got up on the same day and at the same hour by the Conger party here as a dodge to attract attention from the meeting), there was a much larger audience than the ministerialists expected or wished to see, and spite of the hard work and great scheming which they resorted to all along to turn the tables at this meeting the result proved that in the county at large they were nowhere. Elsewhere we give the speeches at length as reported for the Globe and even the most bigoted of the ministerial sycophants must allow that it could scarcely be possible to have a more faithful report of an open air meeting. As for the balderdash which the boy reporter of the Leader communicated to his pay-master, he might as well have written it in Hong Kong, as come here to report the meeting; the respectable few of that party are ashamed of the audacious falsehoods which are published as a faithful report of the proceedings. A factious opposition to the objects of the meeting was displayed throughout by Mr. Conger and his friends, and the promptings of a few of the more enthusiastic followers of the X. M.P.P. were sometimes most injudiciously blustered forth by the willing hirelings of whom their strength on the ground principally consisted. A good feeling how ever prevailed generally during the meeting it being only once in danger of being up set and this when Mr. Thomas White Junior Editor of the Peterborough Review &c., grossly insulted the chairman, for which conduct however he was glad to make an ample apology, and the harmony of the meeting was happily restored. A considerable fuss was made by Mr. Conger after the passing of the resolution proposed by Mr. Ferguson with the avowed purpose of proposing an amendment but when pressed to produce it he could not conceal the fact that he was prepared with no amendment, and that his interference was a shuffle to stifle the meeting if possible at all hazards. As will be seen by the report published elsewhere the resolutions put before the meeting were carried, and the amendment which Mr. Conger latterly produced voted down. Much chuckling has taken place among the ministerialists over a lapsus linguæ of the Chairman, in announcing the amendment carried while before this occurred they were entirely mute overwhelmed by the fact that the division insisted on was only an exploding of their weakness. His little officiousness the X. M. P. P. laboured hard to produce a sensation favourable to his party, but it was of no use, the feeling was decidedly against him and in favor of the resolutions, and from his first attempt, the endeavouring to put his nominee in the Chair, down to the last, the shouting out of the amendment being carried, he was met with nothing but the most unmistakeable rebuffs.

From the fact of this meeting having been postponed and knowing the great exertions put forth by the opposite party to turn the meeting to their account without success we cannot but conclude that the resolutions passed on this occasion is a fair exposition of the feeling of the County. There might have been a larger meeting for such a County, there might have been more enthusiasm outwardly, but the quiet, steady, determined manner in which this expression of feeling has been put before the country, tells better than any noisy demonstration could have done. The feeling here is widely and firmly fixed that His Excellency in his recent exercise of the prerogative, acted very injudiciously, and very unlike what a true representative of our gracious Sovereign would have done, and that consequently he is not worthy of the trust of this important Colony, and ought therefore to be superceded. The feeling is no less strong against the Macdonald-Cartier or Cartier-Macdonald Ministry, and the resolution put by Mr. Short and carried at the meeting is an honest declaration of the general feeling of the County in regard to them.

As for the loyalty of our County, Mr. Conger's amendment was an insult to the intelligence of our Agricultural friends, and we fancy he must have felt this when he heard the enthusiastic cheers which the meeting gave for her Majesty, which most unmistakeably came from the hearts of all.

☞An accident which might have been attended with serious consequences occurred at the new Presbyterian Church on Monday afternoon. As the men employed on the building were raising the pole used in building the steeple, it overbalanced and fell with a fearful crash in front of the Church. Happily no one was hurt, and the only damage done was to the pole itself, about 40 feet of it being destroyed, besides a small corner from the building knocked away. A new one will replace the damaged one in a few days, when the work will progress steadily as before. The Church is a handsome edifice and will be a fine ornament to the Town when completed.

Science and Arts.—A Review for the Month.

THE TELEGRAPH v. TIME.

From Chambers's Edinburgh Journal.

The Transatlantic telegraph has at length been laid, and its two extremities are fixed, the one on the shore of Valentia, in Ireland, and the other on that of St. John's, in the island of Newfoundland. The metallic thread by means of which mankind will henceforth be able to converse from one border of the ocean to the others, communicates without interruption from the old to the new Continent; and in spite of the provisionary character of the arrangement of the electric machines, a day does not pass without several despatches being sent from Europe to America, and from America to Europe, across the mass of Atlantic waters.

The public has already been informed, that on the night of the 9th and 10th of August, a telegram was received at Valentia from Newfoundland at a quarter past eleven o'clock. This hour, which is almost in the middle of the night, seems more suitable for repose and for sleep than for vigilance and labour. The Americans, nevertheless, had forwarded the despatch at an hour when the approach of night had not as yet put an end to general business. The explanation is that Valentia is situated about ten degrees and a quarter west longitude from London, and St. John's, Newfoundland, about fifty-two degrees and a half west longitude from the same city, which gives a difference of fifty two degrees and a quarter between the two points on the coasts of Europe and America. If we calculate as regards time this difference of longitude, we shall find that at St. John's, Newfoundland, the clock is about two hours and forty-five minutes behind the clock in Ireland; so that a despatch which is received at this latter station at a quarter past eleven at night, had been transmitted from Newfoundland when it was only twenty-five minutes past eight in the evening. Let us also observe, that Valentia and St. John's being the two nearest points of the old and new Continents, the difference of two hours and fifty minutes is the least that can exist between any of the cities of Europe and America.

If our globe were entirely encompassed by a metallic threat such as that already laid down between Europe and America, an electric current could make the tour of it in less than a second; and we can therefore fairly say that communications between the most distant points of the earth would be instantaneous. Such a velocity as this makes the motion of the sun, which it leaves far behind, seem slow; for the sun, in its apparent motion, passes over only about 1050 miles (16 deg.) in an hour.

The hour can never be the same in two places at once, however near they may be, when situated under different meridians.—Here is an example, which we will take from London itself. It is well known what is the distance of the Crystal Palace from the Observatory at Greenwich, and also that this distance is further in latitude than in longitude. Indeed, the meridian of the Crystal Palace is only distant from the meridian of the Observatory by some few hundred yards. However, notwithstanding the extreme proximity of the two meridians, the hour of the Crystal Palace, situated at the west, differs sensibly from that of the Observatory situated at the east. We may reckon at ten or twelve seconds the difference of time between these two meridians; so that when it is mid-day at the Crystal Palace, it is twelve o'clock and some seconds more at Greenwich. To take a more extended illustration: Paris is situated 2 degrees 20 min., of longitude east of Greenwich, almost the longitude of Havre; its hour is therefore 9 minutes 22 seconds in advance of that of Greenwich.

If, then, we find such a variation in the time at places situated at so slight a distance from one another, we shall require, now that the telegraph places us in instantaneous relations with the furthest towns of the new world, to regulate with each of them the hours of our communications, so that we need not disturb more than is inevitable the ordinary habits of life. A merchant at New York or at New Orleans, who still enjoys daylight in his own country when we have here with us the night somewhat advanced, is not necessitated to oblige his correspondent in London or Paris to pass the whole night at the door of a telegraph office to await a despatch which has been announced to him, and to which an answer is to be given "per bearer."

New York, situated about 70 degrees 40 minutes west longitude from Greenwich, has its clocks set at somewhat less than 5 hours behind those of London; so that when it is ten o'clock in the morning with us, the hour when our business commences, it is in the great American capital only five o'clock—that is to say, an hour when the greater population is buried in sleep. When the inhabitants of New York think of getting up, it is past twelve o'clock in London; when they are dining in the metropolis of England, they are breakfasting in that of America; and while the people are dining there, we are thinking of going to bed here. Let us take again, by way of an interesting example, New Orleans, which is further removed westward from about fifteen degrees of longitude—that is to say, rendering by time, six hours, or a quarter of a day later than we are in London. Hence, then, a despatch forwarded from this latter town on the 15th August, at three o'clock in the morning, would arrive at New Orleans on the 14th August, at nine o'clock at night! We may likewise send from Europe news dated one o'clock, two o'clock, three o'clock in the morning, on the first day of the month, or the first day of the year; and this news will arrive in America on the last evening of the month, or the last of the preceding year. If we should wish our communications from Europe to arrive at New Orleans for the hour in which business is transacted in hot climates, we must ply the telegraph about noon. A despatch forwarded at ten o'clock in the evening, will arrive on the banks of the Mississippi at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the instant when men return to their affairs after the great heat of the day. It is already fully seen by the people of America that they will receive each morning, about 11 o'clock, as they enter their places of business, the heads of the great commercial results of the different capitals of Europe for that day; they will read, by a kind of anticipation, the day's Europe news before their own day commences!

The Americans, with their enterprising genius, it is reasonable to suppose, will not remain satisfied until they have placed the Atlantic in direct communication with the Pacific. New York with San Francisco in California. This last town, situated 123 degrees of longitude west of London, is eight hours ten minutes later than we are; so that the greater portion of its night coincides with our day, and reciprocally our night coincides with the greatest part of their day. In winter, when the day has hardly commenced in England, at 8 o'clock in the morning, it is scarcely half-past 11 at night in California. At San Francisco, the world is about to turn into bed at the moment when, in London, the first streaks of light begin to lace the eastern horizon. The hour, therefore, the most convenient in Europe for interchanging telegraphic communications with California would be from 4 to 8 o'clock in the evening, a time which would coincide with the morning of this distant country.

The region of the globe where the difference of time is about twelve hours as regards Western Europe—that is to say, which has mid-night when he have mid-day, and vice versa, is the longitudinal part of the Pacific Ocean studded with islands, and comprised between Behring's Straits on the north and New Zealand on the south. It is a region distant from us 180 degrees of longitude, and which we are accustomed to designate under the name of antipodes. As yet the question of extending the telegraph to these islands has not been mooted; and therefore it is unnecessary to pursue these curious calculations further at the present moment. But what we have said of the great western continent will apply equally to the vast continent of Asia; and if we establish direct telegraphic communications with India, China, and Japan, as there is no doubt we shall, the same calculations will have to be made with a view to regulate nicely the time for despatching these swift and sun-outstripping messages.

Mr. Sydney Waterlow has supplied the Society of Arts with some interesting information concerning the mode by which his firm communicates with its three different places of business. The line of wires commences at London Wall, proceeds to Birchin Lane, a distances of 1,500 feet without support, and thence, by eleven stages, goes on to Parliament Street. He seems to have had no difficulty in obtaining permission of the various house-proprietors to fix his poles on their roofs; the total cost—exclusive of the instruments—he states to be not more than £50 a mile, and calculates that the whole of the police and fire-engine stations in the metropolis might be brought into immediate communication for £5,000. The estimate for a subterranean telegraph was forty times as great as the actual cost of the over-house plan. The whole report is very satisfactory, and it seems quite probable that the roofs of the city of London, viewed from St. Paul's, may soon present, with their telegraphic wires, the appearance of a gigantic game of cat's-cradle.

The coast survey, of which we have from time to time reported progress, is so well advanced that a few more seasons will see it complete. The charts in which the results are laid down are interesting, for they contain not only the shores, isles, inlets, and rocks, but also the sea-bottom all around, out to a depth of a hundred fathoms. Concerning this, Sir Roderick Murchison says: "The study of the configuration of that line is instructive: it shews that the group, although separately broken up into three large and countless small islands, is physically connected on the south-east, through Belgium and Holland, with the continent of Europe; while it is separated from Norway and Sweden by a gulf of ford some hundred fathoms in depth. Probably, it may not be generally known that some of the deep wells in London and Sherness draw their water from a stratum which lies fully 300 feet below the level of the bottom of any portion of the North Sea that intervenes between this island and the coasts of Belgium, Holland or Denmark.—The physical geographer will therefore find, if he examines them, that nautical charts teach something more than the mere depth sufficient for the wants of navigation." In the portion of the survey here referred to, 23,000 casts of the lead were made—averaging 35 casts to the square mile in deep water, and 625 casts to the square mile when within a depth of ten fathoms. The cost to the country, including the soundings, is about £30 per mile of coast-line—a sum which, for such a work, may be considered as moderate.

Sir Roderick brings forward another piece of evidence bearing on the question of a Suez canal. Certain engineers and speculators argue that the Nile no longer brings down alluvium, because the delta does not increase, and therefore there could be no risk of the canal-mouth lifting up. But Captain Spratt's Report on the subject shows that although the delta has advanced to such a point that the stroke of the sea, arising from the prevalent winds, is sufficient to keep it in check, the detritus it still brought down and carried away to the eastward, and forms downs and sand-hills, which, at Kas Burun, rise to a hight of 270 feet above the level of the sea. We notice this fact, because the question has inspired in some quarters national jealousy, and all evidence is invaluable which helps to place it in its true light.

The African mails bring advices from Dr. Hallikan and the Niger expedition. They seem getting on satisfactorily, though slowly. The make may be said of the explorers in Congo; and Dr. Livingston, under date June 26, writes that the Pearl had safely passed the bar, and got up the Zambesi—that the launch, the Ma Robert, had been disembarked and put together, and that with his party, who were all in health, he was about to start for Tete. "We all look forward with interest," he says, "to meeting with my Makololo, though several have died during their stay by small-pox." The doctor's expedition has our heartiest sympathies but we cannot ignore the difficulties that await him in the shallowness of the river, and the torment of mosquitoes. Already, when the last accounts came away, the party had lost time and temper from these two hindrances. Letters have come, too, from McClintock, the gallant leader of Lady Franklin's searching expedition. He sailed in the spring of 1857 in high spirits; but the first king was adverse and blocked Melville Bay so with ice, that the vessel could not get through, was caught in the pack, and drifted down into Baffin's Bay—thus losing the first year. However, he was making a fresh start, and we may hope that ere now he has reached the region where his explorations commence. Many hearts turn towards him, praying earnestly for his safety in his endeavour to solve the painful mystery which has so long hidden our countrymen and their two ships, the Erebus and Terror.

A result interesting to astronomers has been derived from the United States Naval Astronomical Expedition, which was at work in South America from 1849 to 1852. One of them was to confirm anew the parallax of the sun, not by transits, but, in astronomical language, by observations of Venus near her inferior conjunction. The reduction and discussion of the mass of observations has been a long and laborious task, but it is now accomplished by Dr. B. A. Gould, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and he finds the sun's distance to be 96,160,000 miles.

In a paper read before the Royal Dublin Society, some important particulars are given concerning the iron ores of Connaught; and we learn with satisfaction that the working of these deposits is advancing more and more among the industrial resources of Ireland. One thing remains to be done, and then, we are told, Irish iron will be equal to Swedish; it is, to use peat for the smelting. An impression has long prevailed that this is impracticable; but peat is consumed at the iron-works, and in blast-furnaces too, in Bohemia, Saxony, Bavaria, and Russia, and always with marked improvements in the quality of the iron. Even to throw a small quantity of peat into a smelting fire of coke makes the iron better. What is required is to dry and compress the peat; and Mr. Buchan thinks that the best way would be to dig out the peat from the bed, beat it up like mortar, and mould it into hard solid bricks, "Were this fuel used," he says, to conclude his paper, "in the manufacture of iron in Ireland, little anxiety need be felt as regards the quantities of extant coal; iron would be supplied of a quality equal to that of Sweden; the great desiderata as to non-splintering ordance, and the iron plates of vessels of war, would be supplied, and rive a of wealth would be distributed over the land and among the people."

And Ireland is advancing in another way by the immigration of agriculturists from England and Scotland; most from the latter country. It appears from a table lately published, that the number of Scotch farmers who are now settled there, cultivating their lands, is 660; and of English, 96.—And the influence of this new blood is felt not only by the work it does on its own farms, but by its example to neighbours.—The Irish cultivator—if cultivator he was—sees that turnips do actually grow larger than radishes; so large, indeed, that some of the roots excite universal surprise and admiration, and though at first he exclaims: "Ah! you can do it, but I can't"—he at length tries, and finds that the same deep ploughing, the same diligent suppression of weeds, the same methods of drainage, and the same cleanly working system, will prosper as well under Irish hands as under English or Scotch—and once he has made this discovery, he is safe—and he soon sends his produce to market—all roads, by the way, on which there is no toll-bar from one end of the island to the other—and ceases to be one of misfortune's hangers on. There is something eminently suggestive in the fact, that in January, 1857, the number of persons on the books for public relief throughout the whole of Ireland, was not more than 56,094. Here in England, in June of the present year, the number was 833,471—larger than it would have been, in consequence of the commercial panic.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Oct. 21st, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 80	a	1 00
Oats "	0 30	a	0 35
Potatoes "	0 20	a	0 25
Flour per barrel	5 00	a	5 50
Butter per lb	0 10	a	0 12½
Cheese "	0 08	a	0 10
Eggs per dozen	0 07	a	0 10

Copy of BY-LAW passed 4th Oct. 1858.

C. XCVI.

A BY-LAW to alter the boundaries of certain Wards in the Township of Dummer.

WHEREAS it is desirable to make alterations in Wards, numbers 2, 3 and 5; leaving 1 and 4 as they are at present.

The Municipal Council of the United Townships of Dummer and Burleigh, therefore enact.

1. That so soon after the passing of this By-Law as is conformable to Act of Parliament, Ward No. 2 shall consist of the 5th and 6th Concessions, from Lot 1 to 10 inclusive; and of the entire of the 7th and 8th Concessions.

2. That Ward No. 3 shall consist of the entire of the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th Concessions.

3. That Ward No. 5 shall consist of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th Concessions, from Lot 19 inclusive to the Lake; and the Township of Burleigh.

4. That Ward No. 1 shall consist as at present of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Concessions, from Lot 1 to 10 inclusive.

5. That Ward No. 4 shall consist as at present of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th Concessions from the 11th Lot to the 18th inclusive.

F. CROW, Reeve.

G. A. HILL, Clerk.

Accurate Life-Like PORTRAITS,

TAKEN IN THE MOST EFFECTIVE STYLE OF THE ART.

☞ At greatly reduced prices, to meet the exigency of the times.

MR. NELSON begs respectfully to introduce himself to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding country as a Photographic Artist,—late of England,—and being possessed of all the appliances of a recent discovery is able to ensure a faithful likeness, in the most approved style of the art.

Mr. N. promises to hope that he shall by a careful and masterly manipulation and accuracy of likeness justify any encouragement with which he may be favored.

And he would further intimate to those who may favour him with a sitting, that a dark coloured costume is best adapted for effect.

N. B.—Miniatures for pins, rings, brooches, and lockets; and Letter Portraits taken on a variety of materials, for transmission by post.—Lockets, and Chains of Gold Safe lotion, Engravings and Paintings Copied.

JOHN NELSON.

Portrait Rooms,—Dixon's Brick Block George St.
Peterborough Oct. 20th 1858. 41.

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBER offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSON'S old and young,
" Twankay & Twankay,
GUNPOWDER,
CONGOU,
SOUCHONG, &c.
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba.
Redpath's Crushed, A.
Dry Crushed & broken Loaf,
Lumps,
Ground,
Extra ground (for preserving)
Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, &c. 10s. & lbs. & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Burns, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, ½ dō. ¼ do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batty's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (raw Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Casks, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PARS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash Boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON store, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Ethelinth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.

Ashburnham, Oct. 21st

SCIENTIFIC.

THE GEOMETRY OF THE HUMAN FORM.

Man, says Bonomi, is found to be constructed on purely geometric laws, though the beauty of his body and the harmony of its parts are now forever, we suppose, hidden by the labors of the tailor.' A great miracle is a house that widens and widens without any reconstruction, and adapts itself to the fresh wants of every year—that widens and still preserves its original shape and form. Nature, in the composition of the human frame, has so ordained that the face from the chin to the highest point of the forehead whence the hair begins, is a tenth part of the whole stature: the same proportion obtains in the hand measured from the wrist to the extremity of the middle finger. The head, from the chin to the top of the scalp, is an eighth. From the top of the chest to the highest point of the forehead is a seventh. From the nipples to the top of the scalp is a fourth of the whole stature. If the length of the face, from the chin to the roots of the hair, be divided into three equal parts, the first division determines the place of the nostrils; the second point where the eyebrows meet. The foot is the seventh part of the height of the entire frame; the cubit and the chest are each a fourth. The other members have certain affinities which were always observed by the most celebrated of ancient painters and sculptors, and we must look for them in those productions which have excited universal admiration. The navel is naturally the central point of the human body; for if a man should lie on his back with his arms and legs extended, the periphery or the circle which may be described about him, with the navel for its centre, would touch the extremities of his hands and feet. The same affinities obtain if we apply a square to the human figure; for, like the contiguous sides, the height from the feet to the top of the head to be the same as the distance from the extremity of one hand to the other, when the arms are extended. The standards, according to which all admeasurements are wont to be made, are likewise deduced from the members of the body; such as the digit, the palm, the feet, and the cubit; all of which are subdivided by the perfect number which the Greeks called Telios.

ACIDS.

The sourness of the juice of the lemon and the acidity of vinegar are so well known that the mere mention of them is sufficient to convey a knowledge of the chief qualities of sours or acids in their natural state. There are so many acids that two or three pages of an index to a chemical book are taken up in enumerating them. Every fruit contains an acid; nearly all the metals are capable of forming acids. When coal, wood, paper, rags, charcoal, brimstone, phosphorium, and many other substances are formed, acids are produced. A flint stone is an acid. There is an acid in our window glass, and in many of the most costly precious stones. The air we breathe contains an acid. We create an acid in the lungs by the act of breathing. By a very slight change sugar can be converted into oxalic acid, which is a strong poison. Sugar, by another change, is converted into vinegar. These two illustrations show that a sweet can be converted into a sour; but when sour fruit becomes sweet it proves almost to demonstration that a sour can become a sweet acid. The most powerful acid is that derived from burning sulphur—it is called sulphuric acid, and is one of the most important articles of manufacture. Its acidity is so great that a tea-spoonful is sufficient to make a pail-full of water quite sour. Nitric acid, obtained from nitre, or saltpetre, is of the next importance in the arts, it is so strong that it has long been distinguished by the name of aqua fortis, that is, strong water—strong, sure enough, for a nodule of iron, lead, or silver, dissolves in it as sugar does in water. From the number of acids which we find in nature, and the tendency of many artificial substances to become sour, it is evident that sours and acids are essential to our life and well-being. Acids assume all forms and colours; some are liquids, some are gaseous, others solid. The acids of fruits, when separated from the grosser particles that accompany them, are very beautiful and chrystalizable substances. By the ingenuity of the chemist the sour of unripe apples, grapes, tamarands, lemons, &c., may be chrystalized into beautiful snow-white bodies, which, however, when touched by the tongue, at once indicate their origin in their flavor.

OXYGEN.

By the time (writes Septimus Piesse) we introduce the reader to the king of the elements, whose power is universal. The sea, the air, and the dry land would cease to exist without it. It is our friendly ally and inveterate foe. We cannot exist without oxygen, yet it is the ultimate cause of death and decay. It is the giver of light and heat, for no combustible material can burn without it. In fact, were it not for oxygen, there would be a universal chaos of matter; there would be no living thing creeping or growing upon the face of the globe; and the sun would shine only upon a metallic spheroid, such as is, probably the moon and stars. The air, containing one-fifth of oxygen, is the natural source for obtaining it; but to separate it by any direct process, to sift it out, as it were, is a problem as yet to be solved by chemical genius. When we want oxygen for experiments we separate it from some material that has already drawn it from the atmosphere, such as the oxyd of mercury or manganese. The novice may also obtain oxygen from chlorate of potass. It is a very simple experiment. Mix a little chlorate of potass with an equal weight of washed silver-sand; put the mixture into a clean oil flask, and set it over a clear fire. The chlorate will soon melt, and then boil; every bubble is a bladder of oxygen gas, which now invisibly fills the flask. To prove its presence, take half an inch of the sulphuric end of a match, stick it on the end of a piece of fine wire, light the match, and then quickly pass it into the interior of the oxygen chamber; you will then see the intense vivifying effects of the king of the elements; and if you are expert, the wire will take fire when the last of the match is consumed. All the rest you will learn without a book.

DISTANCE OF THE SUN.

Professor Gould, says the Ohio Journal of Education, has obtained the sun's equatoral horizontal parallax, showing that the sun is 96,180,000 statute miles distant from the earth, instead of 95,000,000 usual computation.

SLEEP.

There is no fact more clearly established in the physiology of man than this, that the brain expends its energies and itself during the hours of wakefulness, and that these are recuperated during sleep; if the recuperation does not equal the expenditure, the brain withers—this is insanity. Thus it is, that in early English History, persons who were condemned to death by being prevented from sleeping, died raving maniacs; thus it is also that those who are starved to death become insane; the brain is not nourished, and they cannot sleep. The practical inferences are three: 1st. Those who think most, who do most brain work, require most sleep. 2nd. That time "saved" from necessary sleep is infallibly destructive to mind, body and estate. 3rd. Give yourself, your children, your servants, give all that are under you the fullest amount of sleep they will take by compelling them to go to bed at some regular, early hour, and to arise in the morning the moment they wake of themselves, and, within a fortnight, nature, with almost the regularity of the rising sun, will unloose the bonds of sleep the moment enough repose has been secured for the wants of the system. This is the only safe and sufficient rule; and as to the question how much sleep any one requires, each must be a rule for himself; great nature will never fail to write it out to the observer under the regulations just given.

Life Association of Scotland

NINETEENTH REPORT.

THE NINETEENTH Annual Meeting of the Association was held within the Head Office, Edinburgh, on the 3rd August current, in terms of the Charter and Act of Parliament,—SIR JAMES FORREST, BART., of Comiston, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the Meeting the ANNUAL REPORT by the DIRECTORS on the Progress of the Business; the REPORT of the AUDITOR, Mr. W. WOOD, Accountant; and the BALANCE SHEET of the ACCOUNTS, certified in terms of the Act of Parliament; with other statements of the Affairs, as at 5th April last, the date of balance.

Notwithstanding the general depression of commercial affairs, the Progress of the Association during the past year has been greater than in any former year, with only one exception.

The Applications for New LIFE ASSURANCES during the year were.....1247 for £666,483 stg.
Of which the Directors accepted.....1006 for £550,244 stg.
The ANNUAL PREMIUMS being.....£18,811 stg.

ANNUITIES on 24 lives were purchased for.....£875 19s. stg. per annum, at the price of....£9487 7s. stg.

The POLICIES that became claims on the Association by deaths during the year amounted to 85 for £43,065 stg.

The TOTAL ASSURANCES since the commencement of the business amount to nearly FIVE MILLION POUNDS Sterling.

The ANNUAL INCOME is now ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT THOUSAND POUNDS Sterling.

The POLICY HOLDERS entitled to participate in the Profits, who completed their fifth year before the date of balance, will be entitled to a REDUCTION of 35 per cent. (7s per £1) from their next Annual Premiums.

From the increasing wealth and importance of British North America, as well as the example of other Assurance Offices, the Directors have for some time entertained the idea of establishing Branches there. They have been enabled since last meeting to accomplish this. A deputation from the Directors visited the chief Towns, and secured the co-operations of influential gentlemen in each Province. Although the branches have been in operation only for a few months, the transactions have already been considerable, as well as of a most satisfactory description. Special thanks are due to the gentlemen acting as Directors, Medical Officers, and Agents there, who have already interested themselves much in the Association's affairs, and through whose exertions there is every prospect of permanent success.

The REPORT by the Board of Directors was unanimously approved. The Vacancies in the Board were then filled up; and after special votes of thanks to the Directors at the Head Office and Branches, and the Agents, Medical Officers, Managers, &c., the meeting separated.

DIRECTORS AT MONTREAL:
9 GREAT ST. JAMES STREET,

J. G. MACKENZIE, Esq., Merchant.
DAVID TORRANCE, Esq., Merchant.
GEORGE MOFFAT, Jr., Esq., of Gillespie, Moffatt & Co., Merchants.
ALEXANDER MORRIS, Esq., Advocate.

SECRETARY.....JAMES GRANT.

Branches at Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, London and Quebec.
Agencies in every Town in Canada.
Montreal, Aug. 24, 1858.

Agents:

Peterborough—Robert Dennistoun, Barrister.
Cobourg—Arthur McDonald, N. P.
Lindsay—James McKibbon, Bank of Upper Canada.
Port Hope—James E. Walsh, Merchant.

36—1m.

PORTRAIT
OF THE
Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.
SPECIMEN
To be seen and orders received at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now on sale at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
Book and Stationery Store, George St.
PRICE 50 cents, or in Guilt Frames, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of
LITERATURE.
PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c.,&c.,
which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.
SAWERS & MURRAY
Peterboro', October 6th, 1856. 39

FOR SALE

LOT No. 6, South of Dublin and West of George Streets, in the Town of Peterboro'. Apply to MALCOLM McDONALD, Smith, or the "Examiner" Office.
October 11th, 1858. 40-3in

TO HOTEL, TAVERN, AND SALOON KEEPERS, IN PETERBORO AND VICINITY.

THE subscriber having made arrangements in New York, Boston and Portland, for the supplying of Shell, Cod, Lob. and Count Oysters, is now prepared to furnish parties at wholesale prices to duly competitors, during the season. All orders must be accompanied with the cash, addressed,
R. G. BLACKHAM,
New York Oyster Depot,
Port Hope.
Port Hope, Oct. 11th, 1858. 40-3in

NOTICE.

I HEREBY CAUTION any persons against buying or negotiating a Note of mine in favour of Thos. Wilson, for £15, dated about the beginning of September last, as the same was obtained from me under false pretences.
DAVID HALL.
Otonabee, 11th Oct., 1858. 40-3in

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARBY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.
Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.
W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company,

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE & M RINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.
CAPITAL £2,500.00 Sterling.
CHIEF Office,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,927,600. Paid up Capital, $430,356.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON. | E. F. WHITEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.
Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.
JOHN POPE.
Bridgenorth, June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 3-tf.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.
CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN
SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.
WALTER HUEST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.
Blythe Mills, Peterboro', }
July 20, 1858. } 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership, lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.
HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.
HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.
A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attache.50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun..50 "
Tom Cringles' Log.....75 "
The Cruise of the Midge.....75 "
Yankee Notions for September.....12½ "
And a host of other capital things at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.
Peterboro', August 26, 1858.

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.
JANE HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth, Sept. 10, 1858. 36

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.
ROBERT WHITE,
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858- 39-tf

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

AXE FACTORY.

THE subscriber is now having manufactured by P. J. AYRES, at his old stand, near the Otonabee Mills, a large lot of DOUBLE STEELED AXES, BROAD & NARROW AXES,
CARPENTERS TOOLS, &C., &C.,
of the best quality and workmanship, which may be had either at the Factory or at the subscriber's store, on reasonable terms.
R. D. RODGERS.
Ashburnham, September 22rd 1858. 37

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.
A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

MUD LAKE TO BOBCAYGEON.

THE STEAMER "FLY,"
WILL run between these places, until the close of the Season. On Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, leaving Mud Lake at 9 A. M., and Bobcaygeon at 1 P. M.
Peterboro', Oct. 12, 1858.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ¾ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £300 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.
JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

TAKE NOTICE!

ALL Parties indebted to me, who wish to avoid paying 12½ PER CENT INTEREST, will please to settle their liabilities immediately, as I will charge that rate of interest on all NOTES & ACCOUNTS, due, or accruing due from the 1st instant.

All debts due prior to this date must be settled before the 10th October, or they will pass into other hands for collection.
T. G. HAZLITT.
Peterboro', September, 1858. 38—3t

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good
CEDAR LOG HOUSE,
And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.
The property is three miles from
NORWOOD.
On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.
HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL,
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a
FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.
There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water
SAW MILL,
in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to
W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.
J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.
Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.
Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.
J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

—:o:—

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of
The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.
Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.
They also receive orders for all kinds of
COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.
Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.
A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.
Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson
BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the
SUPERIOR AXES
he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers
Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,
WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD SURVEYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground to quick order,
W. MOCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857. 41

NOTICE.

PARTIES are requested to take notice that the Accounts for the last half year are now ready for delivery, and a prompt settlement is requested, as the subscribers are now closing their Book Accounts. Those accounts unsettled by cash payments or note will be by the 1st of November handed over for collection.
A. FOWLIS & Co.

☞ Take notice that interest will be charged in future at the rate of 12 per cent.
Peterboro', October 7th, 1858. 39-6in

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water up on the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.
Terms, Liberal.
For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to
W. R. SCOTT
Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.
A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

—:o:—

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of
FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,
Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in
LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,
He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.
W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,
WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—
A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.
their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.
Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated..	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch.....	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12	Note " " " "	2
3	Steel Pens.....	1
1	Holder.....	1
1	Pencil.....	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper.....	1
Making a total of.....		1s 3d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,
S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of
Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,
Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.
A CALL SOLICITED,
SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE?
CORNER OF HUNTER AND ALBERT STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.
Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 10, 1857. 41

NOTICE.

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.
Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 9

HASTINGS' HOUSE,
PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renovated and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them so to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to ensure this object.
T. W. HASTINGS & SON.
Port Hope, May, 1857. 38

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs.....	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 2 plates.....	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates.....	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping.....	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy.....	0,40
Do. Savoy of Grace.....	0,30
Do. Truth and Error.....	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..	0,40
Do. Eternal Day.....	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate.....	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot.....	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One.....	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain..	0,30
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies.....	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy.....	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses..	0,60
Dick. Dr.—Christian Philosopher.....	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated.....	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated.....	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 830 pages.....	3,00
Gillilan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant.....	0,60
Guthrie's Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel.....	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption.....	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation.....	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland....	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret.....	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement.....	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches...	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus.....	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus.....	0,40
Do Family Prayers.....	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion.....	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones.....	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany.....	0,40
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story.....	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion.....	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government.	2,00
Menteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant.....	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies.....	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters.....	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland.....	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles.....	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, illustrated.....	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of SAWERS

PRINTING

OF

EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Plain, Colored, Fancy

AND

Ornamental.----Bronzing,

&c., &c., &c.,

Neatly executed, on the shortest notice and in the latest style, at the Office of the

EXAMINER.

Burnham's Block,

OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 42.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0 2 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 3 4
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 4
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognised.

Business Directory.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Paralleling executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

Provincial Land Surveyors, Civil Engineers and Land Agents. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now inclided in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. CENNISTOUN,

Barrister at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. D. J. Vizard, Esq.

W. B. RUDIDGE,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.

Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

Has removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidges.

Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1857.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

Surgeon and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALDRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

MESSRS. STEWART,

Architects, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.

Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

Interest will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 26th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

Communication through the Post Office, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

Fashionable Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

Hunter Street, Peterborough, Canada West.

Meals at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

Have always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

Burnham's Block, George-st.

33

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

Fashionable Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

Architect, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET.

Near Peterborough.

The Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to Charles Dunlop, Dodo, or

GEORGE A. STEWART,

Port Hope.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $20!

Asthma UNDERSIGNED is in possession of a quick and effectual remedy for the aforesaid distressing disease, and will, for the benefit of those afflicted with it, may apply to him with the understanding of having returned to perfect health, in a period not exceeding one month. $20 to be paid

[illegible] (for himself [illegible] for pain) to [illegible] Grocery of Scantlebrook and Aylmer Streets.

[illegible] with certificate, sent by mail, when [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[

Mr. Scott Russell, that the French as well as the English Government are conducting a series of experiments on the practicability of employing iron casings as defences to ships of war; and he expressed the opinion that ships may be in that manner very effectually protected. The use of steel plates instead of iron was stated to have proved a failure, and the opinion, in which most of the engineers who spoke on the subject agreed, is, that it is better to have a softer material externally to cushion the shot, and a harder substance underneath.

A paper on the constitution of comets, in the Physical Section, excited interest, but it was altogether speculative.

And also a paper was read by Dr. Strang of Glasgow, in the Statistical Section, on the water supply of great towns,—its extent, cost, uses, and abuses.

The first soiree was held in the evening at the Town-hall, which is admirably adapted for the purpose, and was made the most of on this occasion. In the great hall there were tables extending nearly its whole length, on which were displayed various objects to interest and amuse; in the adjoining rooms the Photographic Society of Leeds exhibited some of their most choice productions, and though last not least, saloons for refreshments were thrown open the whole evening. Among the objects of interest in the Photographic department were numerous views of Lucknow, showing the Residency, and all the buildings which have become celebrated by the seige, together with a birds-eye view of the whole town. There was also exhibited a large view of the Forum at Rome at least three feet in length, excellently focused. This, however, had been taken by three operations, but the junctions were so well contrived as not to be visible. On entering the great hall, a sound like that of a penny rattle attracted attention; the noise of the toy being closely imitated by the action of one of the latest inventions in electricity—large induction coil, which charged a Leyden jar so rapidly that the discharges followed each other as quickly as the distinct sounds of a rattle. This induction coil, which was exhibited by Mr. Ladd of London, was excited by only five cells of a Grove's battery, and sparks passed between the points at a distance of four inches apart, presenting a close resemblance to the zig-zag directions of forked lightning. It was one of the amusements of the evening for the visitors to have their cards perforated by the electric sparks thus excited. Among the curiosities displayed on the tables were the patents granted in 1735 and 1758 to Lewis Paul, the original inventor of the cotton spinning machine, which Arkwright has the reputation of having invented, together with autograph letters from Dr. Johnson to the Duke of Bedford, recommending Paul to his notice as the inventor of the mechanism. During the evening the great organ was played by Mr. Spark, but an announcement was given that it is still not completed, so that the performer, it was stated, "is unable to produce at present any of those novel and grand effects which are confidently anticipated from this instrument." The suits of rooms were not at all too large for the numerous company assembled, and this first conversatione at Leeds passed off remarkably well."

Newspaper Poetry.

From the Montreal Advertiser.

Two country Editors were vainglariously boasting, as the tribe will, on the special advantages of their rival journals, when one of them knocked his opponent's pretensions into a cocked hat by the announcement—"We keep a Poet."

Now, whether a Poet is as hard to keep as a horse, we do not know, never having stabled any of the genus; but our experience would lead us to suppose that they are not difficult to acquire.

We do not keep a Poet; but we have half a dozen of them for contribution; patient, pertinacious, and not to be discouraged geniuses they are, as our waste basket can testify. Odes and Sonnets, Songs and Elegies, Verses on all sorts of subjects and occasions, to all sorts and conditions of people, and Verses on no occasions at all, and on no discoverable subject, lie in that Purgatory. Intended to delight the world, their fate is to light pipes, and the only wreath that awaits them is the wreath of smoke which they aid to produce, and in which they vanish. They came from nothing, and to nothing they return.

We pray our poetical friends to spare themselves the trouble of fair-copying, and us the pain of rejecting indifferent prose done in rhyme. We have no desire to discourage you from weaving verses day and night if you please, for any kind of literary composition is useful to those who practice it, and the habit of thought which it engenders may produce greater and more solid results than its earliest fruits promised, and if not necessarily in rhyme, yet in reason, which is better; but poetry for publication ought either to be good enough to create admiration, or bad enough to excite laughter. That which halts between these two conditions should be reserved for the select circle of less fastidious friends than a public audience is likely to be. And although it is inexpressibly pleasant to the young author to behold his productions in the dignity of type, yet the pleasure is too dearly paid for when the poet's corner is thus converted into a pillory for folly. We have no desire to act the part of public executioner in such cases, but prefer to sacrifice the condemned in private, making them more useful in their deaths than they were beautiful in their lives. Gentlemen rhymsters, our stock of pipe-lights depends upon the vigor of your vanity.

(Endorsed Peterborough Examiner.)

Lola Montez and the Clergy.

Lola Montez seems lately to have taken a religious turn and given a subscription for charitable purposes to a Clergyman in New York. Some of the ecclesiastical authorities having questioned the motives with which the donation was made, the talented lady replies to the insinuations in the following letter which she sent to the New York Herald:—

"May I ask the favour of a small space in your paper? I perceive that some of the papers (and I am informed that the bishop and others of the clergy have interfered) are casting reflections upon the little donation which I have offered to make for the purpose of rebuilding a church designed for the free use of the poor. I wish to state that when I volunteered for this purpose I had never seen the rector, the Rev. Ralph Hoyt, but I had heard it stated that his practice is to distribute from his church food and clothing to the poor during the cold months of winter. The idea of a clergyman, in the selfish times we live in, giving food and clothing to the freezing and starving, instead of feasting them on "tr-ets," struck me as being most unheard of conduct in a minister, and I felt a strong desire to give my mite and help to rebuild a church which is to be used for such a very moral, but true Christian, purpose. Nor did I for a moment imagine that there was to be found even in the benighted regions of clerical bigotry and intolerance one so stupid and so shameless as to find fault with a truly philanthropic clergyman for his willingness to receive a donation from me to feed and instruct the poor. I did remember that it was the doctors of theology and the pious folks who crucified the Master, and my wide experience has taught me that it is not to that class of people that we may generally look for good and charitable deeds; but I was not prepared to expect such an insulting interference of bishops and clergy, in what is only a humble offer of mine to help the poor. But I am contented to leave it with thinking minds to say who is the Christian, myself, or the cold, heartless Pharisee who would crush me or any one else for doing good. As I have seen it stated in some of the papers that under these circumstances I might refuse to lecture for that object, I deem it proper to say, over my own name, that I shall lecture, as advertised, at Hope Chapel, on Wednesday evening, and the proceeds will be handed over to the benevolent object before named. And, to my lecture on Rome, I shall add a postscript in relation to anti-Christian and anti-American bigotry and intolerance, and which may, also, as it appears, be used to rob the poor and divest man of his natural rights. With pity for the poor, and many prayers for the "sinners in Zion," I am your obedient servant.

"Lola Montez."

Lord Stanley on Indian Affairs.

A grand banquet was given by the Fishmongers' Company, in their great hall, on the 29th ult. Lord Stanley was one of the guests, and in reply to a complimentary toast, his lordship said:—

I do not stand here for the purpose of reviving, or even of alluding to past controversies, but this I may be permitted to say that, throughout those parliamentary discussions which ended in the transfer of the Indian Government from the Company to the executive of this country, that change was uniformly represented by me, and by those colleagues with whom I acted, as not being in the nature of a penal proceeding—as not involving any sentence of condemnation against the administration of that great Company whose century of empire has come to an end. I believe the change will be productive of benefit to India. I hope it will lead to a larger introduction into that country of European energy, enterprise and thought: but I cannot conceal from myself, and I cannot conceal from you, that if that change of government has increased the opportunities possessed by the government of this country, it has also augmented in a similar degree the responsibility which lies upon us. (Hear, hear.) We have to guard against a double danger. We have to protect India from the fluctuations of parliamentary politics, and we have to protect England from the more indirect and remote, but perhaps not less real, risk which may arise from the connection of its executive with an executive which is necessarily despotic. I believe, and I rejoice to believe, that the insurrection of the last fifteen months is gradually dying out, and so also the exasperation of feeling which prevailed in this country against the natives of India, and which, under all the circumstances, we can hardly regard with astonishment, though we may look at it with regret. I believe I may say that that experiment is dying out with the cause to which it owed its origin, and that at no distant time we will be, if it is not so already, in a better and more habitual frame of mind; but we ought to remember that it is not from ill-will or ill-feeling on our part, but from uninformed or misdirected efforts for doing good, that the influence of our government in India is exposed to danger. We regard, and undoubtedly we ought to regard, the natives of India as persons towards whom it is our duty to have a good will, and for whom it is our duty to labour. But that is not enough. It is not enough that we should regard them as objects on which our benevolence may be exercised, as persons to whom it is in our power to make important changes for good. We must look upon them also as being men with whom, and not against whom, we have to work—men with feelings of their own—men, though politically subject to us, with a sense of their own rights, and with a respect for their independence—(cheers)—men who are apt to be all the more tenacious of their intellectual independence and national customs, because of the political subjugation in which they are held.—(Cheers.) I do not hesitate to say that, unless we modify and keep within proper bounds that feeling of national superiority—unless we remember carefully, and even jealously respect the very prejudices of those whom we have to rule; above all things, if we attempt to introduce the force and influence of government into that which ought to be matter of private conviction between man and his own conscience—(cheers)—if we do this, or even if we are suspected, upon plausible grounds, of attempting, or desiring to do it, we shall have our efforts at improvement thrown back in our face as insults, and shall end in doing more harm than good. (Cheers.)

Launch of a Floating Derrick.

The Thames has recently seen many curious contrivances in the way of shipping turned adrift upon its tide, but probably one of the most singular in construction and purpose has been launched from the yard of the Thames Shipbuilding Company at Blackwall. Most of our readers will very likely ask "What is a Derreck? Is it a man, or a company, or a machine, and what is the difference, if any, between a floating or a sinking one?" A derrick is a most useful and powerful seagoing crane for raising sunken or stranded ships, and unfortunately unknown here, though the value and importance of its services are so great as to be almost universally recognized abroad. To the uninitiated spectator everything about the huge engainly craft is strange and singular looking in the last degree. It is called a derrick after no less a notorious individual than the first great Tyburn hangman, a man of mark in his way and who for more than a century gave his name to gibbets. From the peculiar crane-like conformation of Derrick's gibbets all similar cranes used on shipboard were called derricks, and the name has even lately been transferred to ordinary "shear legs." How the parent machine becomes possessed of the name of derrick is not so easily accounted for, unless from the fact of one of the first of Mr. Bishop's patents having been erected in the Brooklyn Navy yard, New York, almost upon the very spot where, from the time of the first settlers, a veritable derrick had stood, and done good execution in his day. The whole thing is really a floating crane of gigantic size and power, the hull, its base, being of such a shape as best suits a light draught of water with a counterpoise to the leverage of the crane. It is rhomboidal in shape, flat bottomed, and all of wrought iron of great strength and thickness. The ground part of the hull if we may so term it, resembles in its subdivisions on a huge scale the numerous square boxes of a compositor's type "case." The whole hull, from stem to stern and from deck to keel, is divided into 97 small water-tight compartments, each of which is 17 feet square and 14 high. Those in the centre and immediately under the derrick or crane will be used for propelling and hoisting machinery, and for the cabins of the crew.—All the others are intended to be filled with water in order to counterbalance the leverage of the crane when employed in raising sunken vessels. The total length of the hull is no less than 257 feet, and its breadth 90, or 12 feet broader than the Great Eastern. The tonnage is upwards of 5,000. In a vessel of such a size, and intended for the exertion of immense power, great strength has, of course, been requisite.—This the hull gains in the continued crossing and recrossing of the wrought iron water tight compartments, but in addition to the firmness thus given it is further stayed and strengthened in even a stronger manner than the hull of the Great Eastern. The deck is all of wrought iron of the same strength and solidity as the bottom, and on this is built the "derrick" proper, or crane. In shape the derrick is cruciform up to the arms of the cross, being a triped-shaped iron stand, tied together with wrought iron quads. The cross of the derrick is called the boom, all made of wrought iron, 120 feet long, and weighing 80 tons. The upper limb of the cross is called the king port a wrought-iron cylinder, 60 tons in weight, 50 feet high and 7 feet in circumference, large enough round to permit two players to play a comfortable game at chess before launching. Thus from one arm of the cross the weight is raised by pulleys, which passing over the king port, are brought over the other arm to the body of the vessel.—The whole principle of the machine is, in fact, acquisition and distribution—as fast as the weight is acquired it is distributed over the whole frame of the derrick, and thence throughout the hull equally. Two oscillating engines of 30 horse-power work 10 sets of crabs, independant of each other, the united force of all giving a hoisting capacity, of no less than 1000 tons above the surface of the water. A vessel of ordinary shape, no matter how the derrick was constructed would of course, instantly capsize in attempting to hoist any weight of even 500 tons on one side, and to overcome this danger, the shape and flat bottom of the present hull becomes necessary. When ready for sea its draught of water will actually amount to no more than three feet, though the hull will weigh some 1400 tons. But even with this draught and the flat bottom, a considerable and dangerous "list" to the derrick and would be certain to take place while any great weight was being raised. It is for this purpose that the water-tight compartments have been made, so that they can be filled with water and counterbalance the strain on the derrick. With a sufficient number filled to counterpoise a weight of 1000 tons, the draught of water at the hull will even then be under five feet. The propelling power of such a machine has of course to be constructed with a special view to the peculiar purpose for which it is to be employed. A screw with such a light draught of water, would be out of the question; paddle-wheels of the ordinary width still more so. The machine, therefore, is moved by no less than 50 small paddles, worked by an endless chain. Each of these is only 18 inches wide and about 3 feet in diameter and each only exerts a small amount of force. But working all in concert, like the little legs of a catterpillar, this combined strength will not only enable the derrick to hold its own, but even make more headway against wind and tide. Thus supposing a vessel to strike upon the Goodwin, the derrick can cross any part of those fatal sands, and grappling with the wreck, at once prevent it sinking further till all arrangements are complete for lifting it off and towing it ashore.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

(From the London Times.)

The Atlantic Telegraph, and all that relates to it, the best kind of rope to be used, the best means of getting it down,—the whole scheme, in fact, seems to be slowly drifting back again into those realms of theory and speculation from which it has only so recently emerged. Already there are many projectors and competitors in the field, some to work the old rope, some to make a new. It is not cheering to find that public attention is almost instinctively directed to the consideration of the latter project, and that to the hopes and expectations of the majority, the present wire—laid at such a cost, and with such risks—is already as virtually lost and useless. Among those who have come forward with remedies for overcoming the difficulties of the Atlantic, in case a new rope is required, is Mr. Rowett, who, that there may be no mistake about the matter, expresses himself as willing to contract to lay the cable from Valentia to Newfoundland, everything included, for as small a sum as £182,000, or £200,000 less than the capital expended by the Atlantic Company. Such an offer has naturally directed some attention to Mr. Rowett's plan, which is simply that of a rope-covered electric wire instead of the old mode of proceeding by a wire-covered rope. Mr. Rowett's idea is to have the conductor well and safely insulated with gutta percha, and then simply enclosed without further preparation in the strands of a common hemp cable about an inch in diameter. A piece has already been made,—not with a view of displaying what would be necessary for the Atlantic depths, but to illustrate the peculiar advantages which such a mode of construction gives over the wire cable. This specimen is certainly as light, as flexible, and as strong as could be desired, and these three qualities must be the very sine qua non with all future Atlantic telegraphs. The cost of such a cable would be only, as Mr. Rowett alleges, £86 per mile, its weight about 9 cwt. and its breaking strain about 4 tons, or nearly twice as much as could ever come upon it while being submerged—no matter what the state of the weather or how the vessel might be plunging. To this particular rope, as we have said, a certain amount of attention has lately been directed, owing no doubt to Mr. Rowett's offer to take it in working order across the ocean to America for a regular contract per mile. But, beyond the feeling due to such an offer of such magnitude, and made with such confidence of success, neither the proposal nor the rope deserve the notice they have attracted. Mr. Rowett's idea of a rope-covered wire is by no means a new one, and what is more to the purpose, the cable is almost without exception, far inferior in more important requisites to others that were designed some time before this was thought of. It is light, strong and flexible, but so are all such ropes, and so even is the present Atlantic cable (if we may call it so) in a very high degree. The difference between Mr. Rowett's rope and others of the same kind is, that in the former no adequate protection is given to the gutta percha, and never can be given by his method of stranding the hemp, whereas with all others this important point is carefully considered and provided for. For these and for other reasons which show the cable to have been designed and constructed by a person unacquainted with what a submarine telegraph requires, it is of its kind an inferior cable, though it certainly has done good service in directing attention to the general question of rope-covered wires for the purpose of deep-sea telegraph. All the experiments in very deep seas tend to show that the principle of a rope-covered wire is the right one after all. For any depth under 1000 fathoms, a wire rope is best and cheapest; for great depths, 2000 and 3000 fathoms, it becomes the dearest, because the worst and most difficult to submerge. No man who has ever seen a deep sea wire laid but must have been convinced that covering the rope with wire was only making a difficulty which required all the costly apparatus of paying-out machines, breaks, and check tackle to contend against, which, in but too many instances, it has been impossible totally to overcome. Any one, also, who has ever crossed the Atlantic would engage to pay out a piece of common whip cord, without breaking it, from Ireland to America, because in such a case there would be no strain on it, and it could run out as it chose. This ought to be the principle in which very deep sea ropes should be laid down everywhere. A rope-covered wire, light enough to be very cheap, and because light therefore strong, with such a coil running from a steamer going 10 miles or so an hour, a dozen cables might be laid across the Atlantic in a twelvemonth, if no other difficulties exist. It has been urged that such ropes, if moved by currents at the bottom of the sea, would chafe through at once; but, besides that this objection applies equally to wire, there exists proof positive that in the great depths of the ocean the water is as motionless at the bottom as the rocks on which it rests.—During the soundings taken by the Gorgon shells of the most delicate texture, and so small that it was impossible to perceive them without the aid of magnifying power, were brought up. Yet these shells, even to their finest ridges, were uninjured, and had evidently lain without movement in those tremendous depths for ages. Another proof is that, whenever the strain upon the sounding line prevented bottom being at once discovered, and some 100 or 120 fathoms more line were paid out after the lead had touched, it was always known to the foot what surplus had gone over, as the line invariably sunk on the spot where the lead had grounded, and came up in a tangled mass like a ball of cord. Such results could never have been obtained had there been any motion far below the surface.—But a question arises with regard to rope-covered wire, and, indeed, submarine cables of all kinds, if laid at very great depths, and that is how far the pressure or weight of the superincumbent mass of water affects the gutta percha insulator. We may doubt the question whether water increases in density or whether it is compressible, but none can deny that it has weight at least, and that this weight comes upon the bottom of the ocean and whatever rests there. The very minute and perfect shells being found at the bottom does no more to disprove such a supposition than an empty egg-shell shows that there can be no such thing as an atmospheric pressure of 15lbs. to the square inch. In both cases the pressure of water and air is equal inside and out. But in the case of the gutta-percha insulator it is not so, and the water pressing with immense external force would penetrate in many places where the guard-hemp was not at all injured, and so gradually permeate the substance of the gutta-percha as to reach the copper wire and seriously weaken its conducting powers. We do not say that such an action does take place, but if it is even possible it would at once do away with the feasibility of such rope-covered wires as Mr. Rowett proposes. In any case his plan of constructing his rope is, as we have said, inferior to many others of the same kind.

Apprehension of a Deserter and Traitor.—On the 22nd of March, 1855, the 7th Regiment of Fusiliers were performing trench duty at Sebastopol, when two of the men, private Thomas Tole, and a companion named Moore, left the lines under the pretence of searching for fuel, and instead of returning went over to the enemy. The treacherous information they gave of the position of the company they had deserted from proved a guide to the Russians, who, making a determined attack upon them the same night killed Captain the Hon. Cavendish Brown and thirty men. Tole was not given up with the exchange of prisoners at the end of the war, but went to St. Petersburg. Desiring, subsequently, to return to England, he contrived to obtain a passport, and has been for some time in York. More recently he took up his quarters in Manchester. Several months ago the superintendent of the police had him taken into custody, on suspicion of being guilty of this disagreeable offence, but the evidence failed to prove his desertion. Later correspondence with the commanding officer, however, led to the production of witnesses who could speak more positively, and on Monday Tole was again placed before the City magistrates, when two of his former comrades in the same Company, to whom he was personally known, gave evidence regarding his going over to the enemy, and he was ordered to be delivered over to the military authorities. Tole is a native of Ireland, and 24 years of age.—Tole states that his companion, Moore, died in two days after they had joined the Russians.—Manchester Examiner.

Glory Across the Atlantic.

Of all the objects which the Americans pursue with so much energy, there is none that lies nearer their hearts than to win the admiration of England. Even the love of filibustering and the pursuit of "manifest destiny" seem to absorb them less than the desire to stand well with the Old Country. If they bluster now and then about an imaginary outrage, it is more for the sake of showing us how high-spirited and courageous they can be, than from any feelings of animosity. If they weary us at times by incessant boasting about everything belonging to them, we ought, perhaps, to take it as a compliment; for the zeal with which they set forth their own merits is chiefly stimulated by their anxiety lest we in England should fail to appreciate them. And notwithstanding the uneasy doubts of our sensitive kindred, it is undeniable that Englishmen do try hard to like America. But somehow our dutiful efforts to love and respect our relations, and their frantic attempts to make us do so, are much less successful than might be wished. We are always preaching to ourselves and one another about the solid ground of union which no superficial differences ought to disturb; but neither blood, nor language, nor love of freedom, nor our common Saxon energy, nor even the more selfish bond of commerce, suffices to waken any genuine enthusiasm. England gets no further than the acknowledgment that it is a sort of duty to feel affection for her cousin, while America can find no better means of stimulating our regard than by vehemently asserting that she, of all countries, is most deserving of our fervent admiration. They seem utterly incapable of looking at anything except in its personal aspect. Facts are assumed, and principles are adopted, not because they are true or right, but because they are American. The justice or injustice of any public act is regarded from the same subjective point of view, and whatever is thought conducive to the interests or glory of the Republic becomes straightway right in their eyes. The greatness of an achievement depends entirely on the share which Americans had, or may be supposed to have had, in its performance, and almost the only purpose for which the rest of the world is recognised, is to render the tribute of its admiration to the citizens of the enlightened Republic. This unlucky weakness of the American character has of late been exposing itself rather more than usual.—There was something so spontaneous and exhilerating about the first burst of jubilation over the completion of the Atlantic telegraph, that it would have seemed ungracious to point at the strong tinge of egotism and the ludicrous exaggeration which were at once conspicuous. Indeed, the first impression which the news created here was something like a feeling of regret that our own demeanour had been so cold and undemonstrative. An unpremeditated burst of vain-glory appeared very pardonable at first, and no one doubted that, on the occasion of the more deliberate rejoicings which were arranged to come off after several weeks' preparations, our friends across the Atlantic would have the grace to acknowledge the large share in the honour of the enterprise which belongs to England. But with the exception of a few formal efforts by some of the victims of the ovation to turn the current of congratulation towards the English officers who were present, there was nothing to suggest that England had any part in the achievement. Considering that the cable was made in England on the plans of English electricians, and laid down under the direction of an English engineer, it does seem strange that the whole glory should be attributed to an American whose merit, so far as we are aware, consisted simply in the energy with which he helped to get up the company. Neither does it seem very intelligible, except on the principle of American egotism, why the Captain of the Niagara should be so much greater a hero than the Captain of the Agamemnon whose skill and courage were far more severely tried; but Field and Hudson seems to have been almost the only names which the New Yorkers thought fit to inscribe on their banners. Perhaps the tone in which these exclusive honours were disclaimed was even more characteristic than the coolness with which they were tendered to the Americans alone. Capt. Hudson is far too magnanimous to let British effort be underrated, and therefore explains that, "in justice to Great Britain, we are in a measure indebted to her in laying the cable." So qualified an admission is scarcely fair to the country which supplied the scientific staff who directed the whole enterprise, besides manufacturing the cable itself and the appliances for laying it. But we cannot well complain, as the gallant Captain makes his acknowledgments to Providence much the same strain in which he records the measure of his obligation to Great Britain. "The success of the work," he adds, "was not altogether confided to man, but to," &c.. &c. In fact, the picture drawn is that of America, attended on either side by Great Britain and Providence, bringing the old world into connection with herself—a device which we beg to suggest for a Yankee medal. To do Mr. Field justice, he did take some pains to enumerate the distinguished Englishmen who were engaged in the enterprise, but he did not the less accept the lion's share of the credit. Indeed, his head seems to have been so turned by the adulation of his countrymen, that he did not hesitate, immediately after the unfortunate cessation of signals, to publish a letter in which he speaks with some ignorance and much contempt of experiments then in progress on the cable by one of the greatest of living electricians; but then Professor Thompson happened to be an English, and not an American Director. There is something so paltry, and at the same time so American, about this attempt to monopolize the credit of a work which was mainly English, that it would be difficult to find a better illustration of the disposition which chills the sympathy that ought to prevail between the two free countries of the world. But Yankee conceit, if it is the most provoking, is not quite the worst manifestation of their egotism. The same peculiarity which has damaged their manners has begun to corrupt their morals also, and very considerable progress seems to have been made towards a new basis for the science of ethics. Paley's theory, that whatever was universally expedient was right, seems to have been nationalized in America into the doctrine that whatever is expedient for themselves is right. To eliminate red men and enslave negroes, to annex desirable territory and repudiate inconvenient debts, are all acts which are justified on this broad principle; and in a recent atrocity committed in the vicinity of New York, we have on example of the same demoralization, which would be ludicrous enough if it were not absolutely revolting. Staten Island, now a pleasant suburb of New York, was selected, at a time when it was scarcely inhabited, as the most convenient spot for a quarantine establishment. Hospitals were provided for the sick, and these continued in use notwithstanding the increase of the neighbouring population. An epidemic had filled them with cases of yellow fever and small pox, and the Board of Health of the district thereupon met and declared the establishment a nuisance, which any one was entitled to abate. The hint was quite sufficient, and the obvious expediency of getting rid of infection from their own doors seems to have been considered, by a numerous section of the inhabitants, a sufficient justification for using any means that might be necessary for the purpose. An attack was deliberately organized, with publicity enough to attract the regular reporters for the press; the patients—except a few who were forgotten—were dragged out and left all night on the ground, while the gentlemen who were abating the nuisance burned down the hospitals and every scrap of furniture and bedding that they contained. A formal proclamation by the Governor of New York sufficiently authenticates a narrative which seems almost incredible, and though the outrage appears to be regarded by the majority with indignation, the fact that a horde of men could deliberately burn down a hospital, with the most brutal disregard for the patients, on the plea that it had been voted a nuisance, is some evidence of the vitiated moral atmosphere of the place where such a crime could be committed. A man must be very far gone in selfishness before he can, with any easy conscience, destroy a lazaretto lest he should catch a fever; but the principle on which the ruffians acted was but a monstrous caricature of the Grand American doctrine of regarding only their own advantage and glorification. Until they can adopt a more cosmopolitan principle, it is unreasonable to ask for the full measure of regard which England would give so gladly as America would receive it eagerly.—London Times.

Why is a fashionable lady like a rigid economist? Because she makes a great fuzzle about a little waist.

Progress of Australia.

In 1835, the first settlement was made in Victoria, whence, up to 1851, the population went on increasing gradually until it reached 77,345 souls, in a period of sixteen years; but from that date to March 31, 1858 little more than six years, it jumped, it may be said, to 468,637 souls. The revenue, which in 1851 was only £316,532, derived from all sources, was £3,308,489 in 1857; of which latter sum £1,595,283 was derived from receipts at the Custom-House inclusive of gold export duty. The expenditure in 1851 was £409,598 consequently in excess of receipts by nearly £100,000; but increased population required greatly increased expenditure, and unavoidable outlays for roads, bridges, and other public works. The expenditure in 1857, was notwithstanding, far within the revenue and amounted to £3,163,689. The number of vessels employed in carrying on the export and import trade of the colony has increased 208 per cent, since 1851, when there were 710 ships entered inwards at the Custom-House at Melbourne but 2490 in 1857; the tonnage has advanced between the same dates 438 per cent. from 128,959 to 694,564 tons; and the hands employed 349 per cent, from 7735 to 34,777 men. The exports in 1851 were declared at the value of L 1, 422,909, but at L 18,079,512 in 1857. The imports in 1851 gave a total value of £1,036,439; but in 1857 they were returned at L 17,256,209 the greater proportion of which were from the mother country. As to postal intercourse, which is a safe barometer of the progress of nations, we find that no less than 2,415,933 letters, and 1,333,639 newspapers were delivered inland; and a shipment made to other countries of 1,484,143 letters and 1,648,531 newspapers, in 1857. In reference to public works, these statistics show that in 1851 there was not a single mile of macadamised road made beyond the towns of Melbourne and Geelong; but at the close of 1857 there were 450 miles of road formed, 270 of which were macadamised; 300 bridges erected, and many miles of viaducts constructed, at a cost altogether of L 4,821,848; and without reference to outlays to a considerable extent by district road boards. Two lines of railway have been constructed by private companies. The first from Melbourne to Hobson's Bay, with a branch to St Kilda, at a cost of L 365,240, inclusive of rolling stock, on which the profits are about 10 per cent.; and after deducting expenses and adding to the reserve funds leave 14 per cent. per annum to the shareholders. The other line is that of the Geelong and Melbourne, opened to Williamstown, forty miles, at a cost of L 590,576. Two trunk lines are to be constructed by the Government. Of communications by electric agency no less than 701 miles have been established in the colony, at a cost of L 70,000. There are twenty two stations at an annual expense of £18,000. The lines are to Sandhurst, via Castlemain, 102 miles; to Belvoir, Murray River, 194 miles; to the South Australian boundary, near Nelson, Glenelg River, via Geelong, Ballarat, &c., 336 miles; to Port Philip Bay, at Queenscliff, via Geelong, 70 miles; and to Sandridge and the harbour of Hobson's Bay, 2¼ miles. Such are some of the heads given in the report, and they are sufficient, we think, to show the vast importance of this colony, and the probability there is of a still greater increase in every department; but if anything further is necessary, we will mention that in 1851 there were only six banks and now there are 54, the paid-up capital of which is £5,423,694.—Mining Journal of Sept. 18.

Popular Recreation.

To what uses shall we appropriate the Crystal Palace? The question naturally suggests itself to us, as it did to the people of London, Paris and New York. In all these places, the solution of the question was comparatively easy; and the buildings, having answered the purposes for which they were erected, have become of permanent utility to the people.

The musical performances given during the recent exhibition have demonstrated the fact, that our Palace is ill adapted, in its present state, for such purposes; and its distance from the populous parts of the city is another difficulty in the way of appropriating the building to the gathering of large masses. Are these difficulties insurmountable? We hope not; for it would correctly be esteemed a misfortune if the people of Toronto should be shut out from the rational enjoyment and the refining influence of musical performances on a large scale. We understand that the Metropolitan Choral Society would very willingly give a series of grand performances from the works of the great masters during the forthcoming winter, in the Palace, at so cheap a rate as to place the enjoyment within the reach of all—their laudable object being to diffuse throughout the whole community a love for music, and, as far as possible, to wean the people from the gratification of a vitated taste, by setting before them correct models. Of course, this object will never be attained, so long as this society is obliged to charge a dollar for entrance; for comparatively few of our fifty thousand inhabitants can afford that sum for an evening's entertainment. Concerts for the million, at which all classes are admitted for the trifling sum of a sixpence or a shilling, are very common in the large cities of Great Britain, and their excellent moral effect is admitted. The question is worthy the consideration of our sapient fathers in the Council. The people of Toronto are sadly in want of cheap healthful recreation, and all past experience proves that it is good policy on the part of the authorities to supply it as far as it is practicable.

At least we should begin to look in the right direction. Every large city ought to have its parks, its public walks and its fountains, and these should be esteemed almost as essential as a proper supply of water. If our City Fathers cannot give us all we want, let them display a desire to give us what they can; and, as a beginning, we would commend to them the consideration of the question with which this article commences—"To what uses shall we appropriate the Crystal Palace?" A very small outlay would render it better adapted for musical displays; a trifle more would lay a floor and heat the building; the rest would soon follow.

The Rev. G. Onions is about to make a trial in the Palace, on Wednesday evening next, when he produces the great Oratorio of Handel, "Judas Maccabeus," with about three hundred performers, at the trifling charge of a quarter of a dollar for entrance. He has, at his own expense, made considerable alterations in the building, and will require an attendance of three thousand persons at that sum to meet the expenses already incurred.

Every one who feels as we do, that an experiment of this sort should be encouraged, will make it a point to be present, and in order to enable our readers to enter fully into the spirit of the music, and to appreciate the conception of the composer, we propose, in to-morrow's issue, to give a descriptive sketch of this martial Oratorio. —Colonist.

Mr. Bright's View on Emigration.

Mr. Bright has addressed one of his very characteristic letters to certain of the working men of Glasgow, in reply to an invitation from them to attend a meeting in favour of Government aid to emigration.—Weary of the incertitude of their condition as manufacturing hands in the midst of speculative production whose gains appear to oscillate more suddenly and capriciously than ever between those of the gold-finder and those of the mendicant, these poor fellows sigh for leave to go to some less crowded and competitive land, where fortune may not flap her fantalising wings, but where in sickness and in death they may not be haunted with the fear of their children being left to beg. Sick of over-toil, which allows them no leisure to live in the higher and better sense of the term, they would fain that a portion of them might safely hive off to some fresher field of industry, no matter how far off, so that they and their little ones might dwell in peace, and that more room might be left for those that remain behind. Despairing of delusive schemes for forcibly keeping up wages by combination, and incredulous of the oft-broken promises of oligarchy to admit to any share worth having in the management of their common affairs, they seek the means of transferring their labour to regions where they hope to find more liberty, and their energy to the development of communities wherein it will be recognised without jealousy or fear. Their ideas as to the means whereby their object may be achieved, do not seem to be very clear; but in the pursuit of it they would probably be willing to take good advice, if offered in a temperate and considerate spirit. Looking around for aid, it occurs to them that Mr. Bright might be able to help them. It hardly occurs to them to doubt of his willingness to do so. The fortune of his family is one of those that has been made by manufacturing industry. His personal fame rests upon the success of an agitation to promote the physical welfare of the industrious classes generally, but more especially those who dwell and work in towns. His actual position is that of a representative of one of the great seats of creative skill; and his future as a politician professedly lies in further combats against anti-popular privilege and wrong. It was natural that the working men of Glasgow should apply to such a man; and that they should reckon confidently, if not on his presence and counsel, at least on his kindly expression of regret that he was unable to give them. They never were more mistaken. Mr. Bright, in a long and carefully written letter, thinks it his duty not only to say bluntly that he cannot attend their meeting, and that he disapproves of the project they have in hand for escape from their present condition, but he believes that condition to be one that wise men would flee if they could, that few of them without aid were able to do so, and that all of them deserve to be as they are. Were he himself a young man obliged to work for his bread, he would not remain at home. The sweat of the poor man is mortgaged here to pay for the wars of our father's time against freedom; and the soil of the country is so engrossed by means of entail, primogeniture, and the arbitrary power of depopulation, that there is no hope for the humble man's possessing a bit of it. We are certainly not about to utter a word in defence of wasteful and wicked war-outlay in George III's reign; still less do we feel disposed to defend obsolete feudalism in our laws of land. But in the name of justice, why is the reproach of either to be flung in the teeth of peaceable men asking advice and assistance? Again, Mr. Bright declares that the foreign policy of Great Britain had been so complicated with the balance of power in Europe by the folds of quality who have hitherto had the charge of our affairs, that at any moment the fund for wages is liable to be further encroached on for the benefit of the class that fattens on war; and the elective franchise has been, he says, so carefully limited, that the many have little prospect of being able to put a veto on such ruinous courses. Well, but if these things be true, why taunt the unjustly disfranchised with them? Why not rather endeavour to stimulate them to action betimes in the right direction? Why not lead them now in the propitious time of peace to insist upon that share in representative rule that may serve to check the tendency to unnecessary and unwarrantable conflict? For what are great gifts—of speech of energy, of courage, of perseverance—conferred on men like the honourable Member for Birmingham, if when the time is ripe they will not move; if when golden opportunity offers, they choose to skulk and sit apart in scornful science, or muttering whithering words calculated only to drive the long-suffering and forbearing to desperation? But in truth Mr. Bright would not pretend to take his stand upon the grounds already noticed, were there not something beside with which he thinks fit to accuse the working classes, especially of our own day. They were, as he reminds them, acquiescent parties in the national resistance to Russian aggression four years ago. They would not attend to his advice in that matter, and the consequence has been the loss of 40,000 lives and of £100,000,000 of money. It was too late now to argue the question with Mr. Bright; but we shall feel it to be our duty, whenever he or his friends provoke us to look back, to repeat what we so often said at the time—that if they had, instead of vaguely inveighing against all wars, helped cordially to turn the struggle to good account for the rescue and resuscitation of prostrate nationalities, we should have had to bear half the cost and Europe would to-day possess many an additional guarantee against similar conflicts in future. But it is idle in a man like Mr. Bright to assume this tone of judicial infallibility, or to imagine that by mere obstinacy in anti-national crotchets he will be able to frown or scold the world into confessing that he was right and it was wrong. We speak plainly, because we feel strongly what a pity it is that he should throw away year after year in illusions so profitless and and ill temper so unworthy of him. That he may not like our frankness we can readily conceive; but he is not a man cozened by soft words or wheedled by the suasion of compliment. He is one of the few men of the middle class who have shown the courage to stand by their order, and to assert its equality of political claims with the insolent monopolists of birth. None resented more warmly than we did his expulsion from Parliament through the machinations of the late Government, and none were more prompt to hail the early opportunity for his restoration to his legislative place. But we did so not merely as an act of compensatory justice, but as one of wisdom and self-interest in the popular party. Mr. Bright may yet render important service to the cause of progress; nay, it is his duty, and we expect it of him. But that is just the reason why we are sorry and vexed to see him wantonly alienate the sympathies of the working classes, without whose co-operation nothing of consequence can be secured in the way of political advance, and with whose cordial and well-directed aid we might easily obtain all that we desire.—London Daily News.

Breaching the Chinese Wall.

(From the London Times)

It has cost nearly as much trouble to bring Lord Malmesbury to reason as if he were a Mandarin. The etiquette which surrounds the Emperor of China is not more formidable than the routine of our Foreign Office. As we suggested last week, the promulgation of Lord Elgin's treaty was not retarded by the absence of the Foreign Secretary from town or by the distance between London and Balmoral, but by a slavish adherence to precedent. The rule is that treaties shall not be made public until after ratification. As the exchange of ratification with China cannot take place for months to come our merchants might have remained all that period ignorant of the conditions that are henceforth to regulate British trade with China, were it not for the interference of the press. The outlines of the convention appeared in the newspapers before they were secured for them. The right of acquiring landed property will give us a firmer footing in the Celestial Empire. It is the insertion of the thin end of the wedge, and the time has not arrived for calculating the ultimate possibilities.

"The Christian religion, as professed by Christians or Roman Catholics, is to be tolerated, and its professors are to be protected." These words contain all that is provided under this important head. But we assume that our missionaries will have the liberty to travel, to reside, and to preach the Gospel openly. The access gained to so wide a field has already excited the activity of Exeter Hall, and we are assured that there will be no lack of laborers. But while we most rejoice that the Chinese are allowed by their Government to receive Christian teaching, we should like to see more attention paid to spiritual destitution at home. It is undoubtedly a Christian duty to use all means for imparting the saving truths of the Gospel to the heathen, but our zeal will be excessive and ill-directed if it lead us exclusively abroad, or blind us to the necessities of our own people. But this subject is too large for parenthetical treatment, and we pass on to the parts of the treaty affecting commercial relations.

In addition to the present ports, five are to be opened to trade. They are—New Chwang, Tang Chow, Tai Wan (Formosa), Chow Chow (Swatow), and Kiung Chow. At all these places the right of residence and holding landed property is conceded. British merchant ships are to be allowed to trade up the great river Yang-tse, but there are certain restrictions caused by the presence of insurgents in the Upper and Lower Valley. It may be here mentioned that British vessels of war are to be at liberty to visit all Chinese ports who her open for trade or not, and to receive supplies and make repairs if necessary.—The commanders of such ships are to hold intercourse with the Chinese authorities on terms of equality. The tariff of duties now in operation is to be revised by a commission of British and Chinese officers, and a further revision may take place at decennial periods on the demand of either contracting party. Transit duties are to be fixed, and the rate published in English and Chinese, so that merchants will be protected from the extortion of the Mandarins. Minute provisions are made with respect to tonnage dues, the coasting trade the entry and clearing of vessels, and the payment of import and export duties. These are of considerable interest to the merchants, but to them only, and we should only weary our readers by any attempt at explaining the details. Amongst the miscellaneous articles there is one which deserves especial notice. It is to the following effect:—"All official communications addressed by British diplomatic or consular agents to the Chinese authorities are henceforth to be written in English. For the present they will be accompanied by a Chinese version, but it is agreed that in case of there being any difference of meaning between the English and Chinese text, the English Government will hold the same expressed in the English text to be the correct sense. This provision is to apply to the present treaty, the Chinese text of which has been carefully corrected by the English original." The object of this stipulation is plain.—Chinese officials have been in the habit of avoiding engagements under cover of philological distinctions, and it seems that the Chinese language favors ambiguity of expression. Our interpreters were also liable to fall into mistakes, and the Chinese were prone to attach one meaning to a document when we intended another. This will be effectually prevented for the future, and the Chinese officials will be compelled to run up their knowledge of English. Lastly, the British Government are to act in concert with that of China for the suppression of piracy. Henceforth, therefore, our armed vessels will have authority to disallow pirates into the Chinese ports and rivers, and to extirpate those ports of the Chinese Seas. Thus greater security will be given to legitimate commerce, and British ships of war enforcing the maritime police of the empire will confer a new influence, and draw closer our relations with China. The indemnity, which forms the subject of a separate article, may be regarded as a fine imposed for contumacy.

The Chinese Empire is no longer isolated from the rest of the world. The wall of exclusiveness, raised against foreign intercourse, has been broken down. We have ceased to be "outer barbarians," and the Chinese Government acknowledges our equality while it feels our superiority. The change is enormous, and much greater than it appears on the surface. Up to the present time the Emperor of China affected to treat foreigners as an inferior and the troublesome race, suing for permission to trade. He granted licenses, and always claimed the right to revoke them. He simply tolerated the barbarians on a point or two of his coasts, and always acted as if he might drive them away at his will and pleasure. All documents addressed to his Government were turned by his officers into the form of petitions. His answers were decrees and orders, drawn up as if addressed to a subject people. Now he is compelled to admit that there are nations greater than his own, and to receive their ambassadors in his capital. He is forced to open his empire to all who choose to enter. He is bound down by treaty engagements that cannot be evaded, and which will be enforced. For good or for evil, the Chinese have been brought into the family of nations, and must learn the meaning of reciprocal duties. We have every confidence that the good will prevail, and that the breach in the Chinese wall is opened for the entrance of civilization and true religion.

General Statistics of Crime.

(From the Times.)

In 1856 19,437 males and females were committed for trial in England and Wales, 3713 in Scotland, and 7099 in Ireland; of these 14,734 were convicted in England, 2723 in Scotland, and 4024 in Ireland. As regards England, 1264 were convicted of offences against the person, 1787 offences against property with violence 10,487 of offences against property without violence, 96 of malicious offences, and 345 of other offences. The crimes in England when convictions were obtained included 31 murders, 126 shooting and stabbing cases, 78 manslaughters, 61 concealments of birth, 11 unnatural crimes and 27 attempts to commit such unnatural crimes, 45 cases of rape and carnally knowing girls under 10 years of age, 13 cases of abusing girls between 10 and 12 years of age, 71 assaults with intent to ravish, 2 cases of abduction, 6 of bigamy, 271 grievous assaults, and 190 common assaults. No unnatural crimes are charged against Scotland or Ireland in [illegible]. 14,734 persons were sentenced at the criminal courts of England and Wales [illegible], 2723 were sentenced in Scotland, and [illegible] in Ireland. 19 executions upon [illegible] took place in the whole of the United Kingdom in the year 1856.—[illegible] males and 641 females were imprisoned as debtors under civil process in the same year, a large increase upon the year 1854, when only 9677 persons of both sexes were imprisoned for debt. Of 113,736 male and female culprits committed in 1856, 1990 were under 12 years of age, 36,859 between 12 and 21, 33,400 between 21 and 30; 37,835 between 30 and 60, 2732 of 60 years and upwards. 33·1 per cent could read or read and write imperfectly, 5·4 could read and write well, and 0·3 were of superior instruction. The average cost of each prisoner in England and Wales (exclusive of convicts and military prisons) was £29 1s. 2d. The expense of the Government convict prisons and hulks in England in 1856–7 was £247,432, including £14,714 for Pentonville Prison, £12,112 for Parkhurst, £30,383 for Millbank, £53,501 for Portland, and £11,621 for the hulks. There were 6376 persons "admitted" to the military prisons in the year 1856, whose average confinement extended to 53 days; 809 of these were incarcerated for drunkenness. £18,746 was the total expenditure for military prisons, and £18,722 the amount of full pay and beer money of prisoners in confinement not issued. 73,240 culprits were dragged before the metropolitan police magistrates, for various offences, in 1856, and of these 381 only were of superior instruction; 33,451 were summarily convicted or held to bail. 127 put a period to their unbearable sufferings by suicide in 1856, against 116 and 118 in the two preceding years. The commission of suicide is very regular, 12 suicides were attempted but prevented by the police, and 66 were otherwise prevented. There were 474 fires, of which 27 were extinguished by police.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Fresh Arrivals—Sawers & Murray.
Notice—Rev. J. Farelly.
J. J. Marshall.
To Let—John Davis.
Auction Sales—J. T. Henthorn.
Removal—Ormond & Gilmour.
R. D. Baskerville.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, OCT. 29, 1858.

Fatal Accident.

We regret having to record a fatal accident which occurred on the afternoon of Friday last on the boundary line between Dummer and Douro. A number of men were employed repairing said boundary line, when one of them, a young man named Kilcaulay left the rest to fell a tree which had been previously about half cut through, and which stood at some distance from where the gang were working. Though aware of his absence, at the close of the day's work, no particular notice was taken of it, but when night passed without his reappearance, some anxiety for his safety was manifested, and on search being made, his lifeless body was found lying beneath the tree which he had gone to fell. The body was removed to the house of his father, Matthew Kilcaulay, there to await the Coroner's inquest. We have not heard the result of the investigation, but there can be little doubt as to the manner in which deceased came by his death.

☞We have been shown a very ingenious piece of workmanship in the Cabinet line, executed by Mr. John Cabeldu, a young man, a carpenter, for some time past resident in this Town. It is a handsome Writing Desk, made from black walnut, black ash, and mahogany, and in the top of which alone there are no fewer than 521 different pieces ingeniously arranged, the whole forming an elegant design. We understand this handsome piece of workmanship was exhibited at the late show in this Town, but being entered as Cabinet-work, and the maker not being a professed Cabinet-maker it was refused a prize, or even mentioned, although it attracted the attention of the Judges. If such be really the case such proceedings will nip in the very bud the objects of these exhibitions. Ingenious merit should at all times be encouraged, and we are glad to notice the present piece of workmanship, coming from a young man to whom the business is almost a foreign one.

A Curiosity.—We have received from a friend a lithographed fac simile of the signatures of Miss Madeline Smith and her ill fated lover L'Angelier, and shall be glad to show them to any of our friends curious on this point who may call at our office.

Arrival of the "Persia."

ADDITIONAL FROM INDIA.—ANOTHER DEFEAT OF THE REBELS.

New York, Oct. 26.

The royal mail steamship Persia, from Liverpool at 4 o'clock of the 16th, and the Vigo from the same port on the 13th, arrived this morning. The Vanderbilt arrived out on the afternoon of the 12th.

A prospectus has been issued for the formation of a company for the Galway line, with a capital of £500,000, in £10 shares.

Lieutenant Higginson, a shareholder in the Atlantic Telegraph Company, has applied in the Guild Hall Police Court for a summons against the Company, for its failure to register its list of shareholders; but it was not granted.

The race for the Cæsarswitch handicap was won by Rarkis, by a head—the American mare Princess, and the Bremer running a dead heat for second place. The fact that Princess had for a second time run a dead heat for this race, though this time for second place only, was the most remarkable incident in connection with the Cæsarswitch races.

The officers and crew of the ill-fated Austria had published a letter, claiming that they did all that it was possible for them to do, under the circumstances, and that the captain did the same.

FRANCE.

A mediation of friendly power has been accepted by France and Portugal in the dispute between them. It was suggested that the Portuguese Government should order the Charles George to be given up, on condition that the French ships of war should previously withdraw from the Targus, and return to France, so as not to let it appear that the surrender was made under the menace of their guns.

The decree permitting the importation of foreign iron into France was about to be renewed, with certain modifications.

The Duke de Malakoff was married to Madame Peneza, in the Imperial chapel at St. Cloud on the 12th.

The monthly statement of the Bank of France shows a decrease in bullion of £1,770,000. The discounts had increased £1,350,000.

The latest accounts from Paris say that no doubt was entertained of a pacific solution of the difficulty with Portugal.

AUSTRIA.

A panic was prevailing on 'Change at Vienna, caused by the fears of the speculators at the approaching resumption of cash payments by the bank.

The Cologne Gazette says Austria will demand an explanation from the Pope respecting the augmentation of the French forces at Rome.

PORTUGAL.

The free importation of breadstuffs is permitted until the end of May, 1859.

MOROCCO.

The Vice-Consuls of Spain and France at Tetuan, Morocco, have been assassinated. No particulars given. Energetic means to obtain satisfaction were expected. A Paris telegram says that the two ships of war lately sent to Lisbon, would proceed to Tetuan to avenge the massacre.

TURKEY.

The Turks in Candia had again made such a display, that it was feared the massacre of the Christians was intended. Great excitement prevailed. Two additional battalions of troops were to be sent to the Island.

INDIA.

The Bombay mail of the 24th Sept. had arrived at Suez. The disarmed troops at Moultoe mutinied on the 21st August, and their almost total extermination was the consequence.

The fugitive rebels from Pouree were defeated with great slaughter, on the 5th September.

Four emissaries of Nena Sahib had been captured at Gwalior, endeavouring to corrupt the native troops, who informed their officers of them. The culprits were executed. The Gwalior fugitives, after occupying the town of Patun and seizing a large amount of treasure and 40 guns, were again defeated in the field, on the 18th of September, and dispersed in all directions. The British captured 30 guns. A private telegram says that renewed alarm had arisen at Calcutta, so that the troops were kept under arms. 7,000 insurgents were said to be in the province of Calcutta, but avoiding engagements. Their story is pronounced a fabrication.

CHINA.

The Hong Kong mail of August 24 had arrived.

Admiral Seymour had returned from Japan, but Lord Elgin had proceeded to Jeddah with the steam yacht, which he made a present to the Emperor.

It was rumoured at Canton that one of the Commissioners who met the Ambassadors in the North, and who bear the character for conciliation, had been appointed Viceroy of the Canton Province.

The Town of Canton was spared by the British, though the forts were destroyed.—The report that the place was sacked is unfounded.

The Chinese were coming back by degrees to Hong Kong and Macao.

Trade continued dull at Hong Kong.

At Amoy little or nothing had been done in Teas. At Fuchon there had been a moderate business, and an advance of 10 to 11½ taels. At Shanghai the exports were 8,000,000 pounds short of last year. A very moderate business had been done at former prices.

AUSTRALIA.

A nugget of gold, weighing 2,100 ounces was being exhibited at Melbourne.

MARKETS.

Liverpool, Oct. 16.

In the cotton market the prices for American were fully maintained.

At Manchester trade was quiet and prices rather easier.

Breadstuffs quiet. Flour unaltered.—Wheat in limited demand. Corn neglected and easier.

Pork and beef dull. Bacon dull at former rates. Lard declining.

Sugar quiet but steady. Coffee in good demand. Tea tends upward. Rice dull, but unchanged.

London, Saturday.

Consols closed steady at 98¾ to 98¾. Money 98¾ to 99⅛ on account.

The "Europa's" Mails.

(From the London Correspondence of the Globe.)

London, Oct. 8, 1858.

THE PROPOSED CONFEDERATION OF THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

On Wednesday there appeared in all the Metropolitan papers a paragraph with the above heading, and the fact of its being printed in conspicuous type in several of them, led to the belief that it partook of an official, or semi-official character. The paragraph stated that Lord and Lady Bury, accompanied by his lordship's private Secretary, would leave Galway next day for British North America. And the public were further more definitely informed that his Lordship was crossing the Atlantic "on a matter of great commercial and political importance, being instructed by the Colonial office to obtain the opinion of the Legislatures and people of Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, on the proposed confederation of the British North American Provinces, which Mr. Cartier and two other members of the Canadian administration are at present in this country to negotiate."—In the Globe of the same afternoon, however, there was published a corrected report, which entirely contradicted the alleged official visit of Lord Bury to your shores. "We believe," said the Globe, "that Lord and Lady Bury cross the Atlantic for strictly private reasons. Her Ladyship is the daughter of Sir Allan McNab, and the object of the visit is simply to visit Lord Bury's father-in-law." To that it was added:—"That Lord Bury is an acute observer the public of this country well know, and that his opinion in any quarter is certain; but we believe that we have correctly stated the object of Lord Bury's visit to America." This constitutes the whole of the story so far as it is told.

LORD CANNING'S REPLY TO LORD ELLENBOROUGH'S DESPATCH.

This voluminous and important document will, in all probability, do more to undermine and overthrow the Government of Lord Derby than the cry for Parliamentary Reform. This the Ministers seem to have acutely felt, for although the despatch has been in their possession for several weeks, it was published only two days ago; and it is the opinion of many that Mr. Disraeli's hesitation to appear in public at that time, arises in a far greater degree from the existence of this manifesto of the Governor General of India, than from any other cause. Certainly, Lord Canning's reply to the Secret Committee will be generally regarded in the country as an overpowering censure of the Derby Administration. Lord Canning seems to have seen through the design of the despatch; he knew it was a stratagem to produce a vacancy in the Governor Generalship of India, the post coveted by Lord Derby for his son; and although declaring that it immeasurably enhanced his difficulties, he plainly tells the Cabinet that no taunts or sarcasm, come from what quarter they might, should turn him from the path which he believed to be that of his public duty. Moreover, he distinctly refuses to modify his general policy; and the effect of this avowal is that British India is ruled by a statesman who accuses one member of the Ministry of falsehood; who satirises the others as endeavouring to drive him from office by sneers and innuendos, and who firmly asserts that he shall not change his course at their bidding. Upon constitutional principles, the Premier is, of course, bound to dismiss the Governor General; and the House of Commons is bound at the earliest opportunity, to place upon record its opinion of the Ministerial despatch, which it would have done had Mr. Caldwell's motion of last session been withdrawn. It may be confidently expected, therefore, that the Ministry and the Commons, will stand in direct antagonism with each other on this subject as soon as the House meets. Parliament will probably feel that a debt of gratitude is due to Lord Canning for refusing to take the opportunity recklessly afforded to him by the Ellenborough despatch, to retire from the high and difficult post he occupied in the midst of the revolt, because had he done so, the consequence must have been to fan the flame of revolt, and to strengthen the hands of the rebels.

How a Defaulting Cashier Carried on his Rascality for Four Years.

The Boston Atlas gives some interesting particulars of the way in which the defaulting Cashier of the Brighton Bank managed his rascality:—The reason for the resignation of Mr. Robert Woodworth, cashier of the Brighton Bank has become apparent. He turns out to be a defaulter, having made away, as is alleged, with some £440,000 belonging to the Bank. An investigation is progressing by the directors. The Bank is said to be secured against loss by the bondsmen of Mr. Woodworth and by his private property, which has been made over to the Bank to protect it from loss. It is said he has been indulging in fancy stock for some time, and which, as is generally the case, has brought him down. He is a leading Baptist in Brighton, and the revelations are heard with concern by the Church. It was supposed at first that the roguery was of recent occurrence, and this opinion was all the stronger from the fact that the Cashier's books have balanced with the nicest exactness, and the examination of its affairs by the Bank Commissioners in May last, revealed no suspicious circumstances. A few days since the President of the Bank, S. H. Bennett, received an enquiry from the President of the Faneuil Hall Bank, whether he should furnish Mr. Woodworth with $20,000 on New York, on account of the Bank of Brighton. He at once refused, saying if he did it was at their own risk. Mr. Bennett was then informed that they had already let him have the same amount. This led to an investigation, and to the confession of Mr. Woodworth that he had for four years been appropriating the funds of the Bank to his own use, for speculation and other purposes. He had purchased a house in Brighton for $15,000, which was furnished in palatial style, speculated at second hand, given $1,000 towards the erection of the Baptist Church edifice in that town, bought and sold fancy and other stocks, &c. When his rascality was in danger of being discovered he sold his house for $10,000, at the same time discharged a mortgage upon it of $5,000. At the same time he got rid of stocks in the Suffolk Mills. Mr. Woodworth asserts with great emphasis that the Bank will be indemnified. His bondsmen will be called upon, we suppose, as a sacrifice. The directors are disposed to be lenient with their officer. Mr. Woodworth states that he has within a short time lost $7,000 by a real estate speculation in building a block of houses with which the directors had not the least suspicion that he was connected, as the business was carried on in the name of another person. He is temporarily in charge of one of the directors. His friends deeply sympathize in his misfortunes, and will do all in their power to relieve him.—He has a wife and two children.

Superstition in England.

The London Times says:—It is a painful duty to have to chronicle in this boasted enlightened age instances of the grossest superstitions prevailing in some of the rural parishes in this country; and we are sorry to say by no means confined to the lower classes. East Thorpe has just presented probably one of the most disgraceful scenes that ever occurred in North Essex since the days of the famous Matthew Hopkins, the witchfinder of Manningtree. It appears that Emma Brazier, aged 22, the daughter of a laborer in the above parish, has lately caused much annoyance by making use of the most violent, abusive and filthy language, under the pretence that she had been bewitched by a neighbour—a Mrs. Mole, 75 years of age, wife of a labourer, and who, with his wife, is of irreproachable character. The poor old woman has been accused by the Brazier family of working marvellous spells upon their live stock, such as causing one of their pigs to climb a cherry tree, and help itself to the fruit from the top boughs. Recourse was had by the girl's parents to a cunning man, named Borrell, residing at Copford, who has long borne the name of the "Wizard of the North;" but her case was of so peculiar a character as to baffle his skill to dissolve the spell. Application was next made to a witch doctor, named Murrell, residing at Hadleigh, who undertook to effect a cure, giving a bottle of medicine, for which he did not forget to charge 3s 6d, and promising to pay a visit to the "old witch," Mrs. Mole and put an end to her subtle arts.—Matters had reached this stage during the absence for a few weeks of the rector, who, on his return was deeply pained to find that, after years of earnest labour, such gross ignorance should still exist in his parish that the belief in the bewitchment of the girl, and the Satanic agency of an inoffensive old woman, was all but universal. Having visited the girl (suspecting from her violent conduct that she was insane,) he called in the relieving officer of the district, who concurred in thinking that she was unfit to be at liberty, and recommended her removal to the union-house for examination by the parish surgeon, at the same time giving an order for her admission, but which the overseers refused to act upon, assigning as the reason for such refusal that there was a man coming from Hadleigh who was expected to cure the girl! The rector next sought the advice of the magistrates, and obtained a promise that the police should have an eye upon the neighborhood. In the meantime the news of the expected coming of the witch doctor spread far and wide, and about eight o'clock there could not have been less than two hundred people collected near the cottage of Mrs. Mole to witness the supernatural powers of the Hadleigh wizard. Drunkenness and riotous conduct were the characteristics of the meeting; and to protect Mrs. Mole from actual violence the rector was obliged to mount guard at the cottage door; for, although the proceeding took place immediately before the parish constable's windows (and he had known of the intention for some days previously,) he never attempted to disperse the crowd, or take any steps to prevent or put a stop to the disgraceful riot. Ultimately two of the police made their appearance, and the crowd dispersed. The woman has since been apprehended for threatening the life or her neighbour, Mrs. Mole, and bound over to keep the peace; and it is to be hoped that no more will be heard of this disgraceful affair.

Communications.

For the Examiner.

Agricultural Show.

List of Prizes awarded at the Fall Show of the Asphodel, Belmont and Dummer Agricultural Society, held at Norwood on 12th October, 1858:—

HORSES.

	$	cts.
1st Prize on Stud Horse to Wm. Christie,	3	00
2nd " on do., James Clydesdale,	2	00
3rd " on do., P. Fitzpatrick,	1	00
1st " on Brood Mare and Foal, to J. Pettegrew,	2	00
1st " on two year old Colt, John Elliott,	1	50
2nd " on do., Jno. Breakinridge,	1	00
1st " on year old Colt, P. Fitzpatrick,	1	50
2nd " on do., L. Lewis,	1	00
3rd " on do., Jno. Breakinridge,	0	50

CATTLE.

1st " on aged Bull, to Jno. Breakinridge,	3	00
2nd " on do, P. L. Dinsdale,	2	00
2rd " on do, Alex. Easton,	1	00
1st " on year old Bull, A. Calder,	1	50
1st " on Bull Calf, Francis Parker,	1	00
2nd " on do, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	50
1st " on Milch Cow, Jno. Stevenson,	2	00
2nd " on do, L. Lewis,	1	50
3rd " on do, do,	1	00
1st " on yearling Heifer L. Lewis,	1	00
2nd " on do, John Stevenson,	0	50
3rd " on do, L. Lewis,	0	25
1st " on Heifer Calf, L. Lewis,	1	00
2nd " on do, do,	0	50
1st " on two year old Heifer, L. P. Dinsdale,	1	00
2nd " on do, do,	0	50

WORKING OXEN.

1st " on yoke Oxen, J. Greenbanks,	2	00
2nd " on do, J. Stevenson,	1	00
1st " on yoke Steers, John Brough,	1	75

SHEEP.

1st " on aged Ram, A. R. Kidd,	1	50
2nd " on do, Alex. Calder,	1	00
3rd " on do, Thomas Parker,	0	75
1st " on Shearling Ram, L. P. Dinsdale,	1	50
1st " on Ram Lamb, Jno. Stevenson,	1	00
2nd " on do, John Breakinridge,	0	50
3rd " on do, do,	0	25
1st " on Ewe and Lamb, A. R. Kidd,	1	00
2nd " on do, L. Lewis,	0	75
1st " on two aged Ewes, A. R. Kidd,	1	00
2nd " on do, L. Lewis,	0	75
3rd " on do, Jas. Beckett,	0	50
1st " on two Shearling Ewes, L. P. Dinsdale,	1	00
2nd " on do, L. Lewis,	0	75
1st " on two Ewe Lambs, J. Breakinridge,	0	75
2nd " on do, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	50
3rd " on do, A. R. Kidd,	0	25

SWINE.

1st " on a Boar, L. P. Dinsdale,	1	50
1st " on Sow and Pigs, do,	1	50
2nd " on do. do,	1	00

DAIRY AND FARM PRODUCE.

1st " on Spring Wheat, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	75
2nd " on Fall Wheat, Thos. Parker,	0	50
1st " on Peas, P. Fitzpatrick,	0	50
2nd " on do, A. Calder,	0	25
1st " on Potatoes, Wm. Nicoll,	0	50
2nd " on do, P. M. Grover,	0	25
1st " on Sweed Turnips, do,	0	50
2nd " on do, Francis Parker,	0	25
1st " on White Turnips, A. Calder,	0	50
2nd " on Purple Top Turnips, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	25
1st " on Field Carrots, J. Greenbanks,	0	50
2nd " on do P. M. Grover,	0	25
1st " on Garden Carrots, A. Calder,	0	50
2nd " on do, Wm. Sargent,	0	25
1st " on Beets, J. Greenbanks,	0	50
2nd " on do, Wm. Sargent	0	25
1st " on Parsnips, do,	0	50
1st " on Cabbage, P. M. Grover,	0	50
2nd " on do, Wm. Sargent,	0	25
1st " on Squashes, S. Lukie,	0	50
1st " on Onions, P. M. Grover,	0	50
2nd " on do, S. Lukie,	0	25
1st " on Oats, do,	0	50
1st " on Barley, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	50
1st " on Butter, A. Calder,	0	75
2nd " on do, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	50
3rd " on do, Alex. Easton,	0	25
1st " on Cheese, F. Parker,	0	75
2nd " on do, A. Easton,	0	50
1st " on Corn, Wm. McMullen,	0	50
2nd " on do, P. M. Grover,	0	25

FARMING IMPLEMENTS.

1st " on Wooden Plough, Clark & Kempt,	1	50
1st " on Iron do, to do,	1	50
1st " on Horse Shoes, Wm. Sargent,	0	50
2nd " on do, Wm. Nicoll,	0	25
1st " on Manure Fork, to do,	0	50
2nd " on Hay Fork, to do.	0	25
1st " on Pair of Harrows, Wm. Sargent,	1	00

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES AND LADIES' WORK.

1st " on Table, Bureau, Bedstead and Washstand, Charles Parker,	5	00
1st " on Cheese Press, William Sargent,	1	00
1st " on Carriage and Buggy, Wm. Nicoll,	2	00
1st " on Woolen Cloth, William Nicoll, Sen'r,	0	50
1st " on Flannel, A. R. Kidd,	0	50
2nd " on do, Wm. Nicoll, Sen'r,	0	25
2nd " on Woolen Blankets, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	25
1st " on Fancy Quilt, Miss Nicoll,	0	50
2nd " on do, to do,	0	25
1st " on Patchwork Quilt, L. P. Dinsdale,	0	50
3rd " on Cotton Coverlid, A. Easton,	0	25
1st " on Raised Work, Miss Williams,	0	50
2nd " on do, Mrs. Plunket,	0	25
1st " on Worsted Work, Mrs. Parker	0	50
2nd " on do, Miss Sargent,	0	25
1st " on Crotchet Work, Miss Greenbanks,	0	50
2nd " on do, Miss Sargent,	0	25
1st " on Fancy Knitting, Miss Nicoll,	0	50
2nd " on do, Miss Dinsdale,	0	25
1st " on Fancy Needle Work, Miss Sargent,	0	50
2nd " on do, Mrs. Parker,	0	25
1st " on Wax Fruit and Flowers, Miss Williams,	0	75
1st " on Painting on Glass, do.	0	50

Temperance Ale.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Will you be kind enough to insert the following resolutions in your next issue, and oblige Peterborough Division Sons of Temperance?

Thomas Donnelley,
R. S.

Moved by Bro. T. Green, seconded by Bro. H. Collins,

That whereas an advertisement has made its appearance in the Review newspaper calling the attention of the public to the fact that Mr. Henry Calcutt manufactures strong Beer, Ale, Porter, &c., "also a celebrated Temperance Ale under the Patronage of the Sons of Temperance of Peterborough,"—the inference to be drawn from which is, that our Division was consulted in the matter, and that it is a party to and consenting to the truth of his advertisement, be it therefore

Resolved,—That the Sons of Temperance have seen with feelings of indignation the unwarrantable use made of their name by Mr. Calcutt, and do not hesitate to contradict the statement and brand it at once as a falsehood—that the Sons of Temperance of Peterborough do not support or patronise his Brewery much less his Temperance Ale:—also, that we feel free to say as much of the Order in Canada.

Resolved,—That the foregoing resolution be sent to the Editor of the Examiner with a request to publish the same.

Hallel Chary, return that book.

Our Peterboro contemporary will surely be loyal enough to return the old Koran he borrowed from Governor Head's library. His Excellency is now packing up, and we would advise the Fellow not to endeavour to get up his name as a "Book-keeper" at the expense of being "spotted" as a dishonest one.—Weekly Comet.

Literary Extracts.

"Fancy Bread" in Ancient Rome.—The price of bread in Rome, when Pliny lived, seems to have been nearly the same as a little lower than it usually is in our day in London. The Romans made bread of different qualities and prices. Pliny enumerates four descriptions of them, viz.—Ostreatii or loaves baked with oysters; Artodagani, which correspond with our cakes, or rather rolls; Speustici, from the quick mode of the preparation; and Artopticii or those baked in ovens, so called from the kind of furnace in which they were prepared. This last must have been of nearly the same quality as our middle sort of wheaten bread, and was sold, according to the calculation of Arbutnot, at the rate of three ashings and twopence the peck loaf.—Jacob's History of the Precious Metals.

Stoicism of the Sepoy.—The men to be hung came up to the gallows with the customary indifference of their race, and climbed on to the ammunition carts. The pay havildar arranged the rope round his neck without assistance. Their hands, I remarked, were not pinioned, as they should have been, but when the carts were removed they did not use them as they might have done; they were resolute in dying, and one of them struggled for nearly ten minutes. Often and often have I seen natives executed, of all ages, of every caste, and every position in society, yet never have I seen one of them misbehave at the scaffold; they died with a stoicism that in Europe would excite astonishment and admiration; yet the very same men behave in some instances with the rankest cowardice in the field; crowds of them routed and ignominiously put to flight by mere handfuls of Europeans, few of whom, whatever their conduct in battle, would walk in execution with equal indifference. I have heard of this difficult question in metaphysics being put to one of themselves. "It lies in the legs," he replied, "the whole fault is in the legs; often when we have made up our minds to die, and hear the cheers of the 'Goras' (pale faces), our legs carry us off against our will."—Dunlop's Indian Adventures.

Longevity of Literary Men.—The annexed, which announces a sometimes questioned fact, is attributed, in the American professional journal whence we take it, to a distinguished medical authority." "It is a popular error to suppose that scholar and literary men are shorter lived than other men. But the fact is, 'on the contrary, quite the reverse.' Consider for a moment that the class compared with what are called the 'professions,' is a small one, and compared with the 'trades,' is very small indeed; and then mark the result. Hardly an eminent author of modern times, but affords an example of longevity. Byron and Keats, it is true, died young; the latter by consumption, the former by irregularities that would have killed anybody. But Wordsworth, Southey, Tom Moore, and James Montgomery, lived to an advanced age. Rogers, at his decease, was above ninety, and De Quincey, Walter Savage Landor, and Humbolt, are still alive and at work, at past three-score and ten. Our own country furnishes similar examples in Silliman, Irving, Halleck, and Pierpoint—all old men, but still strong in strength and mental vigour. The truth is, men often'er rust out than wear out; and there is no doubt that habitual mental employment tends to keep the body young, both in fact and in appearance."—Knickerbocker.

How the Cabmen of St. Petersburg are Treated by the Police.—The way in which these wretched men were beaten, both openly and privately, is revolting and abominable. I have seen a gigantic police-soldier walk coolly down the Nevskoi from the Post-de-Police to the Kasan church, beating, cuffing across the face, pulling by the hair, and kicking every one of the file of Ischvostchiks, who with their droshkies, line the kerb. To the right and left, sometimes on the pavement, sometimes into the kennel and under their horses' feet went the poor bearded brutes under the brawny fists of this ruffian Goliah in a gray gaberdine. I saw him remount the Nevskoi to his standing place, quietly repeating his pugilistic refreshment—saw it from a balcony overhanging this same Nevskoi where I was standing with ladies, and with officials in clanking spurs. We had a huge dog, too, in the balcony, and in the saloon inside an Italian music-master was capering with his nimble fingers on a grand piano-forte; while down below the man in gray was feeling the Ischvostchiks. What their offence had been—whether standing an inch too close to, or an inch too far from the pavement, I do not know; but I know that they were, and that I saw them, thus beaten; and I know they took their hats off, and meekly wiped the blood from their mouths and noses, and gave way to not a word or gesture of resistance or remonstrance; but I know that, in the wake of that bad ship Graycoat, there were left such a trail of white vengeful faces, of such gleaming eyes, of such compressed lips, that were I Graycoat, I would as soon pass through the nethermost pit as down that line of outraged men alone at night, and without any police helmet and my police sword.—Saint's Journey Due North.

A Despicable Spy.—Cherelles, the perfidious attache of Meuriesere, had been continued in his old office of Secretary of Legation to his successor Chateauneuf, and came to visit Mary, at Chartley, in the beginning of March, under the pretence of bringing her letters from the King and others of the royal family of France; but his real object was to obtain from her the keys to several of her ciphers which had baffled Phillips; these he communicated to his subborner Walsingham. Only the next week the Archbishop of Glasgow wrote to Mary "to warn her not to trust Cherelles in any way, for his most Christian Majesty was informed that he had been gained over by Walsingham to the service of the English Queen, who had given him a gold chain worth 200 crowns." Poor Mary had pathetically expressed her regrets to his caitiff "that she had not a present worthy of his acceptance to offer him;" but of the few relics of her former splendour she gave him a diamond ring, together with her own table-book, in which she had written many sentences with her own hand. This incident was repeated by Cherelles himself, when upward of four-score years of age, to one of Mary's French biographers, to whom he showed the book, which was richly bound in crimson velvet, embroidered by her own hands, clasped with gold, and the corners guarded with plates of gold. "The book was indeed richly bound," he said; "but she enriched it more with her royal hands, and the gracious manner with which she gave it." He spoke, also, of the profit he had derived from some remarkable sentence she had inserted therein," and declared "that no one could see and converse with that illustrious lady in her prison and affliction without edification." There is nothing more remarkable in the personal history of Mary Stewart, than that such record should have been borne of her, more than forty years after her death, by a person who had assisted in weaving the web for her destruction.—Lives of the Queens of Scotland, &c., by Agnes Strickland.

The Good Old Times.—Up to the middle of the eighteenth century, gaming continued to be the principal amusement of fashionable assemblies; but after, the establishment of gaming clubs, play was conducted on too large a scale, and was too engrossing a pursuit to be followed in mixed society. Other diversion in which both sexes could take part, were invented about this time. Numerous places of public amusement were opened in London and the suburbs. As the fashionable dinner-hour was at three or four, the evening commenced about seven o'clock. The theatre a card-drum, a ball, and, occasionally, a masquerade, had for many years constituted the varied round of dissipation in the metropolis. But the increasing crowds which annually flocked to London required a sphere of society more extended than the narrow pale of fashion. Ranelagh, Vauxhall, Cornelys', and the Pantheon, were among the principal places of resort for persons of fashion, and those who desired to be so considered. These places were adapted to every taste, and offered dissipation for every day. * * * The gardens on the Surrey side of the river were frequented by persons of fashion up to a recent period; but no person now living has witnessed the debaucheries which were of nightly occurrence at Vauxhall from the time of Queen Anne to an advanced period of the reign of George III. The boxes were scenes of drunkenness and ri

NOTICE.

I HEREBY [illegible] against having [illegible] Male Infant [illegible] dated [illegible] of June last, as the same was obtained from me under false pretences, he not having finished the work for which he obtained the same up to this date.

PATRICK WOOD.

Smith, 12th October, 1858. 41-tf

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGUO, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confect'ers,) Yellow Refined, COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arrican, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 5s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bums. Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do M. R. Layers & Sultanas in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batty's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Eastern (ease Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, South's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers, HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

Life Association of Scotland

NINETEENTH REPORT.

THE NINETEENTH Annual Meeting of the Association was held within the Head Office, Edinburgh, on the 3rd August current, in terms of the Charter and Act of Parliament,—Sir JAMES FORREST, Bart., of Comiston, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the Meeting the ANNUAL REPORT by the DIRECTORS on the Progress of the Business; the REPORT of the AUDITOR, Mr. W. WOOD, Accountant; and the BALANCE SHEET of the ACCOUNTS, certified in terms of the Act of Parliament; with other statements of the Affairs, as at 5th April last, the date of balance.

Notwithstanding the general depression of commercial affairs, the Progress of the Association during the past year has been greater than in any former year, with only one exception.

The Applications for New LIFE ASSURANCES during the year were .....1247 for £666,483 stg. Of which the Directors accepted.....1006 for £530,244 stg. The ANNUAL PREMIUMS being ..... £18,811 stg.

ANNUITIES on 28 lives were purchased for.. ....£875 19s. stg. per annum, at the price of....£9487 7s. stg.

The POLICIES that became claims on the Association by deaths during the year amounted to 85 for £43,965 stg.

The TOTAL ASSURANCES since the commencement of the business amount to nearly FIVE MILLION POUNDS Sterling.

The ANNUAL INCOME is now ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT THOUSAND POUNDS Sterling.

The POLICY HOLDERS entitled to participate in the Profits, who completed their fifth year before the date of balance, will be entitled to a REDUCTION of 35 per cent. (7s per £1) from their next Annual Premiums.

From the increasing wealth and importance of British North America, as well as the example of other Assurance Offices, the Directors have for some time entertained the idea of establishing Branches there. They have been enabled since last meeting to accomplish this. A deputation from the Directors visited the chief Towns, and secured the co-operations of influential gentlemen in each Province. Although the branches have been in operation only for a few months, the transactions have already been considerable, as well as of a most satisfactory description. Special thanks are due to the gentlemen acting as Directors, Medical Officers, and Agents there, who have already interested themselves much in the Association's affairs, and through whose exertions there is every prospect of permanent success.

The REPORT by the Board of Directors was unanimously approved. The VALUATION in the Board were then filled up; and after special votes of thanks to the Directors at the Head Office and Branches, and the Agents, Medical Officers, Managers, &c., the meeting separated.

DIRECTORS AT MONTREAL:

9 GREAT ST. JAMES STREET,

J. G. MACKENZIE, Esq., Merchant.
DAVID TORRANCE, Esq., Merchant.
GEORGE MOFFAT, Jr., Esq., of Gillespie, Moffatt & Co., Merchants.
ALEXANDER MORRIS, Esq., Advocate.

SECRETARY.....JAMES GRANT.

Branches at Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, London and Quebec.
Agencies in every Town in Canada.
Montreal, Aug. 24, 1858.

Agents:

Peterborough—Robert Dunsterville, Barrister.
Cobourg—Arthur McDonald, M. P.
Lindsay—James McKibbon, Bank of Upper Canada.
Port Hope—James R. Walsh, Merchant.

86—1m.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL Corps has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of Internal to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.
The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.
National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.
Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.
Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.
Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.
A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.
Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.
&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $4 per annum, payable strictly in advance,—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the GLOBE throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars

Any person sending $10 for FIVE WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 18, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN CRAIGIE.

Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE Subscriber hereby informs his Customers in arrear that unless they make immediate payment their NOTES and ACCOUNTS will be put in suit.

JOHN MIGHT.

Peterborough Oct. 20th 1858. 41-4in.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN

THAT the GRAMMER and UNION SCHOOL has been opened after the Summer Vacation with an efficient Staff of Teachers; the Reverend JOHN MCCULLOCH M. A. having been appointed to the vacant Headmastership under very favourable Testimonials as to experience and qualification.

It is hereby earnestly hoped that the PARENTS and GUARDIANS of the young will avail themselves of the services of a Staff of Teachers in every way worthy of Public confidence, and give a hearty support to an Institution so thoroughly Local in its character, and so well qualified to impart the elements of sound secular education.

By order

F. FERGUSON.
Sec'y & Treas J. B. S. T

Peterborough Oct. 16th 1858. 41-3in.

(Review Copy twice.)

NOTICE.

DR. McKEON, feels constrained to notify his patients, that he seems to hand his ACCOUNTS for the year to an Agent for collection, at the close of the present Month.

Peterboro', Oct. 19th, 1858. 41-3t

ORANGE DEDICATION.

THE members of Orange Lodges Nos. 60, 200 and 454 held in Peterborough, intend to dedicate their New HALL on

FRIDAY, 5TH NOVEMBER, NEXT,

at 2 o'clock, p. m. The public and the Brethren of the neighbouring Lodges are respectfully invited to attend.

Suitable addresses will be delivered on the occasion.

Peterborough, 15th October 1858.—3t

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—H. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES HOOPER, Esq., | A. J. MCDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARBY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 12.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro' March 24th, 1857. 13

WESTERN

Insurance Company,

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL

INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

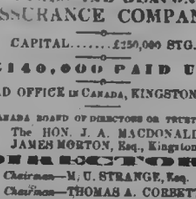
FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500.00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,997 980. Paid up Capital, $430,268.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. H. ROBINSON. | E. F. WHITEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½*d.*

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the new occupants, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

GOOD HOUSE

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken that in selection of servants and carvers Gentlemen always in attendance at the tables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and an omnibus on regular Peterboro', 1858. LOUIS MCGREGOR.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES MCCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

By the Mills, Peterboro', }
July 20, 1858. } 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership, lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attache.50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun..50 "
Tom Cringles' Log.....75 "
The Cruise of the Midge.....75 "
Yankee Notions for September.....12½ "

And a host of other capital things at SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.

Peterboro', August 26, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,

Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.

Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PORTRAIT

OF THE

Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.

SPECIMEN

To be seen and orders received at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now on sale at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
Book and Stationery Store, George St.
PRICE 50 cents, or in Guilt Frames, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of
LITERATURE.
PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c., &c.,
which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.

SAWERS & MURRAY

Peterboro', October 6th, 1858. 39

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of Lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 5 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the subscriber in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 20, 1858. 30-6in.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.

Bridgenorth, Sept. 10, 1858. 36

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD.

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD,

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

SAW MILL,

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL.

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO RENT.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

—:o:—

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George-Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MCCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of Lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 5 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the subscriber in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 20, 1858. 30-6in.

NOTICE.

PARTIES are requested to take notice that the Accounts for the last half year are now ready for delivery, and a prompt settlement is requested, as the subscribers are now closing their Book Accounts. Those accounts unsettled by cash, payments or note will be by the 1st of November handed over for collection.

A. POWLIS & Co.

☞ Take notice that interest will be charged to Accounts at the rate of 12½ per cent. from Peterboro', October 7th, 1858.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

—:o:—

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North-Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1837. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD MCGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,

Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 2½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 3½
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated.....	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
1,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS

MUST BE STRICTLY

In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for		7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note "	" "	2
2 Steel Pens.....		1
1 Holder.....		1
1 Pencil		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....		½
Making a total of.....		1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY.

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,

Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambalu," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. R. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,

NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,

Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S

ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE,

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ALMER STREETS,

Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,

PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct. 16, 1857. 41

NOTICE.

PARTIES are requested to take notice that the Accounts for the last half year are now ready for delivery, and a prompt settlement is requested, as the subscribers are now closing their Book Accounts. Those accounts unsettled by cash, payments or note will be by the 1st of November handed over for collection.

A. POWLIS & Co.

☞ Take notice that interest will be charged to Accounts at the rate of 12½ per cent. from Peterboro', October 7th, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stabling, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MALLOY, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT

Asphodel, 10th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,60
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..	0,40
Do. Eternal Day.....	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate.....	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One.....	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain..	0,20
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses..	0,40
Dick Dr.—Christian Philosopher.....	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 830 pages	3,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant.....	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Letherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs said Covenanters of Scotland....	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret....	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches...	0,60
Do Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus.....	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A High

NOVEMBER

1858

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER STEAM PRESS,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 43.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	3

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more moderate prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 24

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

A. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' East.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 25th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST. MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,
Burnham's Block, George-st.
33

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1853. 29—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1853. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,

Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dundas, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNDAS, Dorset, or GEORGE A. STEWART, Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $10!

THE UNDERSIGNED is in possession of a quiet but certain remedy for the most distressing disease, that human suffering, with it very rarely is met with. He will send a sufficient quantity of the medicine, (a portion of some chemically such. 50 to be paid in advance.

Address, (Post paid, or not)
D. D. JOHNSON,
Asthma—Corner of Hawkesville and Arthur Streets.
P. S.—Prescription with directions, sent by mail, when ordered in any part of the country.
Petersburgh, July 15, 1858. 29

[illegible] IN BOIL
IN A SHORT TIME.

BUY OUR DOUBLE GILT PENS, IN BOX.
[illegible]
At Sawers & Murray's, Stationery Store.

Turkey.

One of the few advantages of a despotic Government is, that it can effect its reforms with a celerity that has no example in the history of constitutional States. A pure despotism, centering all power in the monarch, has only to move the monarch's will, and behold changes of the most extraordinary importance are realized as suddenly as if they had sprung out of the ground. As there is said to be no evil without its attendant good, so despotism seems to have ways and means of its own for securing the national progress—ways and means barbarous enough, it is true, though tolerably effectual in the circumstances than the more moderate measures which would be adopted by nations that plume themselves on their constitutional freedom. Henry VIII. could change the religion of England almost with as great ease as the Turks could slaughter the turbulent Janissaries, or the Egyptian the overbearing Mamelukes. In Turkey we see the system brought to perfection. Its whole theory is despotic. It knows no other atmosphere than despotism. Its religion, with a fatalistic providence, points to unity, but it is the unity of the State rather than of the Church—the civil power centralized in the hands of an individual, and he responsible only to assassination. Whether from the natural tendencies of race, or from the peculiar influences of the Moslem faith, or from both combined, and both working together to produce the same result, certain it is that a central despotic and irresponsible power seems to grow quite naturally on the shores of the Bosphorus, and to be accepted as the divine form of political constitution. The Sultan—Padishah unites in his own person the whole powers of the body politic, and round him as the central sun the whole system circulates. There is nothing permanent, nothing that descends from generation to generation, except the one idea of Sultanic unity. One Turk is the Sultan, and all other Turks may take their chance and push their fortunes as best they may. Even landed property is without an owner, and is regarded only as the instrument of taxation. The father may be a Pasha and the son a beggar, or the father a beggar and the son a Pasha. There is one Turk who is the Sultan, and all other Turks must derive from him their favours and their fortunes. It is a feudal system without prescriptive rights. It has offices, but no aristocracy. It is, in fact, an utter democracy gathered round an absolute despotism. That such a system should stand long in the presence of European intercourse and steam invasions is not reasonably to be expected. The Moslem, as such, is certainly doomed, and he has two courses before him. He may adopt gradually the institutions of the more advanced countries of Europe, or he must abandon his position and decamp into Asia, his more native home. But the removal of a population is one of those events which no modern power seems capable of effecting, and the other course is the more probable. The Turk will remain in Europe to be civilized in course of time, and to fall out of his Mahomedan superstitions and despotism, exactly as the European wave flows more and more eastward with its greater commercial and social intercourse.

Already the Western influence has been felt in the dominions of the Sultan, and preparations for change have been going on. The Sultan has been bitten with European tastes. He wishes to combine the luxuries of the West with the incompatable institutions of the East, and the result is not doubtful as to which must prevail. He has launched into expenditure—Asiatic, in the amount of its extravagance—European, in the form of its outlay. With the trammels of Asia still encumbering him, he has endeavoured to become a European monarch, and to ally himself with the community of European nations. But the task has not been easy, and in the meantime it has ended in a crisis. The moment despotism relaxes its hold on the semi-barbarous and uneducated Turks, that moment disorders and mal-administration begin everywhere to prevail. The extravagance of the palace is reflected in a hundred different quarters; and as Turkey is going through its process of transformation from a warlike to a political organization, peculation and plunder have been substituted for the older and more direct system of forcible extortion. The Pasha has found it more difficult to bastinado the money out of the people, than to intercept and misappropriate the revenue. Corruption, as is invariably the case in human history, has begun to substitute itself for violence. Fraud has been taking the place of force, and financial diplomacy, has been doing duty for the old practice of the sword. The change is one that belongs to history. Russia is a little further advanced in this respect than Turkey, and is approaching the end of the operation into which Turkey is now entering. It is such a change as took place in England in the reign of Henry VIII when the war system was superceded by the political system of Society. Happy would it be for Turkey if the next Sultan should turn out a Henry VIII and should officially abolish the Mahomedan superstitions. But here we have the one advantage of despotism, that it can effect changes in a summary manner. The Sultan has found that his candle was burning at both ends—that extravagance was running him more rapidly than the arms of Russia could have done, and he has plucked up a spirit. It may be true that the only requisite to effect reforms, in a despotic country is to enlist the will of the monarch, but that, in fact, is the main difficulty. So many temptations assail on all hands, that the pressure of necessity alone—unless, as in the case of the great Russian Peter there is the presence of commanding intelligence—seems capable of moving the despotic monarch into the right declination.—When once moved, however, he can make short work of difficulties. The man who puts himself into motion or put his subjects into motion, and his necks into the halter, is a powerful agent when seconded with the intention of reform; and the Sultan, by his conduct to it spoken, has at least made a commencement. How long it may last is another matter; but, at all events, every new occurrence of that kind is a new approach to the practices of Western Europe, and strikes a new blow at the Asiatic demoralization of the Turkish empire. The Sultan has made a clean sweep of the maladministrating functionaries—has rated, reviled, and dismissed them. He has even condemned the palace ladies to economy, in consequence of which the price of diamonds has been visibly affected. Like a wise man he has put an end to feminine "shopping," at least where it assumed a taste for diamonds, and has stayed the works of his new marble palace a quarter of a mile long, which would have cost as much money as Scotland annually consumes in alcohol. Turkey has thus taken the second great step in the career of national reform. The first was the destruction of the Janissaries, or the assertion that the civil power will not be overborne by a combination of fraudulent functionaries. The third and most important step will be when the Sultan shall see the impossibility of carrying on the government with a Moslem faith, and shall knock the old faith on the head; and for this latter achievement preparations have already taken place in the resumption of the lands that have been devoted to ecclesiastic purposes. Missionaries have effected nothing in Turkey that has had the smallest apparent influence on the State; but the wave of civilization is rolling eastward, and introducing gradually those political changes which may render a Christian empire at Constantinople by no means so far distant as might be imagined from the character of the Turks. At present they are not particularly favorable specimens of humanity, but, on the whole, are perhaps not worse than the English in the time of the Plantagenets; and if the present Sultan should resolutely persevere in his course of reform, Turkey might not only be regenerated, but might be the great means of carrying European civilization into the regions of Asia, which the Turk could reach better than the European.—Glasgow Commonwealth.

On Strikes.

The population of Great Britain may be divided into the four great classes of landlords, capitalists and labourers; or those who live upon the rents of lands—those who live upon the interest of capital—those who live by the practice of an art which requires a preliminary education or unusual endowment—and those who live by the exercise of labor. These form the radical professions of a country. They are the elements out of which the community is formed, or rather forms itself. The professions may be combined in almost any given degree. The landlord farming his own estate may be at one and the same time landlord, capitalist, artist, and labourer. The capitalist may not only be the investor of capital, but the investor of skill, of intellect, design, invention, improvement—and in this respect be is the artist as well as the capitalist. In this form the British manufacturer presents himself, his constant endeavour being to introduce greater perfection either into the quality of the articles produced, or into the processes by which they are finally made suitable for the market. Whatever he can invent to save time, trouble, or expenditure, or to turn out an article superior either in quality or in suitability to the demand, renders him an artist in his profession. If he is merely a routine manufacturer he is merely a capitalist, and in the long run derives only the interest of his capital and the price of the insurance against the risk he runs.—The artist, again, may present himself in many forms. The clergyman, the doctor, the lawyer, the banker where not the actual capitalist, the engineer, the shipbuilder—the officer in all professions, whether military or civil, is to be regarded as virtually an artist—as one who practices an art and lives by it quite as much as the painter, the poet, or the sculptor. It is not the object on which the labour is expended, but the fact that skilled labour of a peculiar character is employed, that constitutes the profession of the artist. When art becomes purely mechanical, it sinks into mere labor. If we could hew Venuses and Apollos out of marble as easily as we can pump water out of a well, the Venuses would still have the admirable proportions, but the profession of manufacturing them would cease to be the profession of the artist. No human hand ever represented the forms, lights and shadows of nature with the perfection of a photograph—yet the photographer—the art being mechanical—sinks into the lower ranks of art, and allies himself with the skilled mechanic. Labour again admits of indefinite degrees of refinement. To dig a ditch is a different occupation from that of making a chronometer, yet where the mere skill of the hand and eye are concerned, and not the designing and devising intellect, the occupation is one of labour or mechanical art.

Among these classes, or between any two of them there is possible an antagonistic interest, although the general prosperity will commonly tend to distribute itself, and to equalize its influence. This it will do in course of time. But at any given period there may be an immediate antagonism of interests. The capitalist, as the employer of labor, and the labourer as the employed, may be considered as in a state of social war—exactly as the buyer and the seller—though having remotely certain interests that are identical, have immediate interests which take opposite poles. The beam of the balance which goes up at one end, goes infallibly down at the other, hence the continued endeavours of both parties to secure an equipoise based upon the general returns of the whole combined investment, and of the amount of supply and demand of or for labour or capital. All parties wish to enhance the price of their wares—the employer the price of his capital, the employed the price of his labour. Hence the higgling of the market; hence misunderstandings and disputes, and hence, occasionally, strikes—non-acceptance of the price offered, and consequent cessation of labor.

But although the antagonism between labour and capital is the most familiar and of most frequent occurrence—the one which literally itself most on the notice of the public, it is not by any means the only antagonism that may exist between the above classes. The taxes of the country must be paid; they must be paid by the members of the above four classes, and there is a direct antagonism of interest in the distribution or allocation of the national burthens. If the landlords can succeed in imposing taxation on articles of consumption—if they tax the necessaries of life, or those semi-necessaries which custom has rendered habitual, they place themselves in direct antagonism to the interests of the consumers—enhance the necessary price of labor, and the cost of manufacture, and consequently tend so far to diminish the prosperity of trade. By so doing, they act injuriously to the other classes. If, on the other hand the industrial community could succeed in placing the taxation on the immoveable rents of the soil, the boon would operate to labour as an increase of wage, and to capital as an increase of interest.—At this point we apprehend that the strikes that have hitherto taken place in this country have been injurious to all engaged in them, because at that point there has been a misunderstanding of the true nature of the small remuneration of labour. That remuneration must in all cases be determined immediately by the market price—by the supply and demand. But the reason that the market price is not—in an old country that represents an improved machine, and consequently ought to pay better than a new country for the same expenditure of labour—so high as intelligence judges it ought to be, will manly be found in the fact, that the national taxation is so imposed as to press upon the masses, and to be detrimental at once to the labour that is employed, and to the capital that finds employment for labour. A strike, then, between labour and capital—labour against capital—or, on the other hand, capital against labour—is a strike which certainly involves disasters, and holds out little or no prospect of ever paying its own expenses at any future time. It is based upon a wrong estimate of what is within the human powers. Demand, and demand alone, can by any possibility raise the rate paid for any commodity, and no amount of strikes could create the demand that does not exist. But on the other hand, let the strike be against the taxation of articles of consumption, and a permanent and sure benefit is obtained, tantamount to an increase of wage, and secured for ever after. In such a strike labour and capital ought to combine against landlordism, against those who are consumers without being producers, and who, by the industry of the three classes who produce the wealth, are continually in the receipt of larger and larger revenues. The rents of the soil are, in fact, nothing more than the invested profits of labor, and out of them all taxation ought to come.—But if all taxation did actually come out of the rents of the soil, the object aimed at in the striking of labour would be secured in a two-fold manner, namely, that a much larger quantity of commodities could be purchased for the same price, and also, that the industry of the country would be encouraged in its race of competition with other countries, and, consequently, both labour and capital would find a better market and a more remunerative investment. The next great strike that takes place in this country should in no wise be of employed labour against employer's capital, but of both combined against the system of taxation which maintains a privileged class bound to no labour, and almost exempt from the ordinary duties of citizenship.—Glasgow Commonwealth.

Thomas Carlyle.

Thomas Carlyle was born the 4th of December, 1795, in the parish of Middlebie, about half-a-mile from the village of Ecclefechan, in the pastoral district of Annandale. His father was a small farmer, in comfortable circumstances—a man possessing great force of character, of an earnest religious nature, and much respected throughout the district, not less for his moral worth than for his native strength of intellect. After a few years' attendance at the neighbouring parish school where he acquired the ordinary rudiments of education, he was sent to the grammar school of Annan, to make himself master of those branches of learning required to fit him for the Edinburgh University. It was here that he first became acquainted with Edward Irving, his senior by a few years, who had commenced his brilliant academic career before Carlyle went to Annan. From the grammar school of Annan young Carlyle was in due time sent to Edinburgh University, where he was distinguished at an early period as a hard student and a very original thinker. Numberless stories are told of the wonderful extent of his reading at this period, which appears to have been as varied and comprehensive as that of Dr. Johnson, "who could grapple with whole libraries." By the time he had completed the course of study required to qualify him for the Church, his views regarding that profession had undergone a change. For some time he remained uncertain as to what course he would take. After two or three years spent in the teaching of mathematics, in which he had greatly excelled as a student, he became tutor to the late Mr. Charles Buller in 1825–6, and continued in that capacity for a year or two, during which time he wrote the "Life of Schiller" and translated "Wilhelm Meister." It has been frequently stated that Mr. Carlyle commenced his literary career as the translator of Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" in 1824. This is not quite correct. He had previously made his appearance in the London Magazine, where the first part of his "Life of Schiller" appeared in 1823, and was followed by second and third portions of that admirable piece of biography in 1824. In 1825 the "Life of Schiller," which had been recast and considerably enlarged, was published in a separate form, by Taylor and Hessey, to whom the London Magazine belonged. It did not excite much attention, but what notice it received was highly favourable. In 1824 the translation of "Wilhelm Meister" made its appearance. It was published by Messrs Oliver & Boyd, but without the name of Mr. Carlyle, who was then utterly unknown to fame. "Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship, a novel from the German of Goethe," was all the information which the title-page contained regarding the origin of the book. The translation was at once recognized as the work of a master hand. "Specimens of German Romance" followed. These were published by William Tait, of Edinburgh, in 1827, and consisted of four volumes, one of which contained "Wilhelm Meister's Wanderjahre," a sequal to the "Lehrjahre, or Apprenticeship." Carlyle had now fairly embarked in literature as the business of life. Whatever the hardships or perils of such a career—and no one has ever painted them in gloomier colors—he had made up his mind to encounter them with a firm and resolute purpose. In 1827, an article on Jean Paul—the first of that brilliant series of critical and biographical essays which has made his name so famous—made its appearance in the Edinburgh Review. This was followed up, in the succeeding number, by his celebrated essay on "German Literature," which at once entitled the young reviewer to a place among the first critics of the age. Mr. Carlyle at this time resided at Craigenputtoch, about fifteen miles from Dumfries. Here he wrote his "Essay on Burns." This was also the birthplace of "Sartor Resartus," and several articles for the Foreign Review, the first number of which appeared in 1828. It was the fate of the "Sartor Resartus," like that of many other works destined to become famous, to be rejected at first by several London publishers. One of the most eminent, to whom the MS. had been submitted in 1834, returned it with the remark, "that the writer only required a little more tact to produce a popular as well as an able work." In other quarters its reception had been equally unfavourable. Its author finally gave up the notion of publishing it as a book, and sent it in successive portions to Fraser's Magazine, where it appeared in 1833–4. In the United States the work excited more attention than it had done in England, and a Boston edition of it appeared in 1836, which has been followed by various other editions of that and all the other works of Mr. Carlyle, including his "Miscellanies," which were collected and published in America before they had received that mark of public approval here. In the summer of 1837, Mr. Carlyle delivered a series of six lectures on German Literature, at Willis's Rooms, to what the newspapers of the day described as "a very crowded, yet a select audience." Encouraged by the success of his first course of lectures, Mr. Carlyle gave a series of twelve in 1838, "On the History of Literature; or the Successive Periods of European Culture." These were delivered at the Lecture room, 17 Edward street, Portman Square, London. Only two other courses of lectures were given by Mr. Carlyle—in 1839, on "The Revolutions of Modern Europe;" and in the following year, on "Heroes, Hero-Worship, and the Heroic in History." Throughout both courses his audiences are described as having consisted mainly of "what may be called the aristocratic intellectual class; still, however, with a leaning to the liberal side, as may be supposed, from their going to hear him." Of the four courses of lectures delivered by Mr. Carlyle, that of 1840 on "Hero-Worship" is the only one he has published. Frequent applications have been made to him from provincial towns, for the delivery of a course of lectures, but all have been alike refused. At the urgent solicitation of many friends and admirers, he had consented to give the four courses we have mentioned, but on finishing the fourth he emphatically declared his determination to have done with that mode of utterance. Meanwhile, his fame as a writer had been rapidly extending during the few years to which we have been adverting. In 1837, "The French Revolution, a History by Thomas Carlyle," brought his name prominently before the public for the first time; all that he had written up to that period having been published anonymously. In the following year, "Sartor Resartus" was at last published, as a book, and in 1838, the first edition of the "Miscellanies" made its appearance in four volumes, containing his contributions to the Edinburgh Review, Foreign Review, British and Foreign Quarterly Review, Westminster Review, and Fraser's Magazine, from 1827 to 1838. In 1839, he broke first ground on the condition of England question, in his "Chartism," which was published at the close of that year, and caused great disappointment among many of his admirers, who searched in vain through the various chapters for any encouragement of their suffrage movements, anti-corn-law agitations, and other popular modes of curing effectually the discontent and misery of the English people. And yet, although condemned by the universal newspaper press of Great Britain for its unpractical character in 1840, "Chartism" is full of what everybody recognises as profound practical wisdom in 1858. What was ridiculed as idle rhapsody at the former period, is now fulfilled prophecy. In "Past and Present," published in 1843, he went still more deeply into the causes of our social disorders, and pointed in the most gloomy colors the condition of England, with an aristocracy which cannot or will not govern, and a Parliament elected by bribery, which prefers wearisome, profitless talk to indispensible work. But it was in his "Letter-day Pamphlets," which appeared in 1850, that Mr. Carlyle first grappled with the leading questions of the day. In these pamphlets entitled "The Present Time," "Downing Street," "New Downing Street," "Parliament," and "Stump Oratory," he uttered some of the boldest and most unpalatable truths that ever were published in this or any other country. His work on Cromwell, on which he had been employed several years, was published in December, 1845, under the modest title of "Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches; with Elucidations," and, as the author mentions in the preface to the second edition, "contrary to expectation, spread itself with some degree of impetus," as might, indeed, be inferred from the fact that a new edition was called for before many weeks after the first was published. A third edition, in four volumes, appeared in 1849, containing large additions in the shape of letters of Cromwell, and other matter throwing light on his biography. In 1851, Mr. Carlyle gave to the world his "Life of John Sterling," a work which has been justly called "one of the finest biographies ever written," but which has given rise to much controversy regarding the worth and tendency of Carlyle's writings.—Statesman.

American Literature.

From the Globe.

In a recently published volume of the "New American Cyclopædia," will be found some interesting facts in connection with the making and selling of books in the United States. The American mind is perhaps as well exhibited by such statistics as in any other way. As might have been expected, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" stands pre-eminent, having had a circulation of not fewer than 310,000 copies. Such a fact is pregnant with meaning of different kinds. First, it is plain from this extraordinary sale, that the question of slavery excites a vast interest in the neighbouring republic; and second, it seems pretty plain that the anti-slavery cause has not advanced much in consequence of Mrs. Stowe's book, so that we have had a great noise with a very small quantity of wool; a huge excitement with no adequate practical result. Of "The Lamplighter" 90,000 copies were sold; of "Fern Leaves," 70,000; of "Ruth Hall" 55,000; of "Hiawatha," 43,000; "Life of Barnum," 45,000; "Life of Amos Lawrence," 23,000; "Hugh Miller's Works," 50,000; "Benton's Thirty Years' View," 55,000; "Kane's Arctic Explorations," 65,000; "Sear's Wonders of the World," 100,000; "Goodrich's History of all Nations," 30,000; and Harpers' Pictorial Bible," 25,000.

In looking over this list, it is gratifying to find that Hugh Miller's writings have had so extensive a circulation; and this because they teach sound science, sound theology, and beautiful expression. It is gratifying, too, that "Hiawatha" should have found so many readers; for while we do not think it so marvellous a production as some of our contemporaries have pronounced it to be, and are satisfied that its fame will be short-lived, it is nevertheless an elegant composure, and must tend to refine a young reader's taste if nothing more. We suspect, however, that Jonathan's love of poetry was in this case greatly abetted by the fact that the Poet is of his own nation. Could it be shown that there is—we do not say so large—but a proportionate sale of Milton, Cowper and Spencer, we would agree that poetry is admired in the Republic for its own sake. We fear, however that no genuine or general demand exists for productions of the Muse, and that the sale of "Hiawatha" is no proof to the contrary. Jonathan is a man of facts, rather than imagination. It is indeed certain, that on the "Fourth of July" his innumerable "great men" do consume a prodigious quantity of "figures;" and then "the bloody-beaked, lightning-eyed, devastation-spreading, all-conquering Eagle of Freedom, flaps his wings," to the terror of "the lurid and wrinkled hag, the Tyrant England, who shudders on her paralysed throne;" still, in spite of such chaste effusions, which have so often adorned the columns of Punch, we submit that poor Jonathan is awfully prosaic. His mind is hard, angular, factual. No man like him for reckoning up the "almighty dollar;" no man like him for describing a labour-saving machine; no man like him for giving you facts about the political movements of his own county or State at the moment in which you chance to speak with him. Still, you must not be too hard on him, and will, therefore, not expect him to be at home in "airy nothings," or to understand anything about eyes in "a fine frenzy rolling."

His love of politics is well brought out by the sale of fifty-five thousand copies of "Benton's Thirty Years' View." His love of facts, generally, is also exhibited in the sale of a hundred thousand copies of "Sear's Wonders of the World"—as paltry a catch-penny as ever was printed, but just the sort of thing, with its tawdry binding and its officious wood-cuts, to take the eye and satisfy the longings of an intensely practical generation, which knows nothing of art or the amenities of literature. But this love of fact does not lead our neighbour to study history; of this he knows nothing, save a very little respecting the last seventy years in the life of his own Republic, and that little of the most distorted kind. Hence, while of Benton's book 55,000 copies were sold, and one hundred thousand copies of Sear's, the "History of all Nations" only found 30,000 purchasers. This lack of interest in the affairs of the world, springs no doubt, from an exaggerated estimate of the importance of his own country. Nevertheless, it is to be greatly regretted; and the American has yet to learn that vastness of territory does not make up true or permanent national greatness. We would add that this sublime indifference to the affairs of the human race outside the North American continent is in nothing more manifest than in the matter of the Atlases published in the States.

The statistics, also, wonderfully bring out the attention paid in America to elementary education. Thus we are told that of Mitchell's geographical books the issue is about a thousand a day. In 1837, there were circulated about 300,000 copies of Davis' Mathematical Series, "Saders' Readers" sold to the same extent, and many other school books have an annual sale of from twenty to fifty thousand copies. Of Noah Webster's "Elementary Spelling Book," the almost fabulous number of thirty-five millions have been disposed of, and the yearly sale is one million. The statistics also show that if he has no poetry, our neighbour has a good deal of music in his soul. The sale of glee-books, instrumental instructors, and collections of church tunes, is enormous. And though we cannot say that American psalmody is quite to our taste, we gladly notice the attention paid to it—only, we would submit that it is too much a "performance" in their churches; while we take decided exception to the abominable habit of giving new names to old tunes, and so altering the tunes themselves that one hardly knows a familiar strain when he hears it sung or played. We cheerfully admit that Jonathan stands alone in inventing "apple-parers" and "husking machines;" but we somehow imagine that the great music-masters of the past would not relish the liberties taken with their works by the music-book maker of the present. We notice, also, a very extensive sale of works on agriculture.

The great book buying is, however, in the matter of "fiction." Under this head we would notice, at present, chiefly the twenty-five cent novels. The sale of these is enormous. Often one of these productions has in this shape a circulation of two hundred thousand copies. And, while a sweeping condemnation of fiction would be at once irrational and unjust, we cannot but fear—nay, we know—that the cheap novel of the States is often a most pernicious affair. Besides, in the dissemination of such books we have a direct interest. We find them on the shelves of our booksellers; we find them offered in our railway cars; we find them on the tables of our families. They are very extensively read by the young of both sexes in this Province. We would, therefore, warn papers, and beg them to watch this evil influx; for admitting that many of these tales come from the pens of men of genius and correct principle, it is well known that New York produces by the hundred thousands, stories fitted only to pollute the heart and debauch society; works which, we believe, are doing both to an appalling extent all over the Union. Mr. McGeorge, in his "Tales," says:—"Truly alarming is the epidemic, and unless checked it cannot fail to visit the rising generation with physologic emasculation and decrepitness." And he is correct. But we insist that this is not all, nor by half, the chief evil which these productions are fitted to work. Those, therefore, who can, should exert themselves as they may, and if we can do no positive good, we may, at least, avert great positive evil.

Literary Extracts.

SEVERITY OF OLD NAVAL COMMANDERS.—I can recall with satisfaction that during nine years which I commanded ships of war, I never punished a man for not being "smart," (and Russell, Elliot, Blackwood, Boultbee, Hall, Tucker, Bunbury and others could testify as to what ships were smarter), but I have seen painful instances to the contrary. I recollect, perfectly, every third man, at random, on the fore topsail yard of a ship that I belonged to being flogged for not reefing quick enough, and a fine young fellow, who was aloft being flogged because there was a turn in lift and brace of the maintopgallant yard, when it was crossed:—The captain: why was there a turn in the lift and brace?—Maintopman: I really could not help it sir, I did my best; the yard was run up so quick that I had no time to look carefully. Captain: You should have kept the yard on the right slue; tie him up! My blood curdled as a boy. I could have tied the Captain up if I had had the power. The Admirality, to do them justice, tried to suppress this foolish, cruel, wicked severity.—Sea Drift, by Rear-Admiral Hercules Robinson.

ANECDOTE OF OLIVER CROMWELL.—Another name which we find in the lists of the officers killed on the king's side is "Master Towneley, of Towneley, a Lancashire Papist;" and connected with this death a family tradition has been handed down, seemingly on good authority, which deserves recital. "Mary, daughter of Sir Francis Trappes, married Charles Towneley, of Towneley, in Lancashire, Esquire who was killed at the battle of Marston Moor. During the engagement she was with her father at Knaresborough, where she heard of her husband's fate, and came on the field the next morning in order to search for his body while the attendants of the camp were stripping and burying the dead. Here she was accosted by a general officer, to whom she told her melancholy story. He heard her with great tenderness, but earnestly desired her to leave a place where, besides the distress of witnessing such a scene, she might probably be insulted. She complied, and he called a trooper who took her en croup. On her way to Knaresborough she inquired of the man the name of the officer to whom civility she had been indebted, and learned that it was Lieutenant-General Cromwell."—Studies and Illustrations of the Great Rebellion, by J. S. Sandford.

AN INCIDENT IN THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO LEEDS.—The police, who were highly efficient throughout the, for them very fatiguing day and night, succeeded for the most part in keeping the people behind the barriers when it was necessary to do so, and the usual bibiarity ensued when anybody attempting to break in upon the line or cross the road was immediately bouted back again by several members of the force. One little boy alone baffled all their ingenuity, for it was utterly impossible to dodge him. His mission was, as he stated very often and very clearly, to vend the second edition of the Leeds Mercury with all possible rapidity, but the police not recognising as they should have done, the public importance of that estimable journal, did their utmost to frustrate the object of the devoted boy.—The winged heels of the Leeds Mercury youth, himself a Mercury, were however not to be tripped; and it was a perfect farce to see how he evaded his pursuers, to hear from all parts of the forbidden line, "Second edition of the Leeds Mercury" resounding in calm, clear tones, sometimes (after a particularly hot but fruitless chase) as a kind of insulting epitaph upon an over-zealous functionary who had been made to bite the dust (of which there was quite enough and to spare) in scrambling after the intangible offender) sometimes distantly uttered as a challenge to tired members of the force as they stood wiping their foreheads, internally debating whether they should laugh or become very fierce indeed. More astonishing than all, however, is the fact that the boy contrived to sell all his copies of the Leeds Mercury, but even this success did not content him, for when he had disposed of the last number he must needs appear once more upon the perilous line, and with that species of gesticulation popularly denominated "taking a sight," scream out again, "Second edition of the Leeds Mercury," to the immense gratification of the mob, amongst whom, we need scarcely say, he found many warm sympathizers. The police could not stand this, so off they all went after him at once. Their efforts were again praiseworthy but vain, for Mercury, employing a clever ruse de guerre, ran towards a fat inspector, who, of course, warmly opened his large arms to receive him, and then suddenly diving, darted under the official's legs, which formed a kind of triumphal arch for his exit, and disappeared amid roars of laughter, in which the police and their officers heartily joined.

ELOPEMENT OF A JEWESS.—Quite a commotion has been produced amongst the Jewish community in this city, in consequence of the elopement of Miss Gertrude Isaacs, daughter of Mrs. Isaacs, of Pritchard street, Portland square, who, on Tuesday, quitted the maternal roof for the purpose of uniting herself in marriage with a member of a Christian family, Mr. Edward Taylor. Miss Isaacs left her house at about half-past eight in the morning, ostensibly for the purpose of executing some commission, in the city for her mother, by whom her return was for several hours anxiously expected. Nothing transpired to show the real motive which had influenced her until two o'clock, when a note was received from her stating that at 9 o'clock she had been united in wedlock to Mr. Taylor, asking her forgiveness, and assigning as a reason why she had acted in so clandestine a manner, her conviction that her parent and friends would never have given their consent to the match.—Bristol Mercury.

SCOTCH RADICALISM AND THE CHECKS THERETO.—Aytoun is one of the extremely few Scotsmen of first-rate parts who do live in the ancient laud, and whose genius is fragrant of the soil. And he is a still rarer animal even than such, for he is a Scottish Tory, a Scottish Jacobite, a thick and thin Mariolator, as Episcopalian—finally a Scottish wit! If Scotchmen themselves are rare, this breed of them is still rarer. Indeed it never was a very numerous breed in those parts. There was Pitcairne, one or two Erskines, sturdy old Ruddiman, solid Chalmers, fiery Smollett—all Tories, and some of them good wags; and after them came Scott, and Lockhart, and Wilson, and that generation. But the Presbyterianism of the country, and, later still, its huge commercial developement, and the dogged self-independant character formed in the plebs by the parochial schools these influences have made, and do make, the Scottish people fearfully Radical! Then take the Disruption, the vastest movement of dissent ever made since the Reformation—that tends, year by year, to radicalise the Scot more and more. In short we only know two influences which tend to keep the movement in some check, and these are a certain love of antiquity which flows in the veins of the people, and moderates that disposition to glory in mere material progress, which is so essentially revolutionising, and the presence of a larger number of old families than are common elsewhere. But for these the last vestige of the old Scottish romantic feeling would soon go, and a coarse hard democracy follow, which would first toady the money interest, and afterwards fine itself compelled to fight it. We value then, our humorous and poetic Professor (even if we don't agree with everything he says), because his whole career in a kind of protest against the de-Scotization of Scotia and the vulgarisation of its politics. He is in literature what Lord Eglinton is in public life: one of those who hoist the flag of old romantic Scotland—the Scotland of Crichton, of Sir James Douglas, of the young Lochinvar, of the Ballabs.—New Quarterly Review.

THE BIRTH OF FREDERICK THE GREAT.—There in the native German element for young Fritz, of whom the centre is Papa, now come to be King, and powerfully manifesting himself as such. An abrupt peremptory young King; and German to the bone. Along with whom, companions to him in his social hours, and fellow-workers in his business, are a set of very rugged German sons of Nature; differing much from the French sons of Art. Baron Grumbow, Leopold Prince of Anhalt-Dessau (not yet called the old "Dessauer," being under 40 yet), General Glasenap, Colonel Derschau, General Flans; these, and the other nameless Generals and officials, are a curious counterpart to the Camaues, the Hautcharwoys and Forcades, with their nimble tongues and rapiers; still more to the Beaucobres, Archards, full of ecclesiastical logic, made of Bayle and Calvin kneaded together; and to the high-frizzled ladies rustling in stiff silk, with wrapt in its winter cloud coverlids, with its wastes of trampled mud, its poor frost-bound fishing frontiers, pine hillocks; desolate looking, there as Greenland or more so, says Reaching, who travelled there in winter time; hears unexpected human noises, and huge grinding and trampling; the Four Thousand, in long fleet of sledges, scouring across it in that manner. All day they rush along—out of the rimy hazes of morning into the olive-coloured clouds of evening again, with huge, loud-grinding rumble; and do arrive in time at Gäge. A notable streak of things, shooting across these frozen solitudes, in the New Year 1679; little short of Karl Gustav's feat, which we heard of, in the other or Danish end of the Baltic, twenty years ago, when he took Islands without ships. This second exploit—suggested or not by that prior one of Karl Gustav on the ice—is still a thing to be remembered by Hobenzollerns and Prussians. The Swedes were beaten here, on Frederick Wilhelm's rapid arrival; were driven into disastrous rapid retreat northward; which they executed in hunger and cold; fighting continually like northern bears under the grim sky; Frederick Wilhelm sticking to their shirts—holding by their tail, like an angry bear-ward with steel-whip in his hand. A thing which, on the small scale, reminds one of Napoleon's experiences. Not till Napoleon's huge fighting-flight, a hundred and thirty-four years after, did I read of such a transaction in those parts. The Swedish invasion of Prussia has gone utterly to ruin.—Ibid.

The Money Kings of Israel in Family Council.

During the last week of September the sheeb of the house of Rothschild held their family council in Paris, and the members from London, Vienna, Frankfort and Naples gathered round the counter of their brother in the French capital.

This sanhedrim of the Jew brokers of Europe meets once every two or three years, generally upon the eve of some public crisis, in order to debate and settle the policy they will pursue in squeezing the money bags of the people, and doling out the needful to the pauper governments of Europe. What the crisis is that has now called them together can only be conjectured. The house has far outgrown the calculations of Meyer Anselm Rothschild, its founder, who limited his operations to borrowing for penniless governments and changing of money between the different capitals of Europe. He made a very good thing of it, and left to his sons a handsome penny. But they have for many years been extensive dabblers in all sorts of speculations, sending out agents to every part of the world; and so widespread are their operations that no one knows, perhaps not themselves, just where they stand. Their credit stands amongst the highest in every commercial community; and yet, when the convulsion does come, it is not at all improbable that the house of Rothschild will prove to be just as hollow a shell as have all the other money-king houses of times past and present. Jew and Gentile are alike subject to the law that rules an indulgence in immense speculations, palatial mansions, expensive agencies, pharasaic charities, pretty opera girls, political intrigues, and fast living. The house of Rothschild has been carrying on these things for a full generation or two, and it may, like many other grand financial machines, have worn out the heart and core, and be nothing but an empty shell, which will some day explode with a great crash.

In the political state of Europe and the financial condition of the world there is abundance of matter for discussion in the sanhedrim of the Jew brokers. A revolution in France would tumble down half the thrones of Europe, and shake all of them to their centres. The house of Rothschild belongs to the old dynasties. It has no sympathy with the Napoleonic thrones whose foundations are being laid in Spain, Belgium, Italy, Turkey, and the Moldo-Wallachian provinces; nor with the democratic feeling that is spreading in England, smouldering in France, and burning for unity in the German fatherland. Whichever turn the coming changes in Europe may take, it is likely to be an undesirable thing to them, for the paper securities upon which their house is built are based entirely upon the willingness of the present and coming generations to pay for the cost of enslaving their fathers. The utterance of a new political principle in Europe either by the people or a Napoleon, may sweep away both princes and their promises. And even without so sudden a blow, the influence of the Jew brokers may wane. Their last sanhedrim was called together when Louis Napoleon found he could dispense with their services, and borrow the vast sums he required directly from the people. The sanhedrim then prophecied that the poor Gentile takers could not carry the French rentes, and they must soon sell to the Jews at an enormous loss. But Napoleon obtained all the money he wanted, and the rentes have not yet broken down.

In the financial condition of the world there is as much to discuss as in the political. Money is accumulated at the great centres of trade, and there is no employment for it. The customers of the Rothschilds, who deposit largely with them, expect their quarterly dividends. When a similar state of things occurred in 1842, and the rate of interest went down to one and a half and two per cent per annum, this same sanhedrim came to the conclusion that the world required a great war. There must be a general stirring up, said they, and new expenditures and new debts created. The stirring up did not come until 1848, and then not in the way the Jewish sanhedrim wanted it. At that time there was much talk of the many millions the Rothschilds had lost by decline in public securities.—Since then their operations have been multitudinous; their agents everywhere have lived grandly—in a style very different from the modest establishment of Meyer Anselm in the Judah-strasse at Frankfort—and have grown rich. But the prosperity of agents does not always prove the prosperity of principals.

In discussing the financial condition of the world there is one point that the sanhedrim may well consider. The palm of wealth is now passing to the New World—and to New York as its metropolis.—Money goes to where it finds the most active and profitable employment; and in this no nation can compete with the United States. Before many years the Jew brokers of European governments will find that the wealth they have so largely dealt in has slipped through their fingers, and gone into the hands of men who have little faith in the promises of princes, and none in the stability of thrones. The sanhedrim of the money changers would do well to consider this fact, and be prepared to answer the question. What then?—N. Y. Herald.

An old lady enrolling a Cambridge man, asked him, How her nephew behaved himself? Truly, madam, says he, he's a brave fellow, and stands close to Catherine Hall (name of a college.) I vow, said she, I feared to think; for was always hankering after the girls from a boy.

The "Persia's" Mails.

From the Globe's London Correspondence.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 15th, 1858.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

The Western Bank calamity continues to hang over the heads of the people of Glasgow and the west of Scotland, especially, with the most saddening effect. The £100 call so unexpectedly made would take from some of the shareholders from £30,000 to £50,000, and there is a talk of resisting the payment of every portion of it until the question shall have been tried whether the Directors of the concern be not legally responsible for the losses in consequence of their misrepresentations of the state of the affairs of the Bank. The Scottish Press says:—"It is known possibly to others—at least it is known to us—that a select number of the shareholders of the Western Bank believe that, in addition to and irrespective of any claim at law which the general body may have against the directors, they have a special case, as having been induced, by representations, to buy into the concern after it had, in terms of its charter, by the loss of a fourth of its capital, spso facto ceased to exist. These shareholders held a meeting in Edinburgh on Monday, when a most encouraging opinion of counsel was received. The counsel were Mr. James Anderson, Q. C., Sheriff Logan, and Mr. Mackenzie. They have been advised in the meantime that the call made by the liquidators may be legally suspended until the question be tried."

The North British Mail of yesterday announces the death of the Rev. John Brown, senior pastor of the Broughton Place U. P. Church, Edinburgh, and Professor of Exegetical Theology to the United Presbyterian Church. Dr. Brown has been ailing some time, and was this year unable to deliver his usual course of lectures in the Hall. Dr. Brown was in his 74th year. I doubt not, many of your readers will remember the cheerful face and white head of this venerable and genial minister.

The following interesting statement was made by Sir R. Murchison, at a soiree given by the Leeds Mechanic Instute and Literary Society:—"In pursuing his observations in the Highlands, it was his (Sir Roderick's) gratification a second time to meet with a remarkable man in the Town of Thurso, named Robert Dick, a baker.—When he went to see him he spread out before him a map of Caithness, and pointed out its imperfections. He (Dick) had travelled over the country in his leisure hours, was thoroughly acquainted with its features, and delineated to him, with flour on a board not simply its geographical features, but certain geological phenomena. Here was a man who was earning his daily bread by his hard work, who was obliged to read and to study by night, and who yet was able to instruct the Director General of the Geographical Society. Robert Dick was a profound botanist. He found, to his infinite humiliation, that this baker knew more of botanical science, aye, ten times more than he did."

Some events of the anti-Sunday League, including its great gun Mr. Baxter Langley, of the Morning Star, have been this week to Glasgow to advocate "the opening of public museums, libraries, and botanical gardens on Sundays." They got the City Hall, and the meeting was of the most stormy description. The subject of the lecture was "Sabbattarianism: a heresy of a part of the Modern Christian Church." The Rev. Henry W. Crossley occupied the chair, but the meeting voted by five to one, the arguments of Mr. Langley unsound, and his objects hurtful to the best interests of the people.

THE CONTINENT OF EUROPE.

From Prussia there is a full and circumstantial confirmation of the reported abdication of King Frederick William, and the appointment to the Regency of his brother the Prince of Prussia; and it is thought that the change will be very advantageous to Prussia, and scarcely less so to all the nations of Europe except Russia, which will now lose its influence at Berlin.

The question between France and Portugal has resolved itself into the single fact that Louis Napoleon has attempted to revive the slave trade, and that the Portuguese have attempted to bind him by the faith of treaties. The ship Charles-Georges was undoubtedly engaged in that traffic which the jurisprudence of Europe has declared to be an aggravated form of piracy. It had on board a cargo of negroes who one and all declared, when examined through the medium of a sworn interpreter, before an authorized commission at Mozambique, that they had not been engaged as labourers, but absolutely kidnapped on the African coast. No attempt has since been made to invalidate this statement; on the contrary, it is proved that the vessel, when captured, was in prohibited waters, that her papers were informal, and that her expedition was illegal. Were the present an isolated case, it might be unjust to impute to the Imperial Government a deliberate scheme of fostering certain commercial interests by once more legalising traffic in human flesh; but it is no secret that the Emperor's policy, during the last twelve months, has been steadily directed towards this object. The affair of the Regina-Coeli supplied one remarkable illustration, and that of the Charles-Georges caps the climax of apostacy. We are not astonished, therefore, to learn that there is a probability of settling the dispute by mediation; but there is every reason to believe that France hesitates to accept the good offices of England. Our countrymen, it is well known, are too earnest in their anti-slavery sentiments to admit the sophistries which represent that which would be freebooting in the Gulf of Mexico as legitimate emigration in the ports of Mozambique. Consequently, though a straightforward protest has been made by Portugal, and though an appeal has been presented to the public opinion of Europe, France is unwilling to carry out the provisions of the treaty of 1856; or, in other words, to submit her claims to equitable international arbitration. Unless she be disposed, however, to withdraw altogether from the quarrel, this is the necessary course for her to pursue; and whatever may be the natural docility of Lord Malmesbury's diplomatic mind, nothing less will satisfy the sense of honour and justice inherent in Englishmen.

Marshal Pelissier, Duke of Malakhoff, was married on Wednesday to his "young little mustard," Mademoiselle de Paniega. The Emperor and his creatures did their best to make the wedding a splendid, almost imperial affair, but the people of Paris are said to have displayed no interest in it. The civil marriage took place at noon, in Paris, and the religious ceremony in the evening at St. Cloud. Some people think that the army is getting the upper hand of the Emperor, and that he feels forced to be lavish of his favours to its leaders. The whole cost of the wedding and the magnificent dowry of the bride, comes out of the National Treasury!

An Irishman lately arriving in London, and passing through Broad Street, observed a glass globe, containing some fine large gold fish. He exclaimed: An sure, this is the first time in my life that I have seen live red herrings.

Tyranny in Naples.

The following article from the Daily News of Monday, will be read with peculiar interest:—

"Our correspondent at Naples, in his letter which we published on Friday, gave some facts respecting the province of Salerno, which exhibit vividly the system of the Neapolitan Government, and yet he reserves us the description is faint and not to be compared with the reality. In this intendancy, which is only one of fifteen into which the peninsular part of the kingdom is divided, there are no fewer than 12,000 persons whose names are entered on the books of the police, and who for political reasons are under their special care. The first class of these attendibili, as they are called, are under such strict surveillance that they may not leave their small commune without the written permission of the judge of the circumscription in which it is included. And even the permit of this magistrate gives them but a slightly enlarged range, the circumscription for which alone it is valid being itself narrow. 'It may be' says our correspondent, 'that a near and dear friend is ill and is dying; it is of no consequence, the regulation is rigid, and it has often happened that a son has been thus unable to close a father's eyes. Hundreds of other attendibili of this class have been wrenched from their homes, and set down at a distance, in places where they have no connexions and without knowing the probable length of their compulsory residence which often lasts many years. Such persons cut off from all hope of making a position in life, pass their lives in suspense, nothing in their existence being certain but the obligation to attend at the police office every morning and every night and there inscribe their names in the roll reserved for those of persons in the same pitiable condition as themselves. Campagna Amalfi, Sarno, Sala, Vallo, and other towns contain severally ten or twenty of these internes who have not committed any act for which they can be imprisoned but are visited with social ruin because they are so unfortunate as to excite the suspicion of the police.

"Of the other attendibili, those of the second and third classes, none are allowed to go even a short distance from home without the leave of the magistrate expressed in writing, leave which may be refused for any or no reason. The merchant whom the caprice or suspicion of the authorities happens to place in this category, must contradict his business and confine his enterprise within the radius of his own circumscription for no matter how urgent his affairs, he is not free to follow them beyond the distance of a mile or two from his own permitted dwelling. Once registered among the attendibili, he is, in a measure an outlaw, existing only on a sufferance, a man whom everybody may insult or injure with impunity. The case of the advocate Trajani, with whose corrageous eloquence the British public became acquainted through the reports of the recent trials at Salerno, arising out of the affair of the Cagliuri, is an instance of what is happening every day in Naples and Sicily. Trajani was one of the attendibili, resident at Vietri. His wife debilitated and declining before his eyes believed that if she could respire the air of Salerno, she should recover. But no prayers or entreaties could induce the authorities to permit him to take her thither. She died, and the advocate, whose career the Government had destroyed together with his liberty, saw his home made desolate. Such is the wanton brutality of the Government, as administered in the province of Salerno. Our correspondent assures us that it is not Salerno that gives the greatest anxiety to the Government, but that similar regulations are adopted in every other province of the monarchy. If Salerno alone has 12,000 attendibili a number which must bear a large proportion to that of the entire adult population of the intendancy, we may judge how immense must be the number of victims in the whole monarchy.

"There is not the faintest prospect that the wicked tyranny which prays upon the virtue and public spirit of nine millions of people is abating in rigour or approaching an end. On the contrary, many circumstances combine to show that the system by which the King of Naples has Governed for the last nine years is becoming consolidated."

The Treaty of Reciprocity.

From the Scottish American Journal.

The subject of the Reciprocity Treaty between the United States and British Provinces is at present under the consideration of the New York Chamber of Commerce. It has been brought before their notice by the Hon. Hamilton Meritt of St. Catharines, who complains that by certain Treasury regulations of 12th Feburary last the treaty has been virtually annulled in some of its most important particulars, by the third article of the treaty "it is agreed that the articles enumerated in the schedule hereunto annexed, being the growth and produce of the aforesaid British Colonies or of the United States, shall be admitted into each country respectively free of duty." The first articles enumerated in this schedule are "grain, flour, and breadstuffs of all kinds." But by the Treasury regulations referred to flour made in Canada from wheat the produce of the United States is excluded.—This proceeding in defending our technical grounds. The treaty, it is said, was intended only to secure the free interchange of the raw products of the two countries, and was not intended to afford any facilities to the manufacturing industry of the one to complete per se with that of the other. To import into the United States flour manufactured in Canadian mills from Chicago wheat is simply it is alleged, competing with a branch of American manufacture, and it was not contemplated by the Act of Reciprocity to give any such permission.—On the complaint of the American millers in the district where the competition is immediately felt a stop has been put to the importation of such flour, which is simply depriving the British Provinces of the chief advantage they have derived from the treaty.

A defence of this proceeding may possibly be set up on the technical grounds we have mentioned, but such argument can only be characterized as exceedingly sharp practice, while, viewing all the circumstances, this action of the United States Government is shabby and selfish in the last degree. To any fair and candid mind it must be evident that the defence, whatever foundation it may seem to have technically, is in distinct contradiction not only to the spirit of the treaty but to the very meaning of the term Reciprocity. The object was to do away with all distinctions between the two countries as regards certain articles of trade and commerce, with reference to which it has been found inconvenient to make distinctions. These commodities were to be imported freely from the one country to the other just as if unlimited free trade had been established between the two. Limitations were specified in these cases in which it was deemed advisable to have any limitations; and as regards the fisheries, for instance, fishermen of one country were prohibited from catching river fish within the limits of the other. There is no qualification of reciprocity as concerns the land products enumerated, with reference to which the two countries were to be as one. The object was to get rid of all such vexatious regulations as those which have recently been promulgated by the Washington Government, and to set at rest the international difficulties and disputes which are constantly arising out of them. But now the United States Treasury, in obedience to some petty political influence, reopens this fruitful source of discord and justifies it by a contemptible and selfish quibble.

How selfish and barefaced this conduct is, we have only to refer to the working of the Reciprocity Treaty fully to understand. Who are the gainers by that treaty? As regards the fisheries on the north-eastern coast, was it not calculated exclusively for the advantage of the fishermen of Maine and New Hampshire, whatever the result may have proved? Was not the free opening up of the Canadian canals, and the river St. Lawrence a boon to American commerce, for which there has been no return or equivalent? The Government of the United States did indeed engage "to urge upon the State of Government to secure to the subjects of her Britannic Majesty the use of the several canals on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the United States;" but this pledge has either not been fulfilled, or, if so the several States have not taken any action in accordance with the recommendations of the Federal Government. The truth is that the United States monopolize nearly the whole benefit arising from the Treaty of Reciprocity and the proceeding of the Government, which we are now noticing, it is a very shameful attempt to prevent the Canadians from being gainers in almost any form whatever. The New York Chamber of Commerce, we understand, have addressed inquiries on the subject to millers and merchants in the Lake district—on the American side of course—quite an unnecessary proceeding, we should say, for only one answer can be expected from the parties interested in Protection. What is now to be complained of is, that the action of the Federal Government has been guided by such merely local influences. If the whole treaty is to be made minced meat of in this way, at the bidding of local interests, the sooner it is abrogated and the St. Lawrence closed against American shipping the better.—This is an issue not unlikely to be brought about, if such a system is not checked at once. It is very well for a certain class of American traders to do business in this smart way, laughing in their sleeves all the time in the knowledge that they have already the lion's share of the benefit, and resolving, without scruple or modesty, to monopolize the whole. But the Government must act otherwise. The British Government did not consider the feelings and wishes, perhaps not even the real interests of localities, in the fishery regulations and other parts of the treaty; and the American Government must show at least some slight desire to be honourable and high minded, and not altogether subservient to petty local interests. As it is it has regarded the Reciprocity Treaty as a game in which it was at liberty to overreach and checkmate the other party, without any similar move being made in return. Must we be compelled to come to the conclusion that this is the mode of transacting public business that is natural to the country, and in which the leading statesmen in America see nothing that is dishonorable?

The Social Science Congress.

SIR JAMES STEPHEN ON COLONIZATION.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday Oct. 13.

The Association assembled this morning, at 10 o'clock, in the small concert room, St. George's Hall, for the purpose of hearing the Right Hon. Sir James Stephen deliver his address as president of the "Social Economy" section. Our colonies are bound to us by alliances which they will hold sacred and inviolable as long as we ourselves continue to be true and faithful to them.—I am not speaking of alliances negociated by plenipotentiaries, drawn out into protocols, and then transcribed on parchment to be interpreted by Jesuits. I am referring to tacit and unwritten compacts, dictated by ancient attachments, by the sense of interest; and sustained by many inveterate habitudes and perhaps by not a few honest prejudices. They are compacts of which nature herself is the guarantee, and which will therefore remain dear and venerable to the contracting parties, even after many provocations and many contests; for these are after all family quarrels, which, if more bitter than any other, are also more readily and effectually reconciled. The tacit alliance between ourselves and our colonies may be said to be either domestic, or foreign, or religious or commercial. By domestic alliance I mean their and our joint assent to the principle that they and we are all one people, so that no one of us is merely a member of a single realm or province, but that each one of us is also a member of a mighty empire, to the public trusts and honours and emoluments of every part of which we are equally entitled to aspire on equal terms. By our foreign alliances with our colonies, I mean their and our adoption of all the relations, whether of peace or war into which our Sovereign may enter with any other potentate, so that each component part of the Queen's dominions has always the same friends, the same allies, and the same enemies. By our religious alliances with our colonies, I mean their concurrence with us in allowing every one to worship according to the law of his own conscience without incurring on that account any pain or penalty, or civil disability, or political disqualification. And by commercial alliance, I mean the guarantee to be found both in the imperial and in all the colonial statute books, that within their respective jurisdictions every person in the Queen's allegiance shall enjoy an absolute freedom of buying and selling what and where and when and how he likes, unobstructed by any partial law or favour of others, and unburdened by any duties excepting only such as may be imposed with a real and exclusive view to the interests of the public revenue. Such are the four main articles of the great federal compact between the fifty united states of the British empire. But all these articles are not intended for all times. It is evidently possible, I think it probable, that the day will come when our Canadian and our native dependence will easily and deliberately insist on being dependencies no longer, but on being an independent in form and in name as they are already in truth and in reality; and when that demand shall be so made, is there a man among us who would discharge, I do not say a single cannon, but so much as a single bicifer match to resist it? May the union be perpetual; but if it shall cease to be spontaneous and cordial, it will also cease to be valuable.—Our colonies have evidently the power, if they shall ever find the will, to dissolve the federal compact with us, so far as it is either domestic or foreign; but so far as it is religious or commercial, neither they nor we can entirely dissolve it. To a great extent it must, in these respects remain indissoluble. To this hour we maintain a most yet biding alliance, religious and commercial, with the United States. The third generation of American citizens are still, I believe, looking with some yearnings of the heart, and with some filial pride, to the land of their and our ancestry. That they are looking to it with much commercial complacency is not a matter of doubtful belief, but of certain knowledge. Sir James Stephen referred to the Irish emigration of 1847 and the following years, and to its change of the condition of the people who emigrated. There were witnesses who graphically described the Irish emigrants, as, touching the western shores of the Atlantic, they leaped from the wages of half-a-crown to wages of a guinea and a half by the week. Others exhibited domestic dramas, of which the half-cleared wilderness was the scene, the Irish emigrant the hero, and a seat in some municipal or provincial council the splendid catastrophe. Many celebrate the fact, that in the person of the redoubted General Jackson, the presidential chair of the United States was filled by the son of such an emigrant. With one voice they all bear testimony of the thrift, sobriety and diligence, add to the state of comfort in which the emigrants were living.—Mr. Godley assigns to them three daily meals of butcher's meat, and clothing like that of a thriving farmer in the West Riding. But Count Strelezki reaches the climax:—"In the United States, in Canada, and in Australia," he says, "I saw the Irish living as well as the Anglo-Saxons, acquiring their grumbling habits, and thus continually improving their condition!" Tell it not on the banks of the Liffey, lest the Emerald Isle be deserted of all her sons.—Think of O'Connell's "hereditary bondsman," "close buttoned to the chin—broad cloth without, and a warm heart within," grumbling over his sirloin at the hardness of the times, and fattening as he growls! And warm indeed were the hearts of those noble exiles. We know something and have all heard much of Irish eloquence; but neither Burke or Sheridan, Plunkett or Grattan, Curran or O'Connell, have left behind them anything so moving as some of the letters laid before Parliament, in which the Irish in Canada invited their kindred at home to join them there. To their grammar and spelling indeed, belongs only the praise of a bare originality, but the tenderness and the pathos, the gracefulness and the gaity, the quiet humour, and the homely wisdom with which they address themselves to their deserted villages, bespeaks them at once as genuine members of the land and as pure scions of the stock of Oliver Goldsmiths. Nor was theirs a mere lip rhetoric. Their invitations were accompanied and enforced by pecuniary remittances, which were made partly through private hands, of whose receipts nothing is publicly known, but chiefly through the greater commercial firms and banking houses of Ireland, who on accounts spontaneously transmitted to the government, debited themselves with receipts which in the ten years beginning in 1848, and ending in 1857 amounted (they to whom the fact is new will scarcely hear it without incredulity) to the sum of £9,937,000. Thus the remittance made by the Irish emigrants to their families at home from the savings of these ten years, far exceeded the ten millions granted by Parliament for the relief of Ireland. Never was a debt more magnificently repaid or more nobly cancelled. " " " Englishmen drink in, with their mother's milk, the spirit of respect for law and lawful authority, and of reliance on themselves and on each other. When they meet in the wilderness they therefore extemporise a free and enduring government on the old English model, in less time than as many Frenchmen would like to draw up their preliminary declaration of the colonial rights of man. An English colony, in virtue of that great federal league of the United States of the British Empire to which I just now referred, draws in its infancy, from England, both capital and population, and receives, in its maturity, from England, emigrants, to render prolific the capital which, by that time, the colony has accumulated. It is the duty and the practice of the British Government to take the best possible security,—first that no such emigrant shall reach the colony in a state of disease or of squalid poverty; and, secondly, that any public funds which may be devoted to the expense of their migration be honestly, humanly, and frugally expended. " " " To the question why and how we colonize, a most discouraging answer has been given by one of our wisest men. It is said by Archbishop Whately, that we have lost the art of colonization.—A melancholy, if indeed it be an accurate statement. For since the peace of 1815, we have sent from our shores more than five millions of emigrants, of whom about two millions have reached Australia and Canada; and these, if the archbishop be right, must have become, not well-settled colonists, but so many aimless vagabonds.—Now he himself (as I have heard him say) is exactly of the same age as the oldest of Australian colonies. In his lifetime these territories were a mere hunting ground, where hordes of native savages chased herds of leaping kangaroos; and in his lifetime they are the abode of more than a million of persons of British birth or parentage. In his lifetime these territories were covered by the primeval forest, and in his lifetime they are now the seat of eight representative legislatures, of as many superior courts of justice, of ten bishoprics, of four universities, of churches, chapels, and schools, counted by the hundred, of miles of road and railway, counted by the thousand, and of seaports thronged with shipping beyond all but British or American example. Or to select one from these eight colonies. It is just twenty-one years ago that I had to lay before Lord Glenelg, then my official superior, a despatch from New South Wales announcing the arrival of the southern cape of that colony of a small body of English adventurers, who seemed disposed to settle on that nameless and uninhabited region. It has now acquired the name of Victoria. It is now inhabited by half a million of freemen. It has now a capital city as large and as populous as Oxford. It has an annual revenue of nearly four millions. It annually exports goods to the value of twelve millions against imports of the value of eleven millions. Or back from Victoria to the antipodean province of Canada. When Dr. Whately entered this world there were not nearly 100,000 Canadians on it. Now there are more than two millions, and they the constituents of a legislature unrivalled in dignity or power by any legislature on earth except the Parliament of this kingdom and the Congress of the United States. Therefore I hold that the great commentator on Bacon's Essay on Colonization is in error; that it is an art which this age has not lost, but has discovered, and that though it be an age of great marvels, it has produced nothing more truly marvellous than the recent growth of our colonial empire. Such is the answer I have to make to the two questions which I proposed at the outset. I have made it rather to elicit time to disclose the truth on a subject of no light importance to us all; for though elsewhere I am a member of history, I present myself here rather a pupil in the great science to which history is or ought to be subservient.

More about "Old Jokes."

From the Saturday Review.

From the earliest to the latest jokers the two themes of the evils of matrimony and the failing of persons have proved inexhaustibly fruitful. However dearly a man may love his own wife, and however ardently he may wish to go to the grave with her hand in hand, he is sure to relish a joke against wives in general. All the old jokes assume as an incontestible basis of wit that husbands are heartily tired of their wives, and as women either do not make such broad jokes, or do not succeed in getting them recorded, all the jokes are against the part of the wives and for the party of the husbands. It is always taken for granted that it is the husbands who lose by and suffer in matrimony, and who feel an unaffected and unconcealed delight when the death of their incumbrance sets them free. We have many stories like that which relates how "in a village of Picardy, after a long sickness, a farmer's wife fell into a lethargy. Her husband was willing, good man, to believe her out of pain; and so, according to the custom of that country, she was wrapped in a sheet, and carried out to be buried. But, as ill luck would have it, the bearers carried her so near a hedge, that the thorns pierced the sheet and waked the woman from her trance. Some years after, she died in reality; and as the funeral passed along, the husband would every now and then call out 'Not too near the hedge, not too near the hedge, neighbours.'" So in the "Joe Miller" collection we read that "a wild young gentleman had married a very discreet, virtuous young lady. The better to reclaim him, she caused it to be given out at his return that she was dead, and had been buried. In the meantime she had so placed herself in disguise as to be able to observe how he took the news; and finding him still the gay, inconstant man he always had been, she appeared to him as the ghost of herself, at which he seemed not at all dismayed; at length disclosing herself to him, he then appeared pretty much surprised; a person by said, 'Why, sir, you seem more afraid now than before!' 'Ay, replied he, most men are more afraid of a living wife than a dead one.'" There would be something quite shocking in the uniformity with which men are represented as wishing their wives dead, and we might be profoundly touched with the misery of the human race, if we did not recollect that all persons are apt to joke on the serious side of their common life, partly because the contrast between the idea which suggested the solemnity and the fact itself is often so striking, and still more because they like to hide most closely those feelings which are the most precious to them, but which, as being most common, are most easily guessed.

So, too, with parsons. However firmly they may be attached to their church and their clergymen, most men like to meet on the pleasant neutral ground of laughing at a parson. And not only the laity, but clergymen also, often even the preachers themselves, agree in thinking sermons fair targets for all the shafts of ridicule. This sentiment is broadly expressed in a story reported by Joe Miller, of "a parson preaching a tiresome sermon on happiness or bliss; when he had done, a gentleman told him that he had forgot one sort of happiness: Happy are they that did not hear your sermon." Joe Miller has also another story. 'A melting sermon being preached in a country church, all fell a weeping but one man, who being asked why he did not weep with the rest? Oh! said he, I belong to another parish." The feeling against parsons cannot, however, be so strong as that against wives, for occasionally the parson is allowed to come off triumphant, and have the best of the story. We read, for instance, that "The witty and licentious Earl of Rochester meeting with the great Isaac Barrow in the Park, told his companions that he would have some fun with the rusty old put. Accordingly, he went up with great gravity, and, taking off his hat, made the doctor a profound bow, saying, Doctor, I am yours to my shoe-tie. The Doctor, seeing his drift, immediately pulled off his beaver, and returned the bow, with My Lord, I am yours to the ground. Rochester followed up his salutation by a deeper bow, saying, Doctor, I am yours to the centre. Barrow, with a very low obeisance, replied, My Lord, I am yours to the antipodes. His lordship nearly gravelled, exclaimed, Doctor, I am yours to the lowest pit of hell. There, my Lord, said Barrow, sarcastically, I leave you; and walked off." And, as might be expected, when the transition from the preacher to the thing preached on is so easy, these stories border on profanity, and become mere centres of insipid irreverence. There are, however, exceptions; and there is a drollery about the following, which will perhaps warrant its being quoted. It is said that "a vicar and curate of a village, where there was to be a burial, were at variance. The vicar not coming in time, the curate began the service, and was reading the words, 'I am the resurrection,' when the vicar arrived, almost out of breath, and snatching the book out of the curate's hands, with great scorn, cried, 'You, the resurrection! I am the resurrection'—and then went on."

We will end our notice by extracting a few stories which rise a little above the average; and if they are old to many of our readers, they will not perhaps be so to all:—

When Mr. Hankey was in vogue as a great banker, a sailor had, as part of his pay, a draft on him for fifty pounds. This the sailor thought an immense sum, and calling at the house, insisted upon seeing the master in private. This was at length acceded to; and when the banker and the sailor met together, the following conversation ensued:—Sailor: Mr. Hankey, I've got a tickler for you—didn't like to expose you before the lads. Hankey: That was kind. Pray, what's this tickler? Sailor: Never mind, don't be afraid, I won't hurt you; 'tis a fifty. Hanker: Ah! that's a tickler, indeed. Sailor: Don't fret; give me five pounds now, and the rest at so much a week, I shan't mention it to anybody.

I will save you a thousand pounds, said an Irishman to an old gentleman, if you don't stand in your own light. How? You have a daughter, and you intend to give her ten thousand as a marriage portion. I do, sir. I will take her with nine thousand.

A gentleman that loved everything that was foreign, and was extremely fond of hard names dining at a friend's house, asked him, What the name of the wine was, of which he had just drank a glass at table? His friend, knowing that it was but indifferent, and recollecting that he had bought it at Stocks Market, told him, that it was true Stoke Marketo; upon which he found the wine excellent, and gave it great encomiums.

The Quebec Chronicle says the engineers appointed to locate the North Shore line of railway, left Quebec on Thursday morning. They are divided into three parties; one party will commence operations near Montreal, and proceed downwards to Three Rivers; another party will out to work from Three Rivers to the Pines; and the third party starting from Quebec will confined their labours to Three Rivers.

Latest from Fraser River.

The San Francisco correspondent of the New York Herald, writes under date of Oct. 5:—

The news from the Fraser River country is favourable. The river has at last fallen. On the 20th September the waters at Fort Yale was fifteen feet lower than it had been for months before; but it had to fall eight or ten feet more to get down to the point where it was last spring when the miners left off mining. The men who went to work are doing well It is expected during the winter a large quantity of gold will be taken out.

The Indians were peaceable, and no further difficulties were apprehended.

Gov. Douglas was on a visit to the mining bars, and had given assurance to the adventurers that ample stores of provisions would be kept on the river, and only reasonable rates allowed to be charged.

The steamer Wilson G. Hunt arrived at Victoria from Fraser River on the 20th September, having on board one hundred and fifty pounds of gold dust, the produce of the mines.

The miners on the bars above and below Fort Yale are doing about the same as in my last. On Texas bar, one partner in a claim of four—he owning half—pocketed $560 as his share, after paying all expenses, water, &c., in six days of last week.

A correspondent mentions that dry diggings are being successfully carried on, on the Siwash Gulch, at a spot eight miles from the Lower Canon, and at several other places below the Forks, and that their existence will certainly lead to the discovery of others. Above the Forks they are well known to exist in abundance; and now that provisions can find their way up, they also will soon be extensively worked, and the gold harvest no longer confined to a single fork-stream fourteen miles long, between Fort Hope and Fort Yale; said stream being deputed by 10,000 miners, when there was only room for 2,000, and that too, after the water had fallen.

Among the passengers arriving at Victoria, September 15, was a man having in his possession a quantity of coarse gold taken from Fraser River above the Forks, amounting in value to about a thousand dollars. The gold was in pieces from the value of fifty cents to two dollars was in irregular shapes, not in scales, and presented the dull appearance appertaining to gold taken from dry diggings. None of it was polished by the action of water.

Mr. Nugent the United States Commissioner, is at Victoria.

The Northern Light newspaper, published at Whitcom, has been discontinued; the Gazette published daily at Victoria, seems to be in a prosperous condition.

A letter from Victoria, dated Sept. 21, says that there can be little doubt that large amounts of gold will be taken from the river "when the water goes down to its west point," but that there will be no very great yield until then. The same letter says:—Collector Hicks, the Crown officer at Fort Yale had received information, upon which he relies, announcing the discovery of a mine of liquid quicksilver. I have been unable to obtain further particulars in relation to this remarkable phenomenon—if indeed the statement in regard to it has any just foundation.

An Electric Cannon.

The Toronto Globe says, an American gentleman from Buffalo, bearing the name of Goff, is now exhibiting in the Romain Buildings a cannon which is fired by electricity. It is breech loading, the charges being placed in chambers, after the principle adopted by Colonel Colt. The way in which it is worked is exceedingly simple. A lever placed by the side of the cannon brings the chamber precisely opposite the barrel. When it has gone the requisite distance, it locks, so that there is no danger of firing off the charge in the wrong place. At the instant, also, that it gains a true position, a communication between the battery and the powder is established, and an explosion is the immediate result. The cartridge is guided into the chambers by a tundish, before falling into which the paper is split by means of a knife, in order to prevent anything intervening between the current and the powder. These movements are accomplished by a single stroke of the lever. The battery which suffices to fire off the small model shown by Mr. Goff is also sufficient for a much larger cannon. The number of shots capable of being thrown per minute is at least sixty. We understand that the American Government are in treaty for the purchase of the invention. If its capabilities when in actual service prove as great as may reasonably be anticipated, a more fearful weapon of destruction has never been invented.

Arrival of the "Indian."

RIVIERE DU LOUP, Nov. 1.

The steamship Indian with Liverpool dates of 26th ultimo, arrived off here about noon to-day.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Defensive works of a very formidable nature have been completed at Fort Matilda on the Clyde.

A letter from Valentia says the shore end of the Cable was about to be laid, and that all the staff at Valentia had got notice to leave the company on the 30th November, unless something favourable turns up.

Parliament was further prorogued till 18th November.

The French officer who threatened to shoot the Newcastle Editor for libelling his father was fined £5.

FRANCE.

A difficulty has arisen between France and Brazil in regard to the property of the French subjects there. The French Consul at Pernambuco struck his flag and appealed to his Government.

The French Ambassador at Rome had, by direction of the Emperor, made strong representations to the Pope against the recent abduction by Catholics of the Jewish child Mortara.

Paris flour market firmer. Wheat dull. Provincial corn markets unchanged. Manufactures well employed, but foreign orders not so extensive as in former years. It is reported that the French Government refused to permit England to act either as arbiter or mediator between France and Portugal.

Business on the Bourse was declining; 3 per cent opened on the 19th at 73 95, was closed at 73 10.

RUSSIA.

Gigantic frauds monopolized attention. Government had paid twelve million roubles overcharge for constructing the Petersburg and Moscow Railway. The contractors have charged for a much longer line than was really laid down. Rolling stock was furnished by an American Company, according to distance, included fearful overcharges on this head. Also many influential persons compromised. Matter expected to be hushed up. Tremendous fires are reported to have occurred at Orel, 500 houses destroyed.

The disturbances in the Eastern Provinces are said to be more serious than represented, and in the Southern Provinces an insurrection of the peasants assumed a serious character.

The Times complains that the part played by Reed, American Commissioner to China, was worthy of his country. When English and French were demanding natural rights for all mankind, Reed begged a treaty for himself and his nation. That treaty contains no provision for free trade through the country; no new ports; no provisions for amended tariff.

SPAIN.

A Royal decree enacts that all steamships plying regularly between Cuban ports and ports of the United States or North America, are to enjoy the same privileges the English mail steamers, with liberty to carry six tons of merchandize without paying light house dues.

PORTUGAL.

Two French men-of-war remained at Lisbon; two British vessels also arrived in the Tagus.

PRUSSIA.

It is said that the Prince Regent has decided on proclaiming a political amnesty to all persons compromised since the the lottery ticket was to be purchased was wrapped up as a parcel, and Steinthal and Mag carried it solemnly out to the Park aforesaid. There it was buried under a hedge, while the Lord's Prayer was repeated, whether backwards or forwards we are not informed, and a Bible was produced, over which earth was magically sprinkled. After these ceremonies the conspirators walked away 300 paces in a straight direction, and came back, as the reader will have surmised, to find that the money had vanished in the interval. Mr. Yardley sent the conjuror to jail, notwithstanding his alleged participation in the risk and the expectancy of first-rate story at any rate, ends well; but some curious features about it remain to be noticed yet. It was stated that the prisoner's practice, principally, if not exclusively, among his own countrymen, was very extensive, and it appeared that there was actually a midwife in the concern, who besides lending her bosom to the charm served as the medium of introduction between the necromancer and his clients. That these clients were furnished from a people among whom education is universal was not overlooked by the magistrate in his address, but the peculiar aspirations to which the sorcerer appealed are undoubtedly striking.—What gipsies or wizards promise their British dupes we need not say; what Herr Steinthal promised Herr Magg we have in evidence before us. The lucky confederates, as the prize of their success, were to marry two sisters, to have large families, both boys and girls, and to carry on a most extensive trade, with all parts of the world Certainly the objects of Prussian ambition are not otherwise than innocent, though they may occasionally be sought through irregular channels.

We are afraid that the conjuring of Essex is below that of Prussia in style and purpose. It is ruder and more brutal, betokening grosser ignorance and more besotted credulity. At a village called East Thorpe the daughter of a labourer declared herself bewitched, and pitched upon a harmless old neighbour as the agent of evil. As the girl seems to have been insane, we cannot build upon her particular delusion but the impression was shared by the family, who averred that under the spells of the witch one of their pigs was seen to slowly up to the top of the cherrytree, and pick the fruit from its boughs. Under these circumstances a witch doctor was sent for, but the case proved too serious for him and a practitioner of great repute was accordingly called in. This man forwarded a bottle of medicine, and promised to attend in person and demolish the witch at an early period. On the evening of his expected visit at least 200 people assembled to meet him, but of the actual proceedings we obtain this information only,—that they all got violently intoxicated, and created a tremendous row. The result, in this respect is so truly British that it calls for no comment; but the story has its ugly traits, nevertheless. It is impossible not to conclude that witchcraft must be pretty popular in Essex when we find a couple of witch doctors living within easy hail of a single village, who are not only well known and in good practice, but whose respective talents are subjected to a discriminative estimate in popular opinion. More, too, yet remains behind. When rector of the parish recommended the removal of the insane girl to the Union for medical treatment the overseers if we are to believe the statement in a local journal—declined the proposal, alleging that a person was expected over to cure her—such "person" being the superior of the two practitioners aforesaid.

We shall be expected perhaps to moralize on the depth of the ignorance which in the middle of the 19th century, and after all our efforts for the diffusion of knowledge these proceedings disclose, and there is something no doubt to be said on this point. But is impossible, nevertheless, that conclusions might be drawn less discreditable to our national progress and yet equally reasonable. All depends upon the extent to which these doctrines are really operative. Absolutely and total eradication of ancient traditions, whether in belief, in customs or in speech, is a thing of incredibitable difficulty. The most effectual distribution of knowledge is sure to leave some angle of territory or some ground of population untouched. We rarely think of such matters, but the probability is that all the great revolutions of history remained incomplete and partial for many generations after the date at which they are presumed to have been accomplished. The entire conversion of these islands to Christianity was the work of ages. Paganism lingered for many a year after St. Augustine, and indeed the rites of Scandinavian idolatry were said to be traceable in the Scottish Highlands as late as the last century. British communities long survived the Saxon Heptarchy, and the Celtic language which now lingers in Wales only, was spoken up to the last generation in Cornwall. These are the natural incidences of great changes. It does not follow because we find examples of witchcraft that we have not generally dispelled all notions of sorcery, or that our civilization is really superficial because we meet here and there with these blots beneath the surface. Conjuring and magic may be only preserved, like pigtails, hairpowder, and Hessian boots, in rare instances and outlandish corners. It is, perhaps, evidence of such a fact that when examples do occur they are reported and discussed as events out of the common way, but whether we are justified or not in accepting such a theory it is at least perfectly credible from historical precedent that genuine enlightenment may have been advanced for years without absolutely effacing the vestiges of former superstition.

EMIGRATION.—The emigration from Liverpool to all parts has experienced a considerable falling off during the three quarters of the present, as compared with the corresponding nine months of last year. The total emigration in the three first quarters of this year, including cabin passengers, and those who went out in vessels not under the supervision of the emigrant authorities, has been 66,972 persons, being a decrease of 20,526 on the corresponding nine months of 1857, so that the emigration has so far been less than one half of that of last year. The greatest decrease has been observable in the emigration to Canada; though the passenger trade both to the United States and the Australian colonies shows a very considerable diminution. Nearly one-half the emigrants have proceeded to the United States, and the bulk have gone to the Australian colonies. The number of emigrant vessels which left Liverpool in the nine months, for all foreign and colonial ports was 211 ships, on an average tonnage of 301,589, or an average of 1,429 tons each. They took out in all 56,921 steerage passengers, of whom no less than 32,610 went to the United States; about 15,000 to the Australian colonies 1646 to the Cape of Good Hope; and the remainder to Canada. Of the total number of 56,910 emigrants, 24,393 were English, 4826 Scotch, 28,-200 Irish and 2951 natives of other countries. During the past month the emigration to the Australian colonies has shown signs of improvement, and the vessels now on clearance for Melbourne are filling with passengers.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Wanted—Rev. J. Douglas.
Auction Sale—A. McNeil.
Fall Importations—I. Robinson & Co.
Masters Clementi.
Schedule A—J. Edwards.
Schedule B—J. Edwards.
Schedule B—W. Sheridan.
Notice—W. Cumming.
Counting-House Stationery—Sawers & Murray.
Notice—Bigelow & Robinson
A Farm to be sold in Otonabee.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, NOV. 4, 1858.

The Mayoralty.

The Municipal Bill of last Session of Parliament, directing among other things, the filling of the office of Mayors of cities and towns, by direct vote of the municipal electors is producing a good deal more enthusiasm than was wont to attend the annual civic elections. In Toronto the contest between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Crawford is enlisting the active advocacy of the friends of the respective candidates, and here in Peterborough the inhabitants have awakened to a sense of the importance of their new relation to the head of the corporation. The necessity of honest and capable management of the affairs of the town is now the greater that it has embarked its fortunes in the success of the Port Hope Railway. Up to this, the townspeople are by no means content with the explanation that has been vouchsafed to them, by the parties who, acting under the authority of the Municipality, have received and distributed the money that was payable for the stock held by the Town. A deficiency in one item of £1,500 sterling, is shown to exist, and a suit has been instituted against the person who received the money for the Town, and who, in paying it over, appears either to have retained that portion to himself, or applied it to purposes not binding upon the Municipality. There is also strong evidence in proof of a false relation having sprung up between the railway contractor and one or more of those gentlemen to whom was entrusted the duty of preserving the interest of the Town in the due execution of the contract. These and other circumstances have shown the people how hollow are the professions of honesty put forward by public men who too keenly endeavour to gain the power of conducting the money operations on behalf of the Town. Last week's Review contained a very sensible appeal to the people in this behalf, and, for the benefit of our readers, we feel we ought not to pass by the following passage:

The importance of a careful selection will be readily admitted when it is remembered that during the approaching year the finances of the Town will require to be carefully managed; that the parties with whom we hold financial engagements will require to be dealt with in a spirit of justice to the ratepayers, and in this view the selection of some person of unquestioned integrity and intelligence is a matter of the greatest moment. The time to make the selection is approaching, and the ratepayers ought to be enquiring, who will be Mayor?

Those who, like us, condemn the selection of candidates whose integrity may be questioned will look with great suspicion upon the candidate whose name every body understands is to follow upon the heels thus put out by the Review. It will hardly do to allow proceedings in Chancery to be continued against the Mayor elect for embezzling, or putting to wrong uses the money belonging to the town. If that gentleman should succeed in gaining the favour of the people, their first act should be to take him out of Chancery, and acknowledge his innocence; to prosecute a suit, concerning a matter of which they suppose him morally innocent, which must be the conclusion of every mind, should be re-elected, would be a persecution of the most unaccountable character. However, perhaps the defaulter is not to be brought forward, though we have heard that he has expressed his intention in that way, and asked for support; but if it is not he who is to be the Mayor, the Review will probably tell us, to-morrow, who is to be. And, in his selection, if he cannot find one of his own, who can come up to the standard which he has set up, it is to be hoped he will be suited outside the little coterie.

In speaking of the future incumbent, we cannot pass over the present Mayor, without notice. Mr. Stevenson has devoted a great deal of time, that might have been profitably employed in his own concerns, to the affairs of the municipality; and we are authorized to say that he will not be a candidate for election this year. Mr. Stevenson will, however, if elected, sit for his ward in the Council, leaving the Mayor's chair to be fought for by other parties.

Popular Amusements.

Whatever pertains to influence the social condition of mankind is directly within the province of the public journalist to examine into. In whatever light we view man, savage or civilized, infidel or christian, educated or uneducated, in communities or as individuals, we always find a passion for amusements of some nature or other, and it is a fair criterion of the enlightenment and social condition of any community to study the amusements to which they give way. As with individuals and communities so with nations, and thus we estimate the gladiatorial combats of ancient Rome, the Bull Fights of Spain, and more recently the Prize Fights and Horse Racing so prevalent on and even encouraged by the present day, as indexes of the barbarity or depravity of the human minds countenancing them. Young Canada enjoys her share, and within the last week or two her shores have been the theatre of one of these brutal exhibitions which arouses the blood to curdle in the veins on perusing the highly coloured accounts with which some journals have embellished their columns anent it. For some time past the Sporting World in and around Buffalo, have been looking forward to a Champion Prize Fight. On the 20th of last month this barbarous exhibition came off before an admiring crowd of bullies, blackegs, rowdies and the sporting gentry of our neighbouring Union, at Long Point, Canada East. The details of this brutal business are too disgusting to lay before our readers, suffice it to say that amid the plaudits of the mob, one man was brutally beaten, and the victor perhaps not much less so, and that ere the blood cooled over the excitement of the fight, a fresh challenge for the Championship of America and a purse of $5,000 was given by the unsuccessful bully.

It would seem the law is powerless to put down these disgraceful scenes; but why should it continue so? Are we to be branded as barbarians because a class of fiends in human shape, the offscouring of society, choose to gratify their brutal desires by these prize fights? Surely no, and yet it is hardly otherwise, for the press far from exposing and denouncing the evil influences of these gladiatorial exhibitions are too generally teeming with the most glowing accounts of the late fight at Long Point. We refer more directly to the press of the United States, for from Canadian Journalists the affair has received little or no attention condemnatory or otherwise. But it is incumbent upon us to protest against the acquiesing in such scenes of our Canadian press whether or not our law be powerless to punish the participators in the fight. The voice of the people should be heard, and we cannot suppose for one moment that the sanction of the people of Canada is given to these brutal displays, on the contrary were it heard through the medium of the press as we trust it will be, the strongest language of condemnation and abhorence would greet our ears. We need not dwell on the baneful influences to society of a continuance of these prize fights, they must be apparent to every thinking soul; but we would, ere closing, draw attention to another and perhaps more popular amusement, and one to which we may now ourselves be witnesses almost any week going. We refer to Horse Racing, an amusement perhaps less brutalizing in its immediate results, but more baneful in its extended influence than even the prize fights of bullies. It is becoming very prevalent in our midst, and there is no community yet enjoying such amusements but finds sooner or later the demoralizing effects of this sport, being as it is in itself radically bad.

Communications.

The Hundredth Regiment.

☞ The following letter from a private in the 100th Regiment, has been handed us for publication by his friends here. It will be seen the Regiment is well cared for, and that the men are contented and happy in their new sphere. If, as is anticipated, the 100th are for India, we may confidently expect that Canada will suffer nothing from the reputation of the soldiers who have gone forth in her name:—

Shorncliffe Camp,
August 16th 1858.

DEAR BROTHER,—I write these few lines to let you know that I am well at present, hoping this will find you all the same. We sailed from Quebec on the 18th of June, on board the steamship Indian, and made a passage to Liverpool in 12 days; we saw Ireland and Scotland, and we can see France every day. This is a fine place situated on the sea shore, 85 miles from London, and 8 miles from Dover, in the County of Kent. I am getting on well, and all the rest of the boys; we have about four hours work every day, and the rest of the time to walk about like gentlemen, with our red coats, white gloves and walking cane. I may also let you know that H——— B———, is here with us; I want you to let mother and Walter know that I am well, and wish them to write and let me know how they are getting along; I want you to write as soon as this comes to your hand and let me know how you are getting along, and how my affairs stand. There are four regiments lying here now and another one coming in two days; there has one left here for India, and it is reported that we will soon follow them, We will soon be ready for the field, we have got served out all our accoutrements and rifles, the best I have ever seen, and every Saturday morning at 6 o'clock we are all marched down to the sea to bathe, you may imagine what kind of a sight it in to see 1,000 men all bathing at one time. I think if you was to see me "with my gun upon my shoulder and my bayonet by my side" you would scarcely know me. I feel quite contented and as happy as a lord with my four pence a day. Give all enquiring friends my best respects, and when you send a letter be sure and put the stamp of the Queen's head on it. Adieu. No more at present, but remains your affectionate brother.

W—— P——.

For the Examiner.

Facts, Dedicated to and Recommended for an Insertion in the next number of the "Charivari."

Our County has spoken—its voice has gone forth,
We still are astride east, west, south and north;
Though the friends of McDonald and poor Cartier,
Did the best that they could between hope and despair;
They marshalled their forces from hillside and dale,
But found to their sorrow that naught would avail;
For our Governor at last, they proposed three cheers,
But, alas for their cause, three groans met their ears;
Then to compromise matters the parties between
The reformers proposed three cheers for our Queen,
Nine I say they were given with a hearty good will,
Till their echos resounded from valley to hill;
Poor Cooper did all that man well could do/
For a traitor so corrupt, and supporters so few;
He stuck to his lastnote and true to his pay,
And who can upbraid him for five dollars a day?
Tom White, Cooper's incendiary and sympathizer too,
Followed suit with his master according to rule;
And grateful for all the small crumbs thrown his way,
Of course 'gainst the Government he'd nothing to say.
Reformers! now what must we think of the men,
Who have only such champions their cause to maintain,
An ex-member hired at five dollars a day,
With a toadying tool his word to obey.

Mr. Cooper gets $5 a day for superintending the North Pole Road, which I believe he goes to examine about once every two months.

PLAINDEALER.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Nov. 4th, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 90	a	1 00
Oats "	0 20	a	0 25
Potatoes "	0 20	a	0 25
Flour per barrel	5 00	a	5 50
Butter per lb	0 10	a	0 12½
Cheese "	0 08	a	0 10
Eggs per dozen	0 10	a	0 12½
Turnips "	0 13	a	0 00
Apples "	0 40	a	0 80
Mutton per lb.	0 05	a	0 07
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a	5 00
Beef per cwt	3 00	a	4 00
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Wood first quality	2 00	a	2 50
Straw per load	1 00	a	2 00
Cabbage per head	0 05	a	0 07

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Died.

At Enniskillen, Darlington, C.W., on the 20th October last, Margaret, the beloved and much regretted wife of Mr. John Cranston, late of Scotland.

WANTED,

A PRECENTOR, for the Presbyterian Church in connection with the Church of Scotland, in Peterborough.

Apply to the Rev'd J. Douglas,
Peterborough, Nov. 3, 1858. 43.

NOTICE.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Collector's Roll has been handed to me for the collection of the Taxes of 1858, and the time allowed for Collection is short, as the taxes must be paid on or before the

FIRST DAY OF DECEMBER.

I will be in attendance at my office in the Town Hall for the purpose of receiving the same from the hours of Nine o'clock, A. M., to Four o'clock P. M., and would be obliged to all persons concerned to save costs of a second call. The Rate is 2s 9d in the £, which any ratepayer can calculate at his leisure, and if their are errors in the Assessment, the Council is the only source of redress.

WILLIAM CUMMING,
Collector.
Peterboro', Nov. 2nd. 1858. 43-4 n.

CREDIT SALE BY AUCTION.

I AM instructed by Edward Foster to sell by PUBLIC AUCTION, at his residence Lot No. 5, 13th Concession, North Monaghan, three miles from Peterboro', on the Boundary line between Monaghan and Smith,

ON WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1858,

Comprising the following

FARM STOCK, IMPLEMENTS, &C.:

1 Span of Working Horses, 1 Span Brood Mares, 2 two year old Colts, 3 one year old do. 5 Cows, 5 two year old Heifers, 2 Calves, 12 Sheep.

ALSO,

1 Buggy, 2 Waggons, 2 Sleighs, 1 Ox Cart, 2 Harrows, 2 Sets Coarse Harness, 1 Set of Buggy Harness, (new); 1 Fanning Mill, with all the Farming Utensils, Household Furniture, &c., &c.

Terms:

Under $20, Cash; over that amount, 14 months Credit, by furnishing approved joint notes.

SALE AT 11 O'CLOCK, A. M.

A. McNEIL, Auctioneer.

North Monaghan, Oct. 22, 1858.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. BIGELOW & ROBINSON having dissolved Partnership, will sell on SATURDAY, 13th NOVEMBER,

all their Stock of Stoves and Tin Ware, consisting of a variety of Parlor, Parlor and Cooking Stoves, by PUBLIC AUCTION, without reserve.

TERMS OF SALE:

All sums under $5, cash; above that sum 3 months credit by furnishing approved notes.

A. McNEIL, Auctioneer.

Peterboro', November 4, 1858.

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels, Sheetings, Broad Cloths, Tweeds, Pilots, Satinettes, Damasks, Blankets, Shirtings, Cassimeres, Whitneys, Beavers, Stoffes, Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats, Frock and Shooting Coats, Vests, Pants, Drawers, Shirts, Waterproof Coats, Leggings, and Caps.

And a general assortment of

GROCERIES

All of which they will offer at a great reduction of prices, for Cash or Farm Produce. They would also call special attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT

of their business, where they are prepared to execute orders for all descriptions of Clothing, of the latest styles, the best workmanship and warranted to fit.

I. ROBINSON & Co.
Peterboro', Nov. 3, 1858. 43

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., containing of 100 Acres: 66 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', Nov. 2nd 1858. 43tf

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dumber's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth Sept. 20, 1858. 39

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled, "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	2. AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	3. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amounts.	4. DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	5. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL & PERSONAL ESTATE RESPONSIBLE TO SUCH CORPORATION. Real.	Personal.	6. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF THE UNITED COUNTIES OF PETERBOROUGH AND VICTORIA. Real	Personal	7. AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE THE SAME. Part of a penny in the £.
By-Law No. 187. A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, for the constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.	Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds, (including Principal and Interest.)	1	£300	1st January, 1860.			£1,356,180	£324,020	1859—6d 0¼d
		2	300	1st January, 1860.					1860—1¾d 1¾d
		3	300	1st January, 1861.
		4	300	1st January, 1861.					1861—1¾d 1¾d
		5	300	1st January, 1862.
		6	300	1st January, 1862.					1862—1¾d 1¾d
		7	300	1st January, 1863.
		8	300	1st January, 1863.					1863—1¾d 1¾d
		9	300	1st January, 1864.
		10	300	1st January, 1864.					1864—1¾d 1¾d
		11	300	1st January, 1865.
		12	300	1st January, 1865.					1865—1¾d 1¾d
		13	300	1st January, 1866.
		14	300	1st January, 1866.					1866—1¾d 1¾d
		15	300	1st January, 1867.
		16	300	1st January, 1867.					1867—1¾d 1¾d
		17	300	1st January, 1868.
		18	300	1st January, 1868.					1868—1¾d 1¾d
		19	300	1st January, 1869.
		20	300	1st January, 1869.					no Debentures yet issued.

Dated at Peterborough this 15th day of October, A. D. 1858.

Walter Sheridan,
Secretary Treasurer.

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	2. AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	3. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amount	4. DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	5. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE BELONGING TO SUCH CORPORATION. Real.	Pers'l.	6. ASSES'D VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF PETERBOROUGH. Real.	Personal.	7. AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE SAME.
No. 103. To aid in erecting and furnishing a School-house in the Town of Peterborough.	£3,500	Not decided on, but not less than £50 each.		Not decided on.	£10,600	£30,800	£215,079	£44,075	In 1859 four pence half-penny. In 1860 five pence. In 1861 five pence 3 farthings. In 1862 six pence one farthing. In 1863 six pence half-penny. In 1864 eight pence. In 1865 eight pence 1 farthing. In 1866 eight pence half-penny. In 1867 nine pence. In 1868 eight pence.

Dated at Peterborough, October 30th, 1858.

J. EDWARDS, Town Clerk.

SCHEDULE A.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF EACH BY-LAW.	2. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES ISSUED AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amounts.	3. AM'T RAIS'D UNDER EACH BY-LAW.	4. AM'T PAID OR REDEEMED ON ACC'T OF SAID DEBENTURE'S	5. BALANCE STILL REMAIN'G OUTSTANDING & PAYABLE ON SAID DEBENTURES.	6. DATES AT WHICH DEBENTURES FALL DUE, AND AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE TO PAY OFF SAME. DATES OF DEBENTURES FALLING DUE.	AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £.	7. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY. Real.	Personal.
No. 41. For the erection of a Market House, &c., in the Town of Peterborough.	Four.	£ 1 for 125 1 for 275 2 for 300 each.	£1,000	£ 400	£ 600	5th July, 1861.	5¼d & 2¾d.	I have no means of ascertaining.	I have no means of ascertaining.
No. 58. For repairing the Streets, &c.	Two.	£ 1 for 300 1 for 75	£ 375	None.	£ 375	2nd May, 1858.	4d.	Do.	Do.
No. 75. For grading Streets and purchasing Land.	Three.	£ 1 for 100 1 for 75 1 for 25	£ 200	£ 100	£ 100	11th Oct., 1857.	3d.	Dd.	Do.
No. 87. For taking Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£150	£ 150	£ 50	£ 100	3rd Nov., 1857.	No rate specified.	£170,968	£49,853
No. 86. For grading, gravelling and making embankment across Spalding's Bay.	One.	£600	£ 600	None.	£ 600	1st Feb'y, 1867.	Average of 2¼d.	£170,968	£49,853
No. 94. For taking additional Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£160	£ 150	None.	£ 150	1st August, 1858.	No rate specified.	£170,968	£49,853
No. 99. For balance of stock in Port Hope, L. & Beaverton Railway.	Fifty.	£250each	£12,500	None.	£12,500	8th May, 1878.	is 7¼d.	£188,507	£48,435

Dated at Peterborough, this 30th day of October, A. D., 1858.

JAMES EDWARDS, Town Clerk,

Counting-House Stationery.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

Have at present a full stock of every description of STATIONERY useful in the COUNTING HOUSE, to which they would specially call the attention of MERCHANTS, LAWYERS, ATTORNEYS, BANKERS, and others.

They have also a fitte assortment of

COUNTING-HOUSE & POCKET DIARIES FOR 1859.

POCKET AND DESK INKS IN GREAT VARIETY,

among which they would particularly notice the

NEW PATENT ARMSTRONG INKSTAND.

They have always on hand a large stock of Blue, Black and Carmine Inks, Steel and Gold Pens, &c., &c., &c.

GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH.

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE, AND CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 26, Lutterworth and at the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor.

Lutterworth, Oct. 30, 1858.

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

Corner of George and Hunter Streets.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 43

THOMPSON & RICHARDS.

R. D. BASKERVILLE,

IN returning his sincere thanks for the very liberal patronage and for the confidence of the community, that have been so liberally extended to him for the last eight years, would respectfully inform the public, that he has recently learnt all the new improvements in and has at present with him Mr. W. C. Whittle, one of the first workmen in his line, in North America.

HAIR CUTTING AND DRESSING,

A genuine article in the HAIR RESTORATOR, which he can recommend to the public. Please give it a trial at his Hair Dressing and Perfuming Establishment,

GEORGE STREET.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 43

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, ON

Saturday, 13th Nov. next.

at the hour of 12 o'clock, noon, two building Lots, 22 feet each, fronting on George Street, and running back 66 feet; the situation cannot be excelled in Town. I would strongly advise parties who wish to carry on Mercantile Business not to neglect this last opportunity: it being part of Lot No. 1, corner of George and Hunter Streets, one of the very best public corners in Town. There are at present six splendid new three storey Brick Stores on said Lot, and driving a very excellent business.

ALSO.

There will be seven other half acre Lots, sold at the same time, situated at the South end of the Town, near the Port Hope Rail Road. The conditions will be made known at the time of sale.

Terms Easy.

The Sale will take place on the premises of the Subscriber.

JAMES T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Oct. 27th, 1858. 42-3in

FRESH ARRIVALS

IN

BOOKS, STATIONERY, Bibles, Testaments, Church Services, PSALM AND PRAYER BOOKS, &c., &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY have made considerable additions to their Stock, and they now respectfully call the attention of the Public to the same, confident of giving satisfaction in regard to price and quality of the Goods offered. Determined to place their patrons on the most liberal terms, S. & M. will at all times sell at moderate prices, and as their stock of Stationery is very full at present, Merchants and the Public generally can buy from them on better terms than usual.

Let all call and examine the Stock before purchasing elsewhere.

S. & M. have recently added to their former Stock a new and most elegant assortment of BIBLES, TESTAMENTS, CHURCH SERVICES, &c., in every variety of style in Binding prices ranging from 12½ cents up to $4.50 for Pocket Editions. Wesley's Hymns, Church Hymns, &c.

Attention is particularly directed to their stock of Requisites for

SUNDAY SCHOOLS,

Comprising Lesson and Reward Tickets in great variety; Admission Cards, Reward Books and advanced Books for Libraries, well worthy the inspection of Superintendents, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools.

Additions have also been made to their Stock of Books, among which will be found

STANDARD EDITIONS OF THE POETS,

Miscellaneous Books in Superior Binding suitable for presents, and a large stock of General Literature.

In their Stationery and Miscellaneous Department will be found many additions to their former Stock among which they may note a varied Assortment of Pocket Inks, Mucilage, with Brushes, Pencil Sharpeners, Letter and Account Files, Parallel Rulers, Pocket Diaries for 1859, Pocket Books, Portmonnaies. A new assortment of Steel Pens, Playing Cards, Colored Paper for Flowers, Perforated Card Board, Pocket Ledgers, Cash Books, &c., &c.

S. & M. have also received a very large assortment of TOY BOOKS, PICTURES, Interesting Games, Transparent Slates, &c., suitable for Children. Also

A New Assortment of Music for the Piano Forte or Voice.

SCHOOL BOOKS,

Every Book used in the Schools in Town and surrounding Townships kept in Stock, and supplied at the lowest prices.

WRAPPING PAPER.

S. & M. have pleasure in informing the Merchants of Peterboro' and others that they have entered into arrangements whereby they can supply all sorts of Wrapping Paper at the mere extra cost of Freight above the Manufacturers usual prices. They trust to have the patronage of all using such papers, as they can be supplied on better terms than they have ever been heretofore.

☞ Call and examine at the New Book, Stationery and Music Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY.

George St., Peterboro'. Oct. 26, 1858.

NOTICE.

ALL Persons indebted to the Estate of the late Rev. Daniel Farrelly are requested forthwith to settle the same with the undersigned, who has duly taken out letters of Administration.

Parties having claims against the said estate are also requested to send in their Accounts properly authenticated, on or before the 1st of December next.

REV. JAMES FARRELLY, Administrator.

Lindsay, C. W., Oct. 18, 1858. 42-3t

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER IN GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS, Pork, Flour, Meal, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos and Spices. George Street, Peterboro'. 4

DIARIES FOR 1859.

WE are now receiving our Stock of DIARIES for the ensuing year. Merchants and others would do well to call early and make their selection.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Booksellers and Stationers, George Street.

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,

COMPRISING OF,

TEAS,

HYSONS old and young,
" Twankay & Twankay,
GUNPOWDER,
CONGUO,
SOUCHONG, &c.
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS,

Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba,
Redpath's Crushed, A.
Dry Crushed & broken Loaf,
Loaves,
Ground,
Extra ground (for confect'ers,)
Yellow Refined,

COFFEE,

Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP,

Redpath's refined.

RICE,

African, Patna & South Carolina.

TOBACCOS,

5s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES,

T. DeGlasgow & Montreal, Burns, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS,

Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do. M. R. Layers & Valtana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES,

Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS,

Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (case Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, Londons Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whisky in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS,

An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS,

2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT,

500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

Life Association of Scotland

NINETEENTH REPORT.

THE NINETEENTH Annual Meeting of the Association was held within the Head Office, Edinburgh, on the 3rd August current, in terms of the Charter and Act of Parliament,—Sir JAMES FORBES, BART., of Comiston, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the Meeting the ANNUAL REPORT by the DIRECTORS on the Progress of the Business; the REPORT of the AUDITORS, Mr. W. WOOD, Accountant; and the BALANCE SHEET of the ACCOUNTS, certified in terms of the Act of Parliament; with other statements of the Affairs, as at 5th April last, the date of balance.

Notwithstanding the general depression of commercial affairs, the Progress of the Association during the past year has been greater than in any former year, with only one exception.

The APPLICATIONS for NEW LIFE ASSURANCES during the year were.....1247 for £966,483 stg.
Of which the Directors accepted.....1066 for £550,344 stg.
The ANNUAL PREMIUMS being.....£18,811 stg.

ANNUITIES on 34 lives were purchased for.....£875 19s. stg.
per annum, at the price of....£9487 7s. stg.

The POLICIES that became claims on the Association by deaths during the year amounted to 98 for £43,045 stg.

The TOTAL ASSURANCES since the commencement of the business amount to nearly FIVE MILLION POUNDS Sterling.

The ANNUAL INCOME is now ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT THOUSAND POUNDS-Sterling.

The POLICY HOLDERS entitled to participate in the Profits, who completed their fifth year before the date of balance, will be entitled to a REDUCTION of 26 per cent. (7s per £1) from their next ANNUAL PREMIUMS.

From the increasing wealth and importance of British North America, as well as the example of other ASSURANCE OFFICES, the DIRECTORS have for some time entertained the idea of establishing Branches there. They have been enabled since last meeting to accomplish this. A deputation from the DIRECTORS visited the chief TOWNS, and secured the co-operations of influential gentlemen in each Province. Although the branches have been in operation only for a few months, the transactions have already been considerable, as well as of a most satisfactory description. Special thanks are due to the gentlemen acting as DIRECTORS, MEDICAL OFFICERS, and AGENTS there, who have already interested themselves much in the ASSOCIATION'S affairs, and through whose exertions there is every prospect of permanent success.

The REPORT by the Board of DIRECTORS was unanimously approved. The VACANCIES in the Board were then filled up; and after special votes of thanks to the DIRECTORS at the Head Office and Branches, and the AGENTS, Medical OFFICERS, MANAGERS, &c., the meeting separated.

DIRECTORS AT MONTREAL:
GREAT ST. JAMES STREET,

J. G. MACKENZIE, Esq., Merchant.
DAVID TORRANCE, Esq., Merchant.
GORDON MACKAY, JR., Esq., of Gilmour, Mackay & Co., Merchants.
ALEXANDER MORRIS, Esq., Advocate.

SECRETARY.....JAMES GRANT.

Branches at Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, London and Quebec.
Agencies in every Town in Canada.
Montreal, Aug. 24, 1858.

Agents:
Peterborough—Robert Dunsmore, Banker.
Cobourg—Arthur McDonald, M. P.
Lindsay—David Billington, Esq., of Sheriff's Office.
Port Hope—James E. Walsh, Merchant.
39—1m.

The Globe Newspaper!

1859.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.
The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.
National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.
Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.
Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.
Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.
A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.
Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.
&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance,—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the GLOBE throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year."

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.
Toronto, Sept. 18, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.
Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE Subscriber hereby informs his Customers in arrear that unless they make immediate payment their NOTES and ACCOUNTS will be put in suit.

JOHN MIGHT.
Peterborough Oct. 20th 1858. 41-4in.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN

THAT the GRAMMER and UNION SCHOOL has been opened after the Summer Vacation with an efficient Staff of Teachers; the Reverend John McCulloch M. A. having been appointed to the vacant Headmastership under very favourable Testimonials as to experience and qualification.

It is hereby earnestly hoped that the PARENTS and GUARDIANS of the young will avail themselves of the services of a Staff of Teachers in every way worthy of Public confidence, and give a hearty support to an Institution so thoroughly Local in its character, and so well qualified to impart the elements of sound secular education.

By order
T. STRICKLAND,
Secy. to Trustees of S. S. & U.
Peterborough Oct. 13th 1858. 41-3in.
(Review Copy twice.)

NOTICE

DR. McKEON, finds constrained to notify his patients, that he means to hand in his ACCOUNTS for the year to an Agent for collection, at the close of the present Month.

Peterboro', Oct. 19th, 1858. 41-3i

ORANGE DEDICATION.

THE members of Orange Lodges No. 26, 102 and 404 held in Peterborough, intend to dedicate their New HALL, on

FRIDAY, 5TH NOVEMBER, NEXT,

at 11 o'clock, P. M. The public and the Brethren of the surrounding Lodges are respectfully invited to attend.

Suitable addresses will be delivered on the occasion.

Peterborough, 19th October, 1858. 41-3i

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARBY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE & M RINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

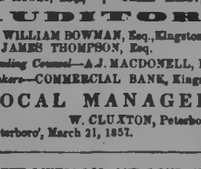
UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500.00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., LONDON. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,227,200. Paid up Capital, $430,266.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, JR., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., Q. C., P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M. D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) as always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving Mr. Gregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel Bridgenorth. Rye cent way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.
Bridgenorth June 15, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts.

Good Liquors

Will always be supplied with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good Stabling for 30 Horses & servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the Stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and Baggage Waggon always in attendance.

LOUIS McKEROOW.
Peterboro', 1858. 3-tf.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Elythe Mills, Peterboro', }
July 20, 1858. } 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners' will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attache.50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun..50 "
Tom Cringles' Log.....75 "
The Cruise of the Midge.....75 "
Yankee Notions for September.....12½ "

And a host of other capital things at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.
Peterboro', August 20, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 30-tf

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PORTRAIT

OF THE

Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.

SPECIMEN

To be seen and orders received at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now on sale at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
Book and Stationery Store, George St.
PRICE 50 cents, or in Gilt Frames, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of

LITERATURE.

PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c., &c., &c.,

which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.

SAWERS & MURRAY
Peterboro', October 6th, 1858. 39

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the South of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 26, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved is two pairs gain barns, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that portion of country. For particulars of price and terms apply to the Proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 20, 1858. 30-tf.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ¾ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £200 cash, on a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ November Number received, price 25 cts

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

SAW MILL,

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Perlow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Harrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MOCOCK.
Peterboro'. Sept. 22, 1857.

NOTICE.

PARTIES are requested to take notice that the Accounts for the last half year are now ready for delivery, and a prompt settlement is requested, as the subscribers are now about to close their books for the season. Those accounts not by such payments or notes will be by the 1st of November handed over for collection.

A. FOWLER & Co.

☞ Notes maible dated hereof will be charged at future at the rate of 12 per cent.
Peterboro' October 7th, 1858. 39-3in.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	5c 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	5 3½
3,00 ..	Bellou's Pictorial	5 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated..	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,20 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
3,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12 Note " " " "	2
3 Steel Pens.....	1
1 Holder.....	1
1 Pencil.....	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....	½
Making a total of.....	1s 6d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambaia," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson,	Young Hyson,
Gunpowder,	Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 19, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good fences, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

For further particulars apply to James Mickle, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. B. SCOTT.
Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Lays from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs.....	$1,00
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates.....	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates.....	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping.....	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy.....	0,40
Do. Story of Grace.....	0,30
Do. Truth and Error.....	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..	0,40
Do. Eternal Day.....	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate.....	0,30
Do. Crook in the Lot.....	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One.....	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 20 cts., plain..	0,30
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies.....	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy.....	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses..	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher.....	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated.....	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 830 pages.....	2,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant.....	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel.....	1,00
Do. The City, Its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption.....	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation.....	1,25
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland....	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret.....	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement.....	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches...	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus.....	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus.....	0,40
Do Family Prayers.....	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion.....	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones.....	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany.....	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story.....	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion.....	1,00
McCosh's Method of Divine Government.	2,00
Menteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant.....	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies.....	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters.....	0,50
Scotia's Bards - The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland.....	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles.....	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, Illustrated.....	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every

BOOKLESS PATENT.

PRINTING

OF

EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Plain, Colored, Fancy

AND

Ornamental.----Bronzing,

&c., &c., &c.,

Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the

EXAMINER AND NEWSROOM,

Burnham's Block,

OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 44.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	3

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,

Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.

V. M. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER IN GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS, Pork, Flour, Meal, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos and Spices. George Street, Peterboro'. 42

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.

Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 32

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 6, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET.

Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is daily wanted.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNLOP, Bocers, or

GEORGE A. STEWART,

Port Hope, C. W.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $20!

[illegible]

[illegible]

Peterborough, July 29, 1858. 28 1aw1

Grand Trunk of Canada.

From the London Times, Oct. 16th.

The London directors of this company announce in their report the complete success of the plan for the conversion of £500,000 of the consolidated stock of the company into 7 per cent. debentures, upon a subscription for a like amount of this capital. All those debentures have been appropriated. The section of the railroad from Stratford to London, a distance of 31 miles, was opened for traffic on the 27th ult, thus connecting a most important part of Western Canada with Toronto and the east, by means of the Grand Trunk system. The capital account shows that £9,648,135 had been received and £9,585,839 expended, including £812,787 during the past half-year, leaving a balance of £62,295. The revenue account showed that £218,886 had been received and expended during the half-year ending the 30th of June last.

The report of Mr. T. A. Blackwell, the managing director in Canada, states that disappointment has followed disappointment in regard to the revenue of the company. All past anticipations respecting the traffic of the country had more or less remained unrealized. This had arisen from the unparalleled depression of trade both in the United States and Canada. Small as the receipts had been in themselves, they had not decreased in the same extraordinary proportion as those of other lines similarly located in the States; for while the falling off on the other lines referred to had exceeded in many cases 20 per cent, the decrease on the Grand Trunk Railway had only been 8 1-4 per cent. There were other causes, however—namely, the absence of the proper facilities for developing traffic, of a continuous and unbroken line, increased accommodation at the chief stations for freight, particularly at the terminals, &c. The Canadian Parliament, which showed the great interest taken in the success of the railway, had waived any demand on the company for the interest on £3,111,500 until after the shareholders shall have been paid 9 per cent. on the amount of their shares. Putting this sum aside, the capital of the company authorized stands at £10,788,000 of which the sum of £1,862,000 remains unissued. To this has now been added the £500,000 share capital cancelled by the recent issue of 7 per cent debentures, making the total capital unissued £2,362,400, of which about £1,000,000 will be required for work up to the opening of the whole line in December, in 1859. The whole amount actually raised by shares and bonds, as well as from temporary loans, for the general purposes of the company (including the £3,111,500 Government loan), is £10,918,590. Out of this sum there has been paid to the shareholders for interest on the share capital, £300,000 in cash (of which £180,000 has been allowed by the contractors of the line, according to the terms of the contract) £191,684 in the 7 per cent bonds of the company. It thus appears that the shareholders have received for interest from the commencement of the undertaking in cash about £300,000 in 7 per cent. capital £191,684, and including the interest on bonds and loans the item of interest chargeable to the capital account of the company is, in all, £1,100,000. The annual interest, therefore, payable is £353,676, on the bonds of the company, and £73,000 on the rent of the Portland section, making a total annual charge of £426,676 prior to the payment of interest on shares. This capital has secured to the company a grand system of railways, extending literally throughout the whole province of Canada. The mileage of the different sections may be stated as follows:—Riviere du Loup to Chaudiere Junction 100; Point Levi to Richmond, 56; Arthabaska to Three Rivers, 30; Montreal to Toronto, 333; Toronto to Sarnia, 168; St. Mary's to London, 22; Victoria Bridge and approaches, 6; Montreal and Island Pond section, 143; Island Pond and Portland, 149; total miles, 1,057. The section between Island Pond and Portland was leased for 999 years, at a rental of 6 per cent. on a capital of £1,226,000. Contingent upon the concessions by the Legislature already referred to, and by which the sum of £3,111,500 was placed behind all other moneys raised or to be raised, was the undertaking on the part of the company to assist to the extent of £125,000 in the construction of a different line of railway from Arthabaska on the Quebec and Richmond line to Three Rivers on the St. Lawrence, and also to subscribe to the extent of £100,000 towards the improvement of certain existing lines, running at right angles with the Trunk, which lines are no doubt destined to be important feeders. The Government relinquished the right of requiring the company to proceed to a point further east than Riviere du Loup, relieving them from the construction of a section of the line which, judging from past experience, would not have been in the least degree remunerative, until, at all events, the lines from the lower provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia had effected a junction with it on the shores of the St. Lawrence. The Grand Trunk Railway was a single line throughout of the 5 feet 6 inch gauge, but land had in all cases been provided for a double track, and in several of the larger structures the foundations and the masonry of the abutments had been put in for a double line. The works, inclusive of the plant, &c, had been all constructed under contract, but in many places, from a want of the necessary information and experience in regard to what was required, the line was left incomplete in many important points of detail at the stations and termini from the want of which facilities it may fairly be said that the undertaking had not yet had adequate opportunities of development. For example, while a communication had been established with the shipping at Point Levi (opposite Quebec) there was no railway connection with the commercial portion of Montreal, the terminus, owing to the location of the Victoria Bridge, being placed two miles distant from the business part of the city. The openings of Kingston, Cobourg, and Port Hope were left locked that access to the watercraft at these ports without branch lines was an impossibility. The line at Toronto was so inconveniently arranged, owing to the corporation originally prohibiting a track being carried through the city, that, up to the present time, two distinct locomotive and station establishments have had to be maintained; and the terminus at Sarnia, as located according to the company's charter, was on the bare shore of the lake without any means whatever of intersecting any of the Western traffic passing down the Lake St. Clair, and which all the original calculations of the promoters of this enterprise must have had considerable reference. Thus it would be seen that, although the company had projected a main trunk line, nearly 1,100 miles in length, there were such hindrances to a proper development of the traffic that the deficiency in the past receipts could scarcely create surprise. In short, the line, from being broken in its continuity in several places, and wanting in the necessary accommodation to induce traffic at its extremities, had never been in a position to secure the Western traffic passing to the seaboard; but they were as speedily as practicable making good all those omissions. A little time was only required to prove the Grand Trunk Railway to be the highway from the ocean to the west and vice versa. The western section of the line passed through a very fine country, but for the most part through woods of oak and hardwood. The result so far, of the working of the section from Toronto to Stratford, had been of a very satisfactory character, the produce of the land contiguous to the line being in all cases sent by railroad. The middle portion of the line,—viz: between Toronto and Montreal, was of a less satisfactory character. This section of the line runs parallel with the lake and river navigation, and consequently for five months in the year they were in active competition with the steam and other vessels plying between the lake ports and Montreal. For the remaining portion of the year the railway was, of course, without competition. The lower sections of the line, from Montreal to Point Levi, St. Thomas and Portland, may be said to call for no special remarks, excepting their want of connection by means of the Victoria Bridge with the western section. This link was so essential that no correct estimate of the through traffic could be formed until it was completed. At the close of the year 1859 the Grand Trunk system would be a continuous railway from Detroit to Portland and Riviere du Loup, upwards of 100 miles below Quebec, the total cost of which would be as nearly as can now be estimated, capitalising the rent of the Portland section, about £10,700,000, or about £10,000 per mile, including the Victoria Bridge. The total mileage would be increased by the Detroit Extension to 1,114 miles. As £20 per mile per week would, after deduction of expenses, provide for the lease of the Portland road and the interest on the bonded debt, any surplus would be applicable to a dividend on the share capital of the company. Their best energies were now directed to reduction in expenditure, and to show that progress was being made in the right direction, a diminution at the rate of £80,000 per annum had been made in the last half year—the actual working expenses amounting to £11 4s 6d per mile per week for the half year ending the 31st of December, 1857, while for the half year ending the 30th of June, 1858—by far the more expensive half year of the two, the expenses were reduced to £8 18s per mile.—The Provincial Government had granted a subsidy of £50,000 per annum for a weekly line between Liverpool and Quebec and Portland, which would commence next year. The possession of this independent oceanic line would afford the Grand Trunk Railway the most direct and expeditious route between New Orleans and Chicago and Liverpool. He concluded by stating that the proprietors had a line of a character in point of durability and finish of works, quite unexampled on the American continent; while its continuity, coupled with its great length, being under one management, would afford facilities for the transport of passengers and freight possessed by no other line in America. The bridges, stations, and structures generally were built of masonry and wrought iron, wooden erections being the exception instead of the rule. As regarded the permanent character of the plant, it was of the most approved description and in the best working order; and arrangements were now perfecting for the conveyance of all freight likely to be offered, while the breaks remained at Montreal and between Sarnia and Detroit. To complete those links and otherwise make additional arrangements for securing the western traffic, it is necessary that the unissued capital should in some way be realised.

Lord Canning's Policy.

While the public mind of England now renders full and complete justice to Lord Canning, who has defended himself as successfully against the accusation of unjustifiable severity as he had previously done against that of over-clemency, what has the chosen organ of the great English nation—what has that Parliament to whom we confide the protection of the honour alike of the nation and of her heavily-burdened servants done to compensate for the cruel injustice, for the renunciation of our rights, and the betrayal of our sovereignty perpetrated by the Government? We have now the whole of this case before us. We know what can be said against as well as what can be said in favour of Lord Canning; and in what respect has the question been altered from that which was discussed within the walls of Parliament four months ago? Experience shows that the nature of the controversy, its bearings, and its importance, were then appreciated with perfect correctness. Almost everything that could be said from India has already been said in England. The greatest and most flagrant violation of duty on the part of the Ministers of the Crown was brought to light, and the verdict of Parliament solemnly challenged on the issue, solemnly and constitutionally raised. And what was the result? The future historian will record with shame that the Ministry dared to call in question the sovereignty of the Crown, whose servants they nominally are, over a vast province then in flagrant and open insurrection; that in order to disgust a Governor General whom they dare not recall, they loaded him with sarcasms and insults, and, without waiting to hear what he could say in his defence, published their deliberate and violent condemnation of an act of state as irrevocable as it was momentous. These things being so, history will have to tell how Parliament, after we know not how many night's debate, shrunk from expressing any opinion upon them: and that the motion was withdrawn with the approbation of all parties, but more especially of those whose profession it is to search out and eradicate abuses. We observe in the numerous speeches which have been delivered during the recess very few allusions to this subject, and we cannot be surprised that it should be so. The fear of a dissolution, the unwillingness to replace an unpopular Minister, private spite and animosity, triumphed over every consideration of the public interest, and exhibited a Parliament which had just displaced a Minister because he appeared not sufficiently sensitive to the public honour, as willing to leave that honour to be trampled under foot without venturing to place on record the slightest censure of the offence. But, worst of all, such a proceeding might have been pardoned if it proceeded from that rage of party from which if we suffer great evils, we also receive great benefits; but party spirit was never less violent than at this moment, and we must therefore attribute that extraordinary and unparalleled dereliction of its duty on the part of the House of Commons to motives even less elevated and less excusable.—Times.

Astronomy.

(From the London Globe.)

Astronomy in these days has become to most people a very cut and dried science. Sir Isaac Newton has told us all about it. There is the sun in the centre, and the planets revolve round it, as we see in the orreries. The grand discovery of gravitation started from the fall of an apple, and ends with it. The sun is a very large orange, the earth a crabapple, and the moon a white currant. With a few trifling varieties, this explains the whole solar system. Ladies' maids understand it all, for it is far easier than needle-work or clear-starching; and though we have heard of one who owned herself beaten by the "procession" of the equinoxes, the whole affair lies within the reach of a village school, from the rotation of the earth's axis to the discovery of the last new planet. The mind contemplates a vast shadowy order of revolving worlds, and is satisfied. The truth leaves so little to the imagination, it establishes so impassable a gulf between us and every other celestial body, that minds bred in the school of life and sentiment recoil from this, the cold certainty of solid spheres moving by iron laws. What have we to do with the planet Jupiter, or even our own moon?—Tell us, if you can, whether they are inhabited; what like beings occupy them; how they live; and, if possible, open communication with them. What are they to us, or we to them? Your discoveries only make matters worse. Desist, and let us imagine what science forbids us to believe. Meanwhile, thanks to the dull, able men, who, with their cold, piercing eyes and subtle algebra, have dissected this great puzzle, not only have illusions vanished, but the very pageant of the heavens has lost its charm. Who knows, or cares to know, the thousand spectacles that astronomer, shepherd, and sailor once watched and waited for? The constellations, the heliacal settings of the chief stars, the planets, their onward and backward paths, the harvest moon, the Milky Way, now brilliant, now turbid, now in many streams, now in one, have become hidden lore to us, who know, as we think, the substance of which all these are shadows. Happily for men of science themselves, to give a motive for further research, and to suggest something beyond a mere eternal order, the fact which they discover is ever in advance of the law which they know. As they scrutinize the vacant places of our new system, or project their gaze deeper and deeper into the infinite, they encounter a strange caprice, a wild variety, shapes as fanciful as those of Flora's own devising, mysterious movements, and the traces of terrible catastrophies. We see stellar systems, or rather universes, exceeding all our notions of magnitude in the eccentric shape of ringlets, horses tails, dumb bells, crowns, discs, and sickles. In our own system, where an eternal law had seemed to prescribe certain planets at certain distances, that law is found to have been rudely interrupted by the explosion of one globe into fifty smaller ones. Even the sun itself suggests the hope, or the fear, of changes affecting its own structure, and the condition of every planet that basks in its rays. We have, then, a celestial history as well as order; events as well as method. In the visible heavens around us there is not only an eternal present; there is a past, and there is a future.

But of all those changes and events, protention yet welcome, there is none so historical, so fearful, or that so bespeaks a still creative hand, as those wondrous visitors, one of whom is to-night, as they tell us, at its brightest and nearest. We all speak glibly of dimensions, and distances, and velocities; but as Ariel or Puck is to slow mortal man, so is this heavenly sprite to the vulgar rank of planets. As he has been seen for several nights past, with his head in the latitude of Arcturus, vertical to Jamaica or Bombay, he has flung a stream of light vertical to the northern part of this island. Even in this hazy atmosphere the spectre has been traced to a length of 40 degrees, which, taking distance and angle into account, cannot stand for less than 50,000,000 of miles. But when we ask who and what this is,—what is his substance, his work, and his law, all are at fault.—Astronomers, new and old, materialists and mystics, enthusiasts and sceptics, mediæval sing-masters and modern philosophers, are all reduced to one rabble of guessers. When they have made head and tail of it their discoveries come to a stand-still. What is a Comet? By numerous tests it has been found impossible to detect any weight in it sufficient to affect the motions of a planet or a satellite. But for this we should have had our own year lengthened and shortened to such an extent as to throw all our chronology out of gear, and superrede the almanac as much as a dissolution does our Parliamentary Companion. Our shadowy visitors themselves pay the profoundest homage to our superior gravity; they bow to this planet, they linger for that; they hasten to another; with a series of weak compliances, they change their speed, their orbits, even their winter-quarters in the extra-solar heavens. But all the time, in our dull, material pride, we budge not an inch of our state or our progress for these charlatans of space. Yet the nucleus must have gravity, for how else would it gravitate or retain hold of its tail, if, indeed, it does? Is the tail solid or hol ow? Is there any portion of it dense enough to shut out the light of the smallest telescope star? Even that is doubtful. Yet the bulk of the head itself is sometimes immense—a million of miles across. As for the tail, it defines all theories of gravitation, of light, or of heat. Is it a flame? Is it a smoke? Is it a steam? Is it a bubble? Is the whole affair a baloon, of which the nucleus is the car? Does that stream of light shoot out, as they tell us, at the rate of ten millions of miles a-day, return to the parent stock, or is it left behind? Does it precipitate itself, as some say, back again on the outward-bound nucleus? Is it a mere illusion? We hear a great deal of the heavenly architecture and celestial mechanism. Is it compatible with our notions on those points that a column of impondorable matter fifty millions of miles high should move through space, entire and undispersed, at the rate of two or three millions of miles a day? The Comet of 1843, the most wonderful on record, whisked round the sun, so close to it, that its tail, a hundred millions of miles in length, described in two hours the half of an orbit equal to the earth's. Supposing the earth to have held together during this process, the extremity of it went over as much space in two hours as we do in half a year, travelling at the rate of about three millions of miles in one minute. As this staggers all belief, we must conclude that a good deal of the tail was left behind brushed off in æther, if æther there be while the tail itself was continually restored during those wondrous two hours by fresh issues from the nucleus, which, however, to do that work would have to do the somewhat less speed of one hundred millions of miles in two hours or about one million of miles in a minute. Can anybody now pretend there is nothing to be learnt, nothing more to be discovered in the skies?

It is stated that the periods of two hundred Comets have been calculated, which looks rather like a step towards reducing these vagrants to order and civilization. But there is almost always a hitch as to the actual return of a considerable Comet.—Tell us, if you can, whether they are inhabited; what like beings occupy them; how they live; and, if possible, open communication with them. What are they to us, or we to them? Your discoveries only make matters worse. Desist, and let us imagine what science forbids us to believe. Meanwhile, thanks to the dull, able men, who, with their cold, piercing eyes and subtle algebra, have dissected this great puzzle, not only have illusions vanished, but the very pageant of the heavens has lost its charm. Who knows, or cares to know, the thousand spectacles that astronomer, shepherd, and sailor once watched and waited for? The constellations, the heliacal settings of the chief stars, the planets, their onward and backward paths, the harvest moon, the Milky Way, now brilliant, now turbid, now in many streams, now in one, have become hidden lore to us, who know, as we think, the substance of which all these are shadows. Happily for men of science themselves, to give a motive for further research, and to suggest something beyond a mere eternal order, the fact which they discover is ever in advance of the law which they know. As they scrutinize the vacant places of our new system, or project their gaze deeper and deeper into the infinite, they encounter a strange caprice, a wild variety, shapes as fanciful as those of Flora's own devising, mysterious movements, and the traces of terrible catastrophies. We see stellar systems, or rather universes, exceeding all our notions of magnitude in the eccentric shape of ringlets, horses tails, dumb bells, crowns, discs, and sickles. In our own system, where an eternal law had seemed to prescribe certain planets at certain distances, that law is found to have been rudely interrupted by the explosion of one globe into fifty smaller ones. Even the sun itself suggests the hope, or the fear, of changes affecting its own structure, and the condition of every planet that basks in its rays. We have, then, a celestial history as well as order; events as well as method. In the visible heavens around us there is not only an eternal present; there is a past, and there is a future.

But of all those changes and events, protention yet welcome, there is none so historical, so fearful, or that so bespeaks a still creative hand, as those wondrous visitors, one of whom is to-night, as they tell us, at its brightest and nearest. We all speak glibly of dimensions, and distances, and velocities; but as Ariel or Puck is to slow mortal man, so is this heavenly sprite to the vulgar rank of planets. As he has been seen for several nights past, with his head in the latitude of Arcturus, vertical to Jamaica or Bombay, he has flung a stream of light vertical to the northern part of this island. Even in this hazy atmosphere the spectre has been traced to a length of 40 degrees, which, taking distance and angle into account, cannot stand for less than 50,000,000 of miles. But when we ask who and what this is,—what is his substance, his work, and his law, all are at fault.—Astronomers, new and old, materialists and mystics, enthusiasts and sceptics, mediæval sing-masters and modern philosophers, are all reduced to one rabble of guessers. When they have made head and tail of it their discoveries come to a stand-still. What is a Comet? By numerous tests it has been found impossible to detect any weight in it sufficient to affect the motions of a planet or a satellite. But for this we should have had our own year lengthened and shortened to such an extent as to throw all our chronology out of gear, and superrede the almanac as much as a dissolution does our Parliamentary Companion. Our shadowy visitors themselves pay the profoundest homage to our superior gravity; they bow to this planet, they linger for that; they hasten to another; with a series of weak compliances, they change their speed, their orbits, even their winter-quarters in the extra-solar heavens. But all the time, in our dull, material pride, we budge not an inch of our state or our progress for these charlatans of space. Yet the nucleus must have gravity, for how else would it gravitate or retain hold of its tail, if, indeed, it does? Is the tail solid or hol ow? Is there any portion of it dense enough to shut out the light of the smallest telescope star? Even that is doubtful. Yet the bulk of the head itself is sometimes immense—a million of miles across. As for the tail, it defines all theories of gravitation, of light, or of heat. Is it a flame? Is it a smoke? Is it a steam? Is it a bubble? Is the whole affair a baloon, of which the nucleus is the car? Does that stream of light shoot out, as they tell us, at the rate of ten millions of miles a-day, return to the parent stock, or is it left behind? Does it precipitate itself, as some say, back again on the outward-bound nucleus? Is it a mere illusion? We hear a great deal of the heavenly architecture and celestial mechanism. Is it compatible with our notions on those points that a column of impondorable matter fifty millions of miles high should move through space, entire and undispersed, at the rate of two or three millions of miles a day? The Comet of 1843, the most wonderful on record, whisked round the sun, so close to it, that its tail, a hundred millions of miles in length, described in two hours the half of an orbit equal to the earth's. Supposing the earth to have held together during this process, the extremity of it went over as much space in two hours as we do in half a year, travelling at the rate of about three millions of miles in one minute. As this staggers all belief, we must conclude that a good deal of the tail was left behind brushed off in æther, if æther there be while the tail itself was continually restored during those wondrous two hours by fresh issues from the nucleus, which, however, to do that work would have to do the somewhat less speed of one hundred millions of miles in two hours or about one million of miles in a minute. Can anybody now pretend there is nothing to be learnt, nothing more to be discovered in the skies?

It is stated that the periods of two hundred Comets have been calculated, which looks rather like a step towards reducing these vagrants to order and civilization. But there is almost always a hitch as to the actual return of a considerable Comet.—Either it does not come at all, or it comes so overdue that people hesitate to acknowledge it, or when it comes just at the very nick of time it has changed its character so much that its own prophet, after a most solemn announcement, is afraid to recognize his protege. For a long time it might be said there was no Comet in the sky. Except the tail of that of 1843, seen by a few fortunate observers, we have had none of any importance since 1811. So, now is the time to attack this wondrous problem. What is a Comet? Does it come to drown us in a deluge, to shroud us in blight, to sadden us with fog, to quicken us with fresh oxygen, or to burn us with fire?

"Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damned,
"Bring with thee airs from Heaven, or blasts from Hell,
"Be thy intents wicked or charitable?"

We trust science will set to work to question the nature and office of these fair apparitions. We cannot willingly believe harm of them. Ten yards of low earth mist would utterly extinguish the twinkle of any star in the firmament, yet on Tuesday night Arcturus glittered through a million miles of Comet tail, not only with no reduction of his brilliancy, but with a marked increase, and with bright prismatic hues.—What if we were to be involved for a few minutes or hours, in so pure an atmosphere. Our only fear is that it would never be able to penetrate through this thick overcoat of coarse terrene atmosphere. Possibly, however, we may have to add to our scientific facts, a brush or two from the tail of a Comet. Venus on the 17th of this month will have a narrow escape from the embraces of this celestial visitor. Had he come five days earlier he would have rushed into her arms. What a warm admirer for a virgin planet! The astronomers talk in their usual positive tone as to our security from this danger, and tell us the odds are we fought how many millions to one against it. On the other hand they compute the number of Comets in our system as several millions. To vulgar apprehension the chance of a collision with five million tails, averaging fifty millions of miles, dancing all sorts of pirouettes within the contracted space of the earth's orbit, does not seem so slight. We rather put our security in the fact that we have come to no harm yet by these mysterious visitations. He who made this beautious earth, who made sun and moon—made Comets also—and made them for our own good, not our ill.

Barnum on Money Making.

From the Manchester Examiner.

A very interesting lecture on the shortest and surest way of making a fortune was delivered in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on Saturday last, by one of the most famous masters of this rather difficult art, the renowned Phineas T. Barnum. A very large audience, probably upwards of 1,500, assembled at the appointed hour to see the great showman, and to hear from his lips the result of his extensive observations, and varied experience touching the important matter on which he had engaged to speak. Like most of the speculations of which Mr. Barnum has had the management, the lecture was a great success. It might have been supposed that a gentleman who is believed to be the cleverest and most successful humbug of the age, would have been a rather unsound teacher and unsafe guide, and that some of the principles of action which he might recommend would be such as a rigid moralist could not altogether approve.

In this respect only is it probable that the lecture disappointed the expectations of many of its hearers. It was as unexceptionable in point of morality as it was amusing in point of style, and received as it well deserved, the hearty approbation and applause of the audience. Mr. Barnum took it for granted that every man whom he addressed would rather be rich than poor (hear, hear,) he need not therefore, waste many words in glorifying money, or in proving that in itself it was a good thing. Nor need he say in refutation of the vulgar fallacy that the money-getter was necessarily sordid and mean; or that goodness was necessarily thriftless and imprudent. On the contrary money-getting (which was commerce) was one of the most useful, and consequently, one of the most honourable of occupations—the parent of civilization, and of innumerable blessings to mankind. The greatest and wisest of men in all ages, from Abraham the first merchants on record, down to the present time, were almost invariably distinguished for their knowledge and their skillful practice of the art of making and of keeping money. As a striking instance of this fact, he referred to Shakespeare, whom he described as being, par excellence, a clever and thrifty showman, whose highest aim was to hit the popular taste, to write such plays as would draw the best houses, and so to put money in his purse—a description of the immortal bard which seemed to take the audience somewhat by surprise, and to find but little favour in their sight. Besides Shakespeare, Chaucer and Scott, on this side of the Atlantic, and Prescott, Bancroft and Irving on the other, were examples of men eminent at once in literature and in this most useful of arts.—Marlborough and Wellington were almost as remarkable for their thrift and economy as for their military genius, and had Washington not been the greatest of patriot soldiers, he might have ranked high as a merchant or millionaire. As there were three ways in which men might become great, so there were three ways in which they might become wealthy. Some men were born rich, some achieved riches; some had riches thurst upon them. He had only to speak of the way men might achieve riches, and he at once admitted that he had absolutely nothing to say on that point which was new. He could only repeat and urge once more the old and well-known rules of prudence and economy illustrating those ancient saws wherever he could by modern instances. The lecturer proceeded in a very forcible manner to state and enforce those rules for making money which he considered most important, interspersing them with numerous anecdotes, which were exceedingly well told and well received.—The rules were such as the following: Be honest; be prompt in making engagements, and exact in fulfilling them; persevere; advertise; tell no more about your business than is necessary; never pass a week-day without reading a good news-paper (a maxim which we beg heartily to enforce,) and others equally trite and equally sensible.—Of the humour of the lecturer it is impossible for us to give anything like a satisfactory specimen, Mr. Barnum concluded his remarks by a very ingenious and amusing defence of humbug, which he deemed to be the art of dressing up an object so as to render it attractive, of putting on glittering appearances for the sake of arresting attention. This was only deserving of blame when the article put forward was not what it professed to be. When the object offered for sale or for show was intrinsically good it was allowable, he contended, to draw attention to it by every legitimate means; and on this principle he vindicated his own conduct, and maintained that he had acted towards the public in an honourable and straight-forward manner. Mr. Barnum concluded his address amid loud applause and, on retiring, was called back to receive the hearty approbation of the audience, voted him by acclamation—a compliment which he acknowledged in a humourous and appropriate speech.

Singular Circumstance.

A correspondent writing from Portage du Fort, C. E., furnishes us with the following account of a rather singular circumstance that occurred lately in the Township of Litchfield, C. E.:—"A man by the name of John McIntosh, who has been farmer for Wm. Cobb for some twelve or thirteen years, went out upon Wednesday to look after a bull that had been gone in the woods for some time. On his way he called into a neighbours house, and told them that he felt very chilly and not well at all. He had left without breakfast. That night he did not come home—the people became alarmed, and as there was no word of him next day, a search was set on foot. The whole neighbourhood was up, and day after day the search was renewed. The surrounding bush was not large enough to wander in over half a day and be lost. Some thought that he was eat by the bears—some that he was murdered—others that he had drowned himself, and the adjoining waters were dragged. All to no purpose. For two weeks this state of things continued, and no trace of the missing man could be found. The people gave up the search as useless. On the seventeenth day, a boy belonging to the last house he had called at came running into his mother, saying—"Here is John McIntosh." The woman (a Mrs. Gilchrist) but not believing the boy, disregarded him, but as the lad continued to assert that it was him, she went to the door, and there he was sure enough, but so weak and emaciated that he could not speak, and begged by signs for the boy to give him a spirit to help him to the house. After some trouble the woman got him to bed, and then sent word to Mr. Cobb. His feet were swollen so much that his boots had to be cut from them. Every one was anxious to hear his history as soon as he got strength to tell it. He stated that he lay the whole time under the cliff of the rock, near a spring of cold water—how he got there he knew not, but his strength left him and he could not leave the spot. He saw one of the men who was on the search, and his dog quite close to him twice, when he made all the efforts possible to draw them as attention but could not, as he had not the least power to speak or move. He thinks that he had tried to leave the place three or four times, but could not. When he awoke (for he had been asleep) on the seventeenth day, he says he heard a voice which said—"Rise, rise, and go home," when he made his way to the house as above stated. He says he knew his feet were swelling, and would have cut his boots open if he had had a knife, but he had none. Strange that a man could live so long without food, and be sensible, as he must have been the greater portion of the time The case is truly wonderful."—Perth Courier.

BRAIN AND BODY.—The daughter of a Boston merchant, who applied herself night and day to study, to obtain a medal at the Lite school exhibitions, and succeeded, has been ever since in a state bordering on insanity in consequence of overtasking the brain, and their is little prospect of her recovery. If her brain could have been maintained in a separate establishment, and worked upon independent volition, probably such a disaster would never have occurred. But as things are constituted, it will not do to forget the connection which exists between mind and body. faculties and muscles brain and nerves. The system which is deprived of needed physical recreation, must break down. It is the height of folly to suppose that we can ignore the demands of Nature in any respect, without paying the penalty. It is curious to see the connection between mental and physical faculties. The idea that a man can only get the dyspepsia from the high seasoned provender put upon the stomach, is absurd. He is just as likely to secure that luxury by stuffing his head with Greek and Latin, algebra and geometry, in undue proportions, and at improper hours. The shaky, rattling, disordered, jaundiced, bilious, and bloodless systems, that go, flitting by like ghosts upon every thoroughfare, are standing commentaries upon the false ideas of the day in this respect. It is a peculiarity of this age, that two-thirds of its living skeletons are epitomes of theoretical knowledge upon almost every subject under the sun. This is not invariably the case; but it is the general rule. The exceptions prove that a person can be something more than a dunce, without being somewhat less than a man or woman, and that with proper management, it is possible to secure the most valuable mental acquisitions without sacrificing in their pursuit physical capabilities, and becoming an especial candidate for a madhouse or a consumption hospital.

FEARFUL ENCOUNTER WITH A BEAR IN ERIN TOWNSHIP.—A gentleman from Erin called at our office on Tuesday and gave us the following details of an exciting and dangerous fight with a bear, which took place in that township on Monday the 18th inst, and by which one man narrowly escaped with his life. A farmer named Henry Howe, living on lot 23, 9th Concession, west half of the township of Erin, hearing a noise amongst his hogs at an early hour on the morning in question, he got up and proceeded towards the pen when he discovered a large bear, and at once fired his rifle at it, wounded it seriously. Bruin immediately made of for the woods. A few hours later Howe and two of his brothers went in pursuit, and soon discovered the ferocious brute. The two brothers proceeded in advance and levelled their guns for the purpose of despatching the monster. The guns however, through being wet, missed fire.—Bruin then turned on Henry Howe, who was in his rear, and tore his face in a most shocking manner. Howe's dogs coming to his assistance, the bear let go her deadly hug, by which he escaped with his life, though shockingly mangled. The bear was consequently shot by another party. It weighed 346 lbs. We are glad to learn that the unfortunate man is likely to recover.—Guelph Advertiser.

THE GREAT COMETS OF 1811 AND 1858.—It is exactly forty-seven years since our fathers were eye-witnesses of a comet which, until the appearance of the present wonderful celestial visitor, proved the most brilliant of modern times. As the present comet bids fair to outshine in magnitude its predecessor, a few remarks on that of 1811 may be very interesting at this juncture. The most brilliant phenomenon which accompanies a comet is the stream of light which we call a tail. On the 2d of September 1811 the comet possessed no visible tail; on the 9th it had a very conspicuous one, about 9 or ten degrees in length; on the 18th the length was 11 or 12 degrees; on the 6th of October it was 25 degrees; on the 12th only 17 degrees long; on the 15th it appeared to extend 17½ degrees; on the 15th it covered a space of 23½ degrees in length. The apparent length being 22½ degrees, its real extent, taking into consideration the oblique position in which it was seen, may have been 100,000,000 of miles. On the 12th of October its breadth on the broadest part was 6¾ degrees, and about 5 or 6 degrees from the head it began to be a little contracted a wigwam has left them behind. His host could fortunately read, the books were written in the vernacular, and day by day he was accustomed to read them to his family. Soon the little knot of listeners increased, others of the same caste assembled to hear, and were impressed with what they heard. Directly affairs began to mend and order was restored to Moosonee, these waited on the Church of England missionary, the Rev. A. Medland, and requested instruction. The man, a bricklayer, who first received the religious books became a convert, and was after a short interval baptised. There are now upwards of forty men, women and children who are daily in the habit of assembling for instruction and to hear the Bible read. Moreover, the probationary converts desired that a church should be built in which they might assemble day by day.—One was accordingly designed by Mr. Harrington, a civil engineer at Beerlee, and the converts began to work for its erection. For some time they worked without receiving any wages, but this could not be permitted for long, and each labourer now receives a small sum. The cost of the church when it is completed will not exceed seventy pounds. Moreover, the example of this village has had a good effect on the neighbourhood. At Kuskee Kairah a convert and his family, perhaps afraid of persecution, wished to migrate to Mullinash. When the intended emigration became known the heads of the village assembled, and after some consultation unanimously requested him not to leave. The villagers stated that although they were not prepared themselves openly to embrace Christianity, yet they looked favourably upon that religion. According to the last accounts upwards of forty persons had been baptized. Our correspondent who informed us of these facts says "no motive of personal advantage can be brought against these people, I mean of course worldly advantage, in the step they have taken. It appears as if the spot where the late terrible convulsions broke forth, had been selected for the spring from whence should flow the glad tidings of the gospel of peace. There is no doubt that the people are at this moment more malleable than they were for receiving the impress of our holy religion."

Human Progress.

(From the Times.)

The friends of human progress have no reason to be discontented with the age in which they live. True, the tide is just now receding for a moment, to run up, we may hope, with another wave, and attain a mark it had not before reached. At the present time it would seem to a cursory observer that freedom had been extinguished, and that that nothing remained for us but to prepare in our fast-anchored isle for the siege which triumphant despotism is to carry on against the last stronghold of liberty. But, if the machinery of constitutionalism has been broken or discarded, the tendency which is carrying on States to the recognition of individual liberty and the promotion of individual well-being is still as deep and strong as ever. Indeed, the passions, the littleness, and the vices of man in particular localities, seem unable to counteract the steady progress which is leading the whole race to something higher and better year by year. The pilots of the several vessels may be ignorant, the compass may be lost, the sailors may be drunken, be insubordinate, or despairing; yet happily a strong and irresistable current is bearing them all slowly but surely to the desired harbour. In nothing is this more shown than in the abolition of personal servitude, which is now the acknowledged policy of every civilized government. We shall say nothing of the negro race of the Western world, though it is no small triumph for the abolitionists that no such should have been done within the lifetime of a single generation. But the extinction of serfdom in Europe is a far greater and more difficult achievement.—There may be some argument in favour of holding an inferior race in subjection to one manifestly superior, but it is difficult to defend by any force of logic or authority the servitude of white to white, of Christian to Christian, of Pole to Pole, of Russian to Russian. When like is enslaved by like, when force and not nature has made one man the servant and another the master, a feeling of indignation and pity arises, and we justly refuse to the nation which upholds such institutions the name of civilised. And yet serfdom is a social state so deeply rooted wherever it has obtained that to elevate the peasant and to dispossess the master has hitherto been either the work of ages or of some violent convulsion. In England the whole of the middle ages was devoted to the work, and traces of the system lingered until the days of the Stuarts. In France it cannot be said that the peasant threw off all feudal obligations to his lord until the days of the revolutions, while in Central and Southern Germany, serfdom, such as it exists at the present day in Russia, was not unknown within the last fifty years. If the French Revolution had effected nothing else as a balance to its many misdeeds, it might well rely for a favourable verdict on the impulse it has given to the emancipation of the husbandmen throughout Europe. Formerly, among all Continental nations the name of "peasant" was the lowest which could belong to a man; and this degradation of the tiller of the ground was the necessary result of a system which in the most enlightened regions subjected him to corvee and other burdens, and in less civilised States made him somewhat little better than the beasts he fed and drove. Within the last 40 years the condition and the repute of the agriculturist has been rising all over Europe, and it has been proved by every monarch that the good-will of the peasantry is the best security for his crown and for a powerful position with regard to foreign nations.

The "robust face of rustics soldiers" has been celebrated by every politician as the best defence of a nation, and it is now recognized that the serf who is driven to the ranks can never be in intelligence, devotion, and flesh, what the independent peasant may become. The abolition of serfdom is not merely now the dream of democrats, it is the study of princes; not only the philanthropist who looks for the happiness of the peasant, but the financier who desires fine droppers and the statesman who desires efficient artillerymen, look to the amelioration of the people, to the call, their subjection to rubbish and other feudless burdens, and their immersion in profound and demoralising ignorance more to land ownership. Provisions for the redemption of feudal burdens, and to some extent for the abolition of the Corvees already exist, but the absolute dominion of the Continent should, for the advancement of their own power, seek to remove the bonds of their subjects, and to spread education among the people. It should certainly succeed in destroying European Europe a region in comparison with which the United States would be a paradise, as they will be in a few years, if the present tendency of affairs continues.

SPEECH OF THE HON. GEORGE BROWN,

AT THE

Montreal Banquet.

Jacob Dewitt, Esq., gave from the Chair the toast of the "Brown-Dorion Administration," which was loudly applauded.

Hon. Mr. Brown on rising to reply was received with enthusiastic cheering. He said,—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen,—I confess I have never risen to address an assemblage with more anxiety than I experience on the present occasion; and I am sure that the same feeling of responsibility must have been shared by every one of my colleagues from Upper Canada, when he entered this room and witnessed this magnificent demonstration. (Cheers.) We knew full well—for we had been taught to know it by our fellow citizens in Upper Canada—that the unflinching stand we recently took in defence of the rights and interests of the people are thoroughly appreciated in the section of the country to which we belong; but I am afraid we almost forgot that there was another portion of the community who looked with similar deep interest towards my friend Mr. Dorion and his colleagues from Lower Canada.—(Cheers.) I am persuaded that my colleagues must have felt with me when they entered this room, that there is a responsibility attached to our present position such as we have not before realized; and I am persuaded that they will all join with me in declaring that if we have been of service to our country in the past, we have not only received ample acknowledgement of it, but encouragement to go on in the same course we have taken, by the way in which the citizens of the commercial metropolis of Canada have assembled this night to do us honour. (Cheers.) But well we know that no mere personal compliment is intended by this demonstration—we see it in the encouraging assurance that you in Lower Canada as our fellow-citizens in Upper Canada are perfectly alive to the importance of the constitutional issues which have recently arisen, and that you have assembled to give in your adherence to the great constitutional principles of which we have been the fortunate exponents. Shall I also confess, Mr. Chairman, that in appearing for the first time before a Lower Canadian audience, I had personally peculiar grounds of anxiety? (Cheers.) I well know, Sir, the colours in which I have been diligently painted by my opponents for years past to my fellow-countrymen in this section of the Province. (Cheers and laughter.) I have not now to learn that wherever my humble name has become known in Lower Canada, it has been sought to be used by my opponents as a weapon of reproach, not to say of horror—and I confess that coupled with my anxiety to place before you clearly and emphatically the points of difference that have arisen between the Governor General and his present advisers and the short-lived Administration of which I had the honour to be the head, there was also an earnest desire that I should have an opportunity on this occasion of disabusing the minds of this vast assemblage of Lower Canadian electors of the mistaken ideas which have been so diligently inculcated with regard to myself, and of misapprehension which have existed and which I fear may yet exist to a certain extent in regard to my views. It has been a constant charge against me that I have sought to excite religious discord between Protestant and Roman Catholic—between Upper and Lower Canada. Nothing could be more unfounded—nothing more opposite from the truth. I have simply sought, earnestly and persistently sought, to banish all religious contentions from the political arena by the total discontinuance of all connection between Church and State. (Loud and continued cheers.) I hold that the State should not recognize us at all in our sectarian capacity, but legislate for all men alike as subjects of the realm; and I fearlessly assert that if ever there was a Government formed—if ever there was a body of men bound together by purely patriotic purposes and especially with the longing desire to sweep away the discords which have so long and so unhappily distracted our country—that Administration was the one now before you. (Renewed cheering.) And, Sir, I hesitate not to express the belief that one of the chief reasons why such bitter hostility was shown to that Ministry—the reason why, as Mr. Papineau has so very ably expressed it in the letter which has just been read, we were denied the opportunity of bringing our policy before the country was that our unscrupulous opponents felt that we were prepared to grapple with the civil and religious difficulties which have so long retarded the progress of this country, with an earnestness and determination which could not have failed to render us successful.—(Cheers.) There cannot be the least doubt that in the struggle through which we have gone there are involved some of the greatest constitutional questions that have ever been put before this or any other self-governed people. It is not gentlemen, a question whether one set of men should be in power or another out of power. On the contrary I say this—that had our opponents been placed in the position which we were compelled to occupy—had they been treated in the same manner, we, as constitutional reformers, having the rights and liberties of our country to uphold, would have been bound to rally, and would undoubtedly have rallied, round them in the same way that you are supporting us to-night. (Hear, hear.) The blow aimed at the Brown-Dorion Administration was, as Mr. Papineau justly observes, a blow levelled against the constitutional liberties of the people of Canada. (Cheers.) It has been stated by our opponents, and diligently sought to be impressed upon the minds of the people not only of Canada but of England also, that the breaking up of the Macdonald Cartier Government and the formation of our short-lived administration, arose solely from the adverse vote on the Seat of Government question. Now, gentlemen, I wish it to be perfectly understood—I am glad to believe that it is pretty well understood now, but it cannot be too strongly impressed on the public mind—that this is an entire mistake. It was a mere pretext seized upon by the Macdonald-Cartier Administration for the purpose of [illegible] object that those of them [illegible] just witnessed. There was another question about to be brought before the [illegible] upon which there was every reason to believe [illegible] and upon which [illegible] Government took advantage of the adverse vote on the Seat of Government question to [illegible] feeling about to arise would have the effect of [illegible] and put me re- [illegible] All duly [illegible] When the Hon. Mr. Cartier and Mr. Cartier were sent for by the Governor General the [illegible] my colleagues consented to act. I [illegible] was induced to [illegible] their colleagues [illegible] and gave it to the [illegible] (Cheers.) [illegible] Government [illegible] Council [illegible] Cartier [illegible] Council [illegible] Council [illegible] Council for aged and infirm ministers. He was a very strenuous opponent to all connection between Church and state. Conscientiously disapproving of the recently tax for the support of the clergy in Edinburgh, rather than pay it he allowed his furniture to be seized and sold at the cross. In general politics he was decidedly liberal, but not extravagant, and altogether unobtrusive.—As a husband, a parent and relative, he was most exemplary and greatly beloved. The real basis of all his excellencies and enlightened and ardent piety. He was pre-eminently a man of God.

One of Dr. Brown's last works, entitled "Parting Counsels," was dedicated to the Rev. Professor Taylor, of this city, who was an intimate friend and correspondent of the deceased, and to whom we are indebted for the particulars of this sketch.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Found—Thos. Tully.
Cosmopolitan Art Association.
Raisins—S. E. Curry & Co.
Golden Syrup—S. E. Curry & Co.
Window Glass—S. E. Curry & Co.
Gunpowder Tea—S. E. Curry & Co.
Candied Lemon—S. E. Curry & Co.
Oils—S. E. Curry & Co.
Wrapping Paper—S. E. Curry & Co.
Matches—S. E. Curry & Co.
Candles—S. E. Curry & Co.
Board—Mrs. Ridley.
A Card—Wm. Smith.
Board, Board.
Situation Wanted.
J. Haffey's Clothing Store.
Soap and Candle Works—Ogilvy & Hood.
Requisition—John English and others.
Address—A. Sawers.
Dentistry—R. Moore.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, NOV. 11, 1858.

The Election of Mayor.

A requisition has been presented to Mr. Sawers, inviting him to accept a nomination for the Mayoralty of this Town for 1859, now at the disposal of the people. Mr. Sawers accedes to the wish of the requisitionists, and publishes his address to the Municipal electors.

The Montreal Dinner.

The banquet given by the citizens of Montreal to the members of the late Brown-Dorion cabinet resulted in a complete ovation. The preparations were upon a magnificent scale, and the number and quality of the guests unprecedented on such an occasion. The great first object was to afford an opportunity to Mr. Brown of meeting the people of Lower Canada upon their own ground. Heretofore, they have only learnt to estimate him by the character they received of him through other channels. Now they have had personal contact with the man; they have heard him speak and have received his expression of principles from his own lips. It must have been very flattering to himself as it certainly is to his friends that his speech established for him a reputation in Lower Canada equal to what he enjoys in Upper Canada. Mr. Brown cannot long be kept from conducting the affairs of the country, and when he is again summoned before his Excellency, there need be no misgivings in the vice-regal breast of the want of union among the Reform party.

Regarding the demonstration as it affects Sir Edmund Head, it cannot be otherwise than damaging before his superiors. The first remedy to be applied in the withdrawal of Sir Edmund, and the appointment, in his stead, of a statesman of the first rank in the empire.

Rhetorical Entertainment.

We were privileged with admission to a complimentary entertainment on Monday evening by a Rhetorical Association for some time in existence in this place. This was their first appearance before an audience, and they certainly have no cause to be ashamed at the success of the experiment. The art of Elocution is one which it would be well our young men devoted more attention to; we do not by this mean to applaud the recitation of comic and entertaining pieces, although undoubtedly this is not unfrequently a desirable accomplishment, but it would be well if our young men in general and this Association in particular, were to devote more attention to the study of the power and properties of language, to a more thorough knowledge and mastery of the communication between individuals, an accomplishment at all times desirable and perhaps more than ordinarily so in a young and growing country like Canada. Comparison may be invidious, especially where the services of all for the entertainment of their guests was heartily given by the members of the Association, but still we do not deem it unadvisable for us to notice particularly the polished and almost perfect manner in which Mr. Hinton unpolitted himself when reciting the celebrated "Defence of Robert Emmet, the leader of the Irish rebellion in 1803." This was a masterly piece of elocution for a young man, and we hesitate not to say it was done ample justice to on Monday evening by Mr. Hinton. The Society has a good model before them in Mr. ——, and we doubt not, from the varied talent displayed on the occasion, but much good will result from their Rhetorical exercises.

[Use or Lime in Agriculture.—The action of lime is two-fold; first, physical and second, chemical. As a mechanical agent upon stiff clays, rendering them friable, and thus more easily penetrated by the roots of plants, and more readily drained, it is of great value. Chemically, it is a powerful agent in the decomposition of vegetable matter, converting it into food for plants. Lime is also useful in destroying many insects and worms which are injurious to vegetation, and in sweetening sour land. Lime is also a constituent of all plants, and is found in the ashes of all vegetables. Hence, if a soil is deficient in lime, it will be unproductive, because it contains one of the necessary elements of food. Lime is found in the soil in the form of carbonate, sulphate, phosphate, silicate, and humate of lime. Lime is also found in the air in the form of carbonic acid gas, which is absorbed by the leaves of plants, and is essential to their healthy growth. Lime is found in the sap of trees, in the form of oxalate of lime, and in the ashes of trees in the form of carbonate of lime. Lime is found in the blood of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the milk of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the bones of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the eggs of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the milk of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the bones of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals. Lime is found in the eggs of animals, in the form of phosphate of lime, and is essential to the healthy growth of animals.

Public Works.

THEIR NATIONAL VALUE.

Neither the experience of the recently past, nor those of the present, afford a very glowing augury to that prosperity which Canada enjoyed for the four years preceding the fall of 1857. The suddenness of the change from what to us was unexampled prosperity to general embarrassment, though entailing upon individuals the most fearful consequences; and, to a certain extent, affecting the entire trade of the Province, has still left comparatively unscathed, all those great interests upon which the country must mainly rely for the development of its natural resources. The epoch in a country's history, that happens to be afflicted by monetary derangement, is sure to be that also of the creation of croakers. Those most accustomed to success are always the loudest in their wailings, and the first to predict universal ruin. They believe the country lost because their gains are temporarily suspended. While the small trader tells you of hard times, and struggles against the difficulties which really beset him, his richer neighbour, revelling in a superfluity of the luxuries of life, proclaims a national bankruptcy inevitable.—As applied to Canada, and with a limited acceptation of the term, a permanent insolvency might be predicted in every day in every week of the year, and in every year since Canada was a British Province.—What more or less are we than a company of borrowers, anticipating the income we hope, some future day, to derive from an estate as yet only partially productive?—Where is our manufacturing capital? Is it not in Europe, or the United States?—What is our importing capital? Is it not in credit; and what is credit but borrowed capital? The negotiation of Government securities—is it not borrowing? And by what capital has our public works been accomplished? "Ah!" say those lovers of the dolorous, "but our public works are not profitable. Indeed—let us see. Their cost stand at something less than five million pounds currency—the gross revenue they produce at about one hundred and two thousand. True, this is barely 2¼ per cent., but are we to measure the value of the Welland Canal, and works of a similar character, by the dry test represented in the money return from tolls? As well might it be said that a road is valueless unless it has a toll-gate. By what possible means could the produce from the Upper Lakes find its way to the East, via Canada, without this noble work? Much has been said, too, about the great cost of the works on the Ottawa. And that they have been costly is not to be denied. But it would puzzle a very ingenious accountant to put the sum of advantage they have produced to the export of one of Canada's chief staples. It seems that the malcontents upon these matters never consider that, whatever may be the original cost of our public works, these which placed us most heavily under indebtedness are such as have an almost endless endurance. A canal once built may be said as built for ever. When public works are judiciously undertaken, it is not by the per centage return upon their cost that they can be fairly judged; and those who would so value them, have much too limited appreciation of some of the most important auxiliaries to national prosperity.

There is nothing by which any given era in the world's history has been more strongly characterized than has the present by railway enterprise. It has become incorporated with Governments, has lent its aid in war as well as in peace, and has, as it were, become a cosmopolitan institution.—Amidst this universal acknowledgment of the utility and advantage of railroads, it is surprising to find men of unquestioned business intelligence talking of the affliction brought upon the Province by undertakings which not only have been the means of opening up the country, but have been, both directly and indirectly, the chief source of its prosperity. It is no answer to the fact that three or four years of a prosperous course is succeeded by a revulsion, which has shaken all the nations of the world. If it were true that it is unwise in us to borrow because we have an interest to pay upon the loan by which our railroads are built, it must be silly, in a far greater degree, to create indebtedness through the importation of articles which could be supplied by our own industry, and which, being of a consumable nature, eventually form a loss of the whole investment. Not only have railroads not their perishable quality, but they possess, in addition to the permanence of their character, a source of wealth positively incalculable. It is unnecessary to point out individual localities where the value of property may be largely enhanced, where miraculous prices have been obtained, and fortunes realized. It is enough to know, beyond all doubt or question, that wealth has thus been created. An authority, whose sources of inquiry were conducive to a true deduction, has affirmed that every lineal mile of railroad produced an average of advanced value upon the lands on and near its line to the amount of eighty thousands pounds. To speculate upon the influences arising from these public enterprises, would lead us into a long and unsatisfactory inquiry. One thing, however, is most important, that we live in an age of progress, and have not the choice to stand still, even were we so disposed. The position of our country demands all the aid available. We have experienced, in an slight degree, the advantages of that expenditure which necessarily accompanies large undertakings. These were an advanced price for all the productions of the soil; an investment to business, and a general prosperity. Can a state of things so directly advantageous be undesirable?—It seems to us that to argue upon such an assumption is the height of folly. It is likewise readily apparent that any public desideratum, be it either directly or indirectly, is obtained by judiciously projected work, most of these, as far as Canada is concerned, be a source of national prosperity.—Colonist.

[No Man Can Borrow Himself out of Poverty.—If you wish for relief you must look for it, yourself, for it. You must make them and spend less than you did while you were earning to debt. You must wear homespun instead of broadcloth, drink tea for instead of champagne, and live on the humblest of meals. Industry, frugality and economy are the handmaids of wealth, and without the assistance of these you will never be rich. Borrowing will only make you poorer and poorer, and the longer you put off the day of payment the harder it will be to pay.

present in soils, rendering them useful to vegetation, instead of being positively injurious, which they are in their original state. The existence of water in the soil, however, affects the action of lime very considerably. If the land is wet and undrained, lime will not exert the same influence which it would do in the case of thorough drained land. A greater quantity of lime is necessary to produce a given effect, and thus the neglect of thorough drainage entails a considerable greater expenditure in liming than would have been necessary, if the land was either naturally or artificially dry.—Cameron's Chemistry of Agriculture.

saved is better than forty times its amount in useless gewgaws. Try our scheme and see if it is not worth a thousand banks and usd valuation laws.—Philadelphia Argus.

By the "Indian."

POSITION OF AFFAIRS IN INDIA.

From the London Times.

The Indian telegram gives us only the recurring details of a known general truth. You cannot throw down a glass vase, or put your elbow through a window pane, without incurring some cuts and scratches from the fragments before they are all picked up and carried away. We have broken, dispersed, utterly disorganised a force which was sufficient in its integrity to hold 150,000,000 people in subjection, and to defend their country against any outward enemy. We could not kill them all.—With vivid recollections of their treachery and their atrocities we still say, Heaven forbid that such a tremendous immolation should stain our history! We must kill a great many—we have killed a great many; but we may hope to drive a very large portion back to the occupation of tilling the earth. This, however, will only be gradually done. The first process is to break up the organised armies, the next is to hunt the guerilla parties; these will naturally subdivide into gangs of robbers, and with constant pursuit these again will gradually melt away; the members of these gangs will find robbery a dangerous and unprofitable business, and the land will then assume its former aspect of peace and security.—This however, is a process. The end is only to be gained by a succession of labours, and we cannot expect to see it attained at a single coup. The news just received is precisely what might have been expected under the circumstances, and we may be thankful that we have not to set against our many small successes one single reverse.

It is remarkable as illustrative of the ignorance and credulity of the enemy with whom we have to deal, that even at this twelfth hour, when the mutineers have no stronghold in their possession, when there is no rebel army in the field, no standard to which the disaffected can turn their steps, little mutinies are still happening. Any body would have supposed that the two regiments of Bengal Native Infantry who paraded without their arms at Mooltan were well informed of the utterly desperate condition of the cause of the insurgents, and that, instead of wishing to cast in their lot with the armed rebels, they would rather have congratulated themselves that they were safe from any share of their terrible chastisement. They must have been told that the rebel cause was prospering, and they must have believed it. Some holy Pundits and fanatical Dervishes must have got among them, and persuaded them that the stories of English victories were all fables, and that their brethren with a victorious army were marching down to their assistance. These were certainly the convictions at Barrackpore. The disarmed Sepoys would not credit the testimony of their own senses against the wild exhortations of their holy men. They had been told, and they believed, that the English troops were marched through those stations, or who were carried by the railway on the opposite side of the Ganges and in sight of their cantonments, were only a small body of men who were marched and counter-marched, and who were carried to and fro, up and down the railway to give an appearance of a force which did not exist. They believed in the approach of Nana Sahib with a powerful army as firmly as the Jews believe in the coming of their Messiah.—We must not wonder, therefore, that small bodies still hold out obstinately, or that we have still to keep armed watch over the disarmed regiments. The audacity of impenetrable ignorance is always formidable, and there is a desperate credulity which counts no odds and seems to thrive best upon impossibilities. In no other way can we account for the mutiny of these Mooltan troops. The gross improbability of such a rising might not unnaturally have caused a slackening of precautions and, it is a very important circumstance that the outbreak was so promptly and severely repressed. The soundness of the Bombay army is still also shown to be proof against treacherous solicitations. It does seem absurd that after recent events at Gwalior even the Nana should be so simply sanguine as to despatch emissaries to the very troops who had seen this stronghold taken, and to attempt to induce them to join a cause which they had themselves found to be so desperate of chances. Doubtless he knows his countrymen best, and where he sees hope we must not lack precaution. The Gwalior fugitives, who could not hold their own behind the walls of the strongest fortress in India, were not likely to be formidable in flight. They are, however, the debris of the toughest native force we have met with during all this servile war. The troops of the native Rajah, do not care to oppose them; they easily gather the first native levies to their standards; they occupy the cities that lie upon their line of flight, and only succumb to European forces. Defeated by General Roberts they fled southwards, captured the treasure, the guns, and the city of the Rajah of Jhalra Patan; and then, moving towards Bhopal, were met and defeated by General Mitchell, who took nearly all the guns, and again dispersed the fugitive army. There is a mountainous district south of the scene of this battle in which these mutineers will perhaps find refuge, and where they might probably be blocked up. Even in its flight and its dispersion this body of mutineers has exhibited a fertility of resources and a choice of leaders which make it very desirable that they should be entirely broken up. It is satisfactory to know that forces are being directed from several quarters upon the district they now occupy.

The decisive securing of all the interested parts of Hindostan will, however, soon come. Lord Clyde must quickly be upon the field of action, perhaps he is already there, with 25,000 British Infantry and 10,000 Cavalry, a good portion of which will also be British. There is no rebel force in India which can withstand these troops for one hour. We hope there is no body which can evade them. It is, however, evident that it is not a pitched battle or a great victory which will put an end to these mutinies, or fix in the Indian mind the endurance of future residence. Up to this time the recollections of a mutinous Sepoy are of a chastened character. If he has upon his memory deeds of frightful carnage and charges which none of his race could hope to resist, he has had some bright moments of revenge, and he has also obtained a very considerable quantity of plunder. This latter will eventually be his greatest danger, for when the disposition has ceased, their more complete a Sepoy will be hunted by his own countrymen for the gold mohurs which he is now enthusiastically believed to have concealed about him. Let us hope that this will be his destruction. It is sad, however, yet quite come to this, and the quiet has still, some distance, with those dishonesty must be so [illegible] of plunder, [illegible]

TO AUGUSTUS SAWERS, ESQ., PETERBOROUGH.

SIR,—We the undersigned Electors of the Town of Peterborough, looking forward to the coming election of a person to fill the office of Mayor, and taking into consideration the importance of having at all times an efficient and trustworthy individual in the Mayoralty, and being sensible of the necessity there exists at present for having for our chief Magistrate one who shall unflinchingly assert the rights of the Town, and who by his position and attainments will secure for the office that respect which should invariably attend it, would respectfully solicit your permission to nominate you as one qualified in every respect to fill the office of Mayor with benefit to the Town and credit to yourself, and should you consent to this nomination we shall be happy to exert ourselves in order to secure your return.

We are,
Sir,
Yours faithfully.

John English,	John Maloney,
William Lundy,	John J. Marshall,
Robt. Tanner,	Stephen Stratton,
P. Ryan,	Wm. H. Martin,
James Ryan,	Alex. Mervin,
John Wilson,	Gregory Cole,
Thos. Kennedy,	Wm. Blatchford,
Wm. Croft,	Wm. Irwin,
A. P. Sautry,	George McComb,
Patrick Rudakiss,	James B. Dunn,
John Pye,	F. A. Erskin,
E. Phelon,	John Lapiant,
Thomas Woods,	Edward Gague.
Michael Sullivan,	Peter Goyet,
Edward Tanner,	Samuel Wright,
Tousant Lapiant,	Joseph Smith,
Richard Treawith,	John Hayes,
James Wright,	James Bauvai,
William Mercer,	Pitre Ebrte,
Andrew Mercer,	James Poter,
Francis Mercer,	Thos. Douglas,
Alexander Graham,	Michael O'Brien,
Duncan McKellor,	Charles Cameron,
G. H. Marshall,	Gilbert Dafoe,
James Smith,	L. Lemay,
B. Reynolds,	James Gibbon,
Walter Paterson,	James Wilson,
Robert Graham.

Peterborough Nov. 10, 1858.

REPLY.

GENTLEMEN,

I accept, with great satisfaction, your nomination as a candidate for the Mayoralty. The flattering language which you have been pleased to address to me, shall, if I am elected, encourage me to strive to the best of my ability, to earn your continued approval.

I remain,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant.
A. SAWERS.

TO MESSRS. JOHN ENGLISH, }
WILLIAM LUNDY, and others. }
Peterborough Nov. 10, 1858.

ADDRESS.

TO THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH.

GENTLEMEN,

The office of Mayor of the Town being now elective, you will shortly be required to choose some person to serve you in that capacity, for the ensuing year. Several from among you have honoured me with their attention, and have addressed to me their request that I should submit myself as a candidate for the office. I have had great pleasure in acceding to their proposition and have now the honour to express a hope that the good opinion entertained of me by the promoters of my canvass may extend to the electors generally. As I am not insensible of the honour attaching to an office of trust in the gift of the people, neither am I unmindful of the responsibilities which attend its exercise. The position of Mayor, besides requiring very close attention to the management of the finances of the town, and the care of the public property, brings the occupant, through many ways, into direct contact with the people; and it can only be by a firm reliance in the integrity of the man, that the good understanding, which is essential to contentment, will be preserved between them. If I am accepted by you, it will be my anxious desire to satisfy you that your confidence has not been misplaced; but that whatever my deficiencies may be, no share of them shall be classed among wilful errors or negligencies. Viewing me as a new man in the municipal government of the town, it will be remarked that I should enter office without any established reputation for fitness, but it will not either escape notice that I should receive it without any connection to mottos of either debt than my occupancy of the office, and may fairly be expected to look back upon transactions which seem to require explanation. That I should do so, you have my assurance, and in so open a manner as will enable you to judge of their correctness. I disapprove entirely of that system of statecraft which does everything under cover; it may appear to save trouble to those concerned, but to my mind it is better the people should have the trouble of looking into their affairs at all times, and thus become prepared with a remedy that shall avert impending danger. Impressed partially by the public business with surrounding mysteries; honest men give to others the same means of following their official, as wholesome to themselves. I should therefore avoid the system, and in all my dealings in your behalf, nothing would bear a greater price than the commendation that I had deserved your votes.

In soliciting your votes, I have only to add my confidence, I hope to be supported on your own merits alone.

A. SAWERS.

Peterborough Nov. 10, 1858.

DENTISTRY.

A. MOORE, Surgeon Dentist, continues to attend to all orders in his line. He begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH CLEANED and ARRANGED, at his residence, corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets, on any Evening other than Wednesday, Wednesdays excepted.

R. MOORE.

Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1858. 44

FOUND.

ON OX, Strayed into the Subscriber's Farm Yard, on Friday last, the 8th inst. The owner will have it returned on proving property and paying expenses.

THOMAS TULLY.

Lot No. 4, 2nd Concession, Smith, Nov. 6th, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 30 x 26 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL,

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Season Tickets of admission to the Eastern (or Dusseldorf,) and Western Galleries of the Association.

There will also be given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable works of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Sculptures, &c., &c., from celebrated American and foreign Artists.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1, 1859. On the evening of that day premiums will be awarded to Subscribers.

For full particulars, see December Art Journal, price 50 cents. Specimen copies sent to those desiring to subscribe, on the receipt of 18 cents in postage stamps or coin. Address

C. L. DERBY, Actuary C. A. A.,
Eastern Office, 548 Broadway, N. Y.
Or, Western Office, 106 Water Street, } Sandusky, Ohio.

Subscriptions received by R. S. Patterson, Hon'y Secretary, Peterboro'.

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
25 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.
Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44

BOARD.

A FEW more Gentlemen can be accommodated with Board, with or without lodging at Mrs. Ridley's.
For particulars apply at this office, or at Mrs. Ridley's, Hunter Street.
Peterboro', November 11, 1858. 44

BOARD! BOARD!!

FIVE or SIX respectable young men can be accomodated with excellent board, at a reasonable rate. Apply at this office.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-6in

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has leased Rooms in the Temperance House, Water Street, where he will carry on his business of

TAILOR,

in all its branches. Work executed in the new cut styles and on the most moderate terms.

☞ A FIT GUARANTEED.

Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-tf

SITUATION WANTED.

A YOUNG MAN, willing to engage as Bookkeeper, can keep Books by single or double entry. For particulars apply at the 'Examiner' office.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-3in

The Best,
THE LARGEST
AND THE CHEAPEST
Stock of Ready-made Clothing,
IN PETERBOROUGH AND ITS VICINITY IS AT
J. HAFFEY'S

ONE DOOR, AND RIGHT OPEN TO THE
John Harvey's, all the Clothing has been manufactured upon the premises, and Warranted.

JUST RECEIVED, A FRESH STOCK OF STAPLE GROCERIES.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-tf

PETERBOROUGH
Soap and Candle Works.

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled, "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	2. AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	3. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amounts.	4. DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	5. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL & PERSONAL ESTATE BELONGING TO SUCH CORPORATION. Real.	Personal.	6. ASSESS'D VALUE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE INHABITANTS OF THE UNITED COUNTIES OF PETERBOROUGH AND VICTORIA. Real.	Personal.	7. AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE SAME. Rate of a penny in the £.
By-Law No. 187. A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purpose therein mentioned, for the constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.	Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds, (including Principal and Interest.)	1	£300	1st January, 1860.			£21,079	£24,075	1860—[illegible]
		2	300	1st January, 1860.
		3	300	1st January, 1861.					1860—[illegible]
		4	300	1st January, 1861.
		5	300	1st January, 1862.					1861—[illegible]
		6	300	1st January, 1862.
		7	300	1st January, 1863.					1862—[illegible]
		8	300	1st January, 1863.
		9	300	1st January, 1864.					1863—[illegible]
		10	300	1st January, 1864.
		11	300	1st January, 1865.					1864—[illegible]
		12	300	1st January, 1865.
		13	300	1st January, 1866.					1865—[illegible]
		14	300	1st January, 1866.
		15	300	1st January, 1867.					1866—[illegible]
		16	300	1st January, 1867.
		17	300	1st January, 1868.					1867—[illegible]
		18	300	1st January, 1868.
		19	300	1st January, 1869.					1868—[illegible]
		20	300	1st January, 1869.

no Debentures issued yet issued.

Dated at Peterborough this 15th day of October, A. D. 1858.

Walter Sheridan,
Secretary Treasurer.

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	2. AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	3. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amount	4. DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	5. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE BELONGING TO SUCH CORPORATION. Real.	Pers'l.	6. ASSES'D VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF PETERBOROUGH. Real.	Personal.	7. AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE SAME.
No. 102. To aid in erecting and furnishing a School-house in the Town of Peterborough.	£3,500	Not decided on, but not less than £50 each.		Not decided on.	£10,600	£30,900	£215,079	£44,075	In 1859 four pence half-penny. In 1860 five pence. In 1861 five pence 3 farthings. In 1862 six pence one farthing. In 1863 six pence half-penny. In 1864 eight pence. In 1865 eight pence 1 farthing. In 1866 eight pence half-penny. In 1867 nine pence. In 1868 eight pence.

Dated at Peterborough, October 30th, 1858.

J. EDWARDS, Town Clerk.

SCHEDULE A.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1. TITLE OR OBJECTS OF EACH BY-LAW.	2. NUMBER OF DEBENTURES ISSUED AND AMOUNTS. Number.	Amounts.	3. AM'T RAIS'D UNDER EACH BY-LAW.	4. AM'T PAID OR REDEEMED ON ACC'T OF SAID DEBENTUR'S	5. BALANCE STILL REMAIN'G OUTSTANDING & PAYABLE ON SAID DEBENTURES.	6. DATES AT WHICH DEBENTURES FALL DUE, AND AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE TO PAY OFF SAME. Dates of Debentures falling due.	Amount of Yearly Rate in the £.	7. ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY. Real.	Personal.
No. 41. For the erection of a Market House, &c., in the Town of Peterborough.	Four.	£ 1 for 125 1 for 275 2 for 300 each.	£1,000	£ 400	£ 600	5th July, 1861.	5½d & 2¾d.	I have no means of ascertaining.	I have no means of ascertaining.
No. 56. For repairing the Streets, &c.	Two.	£ 1 for 300 1 for 75	£ 375	None.	£ 375	2nd May, 1858.	4d.	Do.	Do.
No. 78. For grading Streets and purchasing Land.	Three.	£ 1 for 100 1 for 75 1 for 25	£ 200	£ 100	£ 100	11th Oct., 1857.	3d.	Do.	Do.
No. 97. For taking Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£150	£ 150	£ 50	£ 100	3rd Nov., 1857.	No rate specified.	£170,903	£49,853
No. 93. For grading, gravelling and making embankment across Spalding's Bay.	One.	£600	£ 600	None.	£ 600	1st Feb'y, 1867.	Average of 2½d.	£170,903	£49,903
No. 94. For taking additional Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£150	£ 150	None.	£ 150	1st August, 1858.	No rate specified.	£170,903	£49,903
No. 96. For balance of stock in Port Hope, L. & Beaverton Railway.	Fifty.	£250 each	£12,500	None.	£12,500	9th May, 1878.	1s. 7½d.	£168,507	£48,456

Dated at Peterborough, this 30th day of October, A. D., 1858.

JAMES EDWARDS, Town Clerk,

Counting-House Stationery.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE at present a full stock of every description of STATIONERY useful in the COUNTING HOUSE, to which they would specially call the attention of MERCHANTS, LAWYERS, ATTORNEYS, BANKERS, and others.

They have also a fine assortment of

COUNTING-HOUSE & POCKET DIARIES FOR 1859.

POCKET AND DESK BOOKS IN GREAT VARIETY,

among which they would particularly notice the

GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH.

DIARIES FOR 1859.

WE are now receiving our Stock of Diaries for the coming year. Merchants and others would do well to call early and make their selection.

RAWLINS & MURRAY,
Booksellers and Stationers, George Street.

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGUO, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Grouped, Kxtra ground (fine confectioners,) Yellow Refined, COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 6s, 10s, ½ lbs, & lb Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Burns, Catty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do, M. R. Layers & Sultanas in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Barrey's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (Cognac Brandy,) Martell & D. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 hand & hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash Boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

FRESH ARRIVALS

IN

BOOKS, STATIONERY,

Bibles, Testaments, Church Services,

PSALM AND PRAYER BOOKS,

&c., &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY have made considerable additions to their Stock, and they now respectfully call the attention of the Public to the same, confident of giving satisfaction in regard to price and quality of the Goods offered. Determined to place their patrons on the most liberal terms, S. & M. will at all times sell at moderate prices, and as their stock of Stationery is very full at present, Merchants and the Public generally can buy from them on better terms than usual.

Let all call and examine the Stock before purchasing elsewhere.

S. & M. have recently added to their former Stock, a new and most elegant assortment of BIBLES, TESTAMENTS, CHURCH SERVICES, &c., in every variety of style in Binding prices ranging from 12½ cents up to $4.00 for Pocket Editions Wesley's Hymns, Church Hymns, &c.

Attention is particularly directed to their stock of Requisites for

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Comprising Lesson and Reward Tickets in great variety; Admission Cards, Reward Books and individual Books for Libraries, well worthy the inspection of Superintendents, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools.

Additions have also been made to their Stock of Books, among which will be found

STANDARD EDITIONS OF THE POETS,

Miscellaneous Books in Superior Bindings suitable for presents, and a large stock of General Literature.

In their Stationery and Miscellaneous Department will be found many additions to their former Stock among which they may note a varied Assortment of Pocket Inks, Mucilage, Pith Brushes, Pencil Sharpeners, Letter and Account Files, Parallel Rulers, POCKET DIARIES FOR 1859, Pocket Books, Portemonnaies, A new description of Steel Pens, Playing Cards, Colored Paper for Flowers, Perforated Card Board, Pocket Ledgers, Cash Books, &c., &c.

S. & M. have also received a very large assortment of TOY BOOKS, PICTURES, Interesting Games, Soapstone Slates, &c., suitable for Children. Also

A New Assortment of Music for the Piano Forte or Voice.

SCHOOL BOOKS,

Every Book used in the Schools in Town and surrounding Townships kept in Stock, and supplied at the lowest prices.

WRAPPING PAPER.

S. & M. have pleasure in informing the Merchants of Peterboro' and surrounding country that they have entered into arrangements to supply all sorts of Wrapping Paper at the lowest possible cost of Freight, and will be able to sell at usual prices. They trust to have the patronage of all using such paper, as they can be supplied on better terms than they have ever been heretofore.

☞ Call and examine at the New Book, Stationery and Music Store of

RAWLINS & MURRAY.

George St., Peterboro'. Oct. 26, 1858.

NOTICE.

ALL Persons indebted to the Estate of the late Rev. Daniel Farrelly are requested forthwith to settle the same with the undersigned, who has duly taken out letters of Administration.

Parties having claims against the said estate are also requested to furnish the same to the undersigned.

REV. [illegible] Farrelly,
Executor.

Lindsay, C. W., Oct. 15, 1858.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858.

THE success which has attended the publication of the Globe Newspaper since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made in order to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and, Collegiate—Free from Denominational, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every THURSDAY morning, at $1 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of the finest quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the GLOBE throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 18, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or a long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 3, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to

JOHN CRAIGIE.

Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THIS Subscriber hereby informs his Customers in arrear that unless they make immediate payment their NOTES and ACCOUNTS will be put in suit.

JOHN MIGHT.

Peterborough Oct. 20th 1858. 41-4in.

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected Stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels, Blankets,
Shestings, Shirtings,
Broad Cloths, Cassimeres,
Tweeds, Whitneys,
Pilots, Beavers,
Kilmarnock Blankets, Hosiery,
Dantasks, Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, Ladies Furs or all Descriptions, Prince Albert Coats, Alma, &c.

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

[illegible]
Tweed Coats,
Pants, Vests,
Drawers,
Shirts,
Waterproof Coats,
Leggings,
and Caps.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND Ornamental Printing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND NORTH AMERICAN
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 45.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

ARE TEN SHILLINGS IN ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter [illegible] will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	2s. 6d.
Each subsequent insertion	0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	3 9
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 4 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI, T. S. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!
ROBERT STEVENSON,
KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.
Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.
Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.
Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

J. J. MARSHALL,
DEALER IN GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS, Pork, Flour, Meal, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos and Spices. George Street, Peterboro'. 42

DR. MOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Offices—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 12, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATIONS THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 30, 1857.

WILDER'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1858. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, WILLS AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ACCOUNTANT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1857. 29

QUARRY TO LET.
Near Peterborough.
[illegible] Subscriber offers for a term of years, the [illegible] on the three-mile, above the road [illegible] Chemong Bridge, Otonabee. The bridge is [illegible] to cross the above mill being the [illegible] part of the [illegible] of the [illegible] Township, and [illegible] Peterboro'. [illegible] ROBERT THOM BROOKES.
Peterboro', July 15, 1858. [illegible]

The Interior of North America.

Prof. Henry, of the Smithsonian Institution, has collected facts respecting the interior of the United States, which will command the attention of scientific men and statesmen. The induction from these facts is, that the entire region of the United States west of the 98th degree west longitude, (say the western boundary of Minnesota,) with the exception of a small portion of Western Texas and the narrow border along the Pacific (including California), is a sterile waste of comparatively little value, and which can never be available to the agriculturist. The importance of this statement will be more fully comprehended when it is considered that the line of Prof. Henry which extends southward from Lake Winnipeg to the Mexican Gulf will divide the surface of the United States into nearly two equal parts.

The intense heat and extreme dryness of the region, which will make the Great American Plains a barren waste forever, is caused to a large extent according to Prof. Henry's theory, by the fact that the returning Trade Winds, sweeping over the elevated masses of the Rocky Mountains, are deprived of their moisture; in other words, the heated air which ascends at the equator, saturated with moisture it has extracted in its passage over the ocean, after depositing a portion of its vapor in the tropics at the rainy season, it is further associated by the ridges and mountains which it meets, the vapor being condensed on the windward side by the cold due to the increased vertical height, and it finally passes over and strikes the plains as dry as a sponge which has been thoroughly squeezed. Without moisture there can be no fertility, no agriculture; and a great portion of this wilderness, according to Prof. Henry, is irredeemably barren, for the purposes of agriculture, as the deserts of Africa. If this theory be true it will greatly modify the opinions which have been entertained by politicians and statesmen of the future destiny of the "Great West." Prof. Henry stated these facts to us a few days since, which we confess, greatly modified our ideas of the vast extent of Territory which we had always supposed was yet to be filled with human habitations like the already productive prairie states bordering the Mississippi.

African Desert Plants.

ADAPTATION OF STRUCTURE TO PURPOSE.

The quantity of grass which grows on this remarkable region is astonishing, even to those who are familiar with India. It usually rises in tufts with bare spaces between, or the intervals are occupied by creeping plants, which, having their roots buried far beneath the soil, feel little the effects of scorching sun. The number of these which have tuberous roots is very great; and their structure is intended to supply nutriment and moisture when during the long droughts they can be obtained nowhere else. Here we have an example of a plant, not generally tuber-bearing, becoming so under circumstances where that appendage is necessary to act as a reservoir for preserving its life; and the same thing occurs in Aizoön to a species of grape-bearing vine, which is so furnished for the same purpose. The plant to which I at present refer is one of the Cucurbitaceæ, which bears a small scarlet-coloured eatable cucumber. Another plant named Lerenhea is a blessing to the inhabitants of the Desert. We saw a small plant with linear leaves, and a stalk not thicker than a crow's quill; on digging down a foot or 16 inches beneath, we come to a tuber, often as large as the head of a young child; when the root is removed, we find it to be a mass of cellular tissue, filled with a fluid much like that in a young turnip. Owing to the depth beneath the soil at which it is found, it is generally deliciously cool and refreshing. Another kind, named Mokuri, is seen in other parts of the country, where long-continued heat parches the soil. This plant is a herbaceous creeper, and deposits under ground a number of tubers, some as large as a man's head, at spots in a circle a yard or more horizontally from the stem. The natives strike the ground on the circumference of the circle with stones, till, by hearing a difference of sound, they know the water-bearing tuber to be beneath.—They then dig down a foot or so and find it. —Livingstone's Missionary Travels.

How to Increase the Value of a Cow.

Every one who owns a cow can see at a glance that it would be profitable to increase the value of her, but every one can't tell how to do it. We can, and we think that we can make it equally palpable to our readers. If a cow is kept for butter, it certainly would add to her value if the butter making properties of her milk should be improved. In manure or whatever this can be improved just as the yield of a cultivated crop can be improved by what is fed to such, and it is simply a question if it will pay, in manuring the one or feeding the other. Indian corn will add to the quantity and quality of the butter to a very sensible degree, and it is simply a question of dairy economy, by experiment, whether it will add to the profit of the butter maker to buy corn at ten or two cents a pound, and convert a portion of it into butter at 20 cents a pound, or whether the market price of corn and butter keep the ratio between the values of the two articles, which is no [illegible] to the dairy farmer. The plant to which I at present refer is one of the Cucurbitaceæ, which bears a small scarlet-coloured eatable cucumber. Another plant named Lerenhea is a blessing to the inhabitants of the Desert. We saw a small plant with linear leaves, and a stalk not thicker than a crow's quill; on digging down a foot or 16 inches beneath, we come to a tuber, often as large as the head of a young child; when the root is removed, we find it to be a mass of cellular tissue, filled with a fluid much like that in a young turnip. Owing to the depth beneath the soil at which it is found, it is generally deliciously cool and refreshing. Another kind, named Mokuri, is seen in other parts of the country, where long-continued heat parches the soil. This plant is a herbaceous creeper, and deposits under ground a number of tubers, some as large as a man's head, at spots in a circle a yard or more horizontally from the stem. The natives strike the ground on the circumference of the circle with stones, till, by hearing a difference of sound, they know the water-bearing tuber to be beneath.—They then dig down a foot or so and find it. —Livingstone's Missionary Travels.

How to Increase the Value of a Cow.

Every one who owns a cow can see at a glance that it would be profitable to increase the value of her, but every one can't tell how to do it. We can, and we think that we can make it equally palpable to our readers. If a cow is kept for butter, it certainly would add to her value if the butter making properties of her milk should be improved. In manure or whatever this can be improved just as the yield of a cultivated crop can be improved by what is fed to such, and it is simply a question if it will pay, in manuring the one or feeding the other. Indian corn will add to the quantity and quality of the butter to a very sensible degree, and it is simply a question of dairy economy, by experiment, whether it will add to the profit of the butter maker to buy corn at ten or two cents a pound, and convert a portion of it into butter at 20 cents a pound, or whether the market price of corn and butter keep the ratio between the values of the two articles, which is no [illegible] to the dairy farmer. The plant to which I at present refer is one of the Cucurbitaceæ, which bears a small scarlet-coloured eatable cucumber. Another plant named Lerenhea is a blessing to the inhabitants of the Desert. We saw a small plant with linear leaves, and a stalk not thicker than a crow's quill; on digging down a foot or 16 inches beneath, we come to a tuber, often as large as the head of a young child; when the root is removed, we find it to be a mass of cellular tissue, filled with a fluid much like that in a young turnip. Owing to the depth beneath the soil at which it is found, it is generally deliciously cool and refreshing. Another kind, named Mokuri, is seen in other parts of the country, where long-continued heat parches the soil. This plant is a herbaceous creeper, and deposits under ground a number of tubers, some as large as a man's head, at spots in a circle a yard or more horizontally from the stem. The natives strike the ground on the circumference of the circle with stones, till, by hearing a difference of sound, they know the water-bearing tuber to be beneath.—They then dig down a foot or so and find it. —Livingstone's Missionary Travels.

Railroads and Land Speculation.

The scheme for the construction of an inter-Colonial railway from Nova Scotia to Lower Canada, the more closely it is canvassed, does not appear to advance in public favor. The truth is it is scarcely a work for the Colonists to undertake, inasmuch as it does not hold out a prospect of practical advantage commensurate to the cost. To Canada the gain would be accordingly trifling, and chiefly inasmuch as to [illegible] this Province in [illegible] upon itself the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] that it proposed to defy an influence over the [illegible] Ministry. We [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Lower Provinces [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] tion that claims her release; and so far the present the matter terminates.

THE PORTUGUESE INDEMNITY—OPINIONS ON THE FRENCH PRESS.

It is said that the indemnity agreed to be paid by the Portuguese Government in the Charleston-Georges affair amounts to £7,-000. At first no less than £18,000 was demanded. The widow of the second in command of the Charles-et-Georges, who died in the prison at Mozambique, is to receive £2,000 of the above sum. The articles in the Paris journals on the occasion made by Portugal are very triumphant.—The Constitutionnel says that it never doubted what the issue would be. The Patrie says, "Portugal has yielded, not from fear, but from wisdom. It has long considered the insufficiency of its army than the weakness of its cause. It was a cause without justice, and consequently without authority over public opinion, and without support in Europe." The Siecle avails itself of the opportunity to treat of the right of visit, and the obnoxious interference of one nation with the ships of another in general. It says—"France carrying on the slave trade officially, with the tricoloured flag displayed is an accusation in which it is hard to say whether folly or insult is predominant. That accusation is now disavowed and effaced. The reality of the maritime rights of nations not only better guarantees the dignity of the different flags, but we consider that by leaving to each state greater liberty of action it would be more efficacious against the infamous traffic of slaves."

The Theory of War.

From the Times.

The theory of war has always naturally resolved itself into the two rival branches of attack and defence, the relative resources of which have been constantly varying. Until the discovery of gunpowder the superiority may be said to have rested usually with the defence, nor were strong places often reduced except through treachery, stratagem, or famine. The introduction of artillery into military tactics reversed these conditions, and gave a general superiority to the attack, except in cases of unusual character. Up to a very recent period the utmost expected of a fortress was that it should enable a small body of men to detain and occupy a large body of men for a certain finite time. Beyond this little or no reliance was placed on ordinary fortifications and it was accepted as a law that after a given number of days the resources of the garrison must come to an end.

Of late years the superiority of the defence has been once more maintained, with what truth as regards purely land operations it may be hard to say, but certainly with considerable show of reason as regards shore forts and shipping. Although the broadside of a man-of-war constitutes one of the most formidable batteries known, and although threedeckers could be brought against a fort in far greater strength than land artillery against a fortified town, the difference of material is supposed to be fatal and it is questioned if wooden vessels can ever hold out long enough against the enemy's shot to succeed in battering down stone walls. Such, at least, was the persuasion generally entertained in the late war and the experiment tried at Sebastopol gave a partial confirmation to the belief. Just at this moment, however, the principles of defence have been applied, in a manner entirely novel to naval tactics. Hitherto, war afloat has been distinguished from war ashore by its exclusive dependence on the principles of attack. Two ships attacked each other like two tigers or two buffaloes, nor could the weaker protect itself against the stronger by any resource but that of flight. Excepting the artifices by which ancient galleys were occasionally guarded against the strokes of their antagonists' prows, there has been no attempt made to adopt defensive fortification to floating vessels. All that a ship did was to return blow for blow to manœuvre for advantage of position and endeavour to sink her enemy before the enemy sank her.

The question now raised is whether a ship through still left buoyant enough to float and steam cannot be so protected as to defy the shot of a hostile battery, either afloat or ashore. The theory received a practical application during the Crimean war, at the attack upon the forts of Kinburn; but it has since been revived with great expectations, and is not only regarded with favour by the Emperor of the French, but has been taken into serious consideration by our own naval authorities. Lord Hardwicke whose opinion on such matters is entitled to respect spoke the other day as if he was all but convinced of the success of the new principle, informing his audience that he had himself seen a wrought-iron panel on a ship's side resist the fire of heavy guns for hours together, and it is evident that if a ship could for this length of time be preserved from injury herself she could penetrate into any harbour in the world, and employ her own batteries in knocking down all before her. Obviously therefore, if the principle in question could be really established the tactics of modern warfare, as regards naval engagements and coast defences, would be completely revolutionized. The powers of attack possessed by ships would be in some respects diminished, for, as Lord Hardwicke remarked, they could not carry their iron sides and their broadsides together. They would have to be cut down into floating batteries, but they might be armed with a few very heavy pieces, and these, worked with complete impunity, would silence any antagonist in time.

It happens, however, that the theory has been once more disturbed even before the new principle could be said to have fairly prevailed. The defence made a stride, no doubt, but the attack has already overtaken it. It is perfectly true that in the experiments conducted at one of our ports the resisting power of iron was proved as aforesaid, and it is also proved that three iron side vessels can be built to float with at least as much safety as an old 10-gun brig. All that was needed for the establishment of the new device was that the powers of artillery should remain stationary; but this will not be the case. Everybody knows how the old musket has been superseded by a rifle doing execution with infinitely greater certainty at a far greater distance, and what has been done with small arms can be done with cannon. Nay the fact is already accomplished, for the other day after the iron-clad target had baffled the powers of ordinary artillery, [illegible] to come ashore to try the capacity of a Government gun rifled by Mr. Whitworth. The result was declared by an admiral, for this new enemy himself, to be that although the iron plate at first bent as much as [illegible] and rebounded the theory of [illegible] batteries for some time to come.

We need not therefore, be in any desperate hurry to break up our three-decker and build a fleet of ironsides. How far Mr. Whitworth's cannon may be applicable to most dry service, we cannot tell; but the "gunnery" had never given him an opportunity of applying his invention to practical purposes, for what has been done seems to have been done more with a view to experiment and curiosity, [illegible] and probably for those ends, and, in that experience has been certainly [illegible] something stronger than iron armour must be found before a ship can think of resisting cannon shot. The occurrence, however, is in another way deeply instructive. To get the advantage of rifled cannon we must possess rifled cannon, and the acquisition has yet to be made. The gun which smashed the ship's cairns at Portsmouth was merely an old Government piece, for by some complications of apathy, ignorance, jealousy or caprice, we have never yet carried out the principle which has been so generally established, and applied to enhance those improvements which had trebled the powers of the musket. Rifled cannon, if they can be made practically available, would not only protect our coast defences against floating batteries, but would revolutionize the whole service of field artillery. The weight of guns might be greatly diminished, while their range was greatly increased, and such a change would exert an extraordinary effect upon the movements of an army. In India, especially, there is no saying what might not be accomplished in carriage and transport, if these reforms could be effectually introduced. Be it observed, too, that unless our artillery is put in this way of progress, it will soon be of no use at all.—Rajahs and Begums have no arsenals at all, fortunately for us, furnished with modern arms, nor sharpshooters among their retainers, instructed in the new arts of musketry. Lord Clyde, therefore, could push his guns to the front and clear the way for his infantry with perfect judgment and success; but European armies now possess marksmen who at fourteen hundred yards' distance could pick off every artilleryman at his piece, and silence the best battery ever yet brought upon a field. We do not forget that in so far as rifled cannon could be said to have been tried at Sebastopol they were not thought successful, but the same was the case for a long time with the rifled musket. The theory was well known generations ago, though the rifle, as the ordinary soldier's weapon, is but a year or two old. It seems to stand to reason that what has been accomplished with the musket can be accomplished with the cannon, too, and it would be suicidal folly to overlook such a resource. Even if these guns should not be valuable for range, they must be valuable for force of propulsion, as this trial of strength with the iron-sided ship sufficiently shows. The attack will be more than the defence if we do but avail ourselves of our full power of aggression. In such matters we cannot be left behind. Perhaps some economist or philosopher will ask, what is to be the end of these incessant discoveries in the art of mutual destruction? Why, perhaps, the disuse of the art altogether. As fighting acquires more and more fatality people may be somewhat less willing to fight, and, at any rate, if the old race between attack and defence is maintained in speculation only instead of practice it will be a great point gained.—If an invention of floating batteries can be extinguished by an invention of rifled cannon the process is about as cheap an expression of international rivalry as we can expect on this side of the millennium.

Arrival of the "Vanderbilt."

NEW ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

More British Successes in India.

SANDY HOOK, Nov. 15.

The steamship Vanderbilt, Capt. Lefevre, from Bremen and Havre, via Southampton, of the 3rd instant, has arrived off this point. The steamship Prince Albert arrived at Galway on the 30th ult. The royal mail steamship Canada reached Liverpool on the 31st ult.

The Vanderbilt left Southampton on the evening of the 3rd instant, and brings 329 passengers. The entire passage has been extremely wintry. On the morning of the 5th they saw a large propeller off the Scilly Islands, bound up the channel. On the evening of the 11th, twenty miles east of Cape Race, saw a large steamer. At midnight on the 12th, thirty miles southward of Sable Island, passed the Persia.

The ship A Z, from New York for Glasgow, had foundered at sea. All hands saved.

The formation of a new company with a capital of £1,500,000, to lay a submarine telegraph cable from Galway to Quebec, was talked of.

Several gallant affairs had taken place in India, the British in all being successful.

A large amount of gold was on its way from Australia.

Spain was preparing to act against Mexico.

The London money market is unchanged. Consols for money 98 to 98¼, and for account 98¼ to 98⅝.

The sales of the three days in the Liverpool cotton market was 18,000 bales, of which 500 were on speculation, and 4,000 were for export. All qualities were ½ lower than at the departure of the Asia. The market closed with a declining tendency; the lowest qualities being almost unsaleable. At Manchester all kinds of goods were slightly lower.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.

Richardson, Spence & Co. report flour nominal and unchanged, with a declining tendency. Western canal, 20s; Philadelphia and Baltimore, 21s to 22s; Ohio 22s to 24s. Wheat trading downward—very dull, prices irregular and 1d to 2d lower. Red Western 5s to 6s 4d; white western, 6s 2d to 6s 6d; white Southern 7s to 7s 3d. Corn trading downward and nominal. Yellow, 30s to 32s; white, 33s to 33s 6d. European was quoted 1s lower. Rye quiet.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.

Beef heavy and quotations barely maintained. Pork dull. Bacon in but little inquiry and prices weak. Lard heavy with more retail; sales at 56s 3d to 58s 6d.—Tallow unchanged. Sugar quiet.

ASHES—Pots steady at 32s. Pearls quiet.

Linseed oil 30s to 31s. Spirits of turpentine steady at 40s 6d.

The Future of Russia.

(From the Saturday Review.)

Never, perhaps, did a man undertake a more gigantic and noble work than that to which the Emperor Alexander has set his hand. It is hardly possible for us to estimate the moral and physical obstacles which his predecessors had to encounter in [illegible] as during a period. The long [illegible] of a policy of violence and repression were in his own minds; the vague dangers of fast disorganizing, and then remodelling, a whole Society, were to be faced; and, most terrible of all, the hostility and unwillingness of a nobility which had sanctioned even the laws of its Czars only by blows, sometimes barred. Yet all this the Emperor Alexander has met with a courage and resolution quite extraordinary in [illegible] Russia. The spirit [illegible] is attributed to monarchs in divers points, according to the moral standard of those who compile it; but there can be no doubt that a property belongs to some who most deserve it. The Emperor Alexander has done everything in the accomplishment of his task with [illegible] and [illegible] which will not hesitate to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] provements of the town, and circulating around us by the investment of capital such a healthy tone as cheers and encourages us to face the coming winter with a confidence which we observe lacking—and perhaps reasonably so—in other places. The private enterprise of our townspeople has been most beneficially at work during the past summer, and we trust we may safely assure our readers that what has been done, is but an index of what will be done, and that as "we have the makings of a large city about us," we shall ere many years have flown over our heads, see a truly flourishing and prosperous City on the banks of the Otonabee, of which we have at present an advanced embryo in our own good town Peterborough. In alluding briefly to the improvements of the past spring and summer, we may notice as perhaps first in importance the Grammar and Union School House, now near its completion on the Court House Hill. This is probably the handsomest building in the county: it is built of white pressed bricks with a stone basement story, and has a fine commanding appearance, the view of which is however, slightly broken in upon by the new Church in Water Street. Nevertheless the site is admirably chosen, and when next year the grounds are all properly cleared and decorated School House Hill will be one of the loveliest spots in Peterborough. The estimated cost of the building when completed is somewhere about £4,000, contracted for by Messrs. MacDonald, Graham and Mitchell, and sub-contracted for by Mr. Brown from Cobourg and Messrs. Clotworthy & Talford of Peterboro. The number of men employed on the School House has been about eight bricklayers, ten or twelve carpenters, four or five masons, and ten labourers. We have next in importance the new Church in connection with the congregation of the Rev'd Mr. Rogers of the Free Church of Scotland. This is a handsome edifice now approaching completion externally, and the congregation expect to be able to assemble in the basement story for worship this fall. As we have already stated it is situated on Water Street; the style of the architecture is the Gothic; it is built of red brick with a basement story of lime stone, and from the south end looking down Water Street is rising a handsome spire the height of which will be one hundred and sixty-two feet, and which will be an attractive mark from every approach to the town. The original plan of the Church has been deviated from, and the cost of the present building is estimated at about £4,000 contracted for by Messrs. Hope and Davidson, stone masons, and Mr. Carlyle for the brick work. The number of men employed is eight bricklayers, four masons, sixteen carpenters and twelve labourers. We have only one regret in regard to this beautiful edifice, and this is, that its site was not on George Street instead of Water Street: the situation would have been even more commanding and the obstruction to the view of the School House would have been avoided; as it is, it is an ornament to our town and speaks well for the liberality and enterprise of the congregation erecting it. Passing down Water Street and almost opposite the Market Square, the Bank of Montreal have erected a substantial and neat brick building as office and agent's residence, which they have occupied for the greater part of the summer. It is built of white bricks two and a half storys high, and cost £3,000. We have next the new Market Blocks built on the Town lots by the lessees as follows: A handsome white brick double-block three storys high on the corner of George and Simcoe Streets, built by W. A. Scott, Esq., and now almost entirely occupied. The low storys are handsomely fitted up as stores and given to the large end of George Street a decidedly impressed and business-like appearance. This fine building will cost somewhere about £3,500: the brick work was built by Mr. Carlyle and the carpenter work by Mr. A. McDonald, and the men employed on the block were about ten bricklayers, ten carpenters and as many labourers. Adjoining Scott's block on George Street is another handsome three story red brick block, built by Wm. Landy, Esq., and Thos. White, Sen'r, Esq., at a cost of about £2,200: the contractor for the brick work as before being Mr. Carlyle, with a complement of hands on the whole building about equal to that on Scott's block. Immediately below White's, A. Fowlie, Esq., and W. A. Scott have begun another block similar in dimensions and style to those next, but it is hardly probable that this can now be finished ere frost sets in. However the work goes forward and when completed will fill the vacant ground on George Street above the market, the next lot below being the proposed site for the new Town Hall, so long talked of, and likely yet to be talked of for a considerable time to come ere the work be commenced in earnest. On Simcoe Street between George and Water Streets, Robt. Nichols, Esq., is erecting a splendid three story brick store with cast iron fronts on the basement supporting the upper storys. This is one of the handsomest buildings in town, and being well advanced towards completion outwardly improves vastly the appearance of the town in that quarter. Immediately in rear of this store Mr. Nichols has also erected a two story stone Steam Mill of large dimensions: the probable expense of these buildings will be about £3,000, contracted for by Messrs. Hope and Davidson, stone masons, and Mr. Carlyle, bricklayer; the carpenter work being under the superintendence of Mr. Wm. Robertson. These have completed three stores, six bricklayers, ten labourers, and their carpenters. On the premises of T. T. Dickson, Esq., at the west end of George and Hunter Streets, adjoining Colonel Nicholl's, have been erected three story and basement, which they will occupy themselves as a combined hall, put the probable cost of which would be about £500, employing in the building about six bricklayers, four or five carpenters, and the same number of labourers. We may also notice as one of the important additions to our town in the past season, the magnificent new Hotel and Stores erected by Elias Burnham, Esq., at the foot of George Street; these are now almost completed, and form certainly one of the finest row of houses in town. The estimated cost of the new additions will be about £3,000 and the Hotel will vie favourably with any out of the metropolis. Besides the above there have been the usual additions—and perhaps more so—to our number of frame houses as residences, &c., with a few substantial brick dwellings in the outskirts of the town; and altogether there cannot have been at the lowest estimate less than about £30,000 worth of property added to our town during the past spring and summer, a fact which speaks volumes for the state of our prosperity, forgetting for a while the vast increase to our wealth which the opening of the new Railway must ultimately bring us. We doubt much if a better state of things exists in any other part of Canada, in any town with a population not much over 4,000. Long may this continue, and long may our merchants be able to come as successfully through the fiery ordeal of "hard times" as we rejoice to say has been the case here in the late crisis.

☞ The Charcoals relieved the monotony of our town during the present week by two entertainments of vocal and instrumental music and dancing to numerous and respectable audiences. Those who missed the entertainments certainly missed a treat; there was much genuine humour in the jokes and conundrums propounded, and the nigger character was by two or three of the Charcoals exceedingly well maintained. The performances of the musicians were of a high character, and on the whole the entertainments well deserved the approbation which was heartily awarded them. We would be glad to see our dingy friends at an early period again.

Book Notices.

THE CANADIAN ALMANAC FOR 1859.—Maclear & Co., Toronto; Sawers & Murray, Peterboro'.

This decidedly useful and remarkably cheap publication is again before us. All who have seen the former issues, will hail with satisfaction this annual visitor, and to those who are strangers to it, we may simply say the following from its title page may be safely relied on. It contains "Full and authentic Commercial, Statistical, Astronomical, Departmental, Ecclesiastical, Educational, Financial, and General Information." Its more prominent new features are an able article on the late financial crisis, and the first of a series of sectional maps of Canada, beginning with the County of Essex. We would recommend all to get a copy of this useful publication.

THE RIVAL FAMILIES, or Virtue and Vice; and the Stolen Jewels, or Match-Making Mamma. By Charles R. Williams, Cobourg. Sawers & Murray, Peterboro'.

A Canadian aspirant to literary fame, comes before us in these tales. This is something new for Canada: hitherto flooded by the most objectionable fictions from American pens, we hail with pleasure, the opening of a cheap literature among ourselves, the tone of which will not offend even the most fastidious. Mr. Williams merits praise for the enterprising manner in which he has entered on his literary labours. As a Novelist, he is defective in graphic power, although his imagination is rich; but the interest in his tales is sometimes destroyed by the tameness of his descriptions and the commonplaces which he lingers on. These tales are however not without interest, and they will be perused to advantage by many of our young lady friends, who will find the pervading pastimes for external show, and husband catching cleverly exposed and ridiculed. The moral of both tales is decidedly good, and the book may be put into the hands of the youngest person with safety.

TALES, SKETCHES, AND LYRICS, by the Rev'd R. J. Macgeorge. Toronto, Maclear & Co., &c., &c.: Peterboro', Sawers & Murray.

Mr. Macgeorge, as long and so well known as "Selmser" the editor of the Streetsville Review, has published in a collective form a number of the Sketches, &c., which appeared in that journal. It is needless to say anything of the merits of these. They are here in great variety "from grave to gay;" some we have already placed before our readers; all are worthy of perusal, and the master spirit is evident in all from the Legend of Bethlehem, (the first piece in the book,) to the Scarlet Vest, (the last) witty, pithy, earnest and truthful. None can take up the volume without perusing it with pleasure, and for a parlor table no book could be better adapted.

Lovell's Canada Directory.

We perceive that preparations are out for preparing another edition of the Canada Directory corrected down to the latest possible period, with a view to a repetition of this proceeding every two years. The steps required for bringing it out in September next will have to be commenced on the opening of next year. The former edition has given so much satisfaction to those who have used it and amongst British and American merchants and Journalists, created so much admiration of Canadian progress, enterprise and skill, and may be of so much service to tourists, emigrants, writers and others, as to demand a new attempt to continue the publication; and Mr. Lovell notwithstanding a most serious loss and grievous disappointment in his former speculations, has the courage and generosity to offer another effort for a continuance of support. He considers it due to the large number of subscribers to the first volume, (nearly 2,000 in all,) and also of public journals to demand again presenting the work with results of about 1,400 pages containing complete Directories of Montreal, Toronto, Quebec, Kingston, Hamilton, London, Ottawa, &c., and the number of the merchants and professional people in every principal municipality, which subject from the past, and under the head of Encyclopædia of Canada. There is also a Map of Upper and Lower Canada. The price will be £3 payable on the delivery of the work.—Large as this sum seems, it is as small as the expenses of getting up such a work, and the moderate number that can be sold will allow. Subscriptions for the work should be made as to aid an enterprise connected with the honour and progress of the Province, and as a participation in the public spirited undertaking of a large-hearted citizen. But the work is capable of being made eminently serviceable to most persons in business; and none but those who have for some time had such a book at hand, can be aware of the prevention of trouble, increased ability, and profitable guidance for which it may be used. It is in fact a mercantile library. The experience gained by the compiler of the former edition and the large establishment organized for carrying on this work, will greatly improve the new issue, and should be now secured for the future prosecution of the work. It ought to be the effort of every man of large business every person of competence, every head of an institution, to find out not how he can dispense with this volume, but how he can get another copy of it taken.—Colonist.

Orders will be received by Mr. John Lovell, either in Montreal or Toronto.

QUALIFICATION
Of Municipal Councillors and Police Trustees.

In order that it may be more generally known what is required by the Municipal Corporations Act, as qualifications of Mayors, Councillors, and Electors, we transcribe the most important sections concerning them:—

Section 70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, members of a Council, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the County within which the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, freehold or leasehold property rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment-Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars or leasehold to eight hundred dollars.

In Police Villages—Freehold or leasehold to four hundred dollars.

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to forty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to eighty dollars per annum.

In Towns—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum, or leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And in Cities—for Aldermen—Freehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to three hundred and twenty dollars per annum: and for Councilmen—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum or Leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this Section, shall not include a term less than a Tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Section 73. No Judge of any Court of Civil Jurisdiction, no Gaoler, or Keeper of a House of Correction, no Officer of any Municipality, no Bailiff of a Division Court, no Sheriff's Officer, no Inkeeper or Saloonkeeper, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, or Township Councillor), and no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a Member of the Council of the Corporation.

ELECTORS.

Section 75. The Electors of every Municipality for which there is an assessment roll, and the Electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are naturalborn or naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally rated on the last revised assessment-rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors and tenants.

Section 76. In Cities, Towns and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the annual value following:

In Incorporated Villages—Twelve dollars;

In Towns—Twenty dollars; and

In Cities—Thirty Dollars.

Section 78. When a Municipality is divided into Wards or electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one Ward or electoral division; and if entitled to vote in the Ward in which he resides, he shall not be entitled to vote in any other Ward or electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act.

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated at an amount sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, then each of them shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deem ed so rated.

Married.

In Rochester, N. Y. on the 9th inst., by the Rev. Mr. George, Mr. Robert Bryans of Millbrook, C. W., to Miss Emma S. Hoxsie, of the City of Rochester, N. Y.

At the Church of the Ascension, Hamilton, on the 10th instant, by the Rev. John Hebden, Mr. George W. S. Strickland, second eldest son of Colonel Strickland, of North Dorro, to Miss Fanny Shortam, second eldest daughter of Thos. Wade Bothwell, Esq., of Warwick.

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough BY RAILWAY.

P. H. L. & B. & P. H. & P. RAILWAYS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1858, Trains will run as follows:—
Leave Lindsay for Port Hope.....6.40 a. m.
" Port Hope for Lindsay.....3.10 p. m.

Peterborough Section.

Leave Peterborough for Port Hope...3.30 p.m.
" Port Hope for Peterborough...11.30 a.m.

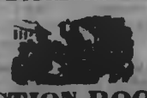
Notice the above trains are in connection with Grand Trunk and other trains at Port Hope for Montreal and other points East.

A. T. WILLIAMS,
Superintendent.
Superintendent's Office, Port Hope, Nov. 17th, 1858. 45

TO LET.

THE House and Premises lately occupied by Walter Rutledge Esq., situated on the side of the Smithers Hill. The house is well finished and the accommodations will be convenient, such as Garden, Cellar, Woodshed, Pump &c., for particulars apply to
JOHN J. LUNDY.
Peterborough, Nov. 16th, 1858. 46

PETERBOROUGH



AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will always be ready to act as such to those requiring his services.

Auctioneer,

He also begs to intimate, that he has opened as Auction Rooms, that Store on George Street, first door North of Messrs. Ormond & Gilmour, Druggists, (Henthorn's Block,) where he will receive for sale by Auction, Goods of every description, on which he will if desired, make advances until such time as said articles be sold.

Punctuality and strict attention to business may be relied on by those entrusting to him Commissions for sale.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1858. 45

POSTPONED!

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, ON

Saturday, 13th Nov. next,

at the hour of 12 o'clock, noon, two building Lots, 22 feet each, fronting on George Street, and running back 66 feet; the situation cannot be excelled in Town. I would strongly advise parties who wish to carry on Mercantile Business not to neglect this last opportunity; it being part of Lot No. 1, corner of George and Hunter Streets, one of the very best public corners in Town. There are at present six splendid new three storey Brick Stores on said Lot, and driving a very excellent business.

ALSO.

There will be seven other half acre Lots, sold at the same time, situated at the South end of the Town, near the Port Hope Rail Road. The conditions will be made known at the time of sale.

Terms Easy.

The Sale will take place on the premises of the Subscriber.

JAMES T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Oct. 27th, 1858. 43-3in

The above Sales have been postponed until Saturday, 20th Nov. inst,

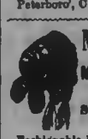
at the same hour and place.
JAMES T. HENTHORN.
Peterborough, Nov. 16th, 1858. 45

CAUTION.

I HEREBY forbid all persons purchasing or taking a Note for £30, made by me in favour of Robinson Moore; as I will not pay the same, having received no value therefor.
WILLIAM MOORE.
Peterboro', C. W. Nov. 12th, 1858. 45-3in



Mrs. Eliza Hunter,
MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,
Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.
Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

PIANO-FORTE
FOR SALE.

THE undersigned being about to remove to Toronto, wishes to dispose of his splendid SEVEN OCTAVE STODART PIANO-FORTE.
H. HACKE,
Prof. of Music etc.
Peterboro', C. W. Nov. 17th, 1858. 45

STANDARD WORKS,
For Gifts or Public or Private Libraries
AT
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.

Byron's complete works 8vo. cl. with plates			$2.50
Milton's	"	"	2.00
Burns'	"	"	2.00
Do.	"	Morocco gilt	2.50
Scott's Life of Napoleon	"	with portrait	2.50
Do.	"		2.25
Shakespeare, complete with Glossary 8vo.			1.00
D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, 5 Vols. in one, 8vo cloth with portraits.			1.50
Baxter's (Bishop) works complete, 8vo. clo.			1.50
United States Magazine, Vols 1 and 2 with numerous wood cuts, 8vo. cloth—cheap			2.50
McCheyne's Life letters & remains, 8vo. cl.			1.50
Scots Worthies by John Howe, complete 8vo. cloth			1.00
Scotia's Bards, beautifully illustrated, 8vo. cloth			2.00
Gilbert's wonders of the world, with illustrations, Gilt			1.50
Professor Wilson (Christopher North's) Recreations $1.25 for			0.75
Talfourd's (Sergeant) Essays $1.00 for			0.60
Macgeorge's (Selemser) Tales, Sketches & Lyrics			1.00
Spurgeon's Cheque Book			1.00
Livingstone's Travels in Africa			1.25
Chamber's papers for the people, per Vol.			0.40
Infidelity, its aspects, causes and agencies prize essay			1.00
Josephus, complete by Whiston, portrait			1.25
Chalmers' (Dr.) Miscellanies, 8vo. cloth			1.50

☞ A great variety of Books at present in Stock in general literature.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
45

DENTISTRY.

A LL sorts of Dentistry are constantly calling on the subscriber. Regular hours devoted to country business. He begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or REGULATED, or TEETH ULEANED and ARRANGED. ☞ Calls to residences, corner of Charlotte and Antrim Streets, on any Evening after all schools, if otherwise engaged.
☞ Terms moderate.
☞ When diseased gums will be washed on at their own residences.
☞ NOTE.—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary charges) 5s 6d each; with Silver, &c., &c., 1s 3d; Extracting, 1s 3d; and all operations warranted.
R. HOOPER.
Peterborough, Nov. 15th, 1858. 44

The Best,
THE LARGEST AND THE CHEAPEST
Stock of Ready-made Clothing,
EVER OFFERED FOR SALE IN PETERBOROUGH AT
J. HAFFEY'S
OLD STAND, AND NEXT DOOR TO MR. John Kerr's, all the Clothing has been personally selected upon the premises, and Wholesale.
JUST RECEIVED, A FRESH STOCK OF STAPLE GROCERIES.
Peterborough, Nov. 13th, 1858. 45-7

BOARD! BOARD!!

ROOMS or BOARD can be had at the Subscriber's, on the corner of Hunter and Simcoe Streets, immediately opposite the Market Square.
Apply at the Store.
Peterborough, Nov. 15th, 1858. 44-6in

PETERBOROUGH
Soap and Candle Works.

THE subscribers have now on hand, a supply of very superior Tallow Candles, of their own manufacture, which they are prepared to sell to the Trade at the lowest wholesale prices.
☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.
CAHLVT & HOOD.
Peterboro', 10th Nov., 1858. 44

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has located Rooms in the Temperance House, Water Street, where he will carry on his business of

TAILOR,

in all its branches. Work executed in the newest styles and on the most moderate terms.
☞ A Fit Guaranteed.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-6f

WANTED,

A PRECENTOR, for the Presbyterian Church in connection with the Church of Scotland, in Peterborough.
Apply to the Rev. J. Douglas.
Peterborough, Nov. 3, 1858. 43.

TO AUGUSTUS SAWERS, ESQ., PETERBOROUGH.

SIR,—We the undersigned Electors of the Town of Peterborough, looking forward to the coming election of a person to fill the office of Mayor, and taking into consideration the importance of having at all times an efficient and trustworthy individual in the Mayoralty, and being sensible of the necessity there exists at present for having for our chief Magistrate one who shall unflinchingly assert the rights of the Town, and who by his position and attainments will secure for the office that respect which should invariably attend it, would respectfully solicit your permission to nominate you as one qualified in every respect to fill the office of Mayor with benefit to the Town and credit to yourself, and should you consent to this nomination we shall be happy to exert ourselves in order to secure your return.

We are,
Sir,
Yours faithfully.

John English,	John Maloney,
William Lundy,	John J. Marshall,
Robt. Tanner,	Stephen Stratton,
P. Ryan,	Wm. H. Martin,
James Ryan,	Alex. Mervin,
John Wilson,	Gregory Cole,
Thos. Kennedy,	Wm. Blatchford,
Wm. Croft,	Wm. Irwin,
A. P. Santry,	George McComb,
Patrick Redakins,	James B. Dunn,
John Pye,	F. A. Erskin,
E. Phelon,	John Lapiant,
Thomas Woods,	Edward Gagne.
Michael Sullivan,	Peter Goyet,
Edward Tanner,	Samuel Wright,
Tousant Laplant,	Joseph Smith,
Richard Treswith,	John Hayes,
James Wright,	James Bauvai,
William Mercer,	Pitre Ebrte,
Andrew Mercer,	James Poter,
Francis Mercer,	Thos. Douglas,
Alexander Graham,	Michael O'Brien,
Duncan McKellor,	Charles Cameron,
G. H. Marshall,	Gilbert Dafoe,
James Smith,	L. Lemay,
B. Reynolds,	James Gibbon,
Walter Paterson,	James Wilson,
Robert Graham.	George Cairns.
Dr. McKeon.	H. E. Kelly.

Peterborough Nov. 10, 1858.

REPLY.

GENTLEMEN,

I accept, with great satisfaction, your nomination as a candidate for the Mayoralty. The flattering language which you have been pleased to address to me, shall, if I am elected, encourage me to strive to the best of my ability, to earn your continued approval.

I remain,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant.
A. SAWERS.

TO MESSRS. JOHN ENGLISH, }
WILLIAM LUNDY, and others. }
Peterborough Nov. 10, 1858.

ADDRESS.

TO THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH.

GENTLEMEN,

The office of Mayor of the Town being now elective, you will shortly be required to choose some person to serve you in that capacity, for the ensuing year. Several from among you have honoured me with their attention, and have addressed to me their request that I should submit myself as a candidate for the office. I have had great pleasure in acceding to their proposition and have now the honour to express a hope that the good opinion entertained of me by the promoters of my canvass may extend to the electors generally. As I am not insensible of the honour attaching to an office of trust in the gift of the people, neither am I unmindful of the responsibilities which attend its exercise. The position of Mayor, besides requiring very close attention to the management of the finances of the town, and the care of the public property, brings the occupant, through many ways, into direct contact with the people; and it can only be by a firm reliance in the integrity of the man, that the good understanding, which is essential to contentment, will be preserved between them. If I am accepted by you, it will be my anxious desire to satisfy you that your confidence has not been misplaced; but that whatever my deficiencies may be, no share of them shall be classed among wilful errors or negligencies. Viewing me as a new man in the municipal government of the town, it will be remarked that I should enter office without any established reputation for fitness, but it will not either escape notice that I should receive it without any committee to matters of older date than my occupancy of the office, and may fairly be expected to look back upon transactions which seem to require explanation. That I should do so, you have my assurance, and in so open a manner as will enable you to judge of their correctness. I disapprove entirely of that system of statecraft which does everything under cover; it may appear to save trouble to those concerned, but in my mind it is better the people should have the trouble of looking into their affairs at all times, and thus become prepared with a remedy, that shall avert impending danger. Interested parties in the public business with unremitting assiduity; honest men glad to attend the same means of obtaining their offices, as were open to themselves. I should therefore uphold the ballot system, and to all my dealings in your behalf, publicity would bear a part. I have thus the commencement that I had followed out.

In submitting myself for your confidence, I beg to be regarded as your most humble servant.

A. SAWERS.

Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1858.

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled, "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate bodies" of Debentures issued by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria:—

1.	2.	3.		4.	5.		6.		7.
TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS.		DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL & PERSONAL ESTATE RESIDING TO SUCH CORPORATION.		ASSESSED VALUE OF THE REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE INHABITANTS OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF PETERBOROUGH AND VICTORIA.		AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE SAME.
		Number.	Amount.		Real.	Personal.	Real.	Personal.	Part of a penny in the £.
By-Law No. 187. A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, for the constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.	Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds, (including Principal and Interest.)	1	£300	1st January, 1860.					1859—½d.
		2	300	1st January, 1860.					1860—½d.
		3	300	1st January, 1861.
		4	300	1st January, 1861.					1861—½d.
		5	300	1st January, 1862.
		6	300	1st January, 1862.
		7	300	1st January, 1863.					1862—½d.
		8	300	1st January, 1863.
		9	300	1st January, 1864.					1863—½d.
		10	300	1st January, 1864.
		11	300	1st January, 1865.					1864—½d.
		12	300	1st January, 1865.
		13	300	1st January, 1866.					1865—½d.
		14	300	1st January, 1866.
		15	300	1st January, 1867.					1866—½d.
		16	300	1st January, 1867.
		17	300	1st January, 1868.					1867—½d.
		18	300	1st January, 1868.
		19	300	1st January, 1869.					1868—½d.
		20	300	1st January, 1869.
									20 Debentures per Issued.

Dated at Peterborough this 15th day of October, A. D. 1858.

Walter Sheridan,
Secretary Treasurer.

SCHEDULE B.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1.	2.	3.		4.	5.	6.		7.
TITLE OR OBJECTS OF THE BY-LAW.	AMOUNT TO BE RAISED.	NUMBER OF DEBENTURES AND AMOUNTS.		DATES WHEN PAYABLE.	ASSESSED VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE BELONGING TO SUCH CORPORATION.	ASSESS'D VALUE OF REAL AND PERS'L ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF PETERBOROUGH.		AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE IN THE £ TO LIQUIDATE SAME.
		Number.	Amount		Real.	Pers'l.	Real.	Personal.
No. 102. To aid in erecting and furnishing a School-house in the Town of Peterborough.	£3,500	Not decided on, but not less than £50 each.		Not decided on.	£10,800	£20,800	£215,079	£44,075	In 1859 four pence half-penny. In 1860 five pence. In 1861 five pence 3 farthings. In 1862 six pence one farthing. In 1863 six pence half-penny. In 1864 eight pence. In 1865 eight pence 1 farthing. In 1866 eight pence half-penny. In 1867 nine pence. In 1868 eight pence.

Dated at Peterborough, October 30th, 1858.

J. EDWARDS, Town Clerk.

SCHEDULE A.

Return as required by the Act intituled "An Act to provide for the Registration of Debentures issued by Municipal and other Corporate Bodies;" of Debentures issued by the Town of Peterborough:—

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.		7.
TITLE OR OBJECTS OF EACH BY-LAW.	NUMBER OF DEBENTURES ISSUED AND AMOUNTS.		AM'T RAIS'D UNDER EACH BY-LAW.	AM'T PAID OR REDEEMED ON ACC'T OF SAID DEBENTURES	BALANCE STILL REMAIN'G OUTSTANDING & PAYABLE ON SAID DEBENTURES	DATES AT WHICH DEBENTURES FALL DUE, AND AMOUNT OF YEARLY RATE TO BE LEVIED OFF SAME.		AMOUNT OF VALUE OF REAL AND PERSONAL ESTATE OF THE MUNICIPALITY.
	Number.	Amounts.				Dates of Debentures falling due.	Amount of Yearly Rate in the £.	Real.	Personal.
No. 41. For the erection of a Market House, &c., in the Town of Peterborough.	Four.	£ 1 for 125 1 for 275 2 for 300 each.	£1,000	£ 400	£ 600	5th July, 1861.	5½d & 2½d.	I have no means of ascertaining.	I have no means of ascertaining.
No. 66. For repairing the Streets, &c.	Two.	£ 1 for 300 1 for 75	£ 375	None.	£ 375	2nd May, 1858.	4d.	Do.	Do.
No. 75. For grading Streets and purchasing Land.	Three.	£ 1 for 100 1 for 75 1 for 25	£ 200	£ 100	£ 100	11th Oct., 1857.	2d.	Do.	Do.
No. 87. For taking Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£150	£ 150	£ 50	£ 100	3rd Nov., 1857.	No rate specified.	£170,933	£49,853
No. 88. For grading, gravelling and making embankment across Spalding's Bay.	One.	£600	£ 600	None.	£ 600	1st Feb'y, 1857.	Average of 2½d.	£170,933	£49,853
No. 96. For taking additional Stock in Otonabee Gravel Road.	One.	£150	£ 150	None.	£ 150	1st August, 1856.	No rate specified.	£170,933	£49,853
No. 99. For balance of stock in Port Hope, L. & Beaverton Railway.	Fifty.	£250 each	£12,500	None.	£12,500	9th May,	1s. 7½d.	£170,933	£49,853

Dated at Peterborough, this 30th day of October, A. D., 1858.

JAMES EDWARDS, Town Clerk,

Counting-House Stationery.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE at present a full stock of every description of STATIONERY useful in the COUNTING HOUSE, to which they would quickly call the attention of MERCHANTS, LAWYERS, ATTORNEYS, BANKERS, and others.

They have also a fine assortment of

COUNTING-HOUSE & POCKET DIARIES FOR 1859,

POCKET AND BOOK MEN IN GREAT VARIETY,

among which they would particularly notice the

[illegible]

They have always on hand a large stock of Blue, Black and Carmine Inks, Steel and Gold Pens, &c., &c., &c.

GEORGE STREET, PETERBOROUGH,

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, BYSONS old and young, Twankay & Hyson,
GUNPOWDER,
CONGOU,
SOUCHONG, &c.
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confectners,) Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 8s. 10s. & 1lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bums, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, 1 do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Bontern (case Brandy,) Martell & T. V. Y. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 200 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs.
50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
25 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.
Hunter Street,
Peterboro' Nov. 16, 1858. 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now begin issuing (gratuitously to every subscriber) proofs from plate paper, 30 x 36 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person sending Three Dollars (or Dividend,) and Two Cents for postage, will receive a copy of the above splendid picture, after Herring's painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL.

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also [illegible] (or Dividend,) and Two Cents, to cover postage of the Association.

There will also be given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable works of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Sculptures, &c., &c., &c.

[illegible] 1, 1858. On the evening of that day the whole will be awarded to the fortunate ones.

For full particulars, see Documents, which will be forwarded to any address, on application to

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Agents for Peterboro',
Bookstore, Hunter Street.

Subscriptions received by R. S. Peterkin, Rice Lewis' Bookstore, Toronto.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the Globe Newspaper since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

CONMERCIAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL Corps has been strengthened—the staff of Reporters enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Steamer. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the Houses of Assembly, of each day are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain—and for free and accounting.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of newsmercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $3 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the Globe throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty do. do. do.....Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars.

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all CLERGYmen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 18, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.
Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Shootings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Whitneys,
Pilots,	Beavers,
Balinettes,	Etoffes,
Damasks,	Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

[illegible]

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Bookstore, Hunter Street.

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq. | JAMES HARBY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 31, 1857. 13

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.
CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.
CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,267,600. Paid up Capital, $ 130,326.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. ROBINSON.	E. P. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
Hon. DENNIS, Jr., Esq.	GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.	JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.	A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON.	DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
GARN. P. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of by Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hackett.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro' Dec. 1857. 1-tf.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber, Executor of [illegible] offers for sale that valuable FARM, being [illegible] acres under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE [illegible]

[illegible]

TERMS—[illegible]

W. W. DOWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 4, 1857. 36

Business Notices.

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of HURST & DENNE is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1858. 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to pay of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

PORTRAIT
OF THE
Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.
SPECIMEN
To be seen and orders received at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now on sale at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
Book and Stationery Store, George St.
Price 50 cents, or in Guilt Frames, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

[illegible]

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of
LITERATURE,
PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c.,&c.,
which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.

SAWERS & MURRAY
Peterboro', October 6th, 1858. 39

NOTICE.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Collector's Roll has been handed to me for the collection of the Taxes of 1858, and the time allowed for Collection is short, as the taxes must be paid on or before the

FIRST DAY OF DECEMBER.

I will be in attendance at my office in the Town Hall for the purpose of receiving the same from the hours of Nine o'clock, A. M., to Four o'clock P. M., and would be obliged to all persons concerned to save costs of a second call. The Rate is 3s 9d in the £, which any ratepayer can calculate at his leisure, and if their are errors in the Assessment, the Council is the only source of redress.

WILLIAM CUMMING,
Collector.
Peterb oro', Nov. 2nd, 1858. 39-4in.

ORMOND & GILMOUR,
HAVE REMOVED TO THEIR
NEW SHOP,
CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.
Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £300 or £500. Apply at this Office.
September 29, 1858. 37—tf.

BOARD.

A GENTLEMAN can be accommodated with Board, with or without lodging, on [illegible]
Peterboro', December 11, 1857. 44

FOR SALE.

[illegible]

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £300 cash or a bankable note for the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession,
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ November Number received, price 25 cts

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half of lot 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £3 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 19th 1857. 26.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,
W. MOCOCK.
Peterboro'. Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. H. Perlow on Hunter Street.
Also 10 Town Lots for sale or lease.
Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.
J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 23

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., consisting of 100 Acres: 60 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Stories.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro' Nov. 2nd 1858. 43tf

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Norwood, and situated between Mr S. Kelly's mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth Sept. 10, 1858. 36

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE, AND CLOTHING,

WILL be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 20, 11th Con. [illegible]

W. I. HUTTON,
Proprietor
Lakefield, Oct. 26, 1858.

SPRING ARRIVAL.

[illegible]

FOR SALE.

[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Moncck, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvement's in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. T. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 19.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms:

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER No.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	6c 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	6 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	6 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	6 4
1,00 ..	Yankee Notions	6 7½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	6 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	6 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	6 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	6 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
3,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 1

BOOK BINDER.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	12½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	2
12	Note " " "	2
2	Steel Pens	1
1	Holder	1
1	Pencil	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper	1
Making a total of		1s 9d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambalu," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson,
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE,
COBURG ST. HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has [illegible] to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, being only those remedies which are safe and reliable. [illegible] over dangerous, but which in all cases as expense will be [illegible] following prominent diseases:

[illegible]

Peterboro', Oct. 16, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,50
Do. Land of Promise, 3 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,60
Do. Eternal Day	0,30
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,30
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—Moral World in Class One	0,30
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain	0,20
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Pictures, Illustrated	0,60
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 530 pages	2,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,60
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Roots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,40
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do Family Prayers	0,15
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mahel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Sermons	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	1,00
Meeteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, Illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 3

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

DUNDAS STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.
Cobourg, August, 1857. 33

RITCHIE'S HOTEL,
BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be crowned with their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.
Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 31

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th May, 1858. 9

HASTINGS' HOUSE,
PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renovated and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.
Port Hope, 1st, 1858. 23

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER [illegible] that he has purchased [illegible] (Red Lion) and [illegible] the best accommodation [illegible]

[illegible]

Bobcaygeon, June 12, 1858.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL.

BARNARD McGARRITY & PARTNER respectfully beg to give notice that they intend to carry on the boot business during the winter season, as well as at any other in the Province. Handsmith jobbing of all descriptions done to order. The shop is on Brahams Street near Mr. James Bell's brick dwelling.

Peterboro', Dec. 15, 1857. 50

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND DEMOCRAT,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 46.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

	£	s	d
Six Lines, and under, first insertion	0	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	9
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI. T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!
ROBERT STEVENSON,
KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more modern prints up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.
Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.
Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed, the continues of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney, at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

J. J. MARSHALL,
DEALER IN GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS, Pork, Flour, Meal, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos and Spices. George Street, Peterboro'. 43

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' East.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Offices—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 12, 1857. 21.

JOHN MAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 36—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 23

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon, in the Building formerly occupied [illegible] Office, east of the bridge.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1858. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
32 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—ly

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the quarry within half a mile of the centre of the town. The stone is of a superior quality, and in large request.
For [illegible] other particulars, apply to Cameron Dunlop, Esquire, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Further by the "Vanderbilt."

A BREMEN STEAMER BURNED.

Wholesale Poisoning in Yorkshire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.

The steamer Nova Scotian from Quebec, October 23d, passed Holyhead on the afternoon of the 3rd, and probably arrived in the Mersey next morning.

The steamship Hudson of the Bremen and New York line was burnt at Bremen haven on the night of the 2nd inst. She was to have sailed on the Saturday following, and doubtless had a large part of her cargo on board. There was an insurance of £70,000 at Lloyd's on the vessel.

The new submarine cable had been laid between England and Aldborough and Holland.

The Bank of Vienna had resumed specie payment.

The new Ministry is appointed in Prussia. Prince Hohenzollern, President; Gen. Bonnin, Minister of War; M. Schleinitz, Foreign Affairs.

The crew of the French brig Anna which was shipping free negroes from the coast of Africa, had all been massacred by the negroes taken on board.

Great excitement exists at Bradford, Yorkshire, in consequence of the wholesale poisoning by lozenges in which arsenic had been mixed by mistake instead of Plaster of Paris. 15 deaths already; 60 or 70 persons seriously ill.

A letter from St. Petersburg says the Russian Envoy and suit left Kiloka, Chinese frontier, about the 1st of August for Pekin. They were received on the frontier by Chinese officers with carriages, who conducted them to Geria, where they were received by Mongolian officers, who proceeded with them.

Great activity prevails in the Spanish Naval Arsenals in consequence of preparations for the Mexican expedition. The naval force is being augmented considerably by the building of new vessels.

An admiralty steamer was to leave Woolwich, Nov. 1st, for Bologne, with the funeral car used for the interment of Napoleon at St. Helena, which has been completely restored.

The new English Ocean Telegraph Co. is to connect Galway, via Quebec, with English possessions on the Pacific. The wire to be used to be of a totally different description from any now in use.

Sir. H. L. Bulwer, British Minister to Persia, was arrested at Pera, on the 20th October, and taken to a police station, in consequence of a collision between his attendant groom and some of the Sultan's suite, while riding in the street.

AUSTRIA.

Several Prussian and other German papers had been confiscated at Vienna by the police.

Madame Pfeiffer, the celebrated traveller, is dead.

INDIA.

Telegraphic advices state that the rebels attacked and captured Seronge on the 30th of September, but subsequently evacuated it and retreated towards Esaughar, which latter place they attacked and captured on October the 2nd. They were afterwards driven from this point by a detachment of cavalry. A combined movement is proposed for hemming the enemy in at Chumberee.

Bombay quiet. More troops arriving. The rebels had suffered several total defeats in different parts of the Oude. They are, however, still ravaging the country in great numbers.

AUSTRALIA.

Advices by telegraph, September 15.—Two ships left Sydney for England with 138,000 ounces of gold. Very rich gold fields had been discovered north of Sydney.

The New South Wales Assembly had granted £50,000 per annum for ten years, towards mail service via Panama. Trade dull.

MARKETS.

LONDON, Wednesday evening.

English funds heavy and transactions unimportant. Consols closed at 93 to 93¼ for money; 93¼ to 93⅜ for account. Rates of discount unchanged. Illinois Central bonds declined ¾1; New York Central bonds flat. Atlantic Telegraph shares selling at £330 to £360. Sugar active at full rates. Coffee firm. Rice, Carolina, at auction 20s; subsequently resold at 19s 6d. Wheat dull.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 3.

Cotton has declined fully ⅛ to ¼ on Friday's prices. Sales to-day 8,500 bales, of which 2,000 were on speculation and for export. Sales yesterday 5,000 bales, including 1,000 for export and speculation.

"Sam Slick" on Downing St.

At the Manchester Athenæum Soiree on Thursday, the Honorable Judge Haliburton indulged in a highly sarcastic vein of humor as he depicted "that place in London not put down in the show-books for the stranger, but well worth any one's while to see, and which was called Downing Street." Speaking of the prevailing influence of the spot, he said they would find the air there so drowsy that they could scarcely keep their eyes awake. (Laughter.) Almost everybody in that place is fast asleep.—(Laughter.) The very sentries there have orders from the Horse Guards to keep in perpetual motion, or otherwise they would drop asleep. (Continued laughter.) You have heard a great deal about "Ministers and the assembled aristocracy" upon state occasions under the balcony. In many cases [illegible] (Laughter.) [illegible] I "Ministers" to say that, if a new war [illegible] to Downing Street, he could [illegible] to accompany that message to the Queen [illegible] (Renewed laughter.)—

Boston Correspondence of the "Montreal Gazette."

AN IMPORTANT TELEGRAPH MOVEMENT.

A transatlantic telegraph is of too much importance to admit of unnecessary delay in its successful accomplishment. During the brief period in which the cable already thrown across the Atlantic was in working order, its importance was exemplified by the transmission of two official messages from the British Government to the North American Colonies; by a new despatch announcing the consummation of a treaty of commerce with China; and by a telegram received in London from Newfoundland, announcing the collision between the Cunard steamers off the coast of that island. These messages together with the congratulatory letters exchanged between the Queen of Britain and the President of the United States, and those passed between the London and the New York directors, confirm that enterprise as a success, defeated in its permanency only by imperfections in the construction and laying of the cable. Experience will overcome these in future efforts, and the next submerged Atlantic cable will triumph over all the obstacles which have combined to defeat the first effort in its ultimate success.

The object of another cable over a new route has been agitated in Boston during the last few days, and the proposed plan meets with great favour. The projector of the new line is Frederick N. Gisborne Esq., a gentleman of great energy and practical scientific knowledge, favourably known as a zealous and successful laborer in telegraph enterprises in Canada, and latterly in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, and as the original projector of an Atlantic cable between Newfoundland and Ireland.

On his arrival in Boston Mr. Gisborne submitted his plan to a friend who has long been known as an energetic laborer in every enterprise calculated to advance our international interests, socially and commercially who immediately brought the enterprise and its projector before the conductors of the daily Press and a number of the leading merchanes, all of whom cordially endorsed the movement, and recommended immediate action. A public meeting of merchants and business men was called at the Merchants' Exchange on Monday November 8th, at which Mayor Lincoln presided, and the enterprise was fully submitted to the Boston Merchants by Mr. Gisborne.

The course of the proposed route from Boston to Europe is this:—Boston to Cape Ann, in Massachusetts Bay, 30 miles, over which there is now a telegraph line in operation; Cape Ann to Yarmouth Nova Scotia by submarine cable, 200 miles; Yarmouth to Halifax, 200 miles, over territory where there are two lines in operation, thence overland to the extreme north east point of Cape Breton, 320 miles, with telegraph communication now open; from Cape Breton, a submarine cable, 310 miles, to Blanc Sablon in the strait of Belle Isle, and thence about 1600 miles to a point in the British coast.

As the initiatory step, Mr. Gisborne, with the concurrence of the Nova Scotia Telegraph Company, who hold a perpetual charter and monopoly of telegraphs over that Province, proposes that a company be formed in Boston to lay the cable to Nova Scotia, and there form a permanent union with the Provincial Company, by which the line of telegraph between Boston and Halifax will be reduced to 430 miles against the present circuitous route of 716 miles.

George B. Upton, Esq., President of the Boston Board of Trade, and George B. Blake, Esq., one of our most eminent [illegible] of the matter strongly in their remarks before the meeting.

Mr. Gisborne will go on to Canada to secure the right of way and privileges to land a cable at Blanc Sablon—that portion of the coast of Labrador being under the government of Canada. With this right of connection secured, he will proceed to Europe, where with the ready co-operation of underwriters, the liberal aid which the British Government is prepared to extend to a responsible company, in order to secure the advantages of telegraph communication with her British North American possessions and the aid and influence of personal friends and capitalists, he will organize a company with a capital to form a transatlantic connection at Blanc Sablon in the Straits of Belle Isle.

It is a well known fact that by this route across the Atlantic the water is of less depth than it is over the more southerly track of the cable already submerged.

This new Atlantic Telegraph enterprise is every way practable, and its successful completion at an early day will not admit of a doubt. The Boston and Nova Scotia line will be laid in May or June next, and across the Atlantic will be completed, in all probability, during the following year.

Mr. Gisborne intends that a main line down the south side of the St. Lawrence and submarine cable to Anticosti, and thence again to Blanc Sablon, shall give to the Canadas a joint interest with Boston in the next Atlantic Cable.

Boston, Nov. 13, 1858.

Lead Mines in Newfoundland.

A Newfoundland correspondent states that the lead mines of the Colony, already become famous in consequence of their richness and extent, are now being worked by an American company, of which Major Ripley, recently of the United States service, is said to be the head. They are included in the purchase of a tract of three square miles for the Atlantic Telegraph Company granted to them by the Government of Newfoundland. The site of the present work is at a place called La Manche, at the head of Placentia Bay, containing about a dozen buildings, consisting of the works and the residences of the officers and employées of the company, with a population of about two hundred. The tract is situated on the water, and a fine wharf has been constructed for the convenience of the shipping. The vein worked is what is called a true cutting vein, with a back one hundred feet high, and above the level of the water, from five to thirteen feet wide, and five hundred feet from the shore. The veins—of which there are many—run through the whole tract, cropping out from a depth of two hundred to five hundred feet vertically to the surface. They lie in hills of metamorphic slate, and have linings of porphyritic elvan. The ore itself is of a pure sulphuret, yielding eighty per cent of metal, and a very little silver. The company is now turning out at the rate of from one hundred to one hundred and fifty tons of galena monthly, worth $60 per ton, and is capable of turning out three hundred and fifty tons per month, without going below the water level; and this is only from one vein, the contents of which are sufficient to employ a large force for a long time. A stream of water passes along the top of the vein, which gives all the crushing power required. There are trains laid to facilitate the transportation of the ore to the shops and to the wharf, and the whole operation of the ore, unsmelted as yet, in consequence of its richness, is shipped to New York and Liverpool—the latter being, at present, the best market.

IMPETUS TO CANADIAN SHIPBUILDING.—As an evidence of the striking impetus produced upon the shipping interest by the new channel of trade opened up between the merchant of the west and England, by the pioneer voyages of American and Canadian vessels during the last two seasons to Liverpool, we observe that the Messrs. A. Muir and Brothers, of Dalhousie, are about entering upon the same trade. The successful voyages of the J.C. Kershaw Dean Richmond, E. S. Adams, and others, with the encouragement afforded by their example have stimulated this enterprising shipbuilding firm to an exertion beyond that of their predecessors. They have already laid at their spacious shipyard in Port Dalhousie the keel of a large vessel to be built for themselves, and to make voyages in their own interest between the upper lake ports and Liverpool. Her dimensions are to be 125 feet length of keel, 26 feet 2 inches breadth of beam, and 13 feet 6 inches depth of hold—as large as the locking accomodations of the Welland Canal will permit. The vessel is to be barque-rigged after the latest improvements, and the model of hull and water lines is so designed as to allow of the utmost attainable speed with the greatest carrying capacities. The Messrs. Muir and Brothers intend to have the vessel launched, rigged, and full ready for sea early next season. The large dockyard at Port Dalhousie presents now a busy aspect, and a large number of hands are employed in getting the vessel ready for planking. The new carrying trade is engaging great attention among Canadian builders and shipowners, and we trust that the Messrs. Muir and Brothers will reap the fruit of their labours in that direction.—St. Catharines Post.

COST OF UNDERGROUND.—On the "Premium farm of the Empire State," there are sixty-one miles of underdrain, all put in by the present proprietor, E. J. Sloan, of Rose Hill, near Geneva. The operation has been carried through, in detail, three times and a half in three years, and the whole completed at an expense of $1,500 per mile. Digging, 15 cents; piping, 4 cents; filling, 4 cents; total, 23 cents per rod

Heavy gales obliged all four ships to run in for shelter at the bay of Nagasaki, and it was not until the morning of the 10th that they sighted the lofty volcanic mountain of Fusiyama. Towering like Etna to a perfect cone, with an elevation of about 11,000 feet above the level of the sea, it was first visible at a distance of upwards of one hundred miles, its beautiful outline defined sharp and clear with the first gray tints of morning. This celebrated mountain, so dear to the Japanese, has been created by him into a household god. Fusiyama is painted at the bottom of the delicate China cup from which he sups his tea; it is represented in the lacquer bowl from which he eats his rice. He fans himself with Fusiyama—he bends things to you on Fusiyama. It is on the back of his looking-glass, it is embroidered on the skirts of his garments, and it is the background of every Japanese work of art or imagination. Simoda is a lovely but dangerous harbor. Its apparently sheltered nooks and secluded coves woo you into their embraces, and when the south wind blows fiercely you are dashed to atoms upon their ribs of iron. The earthquake which wrecked the Russian frigate Diana changed the surface of the bottom, and there is now no good holding ground, but it is fairy land to look upon, and in calm weather the picture of repose and security. Here too there is a Goyoshi or Bazaar and a better display of lacquer and China than at Nagasaki, but is a Town of no local importance, containing some 3,000 or 4,000 inhabitants, and when under the new treaty the port is shut up will sink into its normal condition of a fishing village. At the head of the bay the American flag flaunts proudly; for two years it has waved in solitary magnificence over the exiles who during that period have represented American interests in this remote corner of the globe. Cut off from all communion with their fellow man, and sacrificing in the interests of civilization and commerce the blessings of all social intercourse, their efforts had been crowned with success, and the Ambassador heard from Mr. Harris that he had only returned a few days from Jeddo where he had concluded his treaty, and where Count Putiatine, who had proceeded to Japan direct from the Gulf of Pecheli, was at that moment negociating.—The Dutch Resident at Nagasaki, Mr. Donker Curtin, had also been for some time engaged in negotiating at Jeddo, but had left before the intelligence had arrived there of the treaty of Tien-tsin, and had consequently failed altogether in signing any treaty at all. He was at that time on his return journey overland to Nagasaki.—Had any doubts existed as to the propriety of proceeding without delay to negotiate at Jeddo, they were at once solved by this intelligence, for it became incumbent on the Ambassador to lose no time in securing for Great Britain those advantages and privileges which other nations had acquired or were acquiring, and to place her, without delay, in the position of the other European Powers at that time represented in Japan. As, unfortunately, all the efforts at Nagasaki to procure a Dutch interpreter had proved unavailing, an insuperable difficulty seemed to present itself on learning that the only language in which the Japanese could communicate at Jeddo was Dutch. This obstacle was, however, removed by the friendly act of Mr. Harris, who, with great liberality and courtesy, placed his own interpreter, Mr. Huesken, at Lord Elgin's disposal. During the fortnight's stay of the squadron at Jeddo the services of this gentleman were in constant request, and his readiness to oblige rendered him universally popular, while in his official capacity his knowledge of the people and familiarity with their habits, acquired during a residence among them of two years, must have rendered him invaluable. Simoda is about 80 miles from the city of Jeddo, situate at the extreme point of the promontory which forms one side of the bay, or rather gulf, at the head of which the capital is placed. Up this bay the squadron proceeded with a fair wind, on the morning of the 12th, and passing through the Straits of Uraga, the left shore of which is feathered with rich verdure and indented with little bays, reaching a point opposite the port of Kanagawa, beyond which no foreign ship had ever ventured, and where the Russian squadron could then be discerned at anchor. Captain Osborne, however, professing his readiness to explore the unknown waters at the head of the bay, and to proceed as near the city as possible, Lord Elgin seemed determined not to lose an opportunity of establishing a precedent likely to be so important in our future intercourse with Japan, and to the astonishment of both Russian and Japanese, the British ships deliberately passed the sacred limit without communicating with the shore, and a few minutes after were cautiously feeling their way round a long spit of land which runs out into the bay and offers some danger to the navigator. An instinct for deep water must have guided the ships along the channel, which was afterwards found to be sufficiently narrow and tortuous, but at last all doubts as to the feasibility of the enterprise were removed by the appearance of several large, square-rigged Japanese vessels at anchor, the draught of water of which was a guarantee for our own. Beside those rose gradually out of the waters of the bay a line of insulated forts, which marked the defences of Jeddo, while an extensive suburb running along the western shore, formed a continuous street as far as the eye could reach. The ships ultimately anchored in three fathoms of water, about a mile and a half from this suburb, and the same distance from the fine island forts above mentioned, which are situated on a sand bank, the intervening channels being always covered with water. About a mile beyond these forts and parallel to them, lay the main body of the city; the wooded height on which is situated the Castle of the Tycoon, forming a conspicuous object. The arrival of the British squadron in waters which the Japanese had sedulously represented as being too shallow to admit of the approach of large ships filled them with dismay and astonishment; boats followed each other, with officials of descending degrees of rank, to beg them to return to Kanagawa; and finally urgent representations were made to the Ambassador on the subject. The pleas generally put forward were amusing and characteristic. It was said the anchorage was dangerous, but the presence of their own squadron was referred to as an evidence to the contrary; then it would be impossible to procure and send off supplies, but it was protested that if necessary we could do without these. The merits and comforts of Kanagawa were expatiated on in vain; the paramount duty was the delivery of the yacht at Jeddo, and to deliver the yacht there it was necessary to remain at the present anchorage. No manner was this settled than the Japanese, in their usual way, became perfectly reconciled to the arrangement, sent off supplies with great willingness, and began to progress a residence on shore for Lord Elgin and his staff. It appears that Count Putiatine had been charged by his Sovereign to endeavor to obtain the exclusive privilege of trading with Japan, and only succeeded in losing all the influence he had gained by the liberality of his colleagues, and was obliged to content himself with the privileges which they had already secured. [illegible] had made the greatest exertions to [illegible] Count Putiatine had [illegible] of 74 guns.

The landing of a British Ambassador in state at the capital of the Empire of Japan was only in keeping with the unparalleled audacity which had already been committed in anchoring British ships within the sacred limits of its harbour. Japanese officials were sent off to superintend the operation, but they little expected to make the return voyage in one of Her Majesty's gun-boats, with 13 ships' boats in tow, amid the thunder of salutes, the inspiriting strains of a naval band, and the flutter of hundreds of flags with which the ships were dressed.—Close under the green batteries, threading its way amid hosts of huge-masted, broad-sterned junks, the Little Lee surrounded by her gay flotilla, steamed steadily, and not until the water had shoaled to seven feet, and the Japanese had ceased to remonstrate, or even to wonder, from sheer despair, did she drop anchor, and the procession of boats was formed, the four paddle-box boats, each with a 24-pound howitzer in her bows, inclosing between them the Ambassador's barge, the remainder of the ships' boats, with captains and officers in full dress, leading the way. The band struck up "God Save the Queen" as Lord Elgin ascended the steps of the official landing-place, near the centre of the city, and was received and put into his chair by sundry two-sworded personages, the rest of the mission, together with some officers of the squadron, following on horseback.—The crowd which for upwards of a mile lined the streets leading to the building fixed on as the residence of the Embassy was dense in the extreme; the procession was preceded by policemen in harlequin costume, jingling huge iron rods of office, hung with heavy clanging rings to warn the crowd away. Ropes were stretched across the cross streets, down which masses of the people rushed attracted by the novel sight; while every few hundred yards were gates partitioning off the different wards, which were severally closed immediately on the passing of the procession, thus hopelessly barring the further progress of the old crowd, who strained anxiously through the bars, and envied the persons composing the rapidly-forming nucleus. During Lord Elgin's stay of eight days on shore nearly all the officers of the squadron had an opportunity of paying him a visit. His residence was a portion of a temple situated upon the outskirts of what was known as the Princes' Quarter, in other words it was the Knightsbridge of Jeddo. In front of it was a street which continued for 10 miles, as closely packed with houses, and as densely crowded with people, as it is from Hyde Park corner to Mile end. At the back of it stretched a wide and somewhat dreary aristocratic quarters, containing the residences of 360 hereditary princes, each a petty sovereign in his own right, many of them with half-a-dozen town houses, and some of them able to accommodate in these same mansions 10,000 retainers.

Passing through the spacious and silent (except where a party of English were traversing them) street, we arrive at the outer moat of the castle; crossing it we are still in the Princes' Quarter; but are astounded as we reach its furthest limit at the scene, which now bursts upon us—a magnificent moat, 70 or 80 yards broad, faced with a smooth green escarpment as many feet in height, above which runs a massive wall composed of stones Cyclopian in their dimensions. This is crowned in its turn, by a lofty palisade. Towering above all, the spreading arms of giant cedars proudly display themselves, and denote that within the Imperial precincts the picturesque is not forgotten. From the highest point of the fortifications in rear of the castle a panoramic view is obtained of the vast city with its two millions and a half inhabitants, and an area equal to, if not greater than, that of London. The castle alone is computed to be capable of containing 40,000 souls.

But the party on shore did not confine itself to exploring the city alone; excursions of 10 miles were made in two different directions, and but one opinion prevailed with respect to the extraordinary evidences of civilization which met the eye in every direction. Every cottage, temple and tea-house was surrounded by gardens laid out with exquisite taste, and the most elaborate neatness was skillfully blended with grandeur of design. The natural features of the country were admirably taken advantage of, and a long ride was certain to be rewarded by a romantic scene where a tea-house was picturesquely perched over a water-fall, or a temple reared its carved gables amid groves of ancient cedars. The tea-house is a national characteristic of Japan. The traveller, wearied with the noonday heat, need never be at loss to find rest and refreshment; stretched upon the softest and cleanest of matting, imbibing the most delicately flavored tea, inhaling through a short pipe the fragrant tobacco of Japan, to resign himself to the ministrations of a bevy of fair damsels, who glide rapidly and noiselessly about, the most zealous and skillful of attendants.

In their personal cleanliness the Japanese present a marked contrast to the Chinese; no deformed objects meet the eye in the crowded streets; cutaneous diseases seem almost unknown. In Nagasaki, towards the evening, a large number of the male and female population might be seen "tubbing" at the corners of the streets.—In Jeddo they frequent large bathing establishments, the door of which is open to the passer-by, more especially if the inmates of both sexes ingeniously rush to it to gaze at him as he rides blushingly past. But it would not be possible to condense within the limits of a letter the experiences and observations of a residence in the capital of an empire about which the information at home is so very scanty, and which presents, probably, a greater variety of interesting and curious matter to the stranger than any other part of the world. Suffice it to be recorded as our general impression that, in its climate, its fertility, and its picturesque beauty, Japan is not equalled by any country on the face of the globe; while, as if to harmonize with its surpassing natural endowments, it is peopled by a race whose qualities are of the most amiable and winning description, and whose material prosperity has been so equalised as to insure happiness and contentment to all classes. We never saw two Japanese quarrel, and beggars have yet to be introduced with other luxuries of Western civilization. It is not to be wondered at that a people rendered independent by the resources of the country and the frugality and absence of luxury which so strikingly characterize them should not have appreciated any great desire to establish an intercourse with other nations, which, in all probability, would carry in its train greater evils than could be compensated for by its incidental advantages. Their exclusiveness has arisen, not as in China, from an assumption of superiority over the rest of the world, but from a conviction that the well being and happiness of the community would not be enhanced by the introduction of foreign tastes and luxuries; and that very probably, as in China and other the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"At times, in the morning, he partook of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and then blessed all his sisters and brothers, all of them weeping bitterly. After the mass was over, numbers of persons applied for admission to see him, but, his own consent being asked in every case, was uniformly refused. After that time, until the officer entered his cell to prepare him for the tragedy, he remained most of the time on his knees in prayer.

"The gallows was erected in a small narrow court in the inclosure of the City Prison, a place in which all the executions here taken place for many years.

"At a little after 10 o'clock the coffin was brought inside the walls, and placed in a small building in the courtway. It was a plain whitewood stained box, with a plate on it in the shape of a cross, on which was the inscription:

"JOHN ROGERS,
Died November 12, 1856,
Aged 20 years."

This coffin was deposited in a place out of sight of the prisoner as he came into the court-yard, and there the officers and those who were admitted to witness the scene, stood for two hours in sight of the gallows, and with the coffin by their side, joking, kicking their heels on the flag-stones to keep them warm, speculating on various subjects connected with the approaching execution, telling comic anecdotes, and otherwise manifesting the deep impression made on their various minds by the solemnity of the scene.

The prisoners who are confined in the cells in the front court were by some means provided each with a piece of looking glass, by a dexterous use of which they could command a view of what was going on beneath them.

"The prisoner's mother came to the prison about 11 o'clock, to wait till her son should be executed and his body delivered over to the friends for burial. She was overcome with anguish, and required to be supported on either side by an officer. She was taken to the Matron's room, where she remained till all was over. In this room also were collected all his brothers and sisters, and a number of other of his immediate friends.

"Before the body was cut down, one of the brothers of the deceased, a red-bearded vicious looking Irishman, came into the court-yard and gazed unconcernedly at the dead body of his kinsman, looking on while it was cut down and the cap removed from the distorted face, and then crowded his way through the crowd into the room where the undertakers were placing the remains of the body in the coffin. His brutality was the subject of remark with every one.

Great efforts had been made to prevent the execution. The following are parts of a paper read to the Governor of the State to promote this object:—

"Within the last few years the knife has come to be an established—I had almost said a legalised—institution. Old, deliberate, malicious offenders have aimed stab after stab at the vitals of men whom they sought to destroy. They missed their aim by a hair's breadth, and the offended party has been suffered to withdraw his complaint, leaving the criminal still running loose on society. Nay, when regularly brought before judicial investigation the criminal is suffered to exculpate himself by the payment of a few paltry dollars. Those shameful proceedings in the Court are daily published in the newspapers. Boys read and draw conclusions. They think that that which is so lightly held by our tribunals cannot be such a heinous thing as they might otherwise believe it to be. Are we (society) guiltless?

"Let Rogers be punished—and already has his punishment exceeded a thousand sudden and torturing deaths. But if society is partly to blame—and who will say that it is guiltless?—let us stop short at shedding his blood. And let us from this moment, declare that no impunity, no compromise, no escape shall be permitted to those who use this murderous weapon.—State Prison in all cases for periods corresponding to the moral guilt of each case. Put down the traffic in those weapons, just as traffic in slug-shot is put down; rigidly enforce the laws against carrying them about on the person. Show that we are in earnest about putting an end to the institution, root and branch; and when we have done so, should desperate characters set us and the law at defiance, why hang them, if nothing else will do."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Dry children—Sawers & Murray.
Coffee ground—J. B. Dunn.
Hot Air.
Burning & Reward—F. Crow.
J. J. Marshall.
Boy Wanted—Examiner Office.
St. Andrew's Society—J. McArthur.
Lecture—John Harvey.
Found.
To the Municipal Electors—J. Stevenson

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, NOV. 20, 1856.

The Contest.

Since the public announcement by Mr. Stevenson, of his determination to ask the suffrages of the electors, to the chastisement of Mayor, effluvium of opinion kept very carefully aloof, respecting the merits of the two known candidates. Every body endorses the incendiary conduct of the Council which to this day offends the common sense of its public business, and the dangerous tendency of a coming man to the present head of the corporation. The fault, as imputed, rests with the current year, and by no means attributable to the contents of the books which the treasury of the town is to have. Dissolution of the Municipal Council, and the election of a new one, would not have changed the state of affairs. Nothing that can be done, or left undone, by the present Council, can affect the result of the election. The fault, as imputed, rests with the current year, and by no means attributable to the contents of the books which the treasury of the town is to have. Dissolution of the Municipal Council, and the election of a new one, would not have changed the state of affairs. Nothing that can be done, or left undone, by the present Council, can affect the result of the election. Many men are two siftings and compared at their proofs, there is a vote yet of two average and sequence in the period. In a railway line, running on Belleville for the past of two sections and the present in the period. The Mayor is about the same, and nearly resembling years, but not of the same kind of the present Council. The Mayor is about the same, and nearly resembling years, but not of the same kind of the present Council. The Mayor is about the same, and nearly resembling years, but not of the same kind of the present Council.

Mr. Stevenson is a gentleman of the highest character, and of the most unimpeachable integrity. He is a man of business habits, and of great experience in the management of public affairs. He is a man of the most liberal and enlightened views, and of the most generous and benevolent disposition. He is a man of the most unbending firmness of character, and of the most undaunted courage. He is a man of the most unbending firmness of character, and of the most undaunted courage. He is a man of the most unbending firmness of character, and of the most undaunted courage

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED
FROM
NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,
CONSISTING OF

TEAS, BYSONG old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGUO, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confect'rs,) Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arricas, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 6s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Burns, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Dozes, ½ do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (ease Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Palls; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.
Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &C.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE
COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.
SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 30 x 22 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Season Tickets of admission to the Eastern, (or Dusseldorf,) and Western Galleries of the Association.

There will also be given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable prizes of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Statuary, Bronzes, Parian Vases, Busts, &c., &c.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1st, 1860. On the evening of that day premiums will be awarded to subscribers, and the result published in the Art Journal. Parties wishing to subscribe, will please forward their names at once, stating in what part of the country they reside, and the Post Office address, to

JOHN BOSTON & Co.,
Publishers, 548 Broadway, N. Y.
Publishers' Agents, Rose & Co., Toronto, C. W.
Peterboro', Nov. 3, 1858. 44

DIARIES FOR 1859.

WE are now receiving our Stock of Diaries for the coming Year. Dealers and Customers will please call and examine our assortment, at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S,
Bookstore and Stationery, George Street.

Subscriptions received by R. S. Fenwick, Henry Kennedy, Peterboro'.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

CONSTITUTIONAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for FIVE DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for FIVE TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political Newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the GLOBE throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.
Toronto, Sept. 18, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.
Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels, Sheetings, Broad Cloths, Tweeds, Pilots, Satinettes, Damasks, Blankets, Shirtings, Cassimeres, Whitneys, Beavers, Erolles, Merinos, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats, Frock and Shooting Coats, Vests, Pants, Drawers, Shirts, Waterproof Coats, Leggins, and Caps.

And a general assortment of

GROCERIES

All of which they will offer at a great reduction for prompt pay. They would also call special attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT

of their business, where they are prepared to execute orders in the most fashionable Clothing, at the lowest scales, the best workmanship and material being used.

Peterboro', Nov. 3, 1858. BOSTON & Co.

INSURANCES.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS ON THE SPOT:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. C. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 31, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, GEO. DUNCAN, JR., Esq. J. S. HOWARD, Esq. WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. HON. J. H. CAMERON. CAPT. F. WALLACE, | E. F. WHITEHORNE, Esq. GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq. JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P., A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D. DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacJab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and successful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

THE BAR

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken in the selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 3-tf.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 230 acres, 60 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Stable, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 5, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 6, in the 4th Concession of the Township of Smith. The Farm is one of the best in the township, and possesses advantages not to be surpassed in the County, being well watered, and the Saw Mill [illegible] a good supply of running power.

For [illegible] apply on the premises to JOHN [illegible]
Peterboro', July 8, 1857.

Business Notices.

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Regents," Archbishops of the Scottish Dominion in Ireland and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', } 20
July 20, 1858. }

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter,

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.
Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

PIANO-FORTE FOR SALE.

THE undersigned being about to remove to Toronto, wishes to dispose of his splendid SEVEN OCTAVE STODART PIANO-FORTE.

H. HAACKE,
Peterboro', C. W. Nov. 17th, 1858. 45

PORTRAIT
OF THE
Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.

SPECIMEN

To be seen and orders received at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S
BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now onsale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S
Book and Stationery Store, George St.
PRICE 50 cents, or in Gilt Frame, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of

LITERATURE.

PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c.,&c.,

which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', October 6th, 1858. 39

NOTICE,

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Collector's Roll has been handed to me for the collection of the Taxes of 1858, and the time allowed for Collection is short, so the taxes must be paid on or before the

FIRST DAY OF DECEMBER.

I will be in attendance at my office in the Town Hall for the purpose of receiving the same from the hours of Nine o'clock, A. M., to Four o'clock P. M., and would be obliged to all persons concerned to save costs of a second call. The Rate is 2s 9d in the £, which any ratepayer can calculate at his leisure, and if there are errors in the Assessment, the Council is the only source of redress.

WILLIAM CUMMING,
Collector.
Peterb'oro', Nov. 2nd, 1858. 43-6in.

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 43

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security $300 or more. Apply at this Office.
December 25, 1857. 52-tf

HAT!

A FEW more [illegible] Hat, which will be sold [illegible]
Peterboro', November 11, 1858. 44

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OTONABEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Otonabee, situate on Rice Lake and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north of King street, containing 6 acres of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, $200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, } 21
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. }

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ November Number received, price 25 cts

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 19th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,
W. MOCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries, situated in the centre of the best business stand in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 23

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south [illegible] of Lot No. 6, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., consisting of 100 Acres: 63 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', Nov. 2nd 1858. 43tf

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth Sept. 10, 1858. 36

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE, AND CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 23, Letherwort-and, on the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor
Letherwort, Oct. 26, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining Our First Flour and Steamboat Building, having thereon three good buildings on it, the property is subject to any portion thereof. Those wishing to purchase by cash or note at short, will please call on the undersigned, by letter (post paid) or personally.

N. B.—It will be sold [illegible]
Peterboro' July 20, 1858. [illegible]

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 13, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has re-entered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY, he will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 17 1857. 2

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 5½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 6
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 6
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 5½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 5½
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated.....	0 6
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	0 4
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 11
5,50 ..	Punch.....	0 11
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	0 6
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	0 6
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	0 4
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	0 4
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	0 4
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	0 6
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly.....	0 6
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 5
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 5
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 5

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for		25c
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note " "	"	2
3 Steel Pens		1
1 Holder		1
1 Pencil		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper		1
Making a total of		1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cassbala," direct from China, an assortment of Gunpowder, Twankay,
S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth Sept. 10, 1858. 36

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE, AND CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 23, Letherwort-and, on the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor
Letherwort, Oct. 26, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining Our First Flour and Steamboat Building, having thereon three good buildings on it, the property is subject to any portion thereof. Those wishing to purchase by cash or note at short, will please call on the undersigned, by letter (post paid) or personally.

N. B.—It will be sold [illegible]
Peterboro' July 20, 1858. [illegible]

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Aimoth, Rev. Wm.—Lays from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bass's Descent of Hume, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 3 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,38
Do. Morning of Joy	0,63
Do. Story of Grace	0,50
Do. Truth and Error	0,63
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,63
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Burton's Four-Fold Estate	0,38
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,38
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 20 cts., plain	0,10
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,63
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,63
Dick, Dr.—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,38
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 320 pages	2,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City: Its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,60
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do. Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,38
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	2,00
Meatonth's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Light and Shadows of Scottish Life, Illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables, }
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will

DECIDED 1858

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND TIMES,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 47.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	10½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	8
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognised.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI. T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more moderate prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 24

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough, Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

DR. MOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Offices—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. H. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,
Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1858. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.,
New Books and Stationery Store,
23 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 3, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 10

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river Otonabee, where the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq., now stands. The buildings in connection to some degree will better the Quarry which has a face of the extent of the [illegible] of superior quality, and [illegible]

For further information, apply to
CHARLES A. STEWART.
Peterborough, July 7th, 1858. 32

[illegible]

The Mayor of Melbourne in Birmingham.

The Mayor of Melbourne was entertained at a banquet by the Mayor of Birmingham on Tuesday night. On rising to respond to the toast, "Prosperity to the British Colonies and our guest, the Mayor of Melbourne," the Mayor met with a most hearty reception, the cheering lasting some time. He said:—Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen, the manner in which you and this large assembly have honoured me, prevents my approaching the subject with anything like ordinary feelings. But probably no name could have been more fittingly associated with the toast of "The British Colonies" than my own, inasmuch as I have the honour to be a native of Australia.—You have glanced at what the Australian Colonies should be; but in saying what they ought to be, you have said what they really are. For what are they? They are simply the offspring of the British people. (Hear.) I claim to be a British subject, and I claim England as my country.—(Cheers.) In making this claim I believe that I only echo the sentiments of my Australian fellow-colonists. (Hear.) I am, as many of you are aware, a native of that country. My mother was a native before me; and therefore I must say that I am almost thorough-bred. (Laughter.) Be this as it may, we look at ourselves as part and parcel of England, as living under the English constitution; and though we are now only little banlings, yet we ask you to treat us as dutiful and loving children. We have not yet given you any men to fight your battles; you have not yet asked us for them; but I beg to say that if England was in danger to-morrow, there are more than a hundred thousand true British hearts in Australia who would rush to your assistance. (Much applause.) I say nothing of her gold, but I believe that if you required half her wealth to support your war, and maintain the character and honour of England, you would have it readily sent you. (Hear.) No man has been in a better position than myself for knowing the feelings of my fellow-colonists. Some years ago, when difficulties arose with regard to matters at the diggings, and the peace of my city was threatened—for I was then Mayor as I am now—the simple mention of the matter in the newspapers made more than 2,000 gentlemen come forward voluntarily and enroll themselves as special constables. I believe you misunderstood us, or you would have known us long since; and I would direct the attention of the British commercial world to one matter which has done much to deteriorate your interests. For the last four or five years, notwithstanding the large subsidy given by our Colonial Parliament to support a mail communication, a rapid, certain, and direct means of communication is still among the things of the future. The carelessness of England in this respect is felt deeply by your own flesh and blood in the Australian Colonies. I could tell you of numberless instances where mercantile men have had their character blasted as the result of the indifference manifested in this important matter. (Hear, hear.) Having had one or two interviews with gentlemen in office, I believe I may say that the present Government are alive to this, and that we may expect a better state of things ere long.—As to the progress of the Colony of Victoria, a few statistics will show you this better than any words of mine. As you are aware, our Colony is a very young one. When I first went to Melbourne from Sydney, twenty years ago, bricks and stones were unknown, there being only a few wattle and daub houses; but in 1851, the revenue of the corporation of the City had reached £85,000. The imports were in the same year £3,000,000, in 1856 they were within £1,000 of £15,000,000.—Their exports were in the year 1852 £6,000,000, in 1857 they were £11,000,000. The revenue of the Colony was in 1851, £400,000, in 1857 it was £2,900,000. Their expenditure in 1851 was £410,000, and in 1857 it had reached £3,250,000.—(Cheers.) We have in Melbourne a full-fledged Corporation—Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors. In 1843, when it was established, the revenue of that body was £1,500, in 1854 it was £75,000. They have now streets a mile long, paved with stone brought all the way from Scotland, and some of them will bear comparison with anything I have as yet seen in London.—(Cheers.) Why indeed should Englishmen degenerate wherever they go? I believe that Britain in establishing these Colonies is simply obeying the behest given to the first man, "Go forth and multiply and replenish the earth." Her rule is the most free of any; it is, in fact, the essence of liberty; and I believe that if ever there is a universal tongue, the English will be that tongue. [Cheers.] In Australia the Sabbath-day is well observed; indeed, we are quite Scotch in this particular. [Laughter.] As regards education, I may mention that our Legislature, of which I have the honor to be one, as member from Melbourne, last year devoted £2,000 to that purpose. [Cheers.] On this point Mr. Smith enlarged, and in conclusion went on to say, that when he got back to his own dear city, he should not fail to let the people of Melbourne know what a reception he had met with in Birmingham. He should do what he could for the trade of Birmingham in Melbourne; but he playfully cautioned the merchants and manufacturers present that Australia felt knew the difference between good creditable Birmingham stuff and that which in bygone days went by the name of Brummagem.

Several other toasts were proposed and responded to, and the company separated.—Birmingham Daily Post.

THE POLISH CELEBRATION AT BOSTON.—The Burns Club are making extensive preparations to celebrate the centennial day—their next January. The Bostonians of Burns always do such things up well. Gen. Cheever, of the Atlas, has a prominent part in making the arrangements. It is expected that there will be many eminent persons present, among them Mr. Everett, if the Boston don't exhaust him.

The Great Poisoning Case at Bradford.

From the London Daily News.

Those who deal in poisons may justly be required to keep their dangerous wares in a part of their shops or stores distinctly separated from anything likely to be used as food, or to find its way into the human stomach. They may reasonably be required to keep them in vessels of such shape and form as to call attention to their nature, and prevent mistake. Who, however whould have dreamt of the substitution of arsenic for plaster of Paris as likely to take place and be the cause of fatal accident? The possibility of such an event could only have occurred to one deeply versed in the adulteration of food and medicine. Plaster of Paris finds its way, and that in no inconsiderable quantities, into the unfortunate stomachs of lovers of sweetmeats. It is cheap, white and heavy; so lozenges and comfits, sugared almonds, and many other sweets, sold by weight, may have Plaster of Paris presenting itself as "alibi" for a portion of the white sugar which should be used in their manufacture, to the pecuniary advantage of the fraudulent maker. Cream of tartar, sulphur, and treacle is a famous household medicine. The sulphur used in this mixture is generally sold by the chemists under the name of flour of sulphur. To cheat the eye and pocket of the purchaser, the flour of sulphur mostly consists of equal parts of sulphur and plaster of Paris. While plaster of Paris is confined to its legitimate uses no danger could arise from its casual proximity to any poison, however like in appearance. Fraud and dishonesty alone create the danger. A chapter of accidents has just developed that particular combination of events likely to prove most fatal to human life. Arsenic substituted for plaster of Paris in the flour of sulphur might have caused two or three deaths, but its substitution in lozenges might multiply these fatal results by hundreds.

Mr. Neale, a wholesale confectioner in Bradford, proceeds in the ordinary way of trade to make a batch of peppermint lozenges. He must get his living honestly if he can; but if not, still he must get his living. He manufactures an article which will enable him to undersell the scrupulous tradesman, and yet withal make a goodly profit. We have before us a book of practical receipts, called American, but republished in London. For the honour of London, we are glad to find no publisher's name attached to it. This book with unblushing effrontery gives receipts for simulating or adulterating nearly every article which can be counterfeited or deteriorated. Under the head of "Best Peppermint Lozenges" we have receipts for four qualities below those of finest, fine, and good, the gradation in quality depending on the proportion of plaster of Paris to the sugar. After the fourth quality we are told that "a still commoner article may be made by using more plaster."

Honest Mr. Neale manufactured the "still commoner article," his proportions being 12 pounds of plaster to 40 pounds of sugar. Mr. Neale has a particular friend—Mr. Hodgson, a druggist—who supplies him with material for his trade. But he does not send to Mr. Hodgson and ask for 12 pounds of plaster of Paris. There are secrets in all trades. Mr. Neale might be recognized by a customer, who might wonder what the lozenge-maker could do with plaster of Paris. So, for convenience and secrecy, Mr. Neale and Mr. Hodgson have a private understanding. As the London Arab and pickpocket have their slang, these worthy tradesmen have a symbolical language of their own. Plaster of Paris is called "Daft" or "Alibi." The symbolism of the first term we are at a loss to divine—the latter savours somewhat of the Old Bailey.

Now comes the tragic part of our history. Mr. Hodgson is ill in bed, his shop left in charge of a raw apprentice, who has hardly left school three weeks. Mr. Neale's messenger asks for 12 pounds of "Daft." Ignorant of what "Daft" may be, not as yet initiated in the secrets and mysteries of trade, and that what is plaster for the Italian imageman has a convenient "alibi" for the lozenge-maker, he refers to his master. His master tells him to go into the cellar, into one of the corners of which he will find a cask containing a white power. Instead of one cask he finds two, neither labelled, both containing white powder: he takes from the wrong one, and serves Mr. Neale with arsenic!

This accident—one, however, produced by the combination of fraud, dishonesty, and gross carelessness—leads to a most tragic result. The poor ignorant apprentice is the innocent victim of faults not his own. The petty thief who steals your pocket-handkerchief, the guilty receiver who purchases the theft under the name of a "wipe," are in our eyes a fit parallel for the dishonest tradesman who fills the stomachs of poor children with plaster, and the druggist who countenances the fraud by christening his goods "daft" and "alibi." Mohammedan law would inflict a good bastinadoing. The two former, but the two latter would have their ears decorously nailed to their door-posts.

One Hardaker, a retail dealer, buys some thirty or forty pounds of the poisonous lozenges; retails them in the crowded market-place at Bradford. Every ounce of these horrible condiments contains sufficient poison to destroy a dozen human lives. The result may readily be anticipated. The victims who have died already number fifteen. About 170 more are dangerously ill.

This is no ordinary accident: it owes its origin to dishonesty. The practice of substituting plaster of Paris for white sugar in the manufacture by which a deadly poison has found its way into the stomachs of near 200 persons. Whatever may be the result of any legal investigation into the causes of this disastrous business—whatever the law may be able to punish or punish—enough has on the surface of the case to call for the indignant expression of every honest man's opinion. This wholesale dishonesty of man the removed from procuring want and hunger, is instead a special evil, of which calamities like this are only the physical symbol. Apprentices taught in the mystery of "daft" and "alibi" may speedily graduate in the school of dishonesty till they reach the climax of Waughs and Redpaths. But the adulterator of the poor man's food or luxuries should be held up to public scorn. The rich sufferer from dyspepsia, knowing that he has only to dissolve his peppermint lozenges in a little warm water to discover by the sediment whether they are dosed with plaster, may be careless. Yet Dives, with all his curious knowledge of "death in the pot," may be the victim of dishonesty. The same book which tells us how to make lozenges with plaster, and tint them with "smalts," or ground blue glass, has a receipt for choice port wine. It is so refreshing to an epicurean palate that we quote it: Cider, 80 gallons; elder wine, 20 gallons; damson wine, 25 gallons; red Cape, 15 gallons; brandy or silent spirit, 10 gallons; catechu, 6 ounces; red tartar, 9 ounces; cochineal, 1 ounce. Mix. The mixture will not be much more unwholesome than the plaster lozenges. But perhaps on the virtue of a bottle of wine, purchased with difficulty, the life of some poor fever patient may hang as on a thread. No man can tell what fruit a dishonest seed may bear when nurtured by the spirit of evil.

A Railroad Engine on its Travels,

THE MOST REMARKABLE LEAP ON RECORD.

From the Cincinnatti Gazette, Nov. 18.

One of the most remarkable incidents which we have been called upon to record of late, occurred at the depot of the Little Miami Railway yesterday morning.

About fifteen minutes before six o'clock the engine "Washington," belonging to the Marietta and Cincinnatti road, started down the track some half or three-quarters of a mile, for the purpose of bringing the empty cars to the depot preparatory to making up the 6.15 train, the engine being under control of a man employed about the yard, and not the regular engineer. About half a mile from the depot, the man in charge discovered an engine of the Little Miami road backing down to the depot for the purpose of taking out the morning tram for Cleveland. Fearing a collision, the person in charge of the Marietta engine reversed, and jumped from the machine. A minute after, the two engines came together, when the impetus given to the Marietta engine, together with the force of the reversed power, started it towards the depot with the velocity of a rocket. The down grade gave it additional headway, and it bounded along the track like a fiend incarnate belching forth fire and smoke to the distance of twenty or thirty feet from the track, and literally bounding from the iron rails, threatening destruction to everything that impeded its progress. Experienced judges of the speed of railway trains, who saw this engine on its lightning travels, say that it could not have been going at a less rate than seventy-five to one hundred miles an hour! Its final bringing up shows that their calculations could not have been far out of the way.

Upon the track in the depot the morning train, consisting of some four or five cars, had been made up, and about one hundred passengers had already taken their seats. On came the engine with the speed of a destructive whirlwind, directly upon the track leading to the train, until within four or five rods of the depot, when the fortunate accidental change of a switch, drove it upon the other track. Almost before the persons standing by could realize that an engine had entered one end of the depot, the iron steed had bounded through the entire length, demolished an eighteen inch thick brick wall, timbers and all, at the rear, leaped across two road tracks—one about ten feet below the other—without touching either, and embedded itself in a huge pile of coal in the yard of J. Cochnower! The distance leaped from the wall of the depot to the lamp of the engine, could not have been less than seventy-five feet! All this distance, through the demolished wall of the depot, it dragged the tender, loaded with wood, without breaking the coupling.

But for the fortunate change in the switch, which threw the engine upon the opposite track to that on which the Cleveland train was standing, the loss of life must have been terrible. The force which rent a brick wall, eighteen inches thick, for a circle of fifteen or twenty-five feet, would have smashed the cars upon the track, into fragments, and a fearful destruction of life and limb must have followed. Had the person in charge of the engine not become frightened and jumped when he reversed the machinery, the accident would have been avoided, and the fact enforces the necessity of permitting none but experienced men to handle machinery which possesses so much power. The regular engineer would have known that he was running upon the time which belonged to the Cleveland train, and would not have started out.

Christopher Benner, a car cleaner at the depot, was also on the "Washington," but jumped off after the engine got under good headway, and was very badly injured. He was the only person who was hurt. The engine and tender were damaged to the extent of some four or five thousand dollars.

DEATH OF A CONTEMPORARY OF BURNS.—Another of the contemporaries of Burns has been gathered to his fathers.—James Neil died recently at Hartford, aged ninety years. He had many reminiscences of the bard, which he was accustomed to relate with great glee. Amongst others we may mention the following:—They were playing together at a match on the Hartford's Paris here. Among the prizes was one for the best tiger thrown. Burns "excited the mirth of the field by appearing with a straw bottom, and the judge declined the prize for his ingenuity. Throughout the whole day Burns kept calling at the boy who ruled him—'Stand on! stand on! if we be weird, we'll no be lost.'"—Witness.

Prosecution of Count Montalembert.

From the London News, Nov. 3.

The treatment which Count Montalembert is now undergoing at the hands of the French Government, is not a topic to be lightly passed over by English journalism. It is not our habit, nor is it our duty to be incessantly snarling at the institutions under which a neighbouring and friendly nation is content to lie passive; nor are we disposed to pursue with injurious invectives, a foreign Power with which our own Government is associated in an intimate official alliance. We are too sensible of the responsibility which attaches to the functions of public writers in a free country to risk the imputation of rekindling, by an ill-considered phrase, extinguished animosities between two peoples divided only by a narrow slip of sea, and marching side by side to the great conquests of civilization. Profoundly divergent in all national characteristics, France and England, we are persuaded, are nevertheless destined to advance together in the coming time; and it is because we look beyond the clouds of the present to a brighter future that we seek for the signs of a more enduring alliance than an interchange of diplomatic courtesies and royal greetings. It is because that we are convinced that no alliance based on mutual disrespect and mutual distrust, tempered with undue concessions and unworthy compromises, can last longer than the expediency that created it, and became we hold it to be morally impossible that the public liberties of France should suffer a perpetual eclipse, that we desire to put on record an expression of ardent sympathy with the persecuted liberal party of France, and to assure them that all their regrets, sufferings, and aspirations awaken an instant echo here. Nihil a nobis alienum. When we hear of measures of violence directed against a man of blameless life and conduct, whose opinions are essentially moderate, whose motives cannot but be honourable, and whose principles are essentially "legal," we have a right, and it is our duty, to enquire into the nature of the offence with which he is charged.

Count Montalembert, it appears from the official announcement in the Moniteur, is charged in the first place with an attack against the principle of universal suffrage, and against the rights and authority which the Emperor holds from the constitution. Secondly, with an attack against the respect due to the laws. Thirdly, with exciting to hatred and contempt of the Emperor's Government. Fourthly and finally, with seeking to disturb public tranquillity by exciting the contempt and hatred of citizens one against the other.

Now, whatever we may think of the comparative heinousness of the first, or even of the third of these charges (in some degree, perhaps, a question of locality), we can have no hesitation in pronouncing the second and the fourth to be nothing less than an official paraphrase for treason and rebellion in their most aggravated forms. Any citizen of a civilized state proved to be guilty of an attack against the respect to the laws, and of wilful incitation to civil war, deserves the severest punishment that the law can inflict. We learn, however, to look upon the indictment, as it is framed by the Procureur Imperial, with altered feelings, when we remember that the same terms have been employed and the same articles of the same decree invoked on many former occasions, whether the accused was a member of the Marianne, a red republican terrorist, a combatant of February, a rebel of June, or a simple-minded reader of the published works of the prisoner of Ham. Now, to place M. de Montalembert, the sometime Peer of France, the present Academician, the great Conservative and Catholic orater of the National and Legislative Assemblies, in the same category with Socialist and Republican sectaries, is equally odious and absurd. But it enables us at a glance to measure the situation of public liberty and public spirit in a country where a man like M. de Montalembert is classed by the police with revolutionary demagogues.

Let us glance for a moment at the incriminated article itself, published as it is in a Review which includes among its dangerous contributors men like the Abbe Lacordaire and Count Beugnot; and what do we find on a careful reading of M. de Montalembert's report of "A Debate on India in the English Parliament" which can be strained even by the perverse docility of an Imperial Procureur into attack against the laws of France or provocation to civil war.

Count Montalembert came over to London in May, and, as was natural to an old Parliamentary athlete, he attended with zealous and persevering interest those great Indian debates in the Commons and the Lords which drove Lord Ellenborough from office and almost restored Lord Palmerston to power. The debates on Mr. Cardwell's motion especially interested him, and he gave a very lively summary of the principal speeches, and graphic sketches of the leading speakers. Resolved, moreover to be a Roman white at Rome, he rushed off to Epsom on a Derby Day, and watched the unsuccessful running of Theophilite with almost the fervor of a native. The description of the course, and of all its moving incidents, is done with a cordial zest and a hearty admiration of our Olympian games. Although the writer is certainly not by nature or inclination what in France they are good enough to call a "sportsman," M. de Montalembert is far more imperial in his criticisms of our public men as they appear in Parliament than we are disposed to be; he is evidently disarmed and charmed in all his appreciations; he has a good word for Lord Ellenborough and for Lord Palmerston (whose policy he vigorously went to attack on Ministerial explanations in days long past), for Mr. James Graham and for Mr. Gladstone, for Mr. Roebuck and Mr. Bright, though he probably [illegible]

Through the article, which opens with a panegyric of free and fearless trust, he speaks of England with avowed affection, and yet his affection for a country whose language and literature are as familiar to him as the language and literature of France, and whose freedom strikes him as at once a crushing and a saddening contrast, never blinds the conscientious clearness of his judgment. In a generous strain of eloquent warning and reproof, he implores us to rule India justly and temperately, and not to be over confident in our ancient prowess, or even in our "wooden walls," against enemies near home. He assures us we are not loved abroad, and not only are our liberty and stability envied, but our selfish and inconsistent policy in Europe is detested.

Turning to the Legitimatist and Ultramontane journals in France, he scourges with extreme severity the base ingratitude of men to whose ancestors England gave not only hospitality, but a pension, and recalls with loathing and disgust the savage exultation of the Univers and Gazette de France at the news of our terrible calamities last year. Every page of this admirable essay, we repeat, is stamped with the writer's enthusiastic regard for England as the home of freedom; and it is with painful astonishment that we learn from the Moniteur that a regard for England is considered by the French Government as an attack against the laws of France, and a provocation to civil war in the Empire.

Drowned.

It is our painful duty to record the death by drowning of two young men, natives of Belleville, on Wednesday evening, the 10th instant. E. B. BENSON and JAMES G. MOORE, left Belleville in a small skiff for Big Island or Mill Point, intending to return the next day, but when nearly opposite the mouth of Samon River, about a mile from Big Island, the boat is supposed to have been struck by a severe north-east squall, which sprung up about eight o'clock. Cries were heard from the shore for some time but the inhabitants thinking it came from some fishermen near by, paid no attention to them until it was too late. The cries being continued, Mr. Isaac Cole, after procuring assistance, which had to be sent some distance for, launched a boat and went out, the wind blowing almost a gale at the time, and found the boat capsized, with the bottom upwards. As only one voice was heard, it is supposed that he had held on until benumbed with cold, when he was washed off and sunk. Every exertion has been made to recover the bodies, but as yet without success.

On behalf of the relatives and friends of the deceased, we tender to the inhabitants of the Island in the vicinity where the sad accident occurred, their kindest thanks, for their hospitality and generous conduct to those who spent some days in seeking for the bodies of the unfortunate young men.—Belleville Intelligencer, Nov. 19*th.*

Arrival of the "Africa."

THE FRENCH IN COCHIN-CHINA

SPANISH EXPEDITION AGAINST MEXICO.

CHOLERA IN JAPAN.

New York, Nov. 26th, 1858.

The steamship Africa arrived at her dock at 9 o'clock this morning. She brings Liverpool and London dates of the 13th inst.

Fears are entertained at Liverpool concerning the safety of the steamship Indian Empire, which sailed hence Oct. 23rd for Galway, via Halifax, and from the latter port on the 28th.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Whitehouse, in a recent letter on the Atlantic Telegraph asserts that recent experiments have clearly demonstrated that the system of testing heretofore resorted to in to the last degree fallacious, and reiterates his belief that the fault in the Cable is at no great distance from the shore, and of such a nature as to admit of its being easily and speedily restored.

The submarine Telegraph Cable between Dover and Calais, has been repaired and was again in working order.

A deputation of official gentlemen from the British North American Provinces, including members of the Government of Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, had an official interview with Sir E. Bulwer Lytton, the Colonial Secretary.

Meetings in aid of the new Reform movement continue to be held in various parts of England.

The cotton factory of Geo. Grant & Sons, Glasgow, had been partially destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at £10,000.

The London correspondent of Le Nord says that the English Government have resolved to authorise the engagement of labourers for the French colonies among the coolies of India.

FRANCE.

The Emperor Napoleon had returned the compliment recently paid to him by Queen Victoria, having forwarded to her Majesty a 12-pounder howitzer, invented by himself. The piece bears the name of the Alliance.

The Paris correspondent of the London Globe says that Galway is about to be adopted by France as the outlet of her postal communication with North America, and that the Lever line will succeed in getting a large subsidy from the Emperor, the projected Havre line having withdrawn in favour of the Galway enterprise.

SPAIN.

The London Times in its City Article, says, according to a statement received from Madrid, the Spanish Government seem likely to order their fleet at Cadiz to proceed at once to Algiers on the matter in dispute between the two countries. Probably, the commissioners of the French Government, who are likewise reported to have sent additional ships of war to that point, to enforce, on its non-assessment, what it is said happens, that England has previous demands to enforce which will ensure her the support hitherto at least equal to that which may be extended to other cases. A telegraph from Madrid states that a Spanish fleet of eight steamers sailed from Cadiz on the 10th for Tangiers. It is added that the fleet have orders after the presenting of the demands of the Spanish Government upon Mexico, to scour the coast of Africa and destroy all vessels manned by the Riff Moors which may be found without regular papers, and treat them as pirates. Accounts from Cadiz state that the second portion of the reinforcements for Cuba was ready to sail at a moment's notice, completing the expedition to a force of 2,200 infantry, and 500 marines.

ITALY.

An opinion prevailed in Naples that the ports of that kingdom would shortly be opened for the free importation of corn, the crops having proved rather a failure, and prices being on the rise.

RUSSIA.

The St. Petersburgh Northern Bee publishes an account of the re-establishment of the relations between the Russian and Chinese on the 26th of August, at Schongoutschiken Koudga, in Western China, and the solemn inauguration of the Consular factory.

The rumour was circulating in Italy to the effect that the Emperor of Russia in order to make his maritime position at Villa Franca more effectual, desired to purchase the principality of Monaco, which is almost close to it. It is believed that a large offer would not be refused by the Prince of Monaco.

The Russian Ambassador to Japan had arrived at Marseilles with an advantageous treaty which he had succeeded in negotiating.

The emperor Alexander had addressed the nobility of Moscow in grave and severe terms, on the apathy they have displayed in reference to the abolition of serfdom.

TURKEY.

A telegraph from Beyrout announces that a general agitation was reigning in Asiatic Turkey. Insurrections had taken place at several places, and Omar Pacha was maintaining himself at Bagdad with difficulty. The tribes living between Tripoli and Aleppo had revolted. The communication was intercepted between Libanus and Tripoli, and between Alexandria and Aleppo. The garrison at Beyrout had been sent against the insurgents. The disorder in the Libanus had been appeased by the bishop.

INDIA.

Calcutta mails of Oct. 9th, reached London on the 12th inst., but could scarcely arrive in Liverpool in time for the Africa. The substance of the intelligence has already been given by telegraph. Lord Clyde had gone to Lucknow, and the Governor General was about to follow him.

Lord Elgin, after arranging the tariff at Shanghae, would proceed to Hong Kong.

Business dull at Canton. Teas firm. A large business done at Shanghae on American account in Green at full prices.

CHINA.

The last despatch received from China announces that Admiral Regnault, after having taken possession of the establishment at Turane, had immediately marched on the city of Hue, the capital of Cochin China, and of the entire empire of Annam. Details of the taking of Turane showed that the gunboats destroyed five forts in an hour. Turane had been declared French territory.

JAPAN.

Advices from Japan say the cholera was carrying off a great number of people. It was carried there, it is said, by an American man-of-war, which circumstance, it is said, has prejudiced the people against foreigners.

QUALIFICATION
Of Municipal Councillors and Police Trustees.

In order that it may be more generally known what is required by the Municipal Corporations Act, as qualifications of Mayors, Councillors, and Electors, we transcribe the most important sections concerning them:—

Section 70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, members of a Council, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the County within which the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, freehold or leasehold property rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment-Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars or leasehold to eight hundred dollars.

In Police Villages—Freehold or lease hold to four hundred dollars.

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to forty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to eighty dollars per annum.

In Towns—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum, or leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And in Cities—for Aldermen—Freehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to three hundred and twenty dollars per annum: and for Councillors—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum or Leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this Section, shall not include a term less than a Tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Section 78. No Judge of any Court of Civil Jurisdiction, no Gaoler, or Keeper of a House of Correction, no Officer of any Municipality, nor Bailiff of a Division Court, nor Sheriff's Officer, no Interpreter or Solicitor, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, or Township Councillor), and no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a Member of the Council of the Corporation.

ELECTORS.

Section 75. The Electors of every Municipality for which there is an assessment roll, and the Electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are natural-born or naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally rated on the last revised assessment-rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors and tenants.

Section 76. In Cities, Town and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the annual value following;

In Incorporated Villages—Twelve dollars;

In Towns—Twenty dollars; and

In Cities—Thirty Dollars.

Section 78. When a Municipality is divided into Wards or electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one Ward or electoral division; and if entitled to vote in the Ward in which he resides, he shall not be entitled to vote in any other Ward or electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act,

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated at an amount sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, then each of them shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deemed so rated.

UNITED STATES IMPORTS.—The imports into the United States during the fiscal year which closed with last June, were officially valued at $282,613,150, of which $16,274,496, consisted of specie and bullion and $61,044,779 of free goods, leaving but $202,393,975 as the officially estimated or invoiced value of the good that paid duty. This was a falling off from the preceding year of more than Ninety Millions of dollars in the estimated value of imports, that paid duty, and nearly eighty millions in the total value of imports, excluding specie. On the other side of the account, the total export of American produce was valued at $251,351,033,—more than half of it, or $131,386,661, consisting of raw cotton alone.—Foreign produce and merchandise, to the value of $20,660,241, were likewise exported, with coin and bullion to the value of $52,633,147—making the total estimated value of the exports, for the last fiscal year $224,644,421, or $42,031,271 more than the value of the imports. Allowing that $20,000,000 of this sum was required and appropriated to pay the interest, accruing on heavy indebtedness abroad, public and private, it would seem that the United States crawled out of debt to the tune of at least $22,000,000 during the last fiscal year.

☞ The first daily paper published in New York city was called The New York Daily Advertiser, and was published March 1, 1785, by Francis Child and Co., No. 17 Duke-street, one door from the Corner of Old Slip and Smith streets. Price four cents. The publication was continued under the same name until 1795. Messrs Child and Co. were materially assisted in founding the paper by Benjamin Franklin The New York Express is the direct successor of the Daily Advertiser.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. PAUL MORPHY.—The Committee appointed in New York to prepare a testimonial for presentation to Mr. Morphy, the American Chess champion have fixed upon the choice of a set of gold and silver chess-men, elaborately wrought, mounted on cornelian pedestals, and en suite panied with a richly-inlaid chess board. In addition to this, should the fund warrant it a commemorative medal will be struck, of which Mr. Morphy will receive a copy in gold, and each subscriber to the fund to the amount of $5, a copy in bronze.

ADDRESSES BY MISS MARSH.—During the week, says the Albion Advertiser, Miss Marsh authoress of "English Hearts and English Hands," "Memoir of Captain Vicars," &c., has been the guest of Robert Bruce, Esq., of Kennet, and has been delivering several addresses on religious subjects to delighted audiences. On Tuesday night, Miss Marsh addressed a crowd assembled at Kennet House, choosing as her subject the 15th chapter of Luke—the return of the younger son to his father's love. At a more private meeting at Kennet House on Wednesday afternoon, Miss Marsh gave interesting accounts of her work at Beckenham. On Thursday afternoon, she addressed a very numerous assemblage of the women and girls—workers of the Messrs Peto, Tilleseidey—in the school room belonging to those gentlemen. In the afternoon of the same day, a large female audience was addressed by Miss Marsh in the Free Church, Cheshunmede. All three addresses were characterized by a spirit of fervent piety, and were calculated to make a lasting and salutary impression on the minds of all who were privileged to listen to them.

THE YIELD OF GOLD IN AUSTRALIA.—From the first discovery of the gold-fields in Victoria up to the end of last year, the Government escorts had brought down to Melbourne 11,457,472 ounces of gold the value of which is estimated at $215,250,000. During the above period the total amount of revenue derived from the gold fields, in shape of the export duty, was nearly three millions sterling, and it would seem $21,500,000 had been expended [illegible] requiring funds from Melbourne to the Victorian gold fields.

Judges by Popular Election.

From the New York Daily Times.

In and about the time of the elections, it is somewhat difficult to get a hearing for any observations which do not calculate somebody's chances of something, and after having elected a Governor, put Douglas on the high road to the Presidency, "framed a platform," or "indorsed a standard-bearer," every one feels that to condescend to take precautions against having his throat cut or his pocket picked, would be attended with a certain loss of dignity. Two-thirds, for instance, of those in New York who think the comparative chances of Seward and Douglas of being elected in 1860 a subject of surpassing interest, would hardly turn on his heel to put an honest man or a good lawyer on the bench of one of the Courts of this city. And yet, astounding as the assertion may seem, it is of more importance to public morals and public happiness in this State, who it is who shall sit in our judgment seats for the next six years, than who shall occupy the White House for the next term. Everything in the country is of secondary importance to the Judiciary. Congress sits, and Presidents are elected, and armies march and fleets sail, simply that Judges may be enabled to decide rightfully, without fear or favor. The whole machinery of Governments, however ponderous it may be, exists, or ought to exist, in every State, as Sydney Smith wittily said, for the simple purpose of getting twelve honest men into the jury box. Civil society is formed simply that we may not have to collect our debts by inflicting corporeal punishment on our debtors, or to carry a musket on our shoulders all day, in self-defence. If these objects are not achieved, the President is a farce, and the Senate a debating club. If A cannot be made to pay us what he owes us, and if B may beat us with impunity whenever he sees us in the street, we do not care a straw who gets the Charleston nomination, or what side the Anti-Lecompton Democrats take at next election. Any interest we take in the matter, or any one takes in it, is due to each man's anxiety to have his liberty unshackled, and his property secure. Even the sentiment of patriotism, powerful as it is, and much as it may be roused to perform, is based on this lower, grosser, but most natural feeling. Where there is no security, there is no love of country. When we say we love our country, we mean we love that state of things in which we eat and drink, and labor, and trade, and travel, and speak in peace. If we were satisfied that Mulligan might pummel us whenever he pleased, or that Devlin could always fleece our earnings from us, we should become citizens of the world, and be as content, barring the beat and the fines, in having our lot pitched in Oude as in New York.

We think ourselves happier than either Turk or Russian, because we do not happen to have an absolute Prince reigning at Albany; but in point of fact we have hardly a Judge on the Bench who does not inflict on us the sorest curse of tyranny, in infusing uncertainty into the law, throwing doubt over all rights, and over all the remedies for our wrongs. We have in the State of New York about fifty Judges, and certainly every four Judges, or those of each District, without counting the Recorder, City Judge, or those of the Superior Court, are in the habit every term of their Court of pronouncing decisions which are either not law at all, or are different from the law in other Districts. In this city even, there is one law in the Superior Court, another in the Supreme Court, and another in the Common Pleas, besides Judge Russell's law, which in many respects is more remarkable than any. We do not mean to institute an invidious comparison, but we state a fact. There is such a variance in the decisions in each District and in each Court, that it amounts to an almost absolute substitution of the discretion of the Judge for both the common law and the statute. The consequence is that every case of any importance has to be carried to the Court of Appeals in order to get a final and satisfactory decision. But as all cases go to the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court and all others, ponderous machines though they be, are thus degraded into the humble position of referees for the taking of evidence. If the suitor is rich and courageous enough to appeal, he has to wait two years, and justice is thus delayed; if he cannot appeal, he feels that justice is denied him.

The common law has always, both here and in its birth-place, been considered a vague and uncertain thing. It was necessarily so in the beginning, for the simple reason that it was but oral tradition. It was reduced to a system, and principles framed out of it, by a series of able judges administering it for some hundreds of years. By strict adherence to precedent—one of the objections to it, its uncertainty, lost a great part of its force. To have to look for it in hundreds of volumes of reports is, no doubt, a great evil; but to have it lodged in the hands of some score of judges, each judging on his own responsibility, and without any respect for his predecessors, and without paying any attention to his colleagues, is a worse evil still. In England, though there are four courts, all of which weigh heavily on mankind, there is sufficient uniformity in the decisions, and consequently sufficient clearness in the law, to make most people satisfied with one trial. The cases which are carried to the House of Lords are few in number. The reasons are obvious. All the judges of the English Court are men who, when they were at the bar, were in the front ranks of the profession. They were appointed because they had the largest practice and did it the best. A judgeship in the ordinary reward to which a successful lawyer looks forward. He works hard in his early years, not that he may at last own a corner house and lot alone, but that he may have a seat on the Bench. Those who know nay thing of the bar here, know what sort of value a first-rate lawyer places on a Judgeship. If Charles O'Conor, Daniel Lord or Dudley Field were at the English bar, they would be sitting in ermine at Westminster and very proud of it. Here they would scorn such promotion. The result is, that the law is administered by men who have hardly got hold of its principles, who have but few clients, and, consequently, little experience, and whose minds have not received a legal training. They administer justice after their fashion, but their fashion is deplorably bad. The Supreme Court of this district has, three times within the last year, attempted to convict a murderer in a very plain case, and every time blundered grossly, and failed miserably. Almost every serious offence is tried twice, at least, owing to the erroneous ruling of the judges on minor points of law. It may be safely said that there is hardly a man on the bench who can conduct a long trial, either civil or criminal, with even fair accuracy. Look at Cagdeen's case; look at Rodgers' case; look at the Willis examination two days ago; look at the Hudson Railroad case; look at the Lowber case; look at all the complaints of the last twelve months—the hopeless mistakes of ignorance and stupidity and chicane which they display.

Some people lay the blame of all this on the law itself, and fancy we should be all right if we only had a good code, like that of France. There never was a greater mistake. There could be no code framed out [illegible] expression. Able lawyers, interpreting in the light of great principles, would, no doubt, make their commentaries as luminous and consistent as the text; but four small politicaggers, elected to the bench by political wire-pullers, sitting in each of eight districts, with two extra courts in the capital, would, aided by Judge Russell, turn the best code that human skill could devise into an engine for the confusion of the simple, and the aid of the knavish.

What we want is certainty. Certainty cannot be had while there are ten courts of equal jurisdiction, composed of lawyers who did not succeed very well at the bar. We do not care even so much for good laws as clear laws—laws we can understand and rely on. The present system is a close approach to wager of battle, or ordeal. As a general rule, litigants might almost as well toss up as plead.

Arrival of the "North Briton."

MORE NEWS FROM INDIA.

REBELS DESTROYED IN GREAT NUMBERS.

THE IONIAN QUESTION.

COLONEL TACHE KNIGHTED.

Portland, Nov. 29.

The steamer North Briton from Liverpool on the 17th, arrived at this port at 8 a. m. on the 28th, being ten and a half days' passage.

No news of the Indian Empire.

Heavy easterly gales had prevailed around the English coast. Numerous marine disasters with loss of life, are reported. The French mail steamer at Dover, broke from her moorings. She had run over to Boulogne for safety, without mails or pas- No American vessels among the sufferers.

Some anxiety is felt for the ship Agincourt, 118 days out from Melbourne, with 283,000 oz. of gold. Five guineas per cent is asked for insurance

The London Times in an article on the Atlantic cable, says—"Should any improvement take place when the shore end is fully added on, there are many who profess themselves confident of working through the wire for sometime to come at least. Foremost amongst those who express this opinion is Professor Hughes, whose printing telegraph is extensively used in the United States, and which will also in the course of a few weeks more be introduced into Australia to work through the first submarine telegraph in that colony, between Tasmania and Melbourne. Hughes affirms himself confident of being able, even now, to signal through the Atlantic cable, and in anxious to conduct all experiments upon the wire at his own expenses. The Atlantic Telegraph Company on the other hand say they have no disinclination to permit Hughes to try his skill; yet strange to say, though both parties are willing, nothing is done. Now however that the matter is made public, Hughes may feel bound to press his offer, and the Atlantic Company, in fairness and in duty to the shareholders, will perhaps see the necessity of at once accepting a liberal proposal which, whichever way it results, can do them or their cable no injury, but may possibly be of immense benefit." The Times then proceeds to explain Hughes' system and its obvious advantages and says his offer should be followed by actual tests, and the sooner the better.

Parliament is further prorogued to January 13th.

The Prince of Wales started on the 17th to visit his sister and the Court at Berlin.

Col. Tache, ex-premier of Canada, had been presented to the Queen, and received the honour of knighthood.

A project has been started by the British Government of the Ionian Isles of ceding five of the Islands to Greece, which was received with marked disfavour by the French Ministerial journals.

FRANCE.

A commissioner from the French ministerial departments was to be named to fix the indemnity from Portugal in the Charles et Georges affair.

Paris papers are instructed not to publish extracts from the King of Portugal's speeches on the opening of the Chambers.

Montalembert's trial was postponed until November the 24th.

Several Jews have been appointed members of the Council in Algeria, in order to show that France recognises religious equality.

PORTUGAL.

At the opening of the Cortes, the King spoke as follows on the recent dispute with France.

"Friendly relations have not since last session been interrupted with the nations with whom we are allied. A serious misunderstanding, however, arose between my government and his Majesty the Emperor of the French in consequence of the capture of the French ship Charles et Georges in the waters of the Mozambique. The question being taken from the field of right in which my government sought to maintain it, my government having exhausted the resources in which the letter of treaties authorises it to have confidence, it was obliged to accede to the peremptory exaction of the delivery of the vessel and liberation of the Captain. All documents relating to this deplorable conflict will shortly be laid before you, and upon their examination, I hope you will approve the proceedings of my government, and relieve it from the responsibility it was forced to incur.

AUSTRIA

The Austrian Government has received notification from Russia of its intention to terminate the treaty of commerce made between the two countries, in 1846.

INDIA.

The Bombay mail of Oct. 26th, reached Suez on the 8th of Oct.

Several scattering encounters with the rebels are reported, but nothing important. Several actions had been fought near Lucknow. The rebels were destroyed in great numbers. The health of the British troops is very satisfactory. Tantra Topee retreated from Eanapo, first setting the town on fire, and entered Chanderee on the 9th of October. A portion of his forces were afterwards encountered by General Michael, and were entirely routed, with the loss of all their guns.

The plan of the campaign which was about to commence, shows that Lord Clyde intends to surround and destroy, as a military force, the scattered bands of rebels.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

London, Nov. 17.

The question of the Ionian Islands appears likely to assume considerable importance in the estimation of the Paris journals. The Patrie says England can especially reassure the pacific[illegible] which the treaties of 1815 have given her over the Ionian Republic, but she must abdicate. Strictly she cannot say to the Ionians,—"I retain a part of your territory, because it is convenient to me." England, the jealous protectress of the liberty of the blacks, cannot affect a free people from the map without the sanction of all the contracting powers of 1815.

Prince Napoleon, in proposing to the Emperor the nomination of the persons of the Jewish religion as members of the Council General in Algeria, says,—"The measure proposed is in conformity with the principles of religious toleration; and in consequence of the numerous modes of worship performed in Algeria, it is useful and opportune to manifest by an act of your Government, that, in the eye of your laws, all creeds are absolutely and completely equal.

Arrival of the "Europa."

GREAT STORMS ON THE ENGLISH COAST.

HON. F. BRUCE FIRST AMBASSADOR TO PEKIN.

MORE FRENCH TROOPS TO COCHIN CHINA.

Palmerston and Clarendon on a Visit to Napoleon, &c.

Halifax, Nov. 29.

The royal mail steamship Europa, from Liverpool at nine o'clock on the morning of the 20th inst., arrived at Halifax at two o'clock this day.

The Government had sent two steamsloops to the Chops of the Channel to relieve vessels in distress.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament has been further prorogued until the 13th of January; but it was expected that the session would not commence until about the 3rd February.

Hon. F. Bruce, brother of Lord Elgin, has been appointed first British Ambassador to Pekin. Mr. Bruce was secretary of Lord Elgin's embassy, and was attached to Lord Ashburton's special mission to Washington in 1842.

Robert Owen, the religious and social writer, had died, in the 88th year of his age.

Another attempt at assassination is reported in Ireland. A magistrate, named Gason, was fired at near Nenagh by a discharged employee, but escaped without material injury.

The London Gazette contains a notice of application for a charter for the Bank of British Columbia and Vancouver's Island.

The 300th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne had been celebrated with Protestant demonstrations in various parts of England. The Bishop of London delivered a lengthy primary charge to about a thousand clergymen of his diocese, at St. Paul's. He condemned the practice of the confessional.

The Great Eastern Ship Company has been duly organized. The Great Eastern is to cost the new company £160,000, and £140,000 more is the estimated amount required to finish her.

London, Saturday 20th, A.M.

The Times' city article of last evening says, English funds opened steadily this morning at the firm prices of yesterday, and remained without much change, although there was a disposition to dullness at the close, in consequence of quotations from Paris being slightly less favourable. The abundance of money increases, and transactions have taken place in the discount market at 2¼ per cent. In foreign exchange this p.m. there was a slight decline in rates on Vienna and Trieste On other places they were about the same as at last post. £400,000 in gold arrived to-day from St. Petersburg, and a further similar amount is expected. The whole has been sold for exportation.

FRANCE.

A special decree in yesterday's Moniteur establishes a special Bank, charged with the service of Treasury to the great public works of the city, and which will be entitled the Bank Works of Paris.

Reinforcements of French troops have been ordered to Cochin China in consequence of resistance being organized in the interior. Artillery was to be sent as well as infantry, that sent by Spain from Manilla being insufficient. A Brigadier-General is also to go out.

A commission to consider the question of negro emigration has been nominated, and consists of 17 members M. Persigny is President.

Prince Napoleon has issued a decree relieving the press in Algiers from certain offensive additions to the law of the press in France, and placing them upon the same footing as the French journals.

The Moniteur contains a decree obliging all bakers in certain towns to keep in reserve sufficient stock to supply their manufacturing wants in bread during at least three months.

Lords Palmerston and Clarendon were on a visit to the emperor at Campiegne.

Funds were slightly firmer to-day at 3 per cent; closed at 74 to 85.

ITALY.

A telegraph from Milan states that a new loan of military conscription was producing considerable effervescence.

Letters from Rome assert that all the great Catholic powers had addressed remonstrances to the Pope, for the release of the Jewish boy, Mortara. The Pope had replied that the boy's return to his parents was impossible.

INDIA.

Bombay mail of 25th October had reached England. Details of news quite unimportant. The Bombay market was easy.

The ex King of Delhi had been sent to Calcutta under escort.

The proclamation in which the British Crown assumes direct dominion over India, was expected to be promulgated on the 4th of November. Great preparations were making to celebrate the event.

An explosion occurred at Kurrachee arsenal, as some fireworks were being prepared, and four men were killed. The whole of the rifle and musket ammunition, amounting to a million of pounds, was destroyed.

MARKETS.

Liverpool Breadstuffs.—R. Spence & Co. quote flour very dull, but steady. Western Canal, 20s; Ohio, 22s to 24s. Wheat quiet, but steady; red Western, 6s 6d to 6s 7d; white do. 6s to 6s 3d; white Southern, 6s 9d to 7s. Corn very dull, and quotations nominal; mixed 28s; yellow 29s; white 32s.

London Markets.—Baring Bros. quote breadstuffs quiet and unchanged. White wheat 6ds; red, 5ds to 6ds. Flour, 22s to 23s. Sugar opened quiet, but closed buoyant, and slightly higher. Coffee quiet. Tea do.

London Money Market. Consols were quoted and closed on Friday at 90¼ to 90¾ for money and ——. Bullion in the Bank of England had increased £126,000.

Mr. Andrew Dickson, late Penitentiary Inspector, left Kingston about ten days ago in charge of some forty juvenile offenders from that Institution, for the purpose of establishing the Reformatory Prison at Isle-aux-Noix, to the charge of which he has been appointed.

Australia.

We give the following extracts from the Melbourne Argus, of August 16:—

THE GOLD-FIELDS.

Pending the introduction of the new system of mining which the granting of leases to miners and mining companies will bring into operation, the gold fields are contributing an average yield which will bear comparison with the first periods of previous years.

Three nuggets of the aggregate value of £14,000 are now being exhibited in Melbourne, previous to being shipped. These were taken out in the Ballarat district, and are about to be shipped to London. They are respectively named the "Welcome," the "Little Welcome," and the "Nil desperandum." The first-named specimen of pure gold weighs over 2,100 ounces, and is of angular form, far eclipsing the glories of the once celebrated "Blanche Barkly" nugget.

LABOUR IN VICTORIA.

The labour market is still in an unsatisfactory state. As yet the expected improvement is only prospective. Many of the laborers and mechanics now seeking employment are unable to obtain it without much loss of time, and until the railway works are carried on with vigour, we can scarcely expect to see the Town cleared of the unemployed. Since it was first found that capital was required in mining—that more than a pick and shovel was needed to ensure success in the search for gold, too many men have become dependent on public works for employment, and their numbers have during the last two or three years been rapidly augmenting. Hence the commencement of a national scheme of railways has been looked for as the great panacea, indeed the only remedy for what was allowed to be a growing evil. This feeling was naturally prevalent among the working classes, and no sooner was the railways, or rather one of them commenced than men began to flock into Town from all parts of the country, and even from the adjoining Colonies. The works have not been commenced on a scale of magnitude that will allow of the employment of a tenth part of the men applying and so the disappointment has been great; while those who have been fortunate enough to be taken on are treated with but little consideration, and receive less pay than was expected. As long as the contractors see hundreds of men waiting to fill up any opening that may chance to occur they little care how many leave their service in disgust; but this we believe to be a short-sighted policy on their part, for the present state of things cannot long continue.

Such is the actual state of the labour market at the moment, but there must before long be a change for the better. The second national line of railway is to be commenced this week, and will afford employment to a considerable number of persons who are now idle. On the northern line, also, the contractors must soon take on more men and extend their operations, if they wish to evince the inclination or ability to have the works completed within the given time. They have as yet on the line only about a fifth of the number that must be constantly employed to advance the construction with the speed required by the terms of their contract. Then, in the several branches of productive industry there must shortly be a demand for more labour. On the gold-fields many parties and companies are only waiting for the issue of leases to erect machinery and commence mining and the washing of alluvial earth in a manner calculated to afford employment to a much larger number of men than can, under the present desultory system of working, find occupation on the same extent of ground, and with far greater certainty of success. The leasing regulations have been long delayed, but they will shortly be promulgated, and the inauguration of the new system will give much work to mechanics of all kinds, as well as to the working miners and labourers on hire. The shearing season is also approaching rapidly; so that, with these several outlets for the absorption of the present superfluity, we may fairly hope to have a more satisfactory state of the labor market to report next month.

AGRICULTURE.

Some time since fears of a deficiency in the crops of the current year were entertained by a few alarmists among the farmers, and professedly shared in by persons desirous of a rise in the price of grain; but these have now quite passed away. The autumn and early winter were very dry in some parts of the country, and some of the early-sown seed did not vegetate. The hardness of the ground in many places also prevented the ploughing of stiff soils for a time. Altogether, these gloomy prognostications were not without some show of reason, and had considerable effect on those unaware by experience of the rapidity with which growing crops in this country make up for a month or two when a favourable change of weather does take place. Abundance of rain has fallen at different times of late, and all parts have now been visited with a copious supply, so that if the remainder of the season is at all propitious, we may well look forward to at least an average harvest. In many districts the crops already promise well, and in all they are sufficiently advanced and promising enough to justify this expectation

Although this is the dullest season of the year in regard to agricultural affairs, the farmers have not been without objects of interest, apart from home operations, to occupy their attention. Next month is to be held the first meeting of the Council, out of which is to spring, in some form as yet undefined, the Board of Agriculture, with its appropriate department; and representatives have to be chosen, and the whole subject discussed. Then the several long-established societies appeared to be animated with new vigour, and the younger ones through the country to be emulous of the good examples before them, this accession of spirit being doubtless caused by the distribution of the Parliamentary grant in aid, which has placed their finances in a most prosperous condition. As a natural consequence of this ability, coupled with the inclination to launch out in a little beneficial extravagance, ploughing-matches have been very numerous this winter. Those held by the Port Philip Farmers' Society in the different districts around Melbourne were terminated for this season on Wednesday last, in the Royal Park, by a final trial of skill among the prize ploughmen of the year, for a silver Challenge Cup of considerable value. The day was one of the most wet and stormy experienced this winter; but the Governor had promised to present the cup to the winner, and was on the ground at the proper time, undeterred by the wind and rain, which had the effect of making the attendance very select, keeping away all except a few of the most enthusiastic among the neighbouring farmers.—The cup was competed for by five of the crack men, who had to do their work under the most adverse circumstances. Two of them were, however, well rewarded for their day's exertion—one with the cup and the honour of being the best ploughman of the year, the other with a handsome well-finished plough, made for the purpose, and given by one of our Colonial manufacturers as a second prize. After the match several of the ploughs in the field were tested by a dynamometer belonging to the Society, this being the first occasion on which such an instrument has been used here. Although quite new, its working parts not being sufficiently worn or polished to reduce the friction to a minimum, a colonial-made wheel-plough, of a newly improved pattern, came within a few pounds of the lightest draught registered by the best of the English ploughs, was equal to one of Barrowman's, in much better order for such a trial, and was far before some of the ploughs by much-esteemed English makers.

The prize lists for the Spring shows of stock and implements are now before the public, and contain the usual proportion of annual additions to the previously offered inducements to competition. These are looked for as a matter of course. Societies merely holding their own from year to year without an evident degree of progress, would not be recognised as fit to lead the way, or hold the position of advanced guards to a body growing as rapidly in numbers and importance as that of our agriculturists. The first of these shows in point of time, and also the one of most general interest, will be the Port Philip Farmers' Society's exhibition, This is to be held at Melbourne in about six weeks from the present date, and promises to surpass the display of last year as much as that did the exhibition of the year previous. During the past twelvemonths many valuable animals have been imported from England, and, of course, the number of Colonial thorough-bred stock is annually increasing. In the mechanical department, also, there has been no lack of spirit, and we may fairly expect the exposition of both English and Colonial-made implements and machinery far to exceed both in quantity and quality the collection of last year. Next will come the Geelong Society's exhibition, and then, at different periods of the summer, those of the other societies through the country. A project is also on foot among a few of the principal breeders of stock in the interior to get up an autumn exhibition in some central locality more within their reach than either Melbourne or Geelong. The distance at which many of our improving settlers reside from these towns is too great to allow of their stock being sent forward for exhibition, in the absence of facilities for communication; and spring is not a season at which their most valuable animals can be spared from home. So well has the project been received among the stockowners, that it is likely to eventuate not only in the getting up of one show, but in the foundation of a series of annual exhibitions of stock of a national character, to be held successively in different central localities, like those of the National Societies of England and America.

THE AUSTRALIAN DESERT—SAD FATE OF MR. COULTHARD.

A letter from Mr. Babbage, dated June 16, describes the finding of Mr. Coultlard's remains. The body of the unfortunate man lay under a scrub bush, and at a short distance from him his canteen and other bush accoutrements. Upon one side of that canteen is scratched with a nail or some other sharp-pointed instrument the following inscription:—"I never reached water I do not know how long it is since it is that I left Scott and Brooks but I think it Monday bleeding pomp to leire of his blood I took his horse back to look for water and the last thing I can rember is pulling the saddle off him & letting him go until now is not good I am not th shure how long it may be wether 2 or 3 days I do not know My tung is stkig to my mouth & I see what I have rote I know it is this is the last time I may have of expressing feeling alive and the feeling exhu is lost for want of water My ey dasels My tongue burn I can see no more God Help." Major Warburton has also returned to Adelaide from his exploring tour, but he does not seem to have been more successful.

Mr. John Bright.

(From the Times.)

Mr. Bright is an apostle, and every speech he makes is a proclamation of his faith. He must accordingly be judged by rules different from those applied to ordinary politicians. We feel that it is best to consider him as a political Antinomian, as one whose spiritual and intellectual state are such that he disregards, perhaps unconsciously, all by which the usual run of orators are bound. Religious enthusiasts are fond of telling those who argue with them that acquiescence and mental subjection are necessary to the perception of truth. "Only determine to believe," say those reasoners, "steadfastly shut out every doubt, and in time you will come to feel the truth and beauty of our system, as we feel it." This argument, which the Catholic and the Methodist, the Mahomedan quietest and the Hindoo ecstatic, urge with equal sincerity, must in some degree have its counterpart in Mr. Bright's mind. "Men are saved by economy," is the one article of his creed. National extravagance is the sin which is carrying every man, woman and child, not only in these islands, but in every region of the Continent, to destruction. Mr. Bright has ever before his eyes the spectacle of a doomed race. When he wakes in the morning he remembers that so many thousand pounds have become due to the fundholder, so many thousands more have been spent at Aldershott and Portsmouth since he has left his couch. His warm water, he reflects, has been boiled by the victim of a spendthrift Legislature, his boots have been polished by a perverted to the opinions of a bloodthirsty press. That cry in the street is from an overtaxed costermonger, that rattle is from the wheel of an unrepresented Ishmaelite. Even inanimate objects acquire in his sight a hideous vitality. Each successive article of apparel suggests the amount raised on taxable fabrics by the Five Great Powers, and a cup of tea almost chokes him with the recollection that he is helping to support the Channel Fleet. When he takes his walks abroad he sees everywhere pauperism actual or predestined. That old man's tattered coat might have been a whole one but for the Waldersee expenditure; that old woman who is munching bacon on the doorstep might have been dining on beef in a parlor but for the crowning victory of Waterloo. If a cobbler's stall comes in sight Mr. Bright reflects that the man might have been a shoemaker but for the Budget of 1857; if a shoemaker's shop, Mr. Bright asks himself whether the owner will not be reduced to cobbling by the Budget of 1860. A group of children suggest nothing but the imposts on their future consumption. Mr. Bright sees the little victims play regardless of their doom, while all around them wait assessors and preapers, and mutual revenue clerks, and blue-bedecked young Whig secretaries, and all the painful family of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. "Ah! tell them they are taxpayers," exclaims he to himself as their merry shouts die away in the distance. This it is indeed which grieves the member for Birmingham. All these doomed people are ignorant of their fate. They marry and are given in marriage, they plant and build, they go to bed and rise up in peace, without a thought of the desolation which is to come. An early Christian who watched the Roman populace pouring forth to the amphitheatre to sacrifice to demons and look on bloody spectacles could not view with deeper compassion and horror their moral darkness than does Mr. Bright the economical paganism of his countrymen. And he denounces the world and its wicked ones with all the fiery zeal of a Tertullian. This singleness of idea is the secret of Mr. Bright's energy and passion—his disregard of facts, his obstinacy in preaching the same doctrines in season and out of season, his inability to coalesce with any practical statesman, and the tone of acrimony and invective which leads so many to confound him with the common tribe of Radical declaimers. The member for Birmingham is not a demagogue if by a demagogue is meant one who appeals to popular prejudices and passions for the satisfaction of his own ambition. He is the prophet of a faith which if true will prevail, and if false will fall, carrying with it his own reputation for all but mere rhetorical power. But whether true or false, Mr. Bright believes in it, and preaches it boldly to Birmingham, whether Birmingham will receive it or not.

For these reasons we think it unnecessary to follow the speaker into details. The most ordinary disciple of the late Mr. Croker could tear to pieces the speech we print this evening, and jibbet the remains with the usual irony of capitals, italics, and notes of admiration. This is the treatment Mr. Bright will doubtless meet with in many quarters, but we have no desire to point out what everybody sees, or explain what no one can misapprehend. Thus, when Mr. Bright asserts that wars are entered into to keep up a system of out-door relief for the aristocracy it would be useless to ask whether he believes that any peer has been a personal gainer by the Russian war or the Chinese war, and whether members of the House of Lords have not like other people, paid far more in taxes than they have gained by the promotion of their relatives. We recognize that the speaker is possessed by the holy rage of his theme, and that the stubbornest facts are fused by the glowing heat of his imagination. The great question for us is whether Mr. Bright's theory of external policy is a true one, and whether it is unlawful for a State to develope its power abroad or take a part in the concerns of other nations at the cost of certain sums of money. Of course, there are many who would go a great way with Mr. Bright on the economical question. We may be spending too much money, we may be inclined to too much Continental interference; our army and navy may be extravagantly administered; but the persons merely holding these opinions are to Mr. Bright neither hot nor cold, and fit only to be execrated. He finds that from the days of William III. we have been pursuing an aggressive and reckless course—his ideally perfect England existed under the Tudors, when Spain and Turkey were the leading Empires, and England was just learning to feel its nationality; or under the Stuarts, when religious and political struggles absorbed all the energies of the people.—Since those days—in fact ever since the country has through internal quiet and good government been able to take a place among nations—we have, it seems, been carrying on aggressions against every people under Heaven. Well! it must be owned that Englishmen have gone out from their narrow island and established themselves in other lands often against the wish of the inhabitants; but Mr. Bright is mistaken if he thinks that in any age of the world Colonies were ever founded without some display of force, and some invasion of indigenous rights. He cites the United States, whose trade is so valuable to us, as a proof of the advantages of personal intercourse, but he omits to state that the foundations of those settlements which are now the States were laid amid constant warfare. Where are the red men? Did they all peaceably leave their hunting-grounds? Have there been no wars with Mohawks and Delawares in one part of the country, with Chocktawas and Creeks in another? Did not the saints of the 17th century rejoice in their beds when they had smitten the Indians of Massachusetts and Connecticut? In fact, to the aggressiveness and the absence of peace principles which marked our emigrants two centuries ago we owe the existence of that great Republic which furnishes Mr. Bright with so many examples and arguments. Nor were European wars wholly without a part in building up the fabric of American nationality. Only the spirit of England in resisting the French plan of uniting Canada with Louisiana by a chain of forts prevented the Colonies from being strangled before they gained their maturity. So that national and warlike impulses have had their full share in creating our best customers and our most perfect models. Then there are Canada and the North American provinces, conquered from the French. Mr. Bright says they had never paid the expenses of their capture. As this is a question of fact we may be allowed to differ from him, and say that they have paid them ten times over. Colonization following upon conquest has created a community mainly of our own race, with all the wants of Englishmen, taking our manufactures by millions, and affording a field for the emigration of our poor. Australia was settled peaceably, but only because the natives were few and sunk into the lowest degradation; and the Cape, taken from the Dutch, has been an acquisition of the highest value. With these past or present Colonies spread over the globe, three-fourths of the commerce of England takes place; and we must ask Mr. Bright what would be the state of England if his policy had been pursued from the days of Elizabeth to those of Victoria; if England had always abstained from trespassing on the freeholds of the race, and consequently our race, religion, language, and manners were confined to this island, with Ireland still a Celtic province, and North America and Australia untrodden wildernesses? But the broad question:—Is England a greater, richer, and more highly-esteemed country now than in the days of Mary Tudor? If it is, then the policy, or rather instinct, of external settlement and conquest has been a healthy one. To the question, "Of what use is Canada or Australia to England?" we would answer with an example from Mr. Bright's model country,—"Of the same use that Wisconsin or California is to New England." Setting aside all considerations which Mr. Bright may consider sentimental, we would say that the extension of our race with its habits and wants into new regions of the world must be, and has been proved to be, of the greatest financial advantage to the old country.

☞ It is estimated that one hundred and eleven millions of passengers pass over the railroads throughout the world, during the year, at an average distance of twelve miles each, or for one man, 1,332,000,000 miles, or enough to carry a man to the sun and back no less than seven times every year.

The Ministerial Shuffle Condemned.

(From the Morning Post, September 10.)

The mail which sails to Canada to-day will convey to the people of the Province the disagreeable intelligence that Her Majesty "is under the necessity of declining the request that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, or some other member of the royal family, should proceed to Canada with the view of opening the Crystal Palace at Toronto." Her Majesty, however, is understood to have expressed her high appreciation of the loyalty which dictated the wishes of the petitioners, and a hope that the proposed exhibitions "will produce important results to Canada." Sir Bulwer Lytton, in the performance of his duty as Colonial Secretary, has managed with the pen of a graceful and accomplished writer, to embody Her Majesty's refusals in terms which, it may be hoped, will sensibly mitigate the disappointment which the receipt of such a communication is sure to create among a people whose devotion to their Sovereign is as intense as it is universal.—We now dismiss this subject, merely adding that the gentleman who was the bearer of the petition to this country, Mr. Norris, discharged his delicate mission with great good taste and judgment; and such would be at any time the fate of any party throughout British North America which would seriously advocate annexation to the United States.

The Canadians are much better off as Colonists of Great Britain than they would be as members of this Union. They do not share our woes—the slavery question. They pay no taxes to support federal leeches at Washington. They enjoy such protection from Great Britain that they are put to no expense for the maintenance of standing armies or the hire of diplomatists. Their foreign relations are paid for by Great Britain. Part of the police duty in their Cities is done by British soldiers at the cost of the British public. Their frontiers are protected by the same British troops without costing them a dollar. Their revenue is all their own. They draw hundreds of thousands annually from England; and they do not send a dollar to the British Exchequer. They could gain nothing by joining this Union; they would lose part of their revenue and all that England does for them. Under these circumstances—fooling of loyalty apart—they would be insane to seek to change their allegiance.—Harper's Weekly.

A Persecuted Century.

For some time past, it has been a fashion among writers to run down the eighteenth century; and at length the rage has come to a fearful boil over in the new work of Mr. Carlyle. The great difficulty of this eminent author in treating Frederick the Great is, by his own profession, how to "show a man who is a reality worthy of being seen," and yet "keep his century, as a hypocrisy worthy of being hidden and forgotten, in due abeyance." This century, he calls it, of "accumulated falsities"—so false, that it had no longer the consciousness of being so—having "nothing grand in it, except that grand universal suicide, named French Revolution, by which it terminated its otherwise most worthless existence with at least one worthy act; setting fire to its old home and self, and going up in flames and memorable explosions, in a truly memorable and important manner. A very fit termination," he says he thankfully feels, "for such a century.—Century spendthrift, fraudulent, bankrupt, gone at length utterly insolvent, without real money of performance in its pocket, and the rich no declining to take hypothecs and speculities any further: what could the poor century do but at length admit:—'Well, it is so. I am a swindler century, and have long been; having learned the trick of it from my father and grandfather; knowing hardly any trade but that in false bills, which I thought foolishly might last forever, and still bring at least beef and pudding to the favoured of mankind. And behold it ends; and I am a detected swindler, and have nothing even to eat. What remains but that I blow my brains out, and do at length one true action?' Which the poor century did; many thanks to it in the circumstances."

Surely the accusative case is getting into a sad predominance among us, when a whole century can be arraigned on cumulative evidence in this manner.

We humbly presume to think that the eighteenth was a pretty fair century, as centuries go. It brought us no such movement as a Reformation, indeed—the special work of the sixteenth—but the brewer found he could not boil down a black man every day, whatever declension it might occasion in the repute of his beer: and so it is, there is not a reformation to be done every century. Apart from lucky accidents of that kind so thinly sown, looking to what centuries in general are, we rather think well of the eighteenth century; perhaps in some respects it was a better century than our own, which, with more light, has also the demerit of heaping up a good deal more darkness.

Only remember, it was in the eighteenth century that the inhabitants of the world were first generally informed of how it has its relative place and motion amongst the other worlds—of what lightning is—what air is—what ultimate elements the solids of the earth are composed of. It was in this century that men were enabled to add planets to the solar system, and whole legions of new and undreamed-of organisms to creation. It was this century which first really embraced and profited by the inductive philosophy, and began to see with any clearness that there is a fixed order of things in the universe, the study of and conformity to which gives a just economy to human life. This is a poor century, which saw Franklin bring down thunder on the string of a kite at Philadelphia, and Watt bring the foundation of the greatest physical power possessed by man in a little workshop in Glasgow College! Why, what would Mr. Carlyle have of a century, if he disdains these things? What other century, will he tell us, ever did such things for its own children, and those who were to follow after?

It seems, however, to be in vogue to paint that Mr. Carlyle chiefly finds the condemnation of the eighteenth century. It was a century trading in false bills. Was it so, indeed? It was the first century that ever saw through the gross superstitions which had made all preceding centuries believe in sorcerers and jugglers, and condemn old women for witchcraft. It was a supernatural century, working upon appearances till it was sent of all credit. Was it so truly?—To our mind, so far from being an undeserving century, it appears to us just the least so of all centuries. In the previous one, to dissent from the established church, followed, in Britain, certain punishment to every grade of society. In Mr. Carlyle's native country, to discuss presbytery brought down execration—that is, social contempt, loss of goods, and of place in the country; till a change of rule, to set against supremacy inflicted do go wrong in the fields. In the eighteenth century, nearly every such penal consequence to nonconformity in both ends of the ideal had disappeared. In which of these two kinds of circumstances was it that hypocrisy (not most likely to be practised?) Most men next-a-days have a relish and an approval for toleration. Was there toleration in the seventeenth century? On the contrary, the word was a reproach.—James I. indignantly defended himself against the imputation of being favourable to it. It was formally repudiated by the Long Parliament and Westminster Assembly of Divines as the nurse of all heresies; and when Alexander Henderson, the leading Scotch Covenanting divine, preached to the House in recommendation of his own favourite ecclesiastical polity, he denounced none so much as those who held "that every one should be left to preach, profess and print what he liked." If we look across the Atlantic, we find the same spirit.—There the very men who had fled from intolerance, practiced the fiercest intolerance themselves. Roger Williams, the first enunciator of the principle of liberty of conscience, had to fly from his own state of Rhode Island, and dwelt in the wilderness, exposed to the severities of winter and to starvation. Various Quakers were hanged. Contrast with this the eighteenth century, in which every one was allowed to preach, profess, and print what they liked." But contrast it also with the nineteenth, which should know as much better. Does Clement XIV. suppressing the Jesuits look ill against Pio Nono denouncing all who disrespect the Immaculate Conception? Does Austria, under its prodigious reforms, pale beside Austria in 1856 under the new concordat? Has the liberalism of Catherine II. been well exchanged for the fanatic cruelties and propagandism of Nicholas I.? Is the France of easy-going Louis XV. improved upon in religious freedom by the France of Louis Napoleon? There were as strong convictions in the sixteenth century, as there are, or seems to be, now, and as strong convictions Mr. Carlyle delights.—But, somehow, strong convictions have an unpleasant affinity to burnings, and throat-cuttings, and pestering one's neighbours.—What Mr. Carlyle delights in is ordinarily felt to be at once a general inconvenience, and ineffectual for even the assumedly good ends it proposes. It is highly questionable how far a century is improved by it when it is not put under very strong checks—an article not always very ready at command for the purpose. In fact, we do not know a more formidable state of things amongst mankind than a malus of strong convictions; and we sincerely hope that Mr. Carlyle may never be punished with the realization of his desires regarding it.

If we confine our view to Great Britain, we shall see that, in economic and some other respects, the eighteenth was not a bad century. It saw the lose pacific administration of Walpole, in which we threw remarkably well under a system of parliamentary hypocrisy. It gave us India. We lost, indeed, our American colonies; but it was a gain to general humanity, and we may now forget the stupidity of George III in our sympathy with George Washington. During this period the population of England was greatly increased, her wealth probably quadrupled, roads, canals, posts established, a free press created, the national taste regaled with an elegant literature. It gave us Addison, Pope, Goldsmith, Burke, and Burns. Nor were soldiers wanting. Marlborough, Saxe, Frederick, Clive, were far from being common-place people: indeed, it may be asked where are their equals now? Oh, Mr. Carlyle, this a poor country in great men! Look at home, dear sir, and say if the curta supellex of historical personages now living gives you a title of reproach.

Finally, as to this same suicide which the eighteenth century is said to have performed upon itself. A bad business truly, and doubtless brought about by real evils, for which some people were to blame, either on the ground of their want of political wisdom or their wicked selfishness. Yet look also at the groping sense of right and the splendid good designs towards mankind at large, which prompted the reforming party. These things, albeit unlucky in their results, are things properly to the credit of the century. It was the first time that a great people demanded to be treated with justice by their rulers, and that, we conceive, is no small matter in the history of this world. Even, then, in this dismal end the century came to, we find something to admire and sympathise with. It seems to stamp our proposition with a final approval, that their have been worse centuries than the eighteenth.—Chamber's Journal.

The English Treaty with Japan.

From the London Times.

We are enabled to state the more important stipulations of the treaty signed at Jeddo, on the 26th of last August. The treaty in the first place, engages that there shall be perpetual peace and friendship between Her British Majesty and the Tycoon of Japan; secondly that Her Majesty may appoint a diplomatic agent to reside in Jeddo, and the Tycoon a diplomatic agent to reside in London, both of them respectively to have the right of travelling freely to any part of the empire of Japan, and to any part of Great Britain; also either power may appoint consuls or consular agents at any or all the ports of the other.

The ports of Hakodadi, Kanagawa, and Nagasaki, in Japan, are to be opened to British subjects on the 1st of July, 1859. Noo-e-gata, or if Noo-e-gata be unsuitable, another convenient port on the West coast of Nipon, is to be opened on the 1st of January, 1860; Hiogo on the first of January, 1863; and British subjects may permanently reside in all the foregoing ports, may lease ground, purchase or erect dwellings and warehouses, but may not erect fortifications. Within a certain distance of the specified ports they shall be free to go where they please, or sojourning generally, they have a tether of some 20 to 30 miles around either of them. From the 1st of January, 1863, they will be allowed to reside at Jeddo, and from the 1st of January, 1863, at Osaca, for the purpose of trade. All questions of rights, whether of property or person, arising between themselves, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the British authorities; if they commit any crime against the Japanese they will be tried and punished by their own authorities, and vice versa. Japanese subjects in the same predicament will be tried and punished by theirs; but in either case the British Consul may be sent in the first instance to assimilate arbitrators.

In respect of debts contracted on either side, the respective authorities will do their utmost to enforce recovery, but neither government will be responsible for the debts of its subjects. The Japanese government will place no restrictions whatever upon the employment by British subjects will be allowed the free exercise of their religion, and for this purpose will have the right to erect suitable places of worship. Foreign and Japanese coin may be used indifferently for commercial purposes. Supplies for the British navy may be stored at certain specified ports free of duty. If British vessels are wrecked or stranded, the Japanese authorities will render every assistance in their power. British merchants will be at liberty to visit Japanese ports. Munitions of war are to be the only exceptions to articles of import and export which last, on the payment of an ad valorem duty at the place of import, are to be subject to no further tax, excise or transit duty. Such articles may be re-exported without the payment of an additional duty.

The Japanese are to prevent fraud or smuggling, and to receive the benefit of all penalties or confiscations. The Treaty is written in English, Japanese, and Dutch, the Dutch version to be considered the original. All official communications on the part of the British to the Japanese authorities shall, however, henceforward be written in English, though for five years from the signature of the treaty, to facilitate the transaction of business, they are to be accompanied by a Dutch or Japanese version. The treaty may be revised on the application of either of the contracting parties, on giving one years notice after the 1st of July 1872. All the privileges, immunities and advantages granted, or to be granted hereafter, by Japan, to any other nation, are to be freely and equally participated by the British government and its subjects. The treaty is to be ratified within a year from the day of its signature.

For the regulation of trade, the articles which are appended to the treaty are to be considered as forming a part of it, and as equally binding. The majority of these relate to the arrangements of the Japanese Custom House, but the more important contain the tariff of duties to be levied. In the first class, as free of duty, are specified gold and silver, coined or uncoined, wearing apparel in actual use, and household furniture and printed books not intended for sale but the property of persons who came to reside in Japan. On the second case, a duty of five per cent. only will be levied, and this class comprises all articles used for the purpose of building, rigging, repairing, or fitting out ships, whaling gear of all kinds, salted provisions, bread and breadstuffs, living animals, coals timber for building houses rice, paddy, steam machinery, zinc, lead, tin raw silk, cotton and woolen manufactured goods. A duty of 35 per cent. will, however, be levied on all intoxicating liquors; and goods not included in any of the preceding classes will pay a duty of 20 per cent.—Japanese products which are exported as cargo will pay an export duty of 5 per cent.

The above are substantially all the material stipulations of this important document.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Auction Sale—Geo. Lee.
Auction Sale Real Estate—Jno. Paton.
Just Received—Cowpar & Ogilvy.
County Council Notice—W. Cottingham
Leonard Scott & Co.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, DEC. 2, 1858.

Mr. Stevenson's Answer.

Mr. Stevenson, by his next friend, the Review, gives a general answer to the charges which the people have brought against him, of having assisted to place the Town, by bad financing, in inextricable difficulties; of having introduced his patron, Mr. Clurton, surreptitiously, into the Council; of having received Mr. Clurton, in the character of agent to Mr. Fowler, while trustee of the Town; and of having written to Mr. Wilson in Toronto, a defence of Mr. Conger, intended to induce Mr. Wilson to let Mr. Conger out of the Chancery suit, brought against him by the Town.—Mr. Stevenson's answer is short and conclusive; he says that "Mr. Clurton is not a candidate for the office of Mayor, and therefore nothing is pertinent to the question of the canvass now going forward between Mr. Sawers and Mr. Stevenson, but what is free from reflection upon Mr. Clurton," and, secondly, that "Mr. Clurton owed his position on the railway committee to the Council," and Mr. Stevenson adds that "when these things are remembered the two column article on the contest is sufficiently answered." Now let us see to what extent these answers reach, and what bearing they have upon a review of Mr. Stevenson's course as Mayor. We will first assume, what will surely not be denied, that the Mayor is the head of the Corporation, and, as such, that he is responsible for the acts of the Council, done by his connivance. Thus, if Mr. Clurton, not elected by any ward, is allowed to have the position of a Councillor, by vote of the Council, the Mayor is answerable for their act, because it would be his duty to explain to them the unlawfulness of their proceeding, and, if they persisted it, to refuse to have the intruder's name entered upon the minute book, in which the proceedings of the Board are required to be recorded. But Mr. Stevenson cannot urge this plea, weak as it is, because it does not appear by the minute book, that the Council appointed Mr. Clurton. Therefore he was not so appointed, and Mr. Stevenson, by his answer to this charge, relates a circumstance which is false in fact. He will, therefore, be so obliging as to invent some other apology for recognising Mr. Clurton as Chairman of the railway Committee, than that which, even if true, would avail him nothing. Then Mr. Stevenson's ridiculous assumption that, because Mr. Clurton is not a candidate, therefore Mr. Stevenson ought not to be accused of wrong, is worthy of him alone. No man, with common sense, could make such a proposition. In the matter of the £1,925 share, Mr. Clurton's telegraph to Mr. Conger that the Town Council will abide by that deduction from the £60,000 municipal loan fund debentures, Mr. Stevenson became equally guilty with Mr. Clurton, when he acquiesced in the movement; but we hold Mr. Stevenson alone guilty for the breach of trust he committed when he tried to lay of his friend Mr. Conger by persuading Mr. Wilson to believe on his authority that "a general feeling prevails against following up Mr. Conger."

When Mr. Stevenson condescends to take up these charges in their order, we will deliver to him a new batch of questions, which the Town feels interested in having answered; but, as he seems to be already overwhelmed with these in hand, we refrain from further pressure. The electors appear to be convinced that a change is needed, and, as Mr. Sawers is not open to any charges that, if proved, would make his candidature objectionable, and his general qualifications being admitted even by his opponents, there does not seem to exist any great necessity for adding to the list of objections against Mr. Stevenson, further than has already been so successfully done. Our object is not to torture an unfortunate victim, but only to dispose the public mind to a due sense of his incapacity. Mr. Stevenson will have a years rest, and upon Mr. Sawers will devolve the labor of correcting the errors and supplying the shortcomings of his predecessor. Mr. Clurton will find no back door open to the Council. Mr. Conger will return the treasure, if he can give no reason why not. The people will get their own, and public matters will be so arranged that, by a strict course of open dealing, they will be able to discover, in its first stage, any attempt to convert the municipal council into a secret association. When this is accomplished, much difficulty will be saved to honest men, who desire to do the public business to the public advantage, and much trouble will be saved to the people in the prosecution of their enquiries concerning their affairs. But unless an opportunity be given for such a course, there is no hope for improvement, but a certain prospect of increased confusion and increasing taxes. To continue one's affairs in the hands of an incompetent agent can only lead to ruin. To keep in office men who have proved their incompetence, cannot produce any other result than continued disasters. No argument is so strong against a candidate, than that having had an opportunity to display his aptitude for the office, he has failed to give satisfaction. Such a candidate is Mr. Stevenson. And no argument is so strong in a candidate's favor than that which from observation in analogous circumstances, induces a popular reliance in his ability and integrity. That candidate is Mr. Sawers.

St. Andrew's Day.

This the Anniversary of the Patron Saint of Scotland, was duly celebrated in Peterboro' by the Scotchmen of the Town and neighbourhood under the auspices of the newly-formed St. Andrew's Society. The objects of the Society was adverted to in our last issue, and in the carrying out of its organization, the most sanguine anticipations of the promoters have been more than fully realised, as was evidenced by the highly successful celebration which took place here on Tuesday. The Rev. Mr. Roger, having at the request of the Society kindly consented to deliver a Lecture on the evening referred to, a very attentive and respectable audience assembled in the Baptist Church and listened to a highly interesting and appropriate discourse by Mr. Roger, wherein he alluded feelingly to the cherished memories of fatherland held by every emigrant from the Old World, and advocating the organization of such Societies as the St. Andrew's Society in the land of our adoption, showed how the universal bond of brotherhood which ought to exist among all nations was in no wise endangered by these National Societies, but on the contrary, fostered, encouraged and strengthened. Later in the evening dinner was served in McGregor's Hotel under the patronage of the Society, at which close on one hundred persons did ample justice to the good things provided for them by mine host of the "American", a larger dinner party than any that ever assembled in Peterboro' on any similar occasion. John Harvey, Esq., President of the Society, did the duties of the Chair in a highly efficient and happy manner, James Hall, Esq., filling the Vice Chair in his usual felicitous style. The Chairman was supported by Thomas Short, Esq., M. P. P. for the County. James Stevenson, Esq. Mayor of the Town, and W. S. Conger, Esq., guests of the Society. The Vice Chair was supported by Robert Dennistoun, Esq., and Capt. Sutherland. After Dinner, the usual loyal toasts were given and responded to with a heartiness which expressed fully the sentiments of the audience towards our beloved Sovereign and her family. "The Day and all who honour it" was next given from the Chair, a toast which brought from the audience the most hearty demonstration of satisfaction at its celebration amongst us. Mr. Murray was then called on to give some information as to the organization of the Society, and the success which had attended it, which he responded to by giving a brief history of the Society, explaining its objects and the principles on which it was conducted with reference to other benevolent Societies, and announcing the satisfactory result that the Society had already enrolled seventy-four members, and that from the evidences which they were receiving, they confidently anticipated ere long to have a Society numbering 100 or even two hundred. He also expressed the hope that when the next Anniversary came round they would be honored by the representatives of a St. George's and St. Patrick's Society, sentiments which were cordially endorsed by the audience during the evening. The Vice President gave "The Land o' Cakes" in a humorous and well-timed address which we need hardly say was received with the greatest enthusiasm, followed by the Company singing en masse the National song "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Sawers responded to the toast of "Our Adopted Country" alluding to the position Canada held with reference to the Mother Country. He said the connection between the parent and child was a happy one, and was not likely to be severed, for England had learned a deep lesson in her treatment of the Sister Union, one which she was not likely to forget, and one which would tell with her in maintaining the harmonious connection existing with her and her prosperous Colonies with Canada at their head. "The Literary Men of Scotland," was drunk with enthusiasm after which Capt. Sutherland in a most telling speech gave "Scotland's Heroes" adverting to those far beyond the memory of man, and coming down to the here of the day, the Highland Chieftain in India, Sir Colin Campbell. "Our sister gold Town," replied to by the Mayor; "The Press;" "The Ladies;" "Our Guests," responded to by Mr. Short and Mr. Conger; and "The Agricultural Interests of Canada," responded to by Mr. Jack, who said, "Mr. President and Gentlemen,—The toast which you have just drunk, calls up to my mind many old historic relations to the state of civilization which it is our happiness to enjoy in this age of progress. Your association of my humble name with the [illegible] upon this occasion was an honor to which I had not ventured to aspire, and one which I now feel myself incapable of maintaining without those allowances which I can rely upon your generosity to ever ready to extend to an unpretending advocate of the claims of his profession. But, while I would uphold to the last the rights of my class, if they were made the subject of opposition, I cannot but persuade myself that in such an assembly as that which now surrounds me, they stand in no need of a defender. It is therefore free to me to survey the great field of enterprise as it extends over the world of science, manufactures, literature and the useful arts. What, Sir, I would ask, would the state of agriculture, even at this day, be, were it not that by the improvement of the mechanical appliances now become the necessary accompaniments of field labor, the produce of the farm has been multiplied to an extent only equalled by the natural increase of the population of the land; while by the practical use of labour-saving machines, the cost of its production has been lessened to a point that sets free large numbers of the inhabitants of well-cultivated countries, and thus enables them to engage in other pursuits. Then again, Sir, what avail would it be to the farmer if commerce did not call in the merchant to act as broker between him and the manufacturer, bringing within reach of the farmer the foreign supplies he needs, and finding the best market for his produce. But, Mr. President, notwithstanding the disconnection of the subject, I cannot help taking this occasion to remind Scotchmen of the apathy, they have displayed in contributing to the funds of the Wallace monument. I hope therefore that while they rejoice in their freedom and happiness of to-day, they will not forget that according to human calculation, that prosperous state would have been denied to them but for the prowess of their ancestors." This ended the programme of appointed toasts. Songs appropriate to the various toasts and sentiments were sung during the evening by Messrs. Graham, Brown and Law, and in the intervals between the volunteer toasts which followed the programme, some of the guests contributed to the harmony of the evening by singing appropriate airs.

The Society has every reason to be gratified at the success which has attended their first celebration of the Anniversary of their Patron Saint. We hope they will go on and flourish, and as their objects are decidedly commendable we have no doubt they have the good wishes of the community at large. We trust they will have many returns of the Season, and that they may never be less successful in its celebration than on the present occasion.

Extraordinary and Fatal Accident.

Patrick Faren, the owner of a cab in this town met with his death in a sudden and extraordinary manner, on Monday last. When pursuing his ordinary avocation, he required for some purpose the use of a jack-knife which, it being in a half-open state, he strove to open with a jerk of the hand.—His hands being hampered with the reins, the jerk he gave his arm caused the blade of the knife to enter the thigh, fracturing the left femeral artery, from which wound hemorrage succeeded, terminating the unhappy man's life in a very short time.

An inquest was held before Dr. McKeon, coroner, when the jury found a verdict in accordance with the above.

The deceased was a Roman Catholic, lately come to this town from Port Hope, and was much esteemed for his civility and general good conduct.

We are informed that Mr. Rackett the able and indefatigible teacher and leader of the Rifle Band has made arrangements for giving next week two Concerts of vocal and instrumental music for the behoof of the funds of the Band. He has enlisted the services of some of our best musicians in the district to assist him, as also, a Quadrille Band which he has had in training for some time past. We feel confident the lovers of good music will enjoy a treat on the coming occasion, such as has not been afforded them hitherto in Peterborough. The object of the Concerts is one deserving the patronage of all our townsmen, and we hope Mr. Rackett will on both occasions have bumper houses.

In our advertising columns will be found an announcement from those enterprising publishers Messrs. Leonard Scott & Co. New York. Their re-issue at such a nominal price of the leading English Magazines and Reviews is a great boon to the intelligent communities of this country, and deserves the liberal support of every reader. The new volumes commence with the New Year and there could not be a better time for subscribing to these valuable Serials. Every family should have one or more of them on their table, the price is within the reach of all, and the matter is unsurpassed by any American productions.

☞ The Detroit Free Press says the Canada Southern or Niagara and Detroit Rivers Railway is being prosecuted doubly. Two Boards of Directors have been organized, and each have let contracts for building the entire road. At this juncture one party got a little the start of the other by raising about £30,000 in cash whereupon the hindermost commences a suit in the chancery, and compels the other to hold on probably until they can catch up. The contest between the two parties interested in this road is quite amusing, and will probably result in neither of them doeing anything.

THE GOUDY TRAGEDY.—We are pleased to record the rapid recovery of the surviving members of the Goudy tragedy. Mrs. Goudy the stepmother of the unfortunate young man, is convalescent. The dangerous wounds upon the head, and the bruises upon her arm have been skilfully healed. Her health has greatly improved, so that she is able to walk about her chamber. Mr. Goudy is also rapidly recovering; one of the wounds upon his head has been entirely healed; the other, and most dangerous, is in a fair way for healing. The brain protrudes very slightly, but is daily going down. Dr. Von Buren, one of the attending physicians, expresses himself in confidence that he will recover, although many wonder most pass before he can possibly recover

A DIFFICULT RECKON.—In Cincinnati a few days ago, Barbara Hammond commenced an outlandish looking old female, who styled herself Madame Bertha Von Grudichan, before the Police Court, to answer for obtaining money under false pretences. Barbara testified that she had paid Madame V. G. two dollars for a recipe which, if faithfully followed up, was to make her the handsomest girl in Cincinnati. The money was paid before the delivery of the indictable document, which Miss Hammond read aloud to the complimentary part. There that a gill of lyman's blood, the yolk of three english eggs, an ounce of gold dust, and a pound of fat as your thumb said, thickened in vinegar." This note puzzled and upset upon the face every night before going asleep.—The effect will be astonishing." Barbara during the deciphering so hard to the gist, remarked that she had been swindled, and took action against Madame Grudichan accordingly.

Communications.

For the Examiner.

The Otonabee Fall Show.

The Annual Fall Show of the Otonabee Agricultural Society was held in the village of Allendale on Monday the 15th instant. Considering the unfavorable state of the weather it was well attended. The prizes awarded are as follows:

HORSES.

Best entire Horse,		William Christie.
2nd	"	"
Best span of Horses,		James Stewart.
2nd	"	Alex. Esson.
Best Mare and Foal,		Henry Bowbell, Esq
2nd	"	John Lancaster.
Best 3 year old Colt or Filly,		George Esson.
Best 2 year old Colt or Filly,		William Nelson.
2nd	"	George Nelson.
3rd	"	"
Best 1 year old Colt or Filly,		John Taylor.
2nd	"	John Lancaster.
3rd	"	Richard Elmhirst.

CATTLE.

Best Durham Bull over 3 years old,		Andrew Shearer.
2nd	"	Alex. Esson.
Best Durham Bull under 3 years old,		George Esson.
Best Durham Cow,		Andrew Shearer.
2nd	"	George Esson.
3rd	"	"
Best Native Cow,		Andrew Shearer.
Best Devon Cow,		George Esson.
Best Durham Heifer, 1 year old,		"
2nd	"	"
3rd	"	Andrew Shearer.
Best Native Heifer, 1 year old,		John Lancaster.
2nd	"	"
Best Durham Calf,		Andrew Shearer.
2nd	"	"
3rd	"	"
Best Native Calf,		John Lancaster.
2nd	"	"
Best Fat Cow,		Henry Bowbell.
Best Yoke of Oxen,		Wm. Fife, Sen'r.
2nd	"	Philip Emerst.
3rd	"	Stephen Nelson.
Best Yoke of Steers under 4 years old,		Andrew Shearer.
2nd	"	Henry Moore.
3rd	"	Thos. Short, Esq.

SHEEP.

Best aged Ram,		George Esson.
2nd	"	James Stewart.
Best Two Ewes,		George Esson.
2nd	"	James Lang.
Best Two Ewe Lambs,		James Stewart.
2nd	"	George Esson.

PIGS.

Best aged Sow,		Henry Bowbell, Esq
2nd	"	Thos. Short, Esq.
3rd	"	"

FARM PRODUCE.

Best Two Bushels Fall Wheat,		James Stewart.
Best two Bushels Spring Wheat,		"
2nd	"	Alex. Esson.
3rd	"	Donald Cameron.
Best Timothy Seed,		"
2nd	"	Henry Bowbell.
3rd	"	Richard Elmhirst.
Best 60 lbs. Potatoes,		David Broder.
2nd	"	John Taylor.
3rd	"	John Lancaster.
Best 60 lbs. Turnips,		P. C. Humphries.
2nd	"	"
Best Garden Vegetables,		James Cameron.
2nd	"	James Lang.
3rd	"	P. C. Humphries.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Best 20 lbs. Butter,		James Lang.
2nd	"	Donald Cameron.
3rd	"	Alex. Esson.
Best 10 lbs. Cheese,		Daniel Esson.
2nd	"	"

As excellent dinner was provided by Mr. English to the Directors, Judges, and a number of guests, which was done ample justice to, after the labors of the day.

HENRY BOWBELL, Sec'y.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I am instructed by Friendship Lodge, No. 146, Independent Order of Good Templars, of Peterborough, to request you to publish the following resolution, passed at the last annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Canada, held at London in the month of October last.

Peterborough, Nov. 23rd, 1858.

W. N. KENNEDY,
W. Secretary.

Moved by R. D. Wadsworth, seconded by D. Billington, that the Grand Lodge returns its thanks to the members of the Press throughout the Province, who have during the past year, of their own accord or by request, published articles in favor of the principles of the order, and that the Press generally, be requested, for the sake of suffering humanity, to plead the cause of the poor inebriate, in favor of a Prohibitory Liquor Law.

Commercial.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Dec. 2nd, 1858

Wheat per bushel	0	95	1	00
Oats "	0	25	0	30
Potatoes "	0	25	0	35
Flour per barrel	4	00	5	00
Butter per lb.	0	12½	0	13
Cheese "	0	10	0	00
Eggs per dozen	0	10	0	12½
Turnips "	0	12	0	00
Apples "	0	00	0	00
Mutton per lb.	0	05	0	07
Pork per cwt.	4	00	5	25
Beef per cwt	3	00	4	00
Hay per ton	7	00	8	00
Wood first quality	1	20	1	75
Straw per load	1	00	1	50
Cabbage per head	0	03	0	07

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Birth.

On Sunday the 21st ult., the wife of Bennet Graham Esq., of a Son.

County Councils Notice.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE RESPECTIVE FIVE COUNCILS OF THE UNITED COUNTIES OF PETERBOROUGH AND VICTORIA.

Gentlemen,

Please take notice that you are hereby required to meet us at the Council Chamber in the Town by Special Mandate, on Tuesday the 14th December next, at noon, for the Despatch of business.

WILLIAM COTTINGHAM, } Wardens
United Counties Peterborough and Victoria.

County Council Chamber,
Peterborough, December 1st, 1858. } 47

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and cheap as well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at HARPER & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ December Number received, price 25 cts.

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK,

and the best markets.

SUGARS,—Bright Muscovado and Cuba. Red patna yellow and yellow refined; crushed and dry crushed; ground, extra ground and powdered loaf.

SYRUPS & MOLASSES,—A large Stock of extra fine quality.

TEAS,—Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, English breakfast Congou (imported direct from London); Oolong, &c., all finely flavored and of excellent quality.

COFFEE,—Mocha, Java, Laguyra, Rio; green and roast.

WINES & LIQUORS,—Ales and Porters, a large and well selected stock,

PORTS, SHERRIES,

CHAMPAGNES

of very superior quality, and cheaper than ever before offered here; Brandy, dark and pale, Hennessey's, Otards, &c., JAMAICA Rum, DeKuyper's Gin, Old Tom, Scotch and Canadian Whiskies.

RICE,—South Carolina, Patna, &c.
RAISINS,—M. R. Layers, Valencia and Sultana.
Best Zante Currants; Superior Fresno Figs.
Nuts: Almonds, Pistoria, Walnuts, Brazil and Pea Nuts.
CANDLES,—Adamantine, Belmont and Pat. B. Sperm and Peterboro.
SOAP,—Liverpool, Fancy and Peterboro'.
FISH,—Codfish, Herrings, &c., &c.

MACHINERY AND LAMP OILS.

SALT in Barrels and Bags; a large assortment of Sauces, Pickles, Salad Oils, Essences, Spices and general Groceries of every description.

ALSO

a large and varied stock of Glassware, Wooden ware, Willow ware, &c., &c., &c.

The whole having been well bought, will be sold wholesale for Cash at MONTREAL PRICES; and also retail at lower prices than have hitherto been charged in town.

COWPAR & OGILVY.

Peterborough, 1st Dec'r, 1858. 47.

AUCTION SALE.

THE subscriber will offer for sale, by public Auction, on the W. ½ of Lot No. 3, Communication road, Smith, at noon, on Friday, December 10th

the following farming stock and other property, viz:—

7 HORSES.

4 Cows, 8 Sheep, 1 Buggy, 1 Double Cutter, 1 double Waggon, 1 lumber Sleigh, 1 Fanning Mill, 8 Tons Hay, 1 large stack Pea straw, 3 Ploughs, 1 double Harrow, 1 double set Harness.

TERMS:—Under $30 Cash, under $40 six months credit, over that amount 12 months credit, on approved Joint Notes.

GEORGE LEE.

A McNEIL, Auctioneer.
Smith, December 1st, 1858. 47

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY [Conservative].
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW [Whig].
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW [Free Church]
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW [Liberal].
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE [Tory].

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews....	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews....	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews....	7 00
For all four of the Reviews....	8 00
For Blackwood's Magazine....	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review....	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews....	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews....	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews.	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent, from the above price will be allowed to CLUBS ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

POSTAGE.

Subscribers in the British Provinces will receive the Reprints free of U. S. postage.

N. B. The prices in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above named is $31 per annum.

Our Reprints versus Eclectics, &c.

As we have for many years been paying more than $2,000 annually to the British Publishers for the matter furnished in those Periodicals, thus virtually becoming copartners with them in the profits of the Reprints, we trust the public will consider this in bestowing their patronage, and give us the preference over Eclectic and other pantcheon's publications, whether monthly or weekly, which now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the Foreign Publishers or to us for the same. As to cheapness nobody can complain of paying $10 a year for the four leading British Reviews and Blackwood's Magazine, by taking these words entire subscribers are not obliged to be guided by others in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover taking into consideration the right to which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also to the advantage of an early issue by means of the advance Sheets—our works will be found as cheap as any one of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

☞ Remittances should always be paid, or sent, post paid, to the Publishers.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,
67. . . No. 54 Gold street, New York.

AUCTION SALE

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE,

ON ACCOUNT OF THE

TRUST AND LOAN COMPANY OF UPPER CANADA.

Will be sold by Public Auction

ON

Tuesday, 14th day of December, 1858,

AT THE

Sale Rooms of Francis Murphy, Walton Street, Port Hope,

At the hour of 10 o'clock, A. M.

1.

UNDER POWER OF SALE CONTAINED in a certain Mortgage from Andrew Anderson and Wife to the said Company. The Easterly part of Block A, Town reservation of the Township of Otonabee, County of Peterborough, containing 130 acres more or less, 120 of which are in a high state of cultivation. This is a splendid wheat growing farm; beautifully situated on the Rice Lake. Large frame dwelling house, with barn, stables, &c.

2.

Under power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage from Henry Covert and Henry Jones Burton to the said Company. Lot No. 7, in the 9th Concession of the Township of Hamilton, and County of Northumberland, containing 175 acres, 90 of which are under cultivation; a beautiful farm on the South shore of Rice Lake, about half a mile from the Railroad Station.—Good buildings.

3.

Under power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage from Henry Huddlestone Thompson and wife to the said Company. Lot No. 6, in the 9th Concession of the Township of Hamilton, and County of Northumberland, containing 150 acres more or less, 90 of which are under cultivation; a beautiful farm on the South shore of Rice Lake. Two good frame houses, and a frame barn.

TERMS of Sale—Liberal, and will be made known on the day of Sale or can be learned on application by letter to the Commissioner of the Trust and Loan Company at Kingston. Abstracts of title and Deeds can be seen at the office of the Solicitor, or at the place of Sale.

JOHN PATON,
COMMISSIONER.

JOHN A. MACDONALD,
Solicitor.
Kingston, 25th November, 1858. 47

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

RELIABLE ROUTE TO PETERBOROUGH.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, 29th November, 1858, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay for Port Hope,..... 7.30 A. M.
" Port Hope for Peterboro'.....12.40 P. M.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope for Peterboro'.... 8.40 A. M.
" Peterboro' for Port Hope..... 1.20 P. M.

☞ All the above Trains run in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. T. WILLIAMS,
Superintendent.

D. McLEOD,
Managing Director.
Peterboro', Nov. 27, 1858. 47

FOR CHILDREN.

The Children's Paper ..... 12½ cents.
The Play Hour..... 12½ "
Chess or Draught Board and Men... 25 "
Fox and Geese and Board ..... 37½ "
Wolf and Lamb and Board ..... 37½ "
German Tactics and Board..... 37½ "
Paper Dolls, Furniture, &c.

PICTURE BOOKS,

In almost endless variety, printed on Linen or Paper from 1½d up to 6s. Amusement and instruction of every description for Children, at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S
New Book and Stationery Store,
46 George Street.

SCHOOL TEACHER WANTED.

FOR the Fourth School Section of the Township of Smith. He must have a first or second class certificate.

Apply to the Trustees.
WM. ELLIOT.
ALEX. ROSEBERRY.
JAMES DAVIDSON.

Smith, Nov. 27th, 1858. 46

WANTED,

A PRECENTOR, for the Presbyterian Church in connection with the Church of Scotland, in Peterborough.

Apply to the Rev. J. Douglas.
Peterborough, Nov. 3, 1858. 43.

STANDARD WORKS,

For Gifts or Public or Private Libraries

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

NEW BOOK STORE. GEORGE STREET.

Byron's complete works	8vo. cl. with plates		$3.50
Milton's	"	"	3.50
Burns'	"	"	3.00
Do.	"	" Morocco gilt	4.00
Scott's Life of Napoleon	cloth with portrait		2.50
Do.	"	"	2.25
Shakespeare, complete with Glossary	8vo...		1.50
D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, 5 Vols. in one,	8vo cloth with portraits.		1.50
Butler's (Bishop) works complete,	8vo. cl.		1.50
United States Magazine, Vols 1 and 2 with numerous wood cuts,	8vo. cloth-cheap		2.50
McCheyne's Life letters & remains,	8vo. cl.		1.50
Scots Worthies by John Howe, complete	8vo. cloth		1.50
Scotia's Bards, beautifully illustrated,	8vo. cloth		2.00
Gilbert's wonders of the world, with illustrations, Gilt.			1.50
Professor Wilson (Christopher North's) Recreations $1.25 for			0.75
Talfourd's (Sergeant) Essays $1.00 for			0.60
Macgregor's (Colesman) Tales, Sketches & Ly

TO THE TRADE.

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE Subscribers offer a large and complete assortment of

FAES GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS,

HYSON'S old and young
" Twankay & Twankay,
GUNPOWDER,
OOLONG,
SOUCHONG, &c.,
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS,

Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba,
Redpath's Crushed, &
Dry Crushed & broken Loaf,
Loaves,
Crushed,
Extra ground (for confectioners,)
Yellow Refined,

COFFEE,

Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP,

Redpath's refined.

RICE,

Arriana, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS,

5s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES,

T D Glasgow & Montreal, Dams, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS,

Boxes, ½ do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES,

Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS,

Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Boutern (sans Frandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS,

An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS,

2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT,

500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs.
50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
20 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes.
For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.
Hunter Street,
Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and completed at great cost, Sharpe's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 19 x 24 inches, on the following

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Every person enrolling Three Dollars, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Sharpe's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL.

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine, also free (on Payment of Subscription to the Association, (or Dependent,) and Western Gallery, of the Association.

Those who do not wish to avail themselves of the Engraving, can have the Art Journal and Western Gallery, for One Dollar a year.

Subscriptions will be received at the Bookstore of Mr. Burnham, Peterboro', where a great variety of the Association's Works for Sale.

They would also call special attention to the

[illegible]

Peterboro', Nov. 3, 1858. 44

DARNS FOR 1859.

WE have commenced the Spring Trade with a large and well assorted stock of

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Booksellers and Stationers, George Street.

The Globe Newspaper!

THE success which has attended the publication of this Journal for the past [illegible] years, and the high certificate of its merits as a [illegible] paper, to the estimation of [illegible] have induced the Proprietors to make such [illegible] as will render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have made [illegible] so successful for past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL Corps has been strengthened, and—the staff of Reporters enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in guiding corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, each of its columns is given all the matter in the Daily Edition, and the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive considerable attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the Globe throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.....One Hundred Dollars

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 16, 1858.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 8, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.
Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Shootings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Whitneys,
Pilots,	Beavers,
Satteens,	Kentins,
Damasks,	Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, GLOVES, HATS, CAPS, &c.

ALSO, Full or ass't Druggeting, and a Splendid Assortment of Prints.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats,
Frock and
Shooting Coats,
Pants, Pants,
Drawers,
Shirts,
Waterproof
Cloths,
Leggings,
and Caps.

And a general assortment of

[illegible]

All of which they offer at a great reduction for Cash or Short Approved Paper.

They would also call special attention to the

[illegible]

Peterboro', Nov. 3, 1858. 44

DARNS FOR 1859.

WE have commenced the Spring Trade with a large and well assorted stock of

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Booksellers and Stationers, George Street.

TENS AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

HEAD OFFICE in CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS to be selected from:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. G. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq. | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL

INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital. $1,997,600. Paid up Capital, $450,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON,	F. F. WHITEHORN, Esq.
GEO. DUNCAN, Jr., Esq.	GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.	JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.	A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON,	DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. F. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurances business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 23th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the town people, for the very liberal support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken in the selection of entrants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance [illegible].

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 2-tf.

BURNING AND REWARD!

THE Council of the United Townships of [illegible] and Burleigh, at a special meeting held for the consideration of those offering rewards, on February the 15th inst., passed a By-law, offering a REWARD of ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS, in addition to a large reward offered by the Board of Trade, for the discovery and conviction of the [illegible] of the Court House, Gaol, and Registry Office, at Lakefield, on the night of the 14th inst. The Council would recommend [illegible] to offer a reward of [illegible] for the discovery and conviction of the [illegible] of the Court House, Gaol, and Registry Office, at Lakefield, on the night of the 14th inst.

By order of the Council,
[illegible]
Township Clerk.

Lakefield, Feb. 17th, 1858.

SITUATION WANTED.

A [illegible] wishes a situation as [illegible] Apply at this Office.

Peterborough, Nov. 21st, 1858. 44tfs

Building Matters.

EVERY SCOTSMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the earliest news of old country events of any paper published in this country, and has become a repository of articles on the National Records, Literature and Antiquities of the Scottish Highlands in Scotland and elsewhere. The Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2.50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', }
July 20, 1858. } 26

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said partners' will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW,

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,

Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter.

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. New YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

PORTRAIT

OF THE

Hon'able. George Brown.

PRICE $1. Or in Gilt Frames $3.

SPECIMEN

To be seen and orders received at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO'.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

A MEMORIAL OF CANADA'S FAIR, 1858.

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHIC VIEW of the Crystal Palace, now on sale at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

Book and Stationery Store, George St.

PRICE 50 cents, or in Gilt Frames, $1 75c.

BOOKS, STATIONERY AND

THE subscribers have received a new Stock of Books in every department of

LITERATURE.

PLAIN & FANCY STATIONERY

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

A large and well assorted Stock of the Musical Bouquet, &c., &c.,

which they would direct attention to as being the largest and best assorted stock of the kind ever shown in Peterboro'.

SAWERS & MURRAY

Peterboro', October 6th, 1858. 39

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

Corner of George and Hunter Streets.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED on Interest on good security £300 or £300. Apply at this Office.

September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

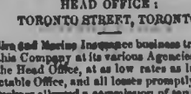
BOARD.

A FEW more Gentlemen can be accommodated with Board, with or without lodging at Mrs. Ridley's.

For particulars apply at this office, or at Mrs. Ridley's, Hunter Street.

Peterboro', November 17, 1858. 46

PETERBOROUGH



AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will be ready to act as such in those requiring his services.

AUCTIONEER,

Auction Rooms, first floor in Corner Brick Building, Water Street, opposite Dugglas, (Easthorpe Block,) where he will [illegible]

Terms moderate and strict attention to business may be relied on by those entrusting to his Commissions for sale.

[illegible]

CAUTION.

[illegible] Note for £20, made by me in favour of [illegible] Henry, as I will not pay the same having received no value therefor.

[illegible]

Peterboro', C. W. Nov. 12th, 1858. 45-3in

Farms, &c. for Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, south side of King street, containing ¼ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £300 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.

Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro

☞ November Number received, price 25 cts

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MOCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

What Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 10 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., consisting of 100 Acres: 66 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.

Peterboro', Nov. 2nd, 1858. 43tf

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE,

AND

CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 29, Letterworth and at the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor

Letterworth, Oct. 20, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is unsurpassed to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—Should be sold altogether or in building lots this month.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Lindsay, July 29, 1858. 32tf

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOOD-

[illegible]

will carry on his business at

THE ARMORY,

[illegible]

☞ A Fit Guaranteed.

Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-tf

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Mats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Walter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. T. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 21 1857. 2

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 5½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 6
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 2½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 5
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated....	0 6
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	0 4
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 11
5,50 ..	Punch.....	0 11
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly.....	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS

MUST BE STRICTLY

In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	3
12 Note " "	2
3 Steel Pens.....	1
1 Holder.....	1
1 Pencil.....	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....	½
Making a total of.....	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY,

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,

Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson,	Young Hyson.
Gunpowder,	Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S

ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE,

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ADELAIDE STREETS,

Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,

PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct, 19, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Ouseburn, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT.

Asphodel, 10th June, 1858. 24tf

DENTISTRY.

A [illegible] Peterborough [illegible] Hotel, [illegible] Peterborough. Nov. 9th, 1858. 44

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Annotts, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,00
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 2 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 2 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, over 20 cts., plain..	0,30
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,30
Do. Cottage Fireside, illustrated	0,60
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 320 pages	3,00
Gillilan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,30
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,60
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promises and Altar Stones	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,60
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	2,00
Menteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,30
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Tarnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, Illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 30

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, [illegible] department of Pocket Inks, Mucilage, with Bowles, Pencil Sharpeners, Letter and Account Files, Parallel Rulers, Pocket Diaries for 1859, Pocket Books, Portemonnaies. A new assortment of Steel Pens, Playing Cards, Colored Paper for Flowers, Perforated Card Board, Pocket [illegible], Cash Books, &c., &c.

S. & M. have also received a [illegible] assortment of TOY BOOKS, PICTURE [illegible] ing Games, Transparent Slates, &c., [illegible] for Children. Also

A New Assortment of Music for the Piano Forte or Voice.

SCHOOL BOOKS,

Every Book used in the Schools in Town and surrounding Townships kept in Stock, and supplied at the lowest prices.

WRAPPING PAPER.

S. & M have pleasure in informing the Merchants of Peterboro' and others that they have entered into arrangements whereby they can supply all sorts of Wrapping Paper at the most extra cost of Freight above the Manufacturers usual prices. They trust to have the patronage of all using such papers, as they can be supplied on better terms than they have ever been heretof

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental——Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 49.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	0	3	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over Ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be remembered.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Office [illegible] Walton and Ontario Streets.

[illegible] R. STEWART,
[illegible], Engineers, Land Surveyors, [illegible] Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. R. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857: 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCIENCE, BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 8, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 20

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ENGINEER, Civil Engineer, &c., Scotch Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1857. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in connection between the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the business of the town. The Stone [illegible] superior quality, and [illegible] Apply to the Town [illegible] other particulars, apply to Charles Dunlop, Esquire, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
[illegible] 13, 1856. 32

QUALIFICATION of Municipal Councillors and Police Trustees.

In order that it may be more generally known what is required by the Municipal Corporations Act, as qualifications of Mayors, Councillors, and Electors, we transcribe the most important sections concerning them:—

Section 70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, members of a Council, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the County within which the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, freehold or leasehold property rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment-Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars or leasehold to eight hundred dollars.

In Police Villages—Freehold or lease hold to four hundred dollars.

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to forty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to eighty dollars per annum.

In Towns—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum, or leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And in Cities—for Aldermen—Freehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to three hundred and twenty dollars per annum: and for Councilmen—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum or Leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this Section, shall not include a term less than a Tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Section 73. No Judge of any Court of Civil Jurisdiction, no Gaoler, or Keeper of a House of Correction, no Officer of any Municipality, no Bailiff of a Division Court, no Sheriff's Officer, no Inkeeper or Saloonkeeper, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, or Township Councillor), and no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a Member of the Council of the Corporation.

ELECTORS.

Section 75. The Electors of every Municipality for which there is an assessment roll, and the Electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are naturalborn or naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally rated on the last revised assessment-rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors and tenants.

Section 76. In Cities, Town and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the annual value following:

In Incorporated Villages—Twelve dollars;

In Towns—Twenty dollars; and

In Cities—Thirty Dollars.

Section 78. When a Municipality is divided into Wards or electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one Ward or electoral division; and if entitled to vote in the Ward in which he resides, he shall not be entitled to vote in any other Ward or electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act.

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated at an amount sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, then each of them shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deemed so rated.

Robert Burns.

From the Edinburgh Scotsman, Oct. 22.

The commemoration of a great day is coming upon us in Scotland, with some risk of its unawares or at finding no means prepared. The 25th of January is the First Centenary of the Birth of Robert Burns. It was impossible that the approach of such an occasion should not warm into some kind of action the national affection and admiration; and there are few districts in Lowland Scotland in which it is not already a mooted matter that the day shall not pass unremembered. But looking at all the preparations and proposals, the question rises, is there no way in which what Scotland feels and owes can be even more emphatically expressed and more worthily paid? We put the question not rhetorically, but in hopes of practical reply. There is, we fear, no probability that any form of expression that can be devised will be adequate to the occasion—there is no possibility of what is fittingest that being executed. The man was great, the occasion is great—the first that has ever been, the last that is ever to be.

At such a time it becomes us to remember, if at any time it were possible for us to forget, that a chief characteristic of Burns was his Nationality. Both as a man and as a poet, his soul intensely and thoroughly beat from head beyond compassing to finger-ends. In his richness and fullness of life, whether social or intellectual, he was and is hardly, for ever classified "the truest Scotchman." For many days together he would be content to be nothing else than a Scotchman. Whatever he was glorifying, the passion of his patriotism neither revolted nor cooled—in whatever strain his Muse may sing, on that subject there is never one word of reproach, but always of love and praise. And think how that was requitted—what Burns did for Scotland; and what Scotland did or has yet done for Burns! Nor was Burns' love of country fanatical or narrow—it had no scorn of what was good in others, and no blindness to what was bad in ourselves.—He loves mankind "the warld ower," but "beginning at Jerusalem." Chiefly however, did he show that his love of country was wise as well as warm, by the deep knowledge which he had and uttered of the Scottish people throughout all its sections and in all its moods. Sitting amidst the "hoast-provoking reek" of Mossgiel, or the fumes of the humble orgies at Tarbolton, his glowing eye through cottage and castle, hostlery and sanctuary. He thoroughly knew, and though he here and there widely rebelled he deeply felt that stern and religious faith which has done so much to make us what we are. He knew too the evil as well as the good that is in us—especially the evil that mingles with our best and emphatically with our holiest things. "This is superstition here, and that's hypocrisy!"—and they chastised them with scorpions, so that they bowel even now, their offences being ever new and the sting of that lash destined never to wax old.

"Pierced through
The body of the country, city, court"—

Thus loving and knowing his countrymen it was his choice or his lot, and it was our great fortune, that he gave all that was his; He had a genius equal to the loftiest themes that poetry ever strained to reach—"whatever there was of highest hope and hardest attempting," he had right to aim at and prospect of achieving. But with all the world, and other worlds, within scope of his "vision and his faculty divine," he looked at and sung of only us, the lowest of us, and only as we are, yet in our inmost souls as well as in our outward life. He might have found his imagination's home in palaces and castles, either on actual earth, or in the air where they would have arisen when he bade but he sought rather "the huts where poor men lie." His Muse might have dwelt with kings and warriors and olden martyrs; but he lays his hands on the Scottish peasant, and in our sight he stands a hero—he opens to us the cottar's door on Saturday night, and there a saint. If not with "daring Milton," far before some who have ventured the same flight, he might have reached the empyrean, bequeathed epics on the loves of angels and the wars of gods; but he saw pathos and sublimity in the passions and struggles which fill the hearts and the lives of the people whose and of whom he was. It was bold yet true that article in his poetic creed—

"What mak's fireside a happy clime
To weans and wife—
That's the true pathos and sublime
O' human life!"

By thus dedicating himself to us alone, he has exalted us and all that is ours. In the light shed from his genius and his memory, the Scottish Peasantry stand dignified, almost glorified, in view of the world. And he did this for Scotland not only chiefly but earliest. Not only more than before any other man, he made Scotland speak for and of herself. There had indeed been many Scotchmen great authors, but for generations there had been no Scotchman writing as and like a Scotsman—some were Anglified, and the rest and greatest were Frenchified. It is fitting we should also remember that Burns did not do this without some sacrifice of self. Writing of Scotland and in the Scotish tongue, he cut himself off from much of the appreciation and understanding of the world without. "You Saxons," wrote Jeffrey when ripened powers and observation had made him patient and ashamed of his first slighting estimate, "cannot relish him rightly—you miss half the pathos and more than half the sweetness—there is no such mistake as that your chief man is in the humor or the shrewd sense; it is in far higher and more delicate elements—God help you!" Hence again is Burns peculiarly ours, to know, to love, and on occasion now greatly serves, to honor.

How vast that gift of his whole self specially to us—how it has been great enough to fill Scottish hearts and homes, not in Scotland only, but over all the earth—no Scotchman need be told. Perhaps no nation was ever acted on so powerfully by any one writer through several and still continuing generations as Scotland has been by the songs of Robert Burns. "In hut and hall," says Carlyle, in his noble essay, "as the heart unfolds itself in the many-colored joy and woe of existence, the name, the voice of that joy and that woe is the name and voice which Burns gave them. Strictly speaking, perhaps, no British man has so deeply affected the thoughts and feelings of so many men, as the solitary and altogether private individual, with means apparently the humblest."

In this respect Scotland stands proudly beyond compare with either England or Ireland. England cannot be said to have a body of national song—she certainly has not one equal to a song writer. Ireland has many songs, but she has no bard—Moore, who was called "the Bard of Erin," is unread, and neither sings to nor is sung by the Irish people. But Scotland has a store of lyrics, which have given her renown and affection abroad, and are familiar and dear alike to all ranks and conditions of her own people—and for this she is indebted, beyond all other men taken in one, to Robert Burns. An Ayrshire ploughman, unbribed, unencouraged, almost unnoticed, wrote what his heavy successors in the district of his own rank and station, and very many and generations from, have gathered into their memories, and from passage to passage [illegible] wherever Scottish blood is flowing or the language of Briton is known, his power still grows, and tears and praises more and more wait upon his name.

[illegible]

On the 25th January 1959, it may be, and more than may be, a greater multitude than now, and with greater fervor, shall celebrate the second Burn's centenary. On that day shall they say that the men who lived when the first centenary came were neglectful and unworthy of the opportunity? A centenary celebration is no ordinary occasion—to many it never comes, it comes but once to any. This is the first of a celebration which each succeeding century shall renew—it is the only one that any now living shall see. Surely it is for the generation that lived nearest, and almost was part of Burns' own generation, not carelessly nor meanly to inaugurate a thanksgiving which shall be prolonged by remote generations in our own land and by states and nations yet unrisen.

What is most seemly and worthy to be done on the approaching day, is a question we at present seek to ask rather than to answer. One hint only we venture to throw out, and do so with modesty and misgiving. Bet the Hundredth Birthday of Robert Burns be a National Holiday. On that day let us do no work. Doubtless, questions can be raised as to fitness, convenience, cost—all of which there is yet time to consider. But, in decency, let us hear little about cost. Every now and again, we are called on to devote a day to thanking heaven for a good harvest and similar bounties. Shall we grudge, once in a hundred years, so to thank heaven for Robert Burns?

Law and Morality.

A criminal case, which was noticed briefly in our paper last week and more at length at the time of its occurrence, has just been creating a great amount of excitement in Scotland, which, if it had happened in this country, would never have been noticed at all, probably, either legally or by the public. We refer to the case of the servant girl at Polmont, who lost her life through an attempt to cause abortion. The accidental circumstances, as we may call them, attendant on the affair were marked by a fatality which reflected seriously on the accused. The girl died in the first instance. Then the doctor who had operated committed suicide by taking laudanum; while William Reid the accused principal in the affair, rested under the additional odium of having just been in prison on a charge which, though in the first instance most people believed it to be unjust, every one now thought must have had a good foundation. The public indignation against him was great, and now that we have seen all the evidence, we must say that we think it was not, in the extreme to which it was carried, altogether well founded. People would have it that he had committed murder; the public prosecutor tried him on that charge, and the wonder is that he was not convicted on it. The jury, in a most illogical manner, directed, too, by the Lord Justice-Clerk Inglis, found him guilty of causing abortion, and he was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. As pointed out in a most able and acute article in the Scotsman, a journal which always confronts error boldly in whatever connection it meets with it—the illogical and illegal nature of the finding is unquestionable. There can be no sort of doubt about it, in fact, and the wonder is that on the trial so many clear-headed men should have been led into error. It only shows how the generality of men are liable to err when the mind gets heated, or impressions from without are allowed to influence it. That Reid had a share in committing the offence that had such a miserable result, we do not doubt, but the evidence did not go to prove more than the likelihood of his knowledge of the doctor's presence in the house, which involved, of course, complicity to a certain extent, though to what extent it would be difficult to determine.—The probability is that Reid's object, to whatever extent he may have lent himself to the commission of the offence, was with a view to the girl's interest rather than his own—a criminal error, but one not of murderous intent. Yet no language has been strong enough to denounce him even since the evidence has been published, and some of our contemporaries seem to be virtuously rabid because the young man has not been hanged, the grand offence being in their estimation the original one which led to all the subsequent crime and calamity. Really, considering the facts revealed by recent statistics, there would be a great deal of hanging in Scotland if this branch of morality were treated as some of our contemporaries would seem to desire. A little less hypocrisy and inconsistency in suffering to such subjects would be an improvement. We do not admire the virtue that consists in hounding down "one more unfortunate" when he or she may be betrayed with unusual fatality into crime and public exposure. We have been led into these remarks unintentionally; our object was to point out the strong contrast between Scotland and the United States, with reference to offences of this class, to the immense advantage of the former.—Here in New York the sort of service on account of which poor young Girdwood committed suicide are advertised openly and extensively in the Sunday papers, and we cannot express our astonishment at seeing a whole string of them from male and female practitioners, the first time we opened one of these journals! Then it is that national morals differ. What is presently regarded with horror in Scotland is tolerated in Paris thought nothing of. It is possible that the horror may be overdone in Scotland, and in Scotch cases we think the public have been led to give way to unreasonable depression in love and result from the former, and a more lenient [illegible]

[illegible]

The North West.

On Friday last there might have been seen, at the Post Office here, a small box, not much more than eighteen inches long, screwed down and protected with wax, and marked "Red River Mail, No. 1." This small and seemingly insignificant box contained the germ, out of which may spring wonderful, and to this country, most important results. It was the first overland mail to Red River, which left Barrie on Friday, in charge of William Gibbard, Esq., and was Penetanguishene, Gibson's Mills, French River, Killarney, Manitoowaning, La Cloche, Bruce and Wellington Mines, Garden River, reaches the Sault Ste. Marie, and thence by Michipicoton, Nepigon, Fort William, Fort Francis to Fort Garry on the Red River. The mail to the Sault St. Marie will leave here during the season twice a month, and from the Sault to Red River is forwarded monthly. Thus last week commenced the opening journey on a route which, we venture to predict, will ere long be occupied with an extensive business, a long-abandoned pathway is now reopened to regions which have acquired an extraordinary value intrinsically, and relatively an importance which is beyond calculation. At the present time no criterion can be formed of the time necessary to complete these pioneer journeys. The mail contract has only been let within the last week or two, and the route in some places is only as yet known to one or two of the servants of the Hudson's Bay Company, who therefore possess a monopoly of the road, and doubtless will, at the commencement, put some obstacles in the way of the expedition. It is expected that next year our Government, who have taken such hearty hold of this North West route, or the newly organised North West Company, will cut a track of their own, which will much facilitate the progress and efficiency of the route; the building of depots is also contemplated along the route. Means such as these for furthering and securing the safety and security of the mail carriers, will enable them to carry through a winter mail as quickly as the Americans. With regard to the communication with these distant parts of the British empire during the summer, there can be no probable competition; and when the arrangements for the winter service are effected and consolidated by experience, there can be no chance of any successful rivalry in this North West route; and we may expect to see it permanently established as the highway for rapid and speedy communication with the shores of the Pacific and the intermediate settlements. Some of the advantages which we, in conjunction with our Red River friends, already derive from the new arrangements, can be enumerated as follows:—Four years ago a yearly mail arrived at the Red River during the winter season, and the postage of a letter cost ten shillings stg., equal to two dollars and a half currency. Now during the winter, the settlers at the Red River and intermediate places may read their letters monthly, at a cost of 3d, and newspapers carried free, will convey information from the outer world at no longer intervals than a month. Places on this side of the Sault Ste. Marie will enjoy the same conveniences fortnightly at the same cost.—Doubtless others besides the oldest inhabitant of Barrie will remember, when our respected townsman, George Lount, Esq., then postmaster at Holland Landing, sent on the Northern mail once a month, and often found great difficulty in procuring a man sufficiently adventurous and hardy to undertake the conveyance of the mail so far as Barrie.

The present state of accommodation is a wonderful contrast to those bygone times. Who could have foretold the change? and who can be sufficiently prophetic to say what further changes and triumphs over material nature may take place during the next five years. The opening of this route will cleave a path to the fine agricultural land north of lakes Huron and Superior, (already being laid out and large blocks disposed of to Norwegians); the rich lands described by the Canadian expedition at Fort William; the alluvial deposits at Rainy Lake, described by Mr. Gibbard and others, as equal for cultivation and settlement to any lands in the world—the rolling prairies of the Red River and the Saskatchewan Valley. These lands settled and occupied; the vast mineral regions on the shores of the Great Lakes developed, and an abundant population deriving subsistence and gathering wealth in those now unproductive and comparatively waste places of the earth, what will be the amount of traffic then required to accommodate the new state of things? what must be then done with the small box, about eighteen inches in length, which now suffices to hold the communications of the North-Western regions? The diminutive casket, at the bottom of which lies the hope of a world, should be treasured up as a relic worthy of the admiration and curiosity of future years, as a living proof of the mighty changes which will have completely altered the face of the country, peopled a continent, and given a new course to the traffic of the world. We shall not perhaps be considered at all too sanguine when we give utterance to the oft-predicted result of these small beginnings, with all seriousness and confidence, when we say that this finger-path now opened and trodden by our energetic and adventurous friend Mr. Wm. Gibbard, will become the highway of the traffic of what we now call the East—that on the wings of steam, (to speak in prose we should say subsidy), will be carried to and fro the communications and produce of the greater part of the world; that in Vankoughnet's Island we shall possibly see a second Britain, (in the climate, agricultural resources, minerals, &c., with its wonderful fisheries and proximity to the Pacific), and that in Fort William, the present mere depot for the mail, will be a great commercial emporium, the [illegible] of the Pacific, standing [illegible] the Old World and the New, and [illegible] the Occidental and Oriental [illegible] the Old World and the New, and [illegible] the Occidental and Oriental [illegible]

[illegible]

Man With A Petrified Wife.

A few days since, says the Cincinnati Inquirer, a gentleman residing in Rising Sun, Indiana, who had married a second time, wished to remove the body of his wife to a new cemetery. Preparations were made to that effect and laborers opened the grave in the usual manner; but when they reached the coffin they could not lift it, so great was the weight. After obtaining considerable assistance, however, the men succeeded in raising the coffin from the tomb. They then could not resist the temptation of peering into the coffin and learning the reason for the unusual weight, and found instead of the remains of the corpse, a stone figure, the exact counterpart of the woman who had died. The strange story soon spread, and hundreds of persons were present to see the strange spectacle.

The husband took the body of his departed spouse home and has it there now, where it is visited by hundreds of the curious and scientific. The body seems to have been petrified, and to have become a perfect stone woman.

Mr. Barry's Tour and Return.

Mr. Barry has once more returned to London, and the confederacy is dissolved between him and Mr. Goodenough, who departed for Canada about two months since. The former gentleman has spent about eighteen or twenty days in Lapland, and instructed a class of 200 at Stockholm on his way back here. As in England, he numbered several of the Swedish Ministers among his pupils, and gave a grand exhibition in the Royal Riding School before the Crown Prince and his suite. Two subjects were brought to him—one, a well-bred colt of four or five years old, as wild and nervous as a roe deer, and which never had anything but a halter on. This one occupied him forty minutes, and the process of giving it confidence was so interesting that the whole company rose from their chairs almost at the outset, and never resumed them till he rode it round the ring and played with it at his will. The second was a bay, half-bred Arab mare, whose hind feet no man had ever yet been able to shoe, and whom only one groom in Sweden durst approach. Biting and hind-leg vice were her peculiar "vanities," and she was so violent when she was led into the ring and delivered over to him that at one time several of the spectators feared she would have made a summary end of him. The result proved that he had not misjudged his powers, as he brought her cleverly to hand in an hour and twenty minutes. The Crown Prince then stepped forward, shook hands with him most warmly, and presented him with a gold medal as a memento of his victory. The system seems to be creating quite as much enthusiasm on the Continent as it did in England, and Mr. Rarey and Cruiser bid fair to be in modern what Alexander and Bucephalus were in ancient history. We believe that there is every probability of his being engaged by the Government to instruct the army roughriders. A commission has been appointed to investigate his system, and it is understood that they have reported most favourably.—Illustrated London News.

PRESENT FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES FROM THE EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH.—Several French officers have arrived at Windsor from France with an ordnance of exquisite workmanship, as a birthday present from the Emperor of the French to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The gun is placed in the royal stews until after the presentation, which was to take place yesterday. Several of the artillery, with their horses have also arrived from Woolwich, and are quartered at the Spittal Barracks for the purpose of exercising with the gun before her Majesty and the Court in the Great Park. The engraving on the piece is said to have cost the Emperor upwards of 2000 francs.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, under date 26th November, says: The special meeting of the Cabinet to-day lasted to a late hour this evening. The president is very much depressed by the alarming state of our foreign affairs. He thinks we are on the eve of great events, involving war with Spain, a Protectorate over Mexico, the seizure of Cuba, and danger of a war with France and England. To encounter these grave emergencies, we have no adequate naval force in the Gulf, as that can be sent thither. Our ships are on the Mediterranean in the Chinese seas or on a wasteful and hazardous cruising to Paraguay. The Secretary offers the same gloomy views of the situation, and is of opinion that [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Bright on Parliamentary Reform.

In the speech delivered by Mr. Bright at Birmingham, on Wednesday week, of which we gave a telegraphic summary in our last, the hon. member thus referred to the question of Parliamentary Reform:

I shall take this opportunity of discussing, and so far as I am able with brevity and distinctness, what I think we ought to aim at this moment, when the great question of Parliamentary Reform is before the country. I think I may safely say that this question occupies now something like a triumphant position—and at the same time a position of great peril—triumphant, inasmuch as it has now no open enemies—perilous, inasmuch as, for the moment, it is taken up by those who, up to this hour, have been the most uncompromising opponents of reform. (Cheers.) We have had four Governments pledged to Parliamentary reform within the last few years. Lord John Russell, as Prime Minister, introduced a Reform Bill, and afterwards in the Government of Lord Aberdeen, Lord J. Russell introduced another Reform Bill, and the least said of these two Bills, especially the latter, the better. (Laughter.) The Government which has recently been overthrown pledged itself to the country and the House of Commons to bring in a Reform Bill, but at the time when it came to an unexpected but a not undeserved end—(loud cheers)—no bill had been prepared, so that we know nothing of the particulars of what it is to be composed. We have now a Government under the chieftainship of Lord Derby, who, during his short term of office in 1852, stated, if I remember right, that one of the chief objects of his Government, would be to stem the tide of democracy. (Laughter.) Now, it may be that Lord Derby has entirely changed his mind, that he is as much converted to Parliamentary Reform as Sir R. Peel was in 1846 converted to corn-law repeal. If he is, then our question may be in good hands, but if he is not—and he has never yet acknowledged his conversion—then I think it is but reasonable for us to view his course with some suspicion, and to look upon the question in his hands with some alarm. (Hear, hear.) They all pretend now to be very much in favour of the question of reform, but still they don't tell us much about it. They remind me, in few speeches which they have made upon the question, of the condition of that deplorable American cable, of which I read the other day in the papers that "the current were visible, but the signals wholly indistinct." (Loud laughter.) But having admitted that Parliamentary Reform is necessary, they thereby admit that the present House of Commons does not satisfactorily represent the nation—and it is one step in advance to receive that admission from all those persons from among whom it has hitherto been supposed that Governments could alone be formed in this country. (Hear.) Now I do not believe that the Parliament, as at present constituted, does fairly represent the nation, and I think it is capable of most distinct proof that it does not. Mr. Bright here referred, in proof of his assertion, to the long and anxious agitation that preceded free trade—to the paramount political influences in both Houses of Parliament of the Established Church—to the "superhuman" effort by which Mr. Gladstone imposed the succession tax, though still the legacy duty on land was much less than that imposed on other kinds of property—to the scandalous inequality of the income tax. He next proceeded to show how utterly unequal the present representation was. He drew a comparison between certain boroughs in Yorkshire and other boroughs in that County, showing that ten small boroughs with a population of 80,000, returned 16 members, 8 other boroughs with a population of 620,000, only returned 14 members. He also contrasted 11 members sent from Buckinghamshire with a population of 164,000, with the two sent from Birmingham with a population of 250,000. He showed that there were 22 boroughs in three counties sending members which had only one-half the population of Birmingham.—(Cries of "Shame.") These facts were to be taken into consideration with another, namely, that out of every six individuals we meet only one has the right of voting.—Now, he went on to say, I wish to ask this meeting—and let us try to take a judicial and dispassionate view of the question when we talk of reform—what is that we really want? I hold it to be this—that we want to substitute a real honest representation of the people for that fradulent thing which we call a representation now. [Loud cheers.] But there is a very serious question to be decided before we can almost take a step. When you are about to reform the House of Commons you must eyes to be turned to the House of Peers, or to the great body of the nation? The House of Peers, as you know, does not travel very fast—even what is called a Parliamentary train is too fast for its nerves—in fact, it never travels at all unless somebody shoves it. (Loud laughter. If any man proposes to reform the House of Commons just so much and no more as will allow it to keep pace with the wishes of the House of Lords, I would ask him not to take any trouble in the matter but just to leave it exactly [illegible] it is. (Cheers.) The question between the people and the Peers is one which cannot be evaded. It is the great difficulty in the way of our friends at head-quarters who are for reform, but don't know how to do it. It was the difficulty which Lord John Russell felt. Lord John Russell—I believe you may utter my word for it—has gradually, from association, from [illegible] from his reading and study, and from his position [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

you this day whom you will serve." If the Peers are to be your masters, as they boast that their fathers were the conquerors of yours, serve you them. ("Never.") But if you will serve only the laws, the laws of your country, the great laws on which you have been consulted, you may go on to discuss this great question of Parliamentary reform. I am not going to attack the House of Lords. (Laughter.) Some people tell us that the House of Lords has in its time done great things for freedom. Well, it may be so, though I have not been so successful in finding out where or when as some people. (Cheers.) At least since 1690, or thereabouts, when the Peers became the dominant power in this country, I am not able to discover one single measure important to human or English freedom which has come from the voluntary consent, and good-will of their House.—(Cheers.) And, really, how should it? You know what a Peer is. He is one of those fortunate individuals who are described as coming into this world "with silver spoons in their mouths." (Laughter.)—Or, to use the more polished and elaborate phraseology of the poet—

"Fortune came smiling to his youth and welcomed it,
And purpled greatness met his ripened years."

When he is a boy among his brothers and sisters he is pre-eminent; he is the eldest son; he will be "My Lord;" this fine mansion, this beautiful park, these countless farms, this vast political influence, will one day centre on this innocent boy. The servants know it, and pay him greater deference on account of it. He grows up and goes to school and college; his future position is known; he has no great incitement to work hard, but whatever he does, it is very difficult for him to improve his fortune in any way. When he leaves college he has a secure position ready-made for him, and there seems to be no reason why he should follow ardently any of those occupations which make men great among their fellow-men. He takes his seat in the House of Peers; whatever be his character, whatever his intellect, whatever his previous life, whether he be in England or 10,000 miles away, he be tottering down the steep of age, or he be passing through the imbecility of second childhood, yet by the means of that charming contrivance—made only for Peers—vote by proxy, he gives his vote for or against, and, unfortunately, too often against, all those great measures on which you and the country have set your hearts. (Loud cheers.)—There is another kind of Peer which I am afraid to touch upon—that creature of—what shall I say?—of monstrous, nay, even of adulterous birth—the spiritual Peer.—I assure you with the utmost sincerity and frankness it is not in the nature of things that men in those positions should become willing fountains from whence should flow great things for the freedom of any country. We are always told that the Peers are necessary as a check. If this is so, I must say that they answer their purpose admirably. (Laughter.) With regard to the question of the suffrage which I state is one of the chief points on which I should insist, I have no doubt there are persons, who, on reading my speech, will say, "Subversive doctrine, violent language this. The change which you would propose would endanger many things which we highly value." Now, I beg to assure all those timid people that I do not want to endanger any of the ancient landmarks of our constitution. I do not want to disturb this question of the franchise beyond what has been already sanctioned by Parliament and the country. I do not wish to introduce any new principle or any theoretical opinion which it may be found difficult to adopt. There are many men probably among those whom I see before me who are of opinion that every man should have a vote. (Loud cheers.) They are for what is called "universal suffrage," or "manhood suffrage"—something which represents that every man of 21 years of age, who has not forfeited his right by any misconduct, should have a vote. Let me say that, personally, I have not the smallest objection to the widest possible suffrage that the ingenuity of man can devise. [Cheers.] At the same time if I were now a member of a Government, and had to arrange a Reform Bill for next session, I should not act upon that principle. I will tell you upon what principle I would act. I find in the country great diversities of opinion, and that being the case it clearly is the duty of Government, and of Parliament too, to frame a measure which will fairly represent what may be called the Reasonable [illegible] of the whole country. What [illegible] present in the way of franchises [illegible] the parish franchises. For [illegible] ages past, there has been [illegible] in all our parishes [illegible] have worked unostentatiously and satisfactorily to the country. We have a franchise in our Poor Law unions. We have a corporation franchise, and, with the exception of a stupid provision that people should live in towns three [illegible] before they can exercise it, that franchise may be said to have worked generally satisfactorily to the country. I will not enquire here whether he believes that in all the parishes, all the poor-law unions, and all the corporations, men have not conducted themselves with great propriety, and managed the affairs of their parishes, unions, and corporations satisfactorily? And I should like to ask them whether they [illegible] object to have the same franchise conferred upon them for the election of members to the House of Commons. [Cheers.] There is our great [illegible] path to [illegible] our reformation would be simple and unpretentious. There is another point to which I wish to advert, which is, that [illegible] whatever its dimensions, they would not [illegible] [illegible] should not be so extensive there as in the boroughs; but there appears to be a general understanding that the next step in counties shall be one short of that. But I think it of great importance that the 40s franchise should be extended to all parts of the United Kingdom as fully as it is to the people of England and Wales. [Cheer.] Whatever changes were regarded as desirable, the ballot, he continued to say, must be a necessary accompaniment, and one which the state of things rendered inevitable. He believed that when the franchise is thus extended, when the apportionment of members to the constituency approximates to a just arrangement, and when they had the protection of the ballot, they would have that kind of representation in the House of Commons which will give to every man who sits there a real constituency, and will fix him with a real responsibility. He believed there was no country in the world that pretends to regular Government where there is less of real responsibility among high officials than there is in England. Mr. Bright here quoted the case of Sir W. Williams, of Kars, who, as he alleged, while he was closely besieged by the Russians, forwarded to Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, at Constantinople, more than sixty letters or despatches asking for relief, of which his lordship did not take the slightest notice, treating them as waste paper. If Lord Stratford had been a Russian noble, and had so behaved, before taking his seat in the House of Peers, and going on a special mission to Constantinople, he would have had the advantage of going on a special mission to Siberia. [Cheers and laughter.] Mr. Bright concluded in the following words:—This question of Parliamentary Reform, then, is a great and serious question. I want to give a warning to those persons who are now engaged, if there be any engaged, in constructing a Reform Bill for the next session. Let them not bring in a delusive and sham measure. [Cheers.] Universal suffrage, equal distribution, vote by ballot—any of these points may or may not be perilous; but, if there be one thing more distinctly perilous than another to the ruling classes in this country it is that when they are committed to at least a temporary—I wish it were a permanent—settlement of this Bill which, while it offers you something great in the way of constitutional freedom, is found immediately after it has passed to be nothing but a delusion and a sham. [Loud cheers.] It will exasperate all the Reformers; it will render a feeling which is now not bitter, both bitter and malignant, and within 12 months after the Bill has passed and the cheat is discovered we shall be entered in all probability upon another agitation of a very different character from any we have yet seen. [Cheers.] Let us have a real Bill, a good Bill, or no Bill at all. The question at this moment is in the hands of the enemy. We stand the risk of having brought before us what I will describe as a "country gentleman's Reform Bill." (Hear, hear.) The country gentlemen have not been notorious for their sympathies in favor of reform. We have always been carrying on for the last thirty years and more a steady and perpetual war against the predominance and the power of the country gentlemen in Parliament. If we look at their past policy we shall not have much confidence in their proposed measure.—Their wars, their debts, their taxes, placed upon the bulk of the people, their stout opposition to the Reform Bill of 1852,—all this leads us greatly to suspect them; and I confess for my own part that I wish the question of reform was in the hands of Reformers—in the hands of men of whose sympathies with respect to it we could not have, from their past lives, the shadow of a doubt. (Cheers.) I have great fears that until you have a Ministry in which there are men who are equally in favor of reform, and of an honest reform, you are not likely to get any such measure as the most moderate among us ought to be in the least satisfied with. (Hear, hear.) Now I have a suggestion to make which I hope somebody will act upon. The Reformers now are more numerous than ever they were before. Why should they not by some arrangement have their own Reform Bill—have it introduced into Parliament and supported with all the strength of this great national party; and if it be a Bill sensibly better than the Bill that is being prepared for us in Downing Street, why should we not, with all the unanimity of which we are capable,—by public meetings, by petitions, and when the proper time comes by presenting ourselves at the polling booths,—do all in our power to pass that measure into law? [Loud cheers.] I say that we are great in numbers; that united we are great in strength; that we are invincible in the solidity of our arguments; that we are altogether unassailable in the justice of our cause. [Cheers.] Shall we then, I ask you, even for a moment be hopeless of our great cause? I feel almost ashamed to argue it to such a meeting as this. I call to mind where I am, and who are those whom I see before me. [Cheers.] Am I not in the Town of Birmingham—England's central capital; and do not those eyes look upon the sons of them who, not 30 years ago shook the fabric of privilege to its base? [Cheers.] Not a few of the strong men of that time are now white with age. They approach the confines of their mortal day. Its evening is cheered with the remembrance of that great contest, and to rejoice in the freedom they have won. Shall their sons be less noble than they? [Cries of "No, no," and cheers.] Shall the fire which they kindled be extinguished with you? [Renewed cries of "No, no," and cheering.] Why, I see the answer in every face. You are resolved that the legacy which to you they bequeathed you will hand down in an accumulated wealth of freedom to your children. [Great cheering.] As for me, my voice is feeble. I feel now acutely and painfully that I am not what I was. I speak with a diminished fire; I speak with a lessened force; but as I am, my countrymen and my constituents, I will, if you let me, be found in your ranks in the impending struggle. [The hon. gentleman sat down amid great cheering, which was renewed again and again, the audience rising and waving their hats and handkerchiefs in the most enthusiastic manner.]

English News.

An affliction with which newspaper editors have often to contend is the occurrence of periods of scarcity, when it is really difficult to find any contemporary subjects likely to interest the public. Such a visitation we suffer from at present, Sir, with the exception of the President's Message, which has come at the last moment to our relief in a partial way, there has been really nothing in the shape of news for some time past that the public can be supposed to feel any desire to have discussed. The penny bread sheet, however, has always to be filled. We have no intention for the standard lately complained of by some of the London papers, according to which a full number of articles of a certain length could appear in every publication, but we must be allowed to say that we do not like "padding." The compression style of the contemporaries [illegible] the work [illegible] leading articles by the editor's absence or some other private or personal reason not so fit to be stated, is all very well in the remote west, but is not found to answer in civilized cities like New York, where you are always expected to have something to say, though the reverse may be very much the case. The tale of bricks must be made up whether there be straw or not, and so, for want of other and more important topics this week, we string together items of English news.

During the week before the leaving of the last mail the country had been engaged in reviving its veneration for Queen Elizabeth. Her Majesty is rightly regarded as having established protestantism in England; and, without enquiring too curiously into her motive, it is enough that the Established Church dates decidedly from her reign. Constitutional government was unknown in her time; and perhaps among her contemporary crowned heads there was not one more arbitrary than herself. Her indomitable energy and self-will suited the age, and some of her subjects did not think the worse of her for burning and beheading a few score of the others. The battle of the day was fought on religious grounds, between the Catholics and the Protestants; and the Spanish Armada failing, the Protestants gained the ascendant, and kept it ever since, and will keep it forever—for a nation never returns to a former creed.—New ones are possible, old ones impossible. Nothing was, therefore more appropriate than the celebration of the accession of Elizabeth to the throne three hundred years ago, and the more ardent clergymen entered themselves in imparting a decided character to the day. In London sermons were preached in all the principal churches, and a voluminous charge was delivered by the Bishop.

The object of Mr. Gladstone's mission to Corfu is hardly any longer a mystery. Through some means not yet known, the Daily News obtained possession of a dispatch from Sir John Young, Chief Commissioner, written in 1857, advising her Majesty's Government to hand over five of the Islands to the Government of Greece, retaining only Corfu as a military station. The object therefore, it is believed, of Mr. Gladstone, is to acquire on the spot a perfect knowledge of all the circumstances, so that his report may be a guide to Ministers in dealing with the question. The islanders, it appears, are discontented with the British Government; and, as there is really nothing gained by retaining them as subjects, some trouble and considerable annoyance would be got rid of by getting rid of them. The population of the whole of the islands is only about a quarter of a million, and some seventy thousand of these belong to Corfu.

The depression in the shipping interest has brought the shipowners in contact with Government. The people of Newcastle contend that foreign States have not reciprocated British trade; and Lord Malmesbury has directed his secretary "to state to the men of Greenock, that he regrets to say that the apprehensions that were entertained by many persons of the probable effect of the abolition of the Navigation Laws have been realized, and that the efforts of her Majesty's Government have hitherto proved unavailing to obtain for the shipping of England that reciprocity of the liberal measures she has granted to other nations which she was entitled to except." The real controvery, says the Times, was, "even supposing that foreign countries were not enlightened enough to follow our example, as was only too likely to be the case, did we not gain as a nation by their competition and the consequent lowering of freights, even though they might not be wise enough to secure a similar advantage for themselves? The question of the reciprocity was of the highest importance from the Protectionists view, and quite immaterial to the Free Trade argument."

Several members of Parliament have been speaking to their constituents during the week; but, without an exception, every one made what may be called exclusive reference to the Reform Bill, about which, at present, nobody knows anything. Reform meetings have also been held, generally of the working classes, and with these manhood suffrage seems to hold a prominent place. Mr. Bazley, who, it is reported, is in favour of manhood suffrage, has been elected without opposition for Manchester, in the place of the late Sir John Potter.—Scottish Am. Journal.

Death of the Honorable Robert Baldwin.

From the Leader.

We regret to announce the death of the Honorable Robert Baldwin, which took place last evening, at his residence in Spadina. Mr. Baldwin was born in this city, in 1802. His family, father and grandfather, came to this country in 1793. His father, the Honorable William Warren Baldwin, was the son of Robert Baldwin, Esq., of Summer Hill, otherwise Knockmoole, near Corregoline, in the County of Cork, Ireland. When the family came to this country, they originally settled in the township of Clarke, on Lake Ontario, where they were among the earliest settlers. They afterwards removed to this city—then the Town of York—where they took up their residence in Spadina; and there the family resided till the death of the father of the subject of this notice, which took place on the 8th January, 1844. The Hon. W.W. Baldwin, was a medical man; having taken his degree of M. D. at Edinburgh. After removing to York, however, Dr. Baldwin betook himself to the profession of law, which he practised with success for a number of years. He (father of the Hon. R. Baldwin) had represented the County of Norfolk in the Parliament of Upper Canada; and been called to the Legislative Council about six months before his death. On the occasion of the death of Dr. Baldwin, Mr. Hincks wrote: "Our country has lost a friend; and the country, it may be said, will follow him as mourners to the grave. By the removal of one so worthy, so disinterested, so excellent, we have sustained a loss, the magnitude of which it is difficult to appreciate, much more, in this community, to repair. It is not Toronto only that will feel the privation, or drop tears of submissive sorrow over his honored tomb. The sad tidings, like an electric shock, the loss convulsive in its effects becomes expected, will widely extend an awakened interest over regions sufficiently enlightened to appreciate his worth, and sufficiently grateful to deplore his loss." To his son, a cherub of whose life we are called upon suddenly after midnight to write, these words might with equal truth be applied. No public man, in Canada, perhaps, in his day, commanded such general respect as the Hon. Robert Baldwin, who yesterday evening departed this life. His integrity was so far above suspicion that the breath of calumny itself never uttered a word against his fair fame. He commanded the respect of all parties: the offusion of his own was willingly reciprocated. His name, even in the full flower of his life, was a tower of strength: it might easily have been elevated to the chief seat of party rule; while the gratitude of party raised which the gratitude of [illegible]

In stature Mr. Baldwin must have been about five feet nine or ten inches. His frame was of stout build; but the work of disease appears to have begun to undermine his constitution eight or nine years ago. In the spring of 1850 his health had visibly declined; and there being no hopes of a speedy improvement, he was the more anxious to retire from public life, in the following year.

He was of a mild and affable disposition; but he lacked that peculiar style of address which characterizes the man easy of access and of familiar manners and habits. He had few of the characteristics which usually make a man popular with the crowd. He scorned to bend to those petty arts which inferior men find so useful and indeed so indispensable to their success in dealing with the public. He paid small court to even the most prominent of his constituents; and by this means lost something of that ephemeral and local popularity which are necessary to the statesman who wishes to retain undiminished the full strength of his position. His name is, however, inseperably interwoven with the brightest period of our history; the period in which constitutional principles triumphed over the oligarchical system on which the Province had previously been ruled. His was a career that will be the more valued according to the increasing distance at which it is seen; his a lustre that will shine the brighter as time continues to roll on.

Following the profession adopted by his father, he entered on the practice of the law; and the firm was carried on under the name of Baldwin & Soe—till he retired on the 28th July, 1843, when the business was continued by Mr. Adam Wilson. His father and he built up an extensive and lucrative practice; and he must have left behind him a fortune of something like a million of dollars. He owned an immense amount of property in this city. Of the large amount of wealth which he leaves behind, a part went to his father by request from the Hon. Peter Russell.

Mr. Baldwin inherited the liberal principles of his father. He was first elected to the Upper Canada Assembly in 1829, in opposition to Mr. Small; having in the previous year made an unsuccessful run against Mr. Mackenzie, for the County of York. This election took place on the resignation of Chief Justice Robinson; Mr. Baldwin came forward as the liberal candidate in opposition to Sir John Colborne's Administration. His opponent was then Deputy Clerk of the Crown, and many of his friends were well provided for, in one way or another, out of the public. The whole influence of the placemen was cast against Mr. Baldwin. While the election was pending, Mr. Mackenzie wrote: "Our earnest wish is that the election of Mr. Baldwin may prove to the world that the capital of Upper Canada has burst her fetters, and followed the praiseworthy example of her sister city, Quebec, which sent to Parliament an independent citizen, a few months ago, in spite of all the military and civil influences of all the constituted authorities." Sir John Colborne, before his retirement from the government, recommended to the Colonial Secretary the appointment of Mr. Baldwin to the Legislative Council, of which body, if we mistake not, an uncle of his was member. The appointment was, however, not made; and a subsequent Governor wrote to England to discourage the recommendation of Sir J. Colborne.

The Opposition in which Mr. Baldwin, the newly elected member for York—now Toronto—had allied himself had a Parliamentary existence as early as 1820. Even at that time it was respectable, if not formidable, both in talent and numbers; but as yet it could not count a majority of the representatives. But after the election of 1824, the scales were turned; and the Government found itself perpetually in a minority in the popular branch of the Legislature. The election of 1828 brought an additional strength to the Executive Government; and the same anomalous spectacle of a Government ruling in defiance of the constantly expressed wishes of the Legislative Assembly presented itself to the eyes of Mr. Baldwin, when, in 1829, he entered Parliament for the first time.—It was well calculated to impress upon his mind the necessity which existed for changing the system of Government. Subsequent events were not calculated to remove that impression; for although the Executive did contrive to secure the return of a majority of supporters in the election of 1830, events soon showed that this was but a passing accident; for the elections of 1834 again left them in a minority, in which condition the Government continued to be carried on for two years. In the 12 years from 1824 to 1836, the Executive was in a minority in the Legislative Assembly for eight years. During the whole of this time, the Legislative Assembly were persistently passing Bills which were as constantly rejected by the Legislative Council. For these evils Mr. Baldwin declared that he saw no remedy but that of placing the "Executive Council permanently upon the footing of a local Provincial Cabinet, holding the same relative with reference to the representative of the king and Provincial Parliament as that on which the King's Imperial Cabinet stands with respect to the Parliament of the Empire; and applying to such Provincial Cabinet, both in respect to their appointments and continuance in office, the same principles as those which are acted upon by "His Majesty with respect to the Imperial Cabinet." To an elective Legislative Council Mr. Baldwin was opposed, believing that the demand for it would never have arisen if the principle of Responsible Government had been conceded as soon as the Executive found themselves permanently in a minority in the Legislative Assembly. This opinion he never changed. He never concurred in the propriety of constituting, on a new basis, the Legislative Council; and for this reason he thought there would be an incongruity in his consenting to be elected to that Chamber. From the time of Mr. Baldwin's entrance into Parliament, we find the principle of executive responsibility constantly asserted. It was embodied in the address in reply to the speech from the throne, 1829; and again in 1835, it was made the subject of a solemn appeal to the Imperial Government, in an address to the Sovereign, passed by a majority of 21 votes. On this occasion, the Assembly went so far as to intimate their intention to refuse the supplies if their reasonable demand were not complied with. After the resignation of the Executive Council, in 1836, of which Mr. Baldwin was a member, the Legislative Assembly adopted a resolution declaring it to be the opinion of that House that the appointment of a Responsible Executive Council, "to advise the Lieutenant Governor on the affairs of the Province, was one of the most happy and wise features in the constitution and essential in our form of government." In a Message of fifty-five columns only two months afterwards addressed upon this resolution, Sir Francis Bond Head, what he considered the only true principle of Responsible Government, which he contended was "that the Governor of my country is to be carried on in accordance with the principles of Responsible Government, which I have ever held. My position, politically, is certainly peculiar; but its peculiarity has arisen out of the position in which the present Parliament has placed the Governor General [Sir George Arthur], themselves and the country, by the course they choose to adopt during the last session; and it is therefore right that it should be distinctly understood that I have not come into office by means of any coalition with the Attorney General. . . . . Whenever I find that the Government is to be carried on upon principles adverse to those I profess I shall cease to afford them any support, and shall cease to be a servant of the Crown." This step was fully endorsed by the country, and Mr. Baldwin was elected for two constituencies, the South Riding of York and the County of Hastings. In September 1842 Mr. Baldwin became Solicitor General for Upper Canada, Mr. Lafontaine occupying the corresponding office in Lower Canada and divided with him the somewhat anomalous dual Premiership. He continued to occupy this position till the rupture with Sir Charles Metcalfe. Taking the same office again in February, 1848, he held it till July, 1851, when he quitted Ministerial life for ever. At different times he represented the town of York, the Fourth Riding of York, Rimouski and Hastings, in Parliament.

Mr. Baldwin married a sister of the late Hon. Robt. Sullivan, who bore him several children. He survived her. A man of charitable disposition, and he has been known to subscribe as much as £100 at a time to a worthy object.

Our Ocean Steam Line.—The initiation of an Ocean Steam Company between Liverpool and Canada, was looked upon by the rival lines, having their termination in the United States, with as much contempt as surprise. The Canard line, with its magnificent subsidy from the Imperial Government and the Collins Line, receiving also a considerable Bonus from the Government at Washington, might well look with disdain at the new competition springing up. They were the giants; their rivals would be pigmies. And for a time they were right.—During the period that the first contractors were tabernacled, what between their own incapacity and the insufficiency of their ships—"tubs," if we remember rightly, was the designation given them—the trips were most irregularly performed; sailing vessels leaving the other side, at the same time, coming in first: and the steamers not coming in at all; until the matter was forced under the notice of the Legislature, and the contract cancelled. Then the company of which Messrs. Edmistone, Allan and Company, are the Montreal Agents, started into existence, and beat the Contractors; and the character of their steamships so fast ordered, possessing every accommodation, rolls the best as to safety and time, has long been established beyond a doubt. We do not know that large discounts on past have been [illegible] the Collins [illegible] we fear, rather, that [illegible] Canard [illegible] trade to make; and public confidence in them to regain; but now that all this has been done, they have a remunerative future before them. On the other side of the Atlantic, as well as on this, their reputation has been established; and we do not think we err, in saying the promise to be as successful in a pecuniary point of view, and to afford as much and as general satisfaction to the travellers who used them, as any line of steamers traversing the ocean. On many occasions we have had to notice the mark of respect, and testimonials of regard paid to the commanders of the different vessels by the passengers they brought out. And it is averred by those who have had experience on other lines, that for accommodation and comfort, kind attention and good company, the boats on this line are unsurpassed.—Montreal Transcript.

ARRIVAL of the PERSIA.

LORD NAPIER APPOINTED TO BERLIN.

One of the Princes Coming to Canada.

EIGHT QUEBEC SHIPS WRECKED.

MONTALEMBERT IMPRISONED.

The Spanish Expedition against Mexico.

NO NEWS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE.

New York, Dec. 12th, 1858.

The Royal Mail steamship Persia arrived at 3 o'clock.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Cunard Company despatched the screw steamer Kamak to New York direct on the 4th instant, on the same day with the Arabia for Halifax, to be employed in mail services between New York and Nashua.

The Daily News denies that Lord Napier has been in any way censured or superceded, and understands that he has been promoted Minister Plenipotentiary to Berlin, vice Lord Bloomfield, who retires on a pension.

It is considered certain that the Great Eastern will be ready for her next trip to Portland by midsummer next.

The London Times, in response to the defence by the American press of Commodore Read, reiterates its charges against him, and says that a comparison of the English treaty, which obtains everything, with the American treaty, which obtains nothing, is all that is necessary to prove its assertion.

The same journal has a satirical article on a proposition alleged to be in contemplation at Washington to place a tax on tea, drawing attention to the manner in which a like proposition was treated at Boston in 1773. In American self-imposed tea tax certainly teaches a lesson, and that is that it is not a bad government that alienates the members of a free state.

The British Board of Trade returns for October, show a falling off of nearly £717,000 in the value of exports as compared with the same month last year.

William Loman Oliver, the London stock broker, who was found guilty of forgery and applying to his own use securities and property entrusted to his care, had been sentenced to 20 years' penal servitude.

The rate of insurance on the overdue steamship Indian Empire, had advanced from 35 to 40 per cent, even at which transactions could not be effected to any extent.

The Canadian News has undoubted authority for saying, that although her Majesty finds it impossible for her and the Prince Consort to pay a visit to Canada, a short interval only will elapse before one of the young Princes will go there.

Intelligence had reached Lloyd's of the loss of eight Quebec homeward-bound ships, including the ships Peerless, Barbara and Rankin; barques Lady Campbell, Petrel, and Claude, and brig Wilkinson. Except in the case of the Claude, there was little or no loss of life.

The Tralee Chronicle publishes the following letter from Valentia, dated the 21st November: "Nothing of importance occurred since my last until Friday, when the weather was so fine that no further pretext could be adduced for not proceeding with the laying down of the shore end of the cable. The vessels accordingly proceeded to submerge the few miles of shore cable, and on making a splice with the deep sea portion about 5 miles off Douglass Head. This operation was easily performed, and it is much to be regretted that the remaining 7 miles of shore cable, left at Greenwich, was not brought here and added to the part now laid down. Had this been done, there is no doubt but the result would have been satisfactory. This is more evident from the fact that after passing the spot where the shore end terminates, some of the men, in their anxiety to continue the undermining of the cable, discovered a kink was discontinued, and it is probable that other defects of the same kind would have been discovered had they proceeded. This cannot be said to be giving the present cable a fair trial. I am not aware that the shore cable has been tested since it was laid down, nor is there any person of sufficient experience here to do so."

The Galway line has concluded a contract with Palmer, Brothers & Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne, for the construction of three first-class side wheel steamers, to be ready for sea respectively in June, July, and August next. They are to be of large capacity, and it is said that a guarantee has been given that they shall be equal to the performance of 20 miles per hour, minimum speed, with a consumption of only 70 tons of coal per day.

FRANCE.

The trial of Count D'Montalembert and M. Donnel, editor of the Correspondent, commenced on the 24th ult. The speeches of Berryer and Dufaure for the accused, are said to have been magnificent beyond description. The former spoke for two hours and a half, and said the prosecution was unjust, unfounded, ill-advised. When he concluded, a tremendous shout of bravo burst from the lower end of the Court. The President ordered the police to turn out any one they could find who had cried out, but they could not put their finger upon any one. The judges deliberated one hour, and pronounced the following verdict:—Montalembert to be imprisoned six months and pay a fine of 3,000 francs. Donnel, one month's imprisonment and 1,000 francs fine. It is stated that Montalembert will appeal against the verdict.

The result of the trial had called forth bitter articles from the English press, and caused a slight depression in the funds at London and Paris.

M. Bastay de la Meurthe, formerly Vice-President of the French Republic, died at Paris on the 24th ult.

It is reported that an Anglo-French fleet will have on board a battery of artillery, in order to oppose any enterprise of filibusters against Central America.

SPAIN.

Senor Ros Dolzoa is said to be appointed Captain General of Cuba, but Cuenlas will remain at Havana until the difficulties with Mexico are arranged.

The second division of the squadron to act against Mexico had sailed.

Much damage is reported to shipping in the Mediterranean during the late severe weather, particularly to foreign vessels. No details are given.

PRUSSIA.

The Bank of Frankfort has reduced its rate of discount from five to four per cent.

The elections had resulted in the complete triumph of the Constitutional party.

AUSTRIA.

Important reductions had taken place in the army.

A rumour was current that the Austrian Cabinet had dispatched a note to the Court of Sardinia, protesting against the vehement policy of Cavour's Cabinet.

ITALY.

The King of Naples is said to have decided that all foreigners employed in his States must themselves be naturalized.

CHINA.

Commissioners from the Imperial Government had arrived at Shanghai to arrange the tariff, &c.

At Canton business is still suspended, but political symptoms had become more peaceful. The stock of tea there was 300 to 500 chops of inferior quality. The exports of tea to date showed a deficiency, compared with last year, of 1,200,000 pounds, and of silk 12,000 bales.

Lord Napier's Recal.

On this subject, we quote the opinions of the New York Herald and Times.

Recal of Lord Napier—French Influences again at work.—The London Morning Post in announcing the withdrawal of Lord Napier, attributes the motive of it to an alleged leaning of his lordship towards the Monroe-doctrine. This assertion, coming from Lord Palmerston's organ, would be subject to suspicion were it not corroborated by facts which have come to our knowledge. For some time past the probability of this event has been manifest to all who have had opportunities of mingling with the members of the French Legation at Washington. The sneers and the contemptuous allusions which they have been in the habit of throwing in reference to Lord Napier's efforts to court Yankee favour sufficiently indicated the feelings of jealousy which his lordship's course had aroused. It required no great sagacity to perceive that the suspicions thus exhibited would create alarm in Paris, and lead, if not to his lordship's removal, at least to a caution or reprimand. The announcement which has just reached us shows that this anticipation has proved correct, and that the Derby Cabinet have had the weakness to withdraw one of their ablest diplomatic representatives, out of a slavish deference to policy and interests.

We do not pretend to be sufficiently acquainted with Lord Napier's views to say whether his opinions on the Central American and other questions involving the chance of foreign intervention on his continent go to the extent which the statement of the Post would seem to imply. Taking, however, this statement in connection with the mission of Sir William Gore Ousseley, and the fact of Lord Napier's recall just at the moment when the proceedings of the former diplomatist may lead to difficulties between the two governments, we were justified in inferring that there is some foundation for the assertion. From the conciliatory course pursued by Lord Napier since his arrival here, and the broad and liberal views developed by him in his public as well as private intercourse with our citizens, we think it highly probable that the democratic tendencies of his family have found free expression in his despatches home. There would be nothing extraordinary in the fact that a practical and sagacious minister of the Napier stock should see, in the application of the Monro doctrine, the realization of as important benefits to his own country as to the United States. It does not, we think admit of question that the commerce of England would gain more by the general enforcement of this principle than by the foolish endeavour to maintain pretensions which can only result in a heavy naval expenditure, and the exclusion of her manufactures from the new centres of industry certain to be created by the spread of American population. Mr. Disraeli himself did not hesitate to give free expression to the same opinion, and it is a curious evidence of this revived ascendancy of French influence in Downing-street, to find a minister of Lord Napier's abilities recalled for re-echoing in his despatches the sentiments expressed by one of the heads of the Cabinet which he represents.—New York Herald.

The Recall of Lord Napier.—It is rumoured from England, and believed in Washington, where men are by no means incredulous, that Lord Napier has been, or soon will be recalled by his own Government. Of course, this report has given birth to many fledgling stories of the reasons which have operated to determine the actual Administration of Great Britain upon taking such a step. Lord Napier has made himself singularly popular since he came to the country. He has shown a peculiar aptitude for doing the right thing at the right time; and while he has never veiled the colours of Britain, he has paid a wise, courteous, and flattering respect to the eagle of the Alleghanies in all his manifestations. Why then should he be summoned away from a field which he has so eminently adorned? To this query we have no positive response to give. We can only give a very positive reply to the negative reasons which have been adduced for the removal of her Majesty's representative at Washington. It is alleged for instance, that Lord Napier has been called to serve his Queen in another quarter of the globe, because at Richmond and elsewhere he had expressed too strong a sympathy with the progressive advance of the United States. This is simply absurd. Not only the general current of public opinion in Great Britain, but the specific tendencies of the two most prominent members of the actual English Cabinet, are with us in our southward and westward march. The Chancellor of the British Exchequer, Mr. Disraeli, and the British Secretary for India, Lord Stanley, have both, on sundry occasions and on divers places—the one on the floor of the House of Commons, the other at the table of the Lord Mayor of London—gave utterance to sentiments of "manifest destiny" in regard to America and her advance over the Continent, which would secure for either of them a unanimous nomination at a primary meeting in New York city. They are the soul of the Cabinet of Lord Derby. That a diplomatic agent of the Government to which they belong should be punished for echoing the opinions to which they have given such public and notorious expression, is wholly incredible. If Lord Napier has really been transferred to another seat of power, the reasons of the change must be sought in the domestic exigencies of the English diplomatic service, and not at all for the views on foreign policy of the statesmen who now control the affairs of Great Britain.—New York Times.

Toleration in India.

From the London Times.

An event has just occurred in British India which, if proof can ever carry conviction, ought to set the active mind at rest on the question of Christian proselytism. In the Presidency of Madras lived a respectable Hindoo, whose son was sent for education to a native seminary of good repute in those parts. Within a short distance from the school was a Christian mission establishment, maintained at the cost, and on the principles, of the Scotch Free Church. To this Mission the youth in question became somehow attracted, and professed his desire to be instructed in the truths of Christianity. His request was, of course, complied with, and, for the space of three months or so he attended the appointed teachers of the Mission. At length, in the beginning of last September, during the absence of the father from home, the boy seized the opportunity of quitting the family abode, and betaking himself to the Mission house, where he was received and supported. The father, on his return, after ascertaining the place of his son's retreat proceeded to the Mission, and demanded that the youth should be restored to him; to which request the Missionaries replied that the lad was under no restraint, and might depart at any moment he pleased. —All appeal, however, to the boy himself proved fruitless, for he persisted in the resolution which he had so practically evinced, refused to return with his father, and distinctly expressed his anxiety to remain where he was. Upon this the father commenced a suit by writ of habeas corpus, and the case was argued at great length in the Supreme Court of Madras.

On the side of the youth and the Mission it was alleged that the boy was really 16 years of age—a period at which, by the Hindoo law, the privilege of personal discretion is held to be attained. At any rate, it was said the individual, whether boy or man, was clearly old enough to know what he was about, besides which, as he must already have lost caste, and would naturally be exposed to ill-treatment, common charity suggested that he should be protected in the decision he had made. To these arguments it was replied by the counsel for the parent that the age of the lad, instead of being 16 was 13; that he was therefore under the control and custody of his father; and that, as the father had committed no act by which the paternal rights could be invalidated, they ought to be at once acknowledged by the restoration of the child. It will be seen that in reality there was but one question before the Court—viz., that of the boy's age; for if he had attained his legal majority he was a free agent, and if he was still a minor the father's claim was unimpeachable. In our own land of parish registers and certificates it may appear strange enough that a point like this could admit of so much controversy, but in India the case is different, and certain amusing scenes depicted in the correspondence of this journal may have apprised the reader that a native can often approximate to his own age by conjecture only, and with a very considerable limit for error. In the present case there was rather a remarkable concurrence of testimony to the years of the lad, who it was sworn by three members of the family was 13 and no more, so that the Court accepted this evidence, pronounced for the father against the Missionaries, and authorized the employment of compulsion for the restoration of the boy to his home.

About the justice and propriety of this decision, there will be in England but one opinion. Analogous cases have more than once occurred among ourselves, and most readers' memories will enable them to recall examples of a similar character reported from other countries. In all such instances there is but one rule of right, and that is to administer the law, without respect to religious prepossessions, however righteously they may be conceived. Whether the partialities enlisted in the cause are those of Papist or Protestant, Christian or heathen, makes no difference to the fundamental principle of right, religion does not authorise us to inveigle or kidnap children from their parents, even for the purpose of gifting them with Christian faith. In the Romish Church a different tenet prevails, and Europe knows the consequences. The doctrine that a supreme expediency can overrule the dictates of morality or justice, produces practically only one result—which is that justice and morality are set at nought, while nothing better is established in their room. When evil is done that good may come of it, the evil remains a fact, and the good only a speculation. We may naturally lament that a Hindoo youth impressed possibly with genuine convictions of Christian truth, should be torn, as it were, from the waters of life, and plunged again by our own hands into the slough of error and despair; but we know that we are dealing uprightly in restoring a child to his parents, and that an adherence to uprightness is the best policy, not only for strengthening our administration, but for recommending our faith. An unjust sentence or an arbitrary decree must have done far more damage to Christianity than the retention of an infant proselyte could have done good. That the boy's prospects and principles may remain uninjured is what we are entitled not only to hope, but to expect, for the Court announced that it would protect him against ill usage, and in three years time he would be at liberty to follow, without hindrance, the suggestions of his conscience. In the interval, we have put it on record before the Indian world, that we will administer even-handed justice between Christian and Hindoo, and that the most plausible pretexts will not suffice, even on a question of religion, to seduce us from the path of right.

It is in this respect, indeed, that we may anticipate the most direct advantage from the decision before us. The case, as proving the real integrity of our principles on the subject of proselytism, was a remarkably strong one. The boy, whether of age or not, was so plainly intelligent and self-possessed that counsel founded no argument on the fact, and one of the judges observed that his appearance could hardly be thought decisive either on one side or the other. He had gone to the Mission house without solicitation, and was evidently anxious to remain there; so that here was a convert made to our hands by his own agency and his own will. Yet to none of these considerations did the Court pay any heed. As soon as the simple point of age appeared to be certified the judges concurred without hesitation in vindicating the rights of the father, and even remarked in a tone of disapprobation on the conduct of the Missionaries in receiving such a novice without informing his friends, and in omitting, as was inferred, some species of control against the claims of a parent. It will be hard indeed if such an example should be without its fruits. We are assured that Hindoos are actually sensitive to the import of legal decisions, and this event ought to satisfy them that subject only makes no converts by force, but that we will not cause them, those who may voluntarily seek [illegible] [illegible] to us again, that any overt act of the dominant race is carried on the wings of rumour through every province of India, and set up as a standard for inference and opinion.—Our special correspondent related, but the other day, that certain brutalities alleged to have been practised upon some native carriers would be regarded probably throughout Hindostan as indicating on our part a policy of utter extermination. Now, we only hope that these remarkable faculties of commensuration and deduction may be exercised as comprehensively in a good case as a bad one, and that if a cruel blow or an insulting gesture tells so widely to our disadvantage, we may get a counterpoise of opinion from this public decision of the Supreme Court of Madras. Interpreted by the same standard which is applied to our courts in general, it ought to convince the whole Hindoo world that their religious convictions are perfectly safe at our hands, and that though we are, indeed, professors of Christianity, and would willingly disseminate its unspeakable blessings, we can only do so on such conditions as even the most bigoted or timorous of their number would be unable to condemn.

The Corpse of a Young Girl Restored to Life Forty Eight hours After Death.

From the Birmingham [England] Post.

The young girl whose singular restoration to life has been previously recorded is still living. Having had an opportunity of inquiring into this very remarkable affair we are enabled to give the following particulars: The girl whose name is Amelia Hinks, is 12 or 13 years of age, and resides with her parents in Bridge-st., Nuneaton, and dwindling away under some unaccountable complaint, about three weeks ago, she, as as her friends imagined, died. The corpse was then removed to another room. The body was rigid and icy cold. It was washed, and laid out with the usual deadly accompaniments, penny pieces being placed over the eyes, and the coffin was ordered.

For more than 48 hours the supposed corpse lay beneath the winding sheet, when it happened that her grandfather, a very aged man, came from Leamington to the neighborhood of Nuneaton. On going with a female relation to see the corpse the old man removed one of the copper coins, and although the eyes remained closed he fancied he saw a movement beneath the lid.

The woman with him at first ridiculed the idea, but on looking more closely she too observed a movement. The medical attendant was then apprised of the circumstance; and although he at first treated the matter as a delusion, the application of an instrument to the region of the heart soon convinced him that there was life within the apparent corpse. The body was then removed to a warmer room, and the existence of life soon became apparent. By degrees animation was restored, a loud sneeze placing the fact of her being a living subject beyond all doubt. When speech was restored the girl described everything that had taken place from the time of her supposed death. She knew who had closed her eyes and placed the coppers thereon. She also heard the orders given for her coffin and could describe the various remarks made over her as she lay in her death-clothes.

At first on her restoration, she refused all sustenance and on some aliment being forced upon her, she became frightfully excited, and though in a state of extreme debility, it required great force to hold her. Since that period her conduct has been very strange. She entertains a wish to destroy her father and mother, and on one occasion when they were asleep in the same room with herself, she arose from her bed in the dead of the night, went down stairs for a light, and having first destroyed by burning some needle-work, which she knew her mother "set great store" upon, she set fire to the curtains, and then retired to bed, from which it was thought impossible she could have moved. In fact so mysterious was the origin of the fire that her parents were at a loss to account for it, until the girl herself confessed having been the same. She now lies in such a state that she can neither be called alive or dead, the former state being only ascertained by a careful examination of the pulse. Were it not that there is no motive for deception, and the parents being creditable people, we should imagine there was some ruse in this very extraordinary affair, which is causing considerable excitement in Nuneaton and the neighbourhood.

Andrew the Fisherman, nominally the Patron Saint of Scotland.

How this apostle, brother of Peter according to the flesh, came to be hailed as the especial Saint of the Scots, does not appear. Of his real history, beyond what the gospel instructs us, we know scarcely anything; although according to one tradition, he was crucified at Patræ, in Achaia; to another in some part of "Sarmatia;" both fixing the date of his martyrdom as Nov. 30, A. D. 69. His festival in the Church calendar dates circa 359. As the saint is said to have been affixed to a cross of the form of the letter X, that figure became the symbol of the Scottish labarum, carried at the head of the "king's host," or feudal army of North Britain in times early and late, up till the date of the Union in 1707. After being laid in the heraldic field over the cross of St. George, the conjunction became that most beautiful of all national standards, THE UNION JACK.

Great as is our regard for St. Andrew in this colony, and much as men of Scots blood and descent have had resource to old country names in designating the towns and villages we have founded, there seems to be no counterpart, either in Britain or America, to St. Andrews in Fifeshire, which was, in the time of the olden church, the Canterbury of North Britain. Traditions current in early Scotland assuming the belief that St. Andrew was really martyred at Patræ, and that relics of his body enshrined and were resorted to for devotional purposes in the fourth century, gave out that one Regulus, (a suppositible word, as a man's name,) a monk in a monastery of Patræ, was circa A. D. 370, "warned by a vision in the night, three days before the Emperor Constantine came to the place, on purpose to gather the relics of St. Andrew there deposited, and translate them to Byzantium; Regulus, we say, being admonished in his sleep to visit the shrine of St. Andrew and take out thereof the wrecked and cast upon the iron-bound coast on a bay of which, St. Andrews was afterwards founded; the relics Regulus bore having been miraculously preserved wherewith to endow the chapel of St. Regulus or Rule, the first humble cathedral of the metropolitan see of Scotland."—Partly taken from Annals of St. Andrews, in Sir R. Sibbald's "Fifeshire."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

New Boot, Shoe and Leather Store,—J. B. Bisbee.
Railway House,—W. Eastland.
F. G. Callender,—Dentistry.
School Teacher Wanted.
Found,—R. Maloney.
The Witness—John Dougall.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, DEC. 16, 1858.

Our Answer.

Mr. Stevenson's organ, the Review, is becoming considerably alarmed about the success of his canvass, if the feelings of the party is to be judged of by the style of the writer. It was but the other day, when Mr. Conger was proposed as the corruptionist candidate, and Mr. Stevenson was rejected as a blighted blossom, that the Review, with its accustomed tone, rebuked us in no measured terms the presumption of Mr. Stevenson, in ever having assumed the office of Mayor, and declared that he left it in such disgrace as no man of sensibility could bear to suffer. The moment, however, that Mr. Conger's aspirations were abandoned, and Mr. Stevenson, by an artful and concealed persuasion, had succeeded in procuring himself the acknowledged position of the corruptionist candidate, the tone of the Review underwent a gradual change, beginning with the declaration that Mr. Stevenson was not the right man but the best under the circumstances, and it has now reached the point of refusing to receive any complaint against his man and requiring all to express satisfaction with his official conduct. Greatly to the discredit of the press as a body, we cannot but confess that the disposition to support the governing powers against the often well-founded suspicions of the people is made much too manifest, to allow of any degree of confidence being put in their arguments, their statements, or their advice. And so abandoned have some of them become that they do not scruple to jest at the bare idea of a journal being possessed of any, even the slightest particle of integrity. Upon this principle of general debasement, the Review presumes to direct the malicious shafts of his morbid fancy against the proprietor of the Examiner, and does not shrink from asserting as a fact that he was subsidized by Mr. Fowler to betray the interests of the Town. Such statements unsupported by any other proof than mere assertion, can with equal ease be recorded, against every person who was publicly known as taking part in the proceedings connected with the making of the railway. We make no such accusations, because whatever may be our suspicions, we have no proof to support them. And in the same spirit, we call upon the Review to prove his words true, or retract them. But as mud is seldom thrown without some of it sticking, and as the value of character is as a shield against calumny, we will undertake, in the absence of the proof which, being innocent, we know it impossible for the Review or any body else to produce against Mr. Sawers, to show by analogy how unlikely it is that he should be open to the charge, and by the same process of reasoning how possible it is that his accuser should be. For this purpose, let an examination be made of any number of the Examiner, and how many of those quack advertisements which are the props of the cruelly and rascally betrayers of untold numbers of confiding sufferers will be found in it? Not one! Look again at the Review, and what number is without them, even the most disgusting if not the most insidious of them all, that of Dr. Ames & Son. It is the constitution of every man's nature to be guided in his actions by some principle. With one it will be upon the principle of self-interest regardless of the consequence to the rights of others; such an one if he offered his services to the public would do so with the determination to subserve their interests to his, and would not, if he were a journalist, refuse the price of an advertisement however demoralizing or however calculated to deceive the unwary. But when it is proved that common honesty accompanies the man in his journal, may it not be expected that the same principle will sustain him in any other public relation to the people. Will Mr. Sawers refuse to receive the wages of sin, when tendered by the quack advertiser, and then betray his principles by listening to the voice of the charmer when he is raised to a higher position by the expressed wish of the people. The presumption is that he will not. It is contrary to the principles of his nature.

The Review reproduces the stale charge that Mr. Sawers [illegible] contracts entered into between Port Hope, Peterborough and the Railway contractors, before the payment of the stock in current [illegible] and not by debentures. At a public [illegible] he was once charged with this and [illegible] obtained leave to explain he justified his [illegible] by showing that the contractors [illegible] had understood our [illegible] to mean £50,000 in [illegible] £30,000 in [illegible] Everything will be done [illegible] to keep him in, but [illegible] light, he flies [illegible] Sawers gets his [illegible] be his extravagant [illegible] the contractors [illegible] Kingston [illegible] Tuesday last, in small sums, he reduced, but such sale would establish the market value, and injure the credit of the Town in the money market. Mr Sawers upon this view recommended that the Town should realize the £30,000 at once, and become in the comfortable position of meeting their engagements as they fell due. This advice was disregarded, and by consequence we were not able to pay up as the work progressed, and of course Mr. Fowler took the advantage of our laxity, to force the Council into other concessions. It is not honest to charge Mr. Sawers with consequences which did not arise from the following of his advice, but by the neglect of it. Mr. Stevenson and his Council are responsible for the losses we suffered by financial mismanagement. The word "ungenerous" is a fabrication. Mr. Sawers did not use it, nor could he, for as we then had no dealings with the contractors they could have had no claim to generosity. But as nobody believes the reports of the Review, no belief will be put in this statement.

In the matter of the taxes of the Town, our account we believe to be correct, as there require to be three shillings and two pence of a rate to meet debentures alone; and when any person reflects upon the absurdity of applying only £100 for the streets and bridges, the fraud of the estimate is clearly seen; but we would like to know what is meant by "General Expenses," which are set down at £553, especially when everything else, even to charities, is particularly described and provided for.

As to the two shillings and sixpence in the pound payable to Government, we cannot flatter ourselves that it will not be demanded. We can see no more rascality in Mr. Fowler refusing to pay us the interest of the £30,000, than there is in the Town of Peterborough repudiating the debt to the Government. With what kind of grace could the Town, after claiming the rent of the road, refuse to recognize the claim of the party who lent it the money that made it. Whether the rent will be got for the Town or not, depends entirely upon the character of the men who sit in Council. The management must be something different than it now is under Mr. Stevenson, or nothing will be made from it.

Respecting the change of securities now possessed by the town over the railroad, since the proposition was never seriously entertained by any one here except Mr. Conger and Mr. Stevenson, it did not seem necessary to treat it in any other than a ridiculous light. As to absurd propositions coming from Port Hope to Peterboro', there is nothing to wonder at, when it is remembered that the present head of the corporation offers such an inviting reception to the approaches of the able leaders of the Port Hope party. There is no disposition it Peterboro' to change their security, unless they improve their condition; and since it was evident that Peterboro' would lose what Port Hope sought to gain, the idea could hardly be said to have reached to a proposition at all. It fell flat at its first inception.

Liberality in the Council.

At the last meeting of the Town Council, Councillor Burnham moved a resolution, voting the sum of one hundred dollars to Councillor James Hall. Mr. Burnham accompanied his motion with some remarks, which were very complimentary to Mr. Hall. He said that Mr. Hall had done a good deal for the Town, in the way of negociating the school debentures, and thought that one hundred dollars was a very trifling sum to present him with. Councillor Harvey would like to see Mr. Hall's bill of expenses while he was engaged for the Council, and whatever it might be, he would agree to have it paid, but he did not like voting blind. No other councillor made any remarks, and the resolution was agreed to.

It is right the ratepayers should know something about this business, and we therefore propose to tell it to them. The Mayor, Mr. Stevenson, had, on two occasions, given checks to Mr. Hall, to defray his expenses incurred in these journeyings, one $40.89, the other for $50, without the authority and without the knowledge of his Council. No minute was entered upon the book, so that when Mr. Burnham proposed giving Mr. Hall the $100, the Council, not having their attention called by Mr. Stevenson to the checks he had issued, was persuaded into letting it pass.

What a beautiful insight this gives of the way in which the Mayor has been accustomed to do the duty of his office! Checks issued without being recorded, and himself taking advantage of his illegal acts, to get his friend a gratuity of $100. It is understood that the compliment is to be returned, by the Council voting $400 to Mr. Stevenson. Why did not Mr. Stevenson correct Mr. James Harvey, when he must have observed, by what he said, that he was under the impression that it was all Mr. Hall was getting? The reason was that Mr. Stevenson had laid it out to trick them into voting the double payment. And all this, while poor people's things are being sold for the merest trifle, on account of taxes they are unable to pay. Better, if there is money enough in hand, to stop the Collector coming upon these unfortunates, thus wring from their misery a forced and arbitrary tribute to men who stand in no need of charity, and who the people do not feel disposed to reward.

Many wickednesses have been committed by the Council, but this wanton act of the Mayor, in suppressing the truth, beats everything we have yet discovered. But if Mr. Stevenson is elected, at the coming election, then indeed we may look for [illegible] Everything will be done [illegible] to keep him in, but [illegible] light, he flies [illegible] Sawers gets his [illegible] be his extravagant [illegible] the contractors [illegible] Kingston [illegible] Tuesday last,

It is worth remarking that Councillor Burnham has paid no taxes for three years. Who better able to vote away the people's treasure?

The Town Councillors Relish Champagne.

Looking over some papers in the clerks office, we stumbled upon the following account, furnished by Mr. Caisse, and ordered by councillor Bradfield to be paid by the treasurer; and we find that it was paid accordingly

Peterborough, June 16. 1858.

James Stevenson, Mayor, and Mr. James Hall and Mr. Hopkins ordered.

May 21st.

To 63 dinners, at 50 cents.....$31.50
" 25 bottles of champagne at 2.50. 62.50
" Lemonade and Cigars..... 3.00
June 1st.
" 12 bottles of Champagne at 2.50. 30.20

$127.00

To be paid by Treasurer
C. Bradfield

Our readers will stare as we stared on view of the document. $127 for two jollifications!

Some will remember that about that time holders of checks upon the Town Treasurer were told there were no funds; but there was no such answer for the purveyor to the Council. He got his money at once.

Now, what, we will ask, was the character of the public reception of the people of Port Hope on the occasion of their visit at the opening of the Railroad? It was perfectly shameful. Not a thirst quenched, nor a hunger satisfied by any public provision. Not even a Mayor and corporation to bid them welcome. And what was the character of the reception of the people of Peterboro' when they returned the visit to Port Hope? A grand public reception; to eat and drink for every person of every class and grade. Nothing was wanting to make the visitors feel that they were received as a community, without any respect to their condition in life. But when a select party visited the Town, Mr. Mayor Stevenson very properly ordered on the champagne; but very improperly ordered other people to pay for it. Guests of the Town were invited, among them ourself and the editor of the Review, to make it more imposing. Nobody, however, but the initiated knew that it was for the people to pay, and therefore with quieted consciences they eat and drank with appetite. How different it would have been had they been whispered to that it was wrung from the people, without their knowledge and consent, we need not say. This affair come off on May 21st and forms Item No. 1.

The thirsty Councillors appear to have returned to their debauch on June 1st; but not having been called to that entertainment, we cannot speak of it. Perhaps the Review can?

We will say, incidentally, that we believe, if the Council had by an open and straightforward course appropriated a moderate sum of money, to be distributed among the saloons, tavern-keepers, and provision-dealers, for the entertainment of the guests from Port Hope, on the day of opening, not a word of censure would have been heard; but instead of that, they preferred to appear economical, even to niggardliness, and the while receive some of their friends in a sumptuous manner, privately, but at the public expense. We take credit to ourselves for procuring a copy of the bill. But for us it would never have seen the light. We believe, however, that we are still at the surface. If we could dive deeper, the mine of corruption will be found all the richer. The people must wait until the new Mayor shall undertake the instructive researches.

When Mayor Stevenson was asked the other day to explain item No. 2 in Casse's champagne bill, he stumbled upon the expedient of making John Fowler! pay for it. Why not let him pay for all? The expense is the same. It amounts to this, that if the Mayor and Council expect him to pay their grog bills, he will surely require them to pass his contractor's bills. And if the people could only be got to believe it, the affectionate understanding between Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Fowler, which authorizes the Mayor to charge his grog to the contractor, has been the great cause of all our difficulties with the contractor. He naturally felt that, in plying the Mayor, he was reducing him into the subjection of a servant, and imposing on his entrapped victim, conditions which would be revolting to a freeman.

The County Council is in special session. There seems to be an embarrassment arising out of a mixture of Mr. Sheridan's bank account with that of the Treasurer.—Nothing has been done yet to reduce the confusion, but before our next publishing day it is expected that it will be made apparent. Mr. Clarke leads a hand. We shall much regret to be forced to publish unpleasant things of Mr. Sheridan, but fear there will be no help for it. He cannot claim exemption, any more than another.—The truth, so far as we hear it, must be told.

☞The Concerts on Thursday and Friday evening, were well attended, and gave universal satisfaction. The Brass Band have learnt a number of new tunes, which they execute with remarkable skill. The Quadrille Band played very perfectly, and the singing and accompaniment were equally good. The performers were several times called back to repeat. After the performance, on the second night, was gone through, the Quadrille Band very good naturedly remained, to play for the company of dancers and waiters, who desired their accompaniment.

☞The convict Crozier, against whom sentence of death had been recorded at the last Assizes, has had his punishment commuted to imprisonment in the Provincial Penitentiary, for [illegible] the sentence to be carried into effect in Kingston [illegible] Tuesday last.

A correspondent writes to us to express his disgust at certain lines in the last Review, headed 'Religious trouble in Keene.' In addition to the objections he has taken to the subject matter of discussion, we will add that the editor of the Review, in inserting the lines, entirely over-reached the bounds of decency and propriety. Apart from the indecency of allowing his columns to be made use of to cast ridicule upon the clergy, every body must feel disgusted at the indelicate introduction of a young lady in the offensive manner he has permitted.—We believe the editor of the Review is a father, and we put the question to him, if he had a grown up daughter insulted in the manner this young lady has been insulted, he would not seek out the cowardly editor and horsewhip him. Public men are public property, and can not complain at what is said of them in their public relation; but the clergy of every church are allowed to be in private, and sacred in their characters against the ribaldry of the press. Females also are invested with this privilege, and none but an unfeeling brute would tear it away.

We have much pleasure in stating that our Cobourg friends have at length determined on extending their Railway along the River to Perry's Mills. The requisite quantity of iron is now at their Depot, to complete the extension which we understand will be laid down forthwith. We wish them a rich harvest for their enterprise. Success to Cobourg.

The nomination of candidates for Mayor takes place on Monday next, the 20th inst., in the Town Hall, at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is hoped that there will be a large meeting, as much will be explained. Mr. Stevenson has not offered any answers, satisfactory or unsatisfactory, to the questions which have been addressed to him through the Examiner, nor has the Review undertaken the task for him. He will avail himself of that day to develope his resources. Mr. Sawers is also most anxious to bring prominently before the people the grounds of his dissatisfaction with the present management of the Town affairs, and to meet his antagonists face to face.

☞The Town Council, on Monday night, appointed, for Returning Officers for the coming election on Monday, January 3rd:—North Ward, James Lince, at Evans' shop; Centre Ward, Robert Rowe, who is to choose his own polling place; South Ward, Ivan O'Bierne, Lane's cabinet shop; East Ward, James Edwards Town Hall.

Gold Digging.

The last accounts from Fraser River are melancholy in the extreme. The miners have generally abandoned their locations, and, in many instances, in extreme penury, have betaken themselves to other callings, or have availed themselves of the charity of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and made the best of their way home to California. After waiting all summer for the waters to subside, they discovered, late in the autumn, that the falling of the streams was simultaneous with the formation of ice; and therefore that, so far as wet diggings were concerned, the Fraser River mines were a failure.

The newspaper which contained these disheartening accounts published side by side with them glowing accounts of the richness of the gold mines of Kansas. Persons who have spent the summer at Pike's Peak write that next season they will return to the gold mines of Kansas and will make fortunes.

The simple truth is, that the soil of nearly all North America is more or less impregnated with gold. Wherever there are mountains, gold is found in their valleys and in the beds of the streams which course down their sides. There is, for instance, gold in abundance in Lower Canada, near the boundary line between that Province and the United States. Gold has been found in great quantities in Maine and New Hampshire. In Virginia one or two gold mining enterprises are being actively prosecuted. The two Carolinas contain gold mines of decided value. In Georgia one of the finest gold mines in the world is being worked—whether profitably or not is another question, and one which does not involve the amount of the precious metal contained in the mine. For years quantities of gold have been dug in the Southern States, and sent to the mints. Gold we know exists in Tennessee, though perhaps in small quantities; it has been dug from the earth in Iowa and Wisconsin. In Arizona and Sonora it is known to abound. In Mexico, it would have been a principal article of export but for the greater plenty of silver. In Nicaragua, Honduras, and New Grenada, the Indians have for a couple of centuries been in the habit of bringing gold-dust down to the sea-shore to exchange for knives, looking-glasses, buttons and rum. All along the Californian coast the metal has been abundant; the best authorities state that it is equally plentiful in Oregon and Washington Territory. The Indians of the Hudson's Bay have been, for a hundred years, in the habit of getting it out of the beds of streams and carrying it to the factors' depots. In a word, there is hardly a spot on this Continent, with the exception of level plains, far from mountain ranges, which does not contain gold.

It by no means follows that the precious metal can every where be extracted with a fair profit to the miner. So far as the experience of mining teaches, wet diggings can never be permanently profitable. In California and Australia large sums have been made by the owners of lucky places in the bed of auriferous streams. But for every successful digger in a wet place twenty equally energetic and industrious diggers have starved. Wet diggings are altogether a matter of luck. The stream carries down a certain quantity of gold. It may deposit it here, or there—a hundred miles from its source, or five hundred, or a only a hundred yards. All is chance. The miner who chances to locate upon gold-bearing sand may make $10,000 or $10 out of his location; he has no principle to guide, no criterion. All is pure luck. So much the more wide-they diggings, though they have proved very profitable in Australia. They are, it must hardly be said, the beds of streams of which the waters have dried up. They have been, at one time, the channels of large rivers hastily to wash it, but in running off they have left on the sand flats, and in the crevices of the rocks, the gold which they have washed down from the hill-tops. [illegible] There is no test but actual exploration with pick or rocker.

The only gold mines which can be safely relied upon are quartz veins containing the precious metal imbedded in the quartz. These are, it need hardly be observed, gold deposits of an earlier date than wet or dry diggings. The gold found in quartz was ejected from its cradle when that quartz was in a liquid or incandescent state. And according to the age of the quartz is the quantity of the gold contained in it. Geologists can calculate to a nicety how much gold will be found in a quartz vein, simply by the appearance of the quartz. Such gold mines are more difficult to work than plain sand diggings. The quartz must be crushed, and the metal extracted with quicksilver. Care must be taken to lose none of it. The quartz must be crushed fine enough, or some of the gold will remain attached to the stone; it must not be crushed too fine, or the gold particles will escape with the stream of water running through the crusher. This, as can readily be imagined, is a less tempting system of mining than plain diggings; but gold seekers may rest assured that it is the only system which will secure permanent and reliable returns for the outlay incurred.—Harper's Weekly.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Meeting in Douro.

At a meeting of the rate-payers of the Township of Douro, held in the Town Hall, on Monday, 13th inst., Charles Dunlop, Esq., was called to the Chair, and John Carnegie, Esq., was appointed Secretary.

The Chairman opened the proceedings by stating that the meeting was called together for the purpose of considering a resolution of the Township Council appropriating the sum of £250 from the Township funds in aid of Schools.

It was moved by Robert Brown, Esq. and seconded by William Reid, Esq.,—"That it is the opinion of this meeting that we are labouring under unreasonable taxation."—Carried unanimously.

Moved by John Carnegie, Esq., seconded by James Blackwell, Esq.,—"That it is the opinion of this meeting that we the Rate-payers shall take a legal opinion as to the best means of redressing our wrongs, more particularly with regard to the vote of the Municipal Council of a thousand dollars in aid of education."—Carried unanimously.

The Secretary of the meeting gave explanation of the result of an examination of the Township Treasurer's books.

It was then moved by E. Brown, Esq., and seconded by John Gregg, Esq.,—"That whereas it may happen in the prosecution of our rights in the Law Courts costs may be incurred for which persons will become personally liable; therefore, be it resolved,—That Messrs. A. C. Dunlop, Robert Brown and John Richardson be a committee to perfect the arrangements on behalf of this meeting, and to institute a law-suit to recover our rights, and that a list be opened, under which such as are willing may subscribe their names as a guarantee of their participation in the payment of such supposed costs."—Carried unanimously.

A list was then opened, and many names attached, after which the meeting broke up.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

SIR,—You seldom treat your readers to a poetical piece selected or otherwise, but when you do we are sure of having something that is worth reading. I read also the Review (for about the same reason only as I suppose you yourself do), and not long ago I observed a scurrilous stricture upon lines inserted by you in the Examiner. I heeded it not, treating it only as it deserved with contempt. But my attention has been directed back again to this circumstance by the publication of a string of verses in last week's Review, which the editor is prudent enough not to designate poetry, but which by his insertion of them reflects on his judgment in regard to matter, style of execution and the spirit which dictated such sentiments as are therein expressed. Verily, sir, your contemporary is lost to all sense of propriety when he admits such worthless trash into his columns as these verses referred to. I enjoy a good piece of poetry and would like to see more of it in your own columns, but save me from the despicable stuff which the Review now too frequently contains. I am reminded also of the barefaced plagiarism which appeared in the Review some weeks ago in the shape of lines professed to be written by an "R. B." on the death of a young lady in town. I would not willingly allude to this under the circumstances, but surely, sir, it is too much to see one of our favorite hymns paraded in the Review as original, by the man who is so fastidious in criticising others.

ONE OF YOUR READERS.

Lines

COMPOSED ON THE DEATH OF A GOLD-SEEKER ON HIS WAY TO CALIFORNIA.

Lay up nearer brother, nearer,
For my limbs are growing cold,
And thy presence seemeth dearer,
When thy arms around me fold.
I am dying, brother, dying,
Soon you'll miss me in your berth,
For my form will soon be lying
'Neath the Ocean's briny surf.

Hearken to me, brother, hearken,
I have something I would say
E'er the vail my vision darken
And I go from hence away!
I am going, surely going,
But my hope in God is strong,
I am willing, brother, knowing
That he doeth nothing wrong.

The above lines fell out of a case of unclaimed goods which has been lying in the Cobourg and Peterboro' Railway Depot for upwards of two years. The MS. bears evidence that the above is incomplete, another stanza at least being contemplated. Our object in giving publicity to these lines is in the hope that they may lead to the ownership of the unclaimed case of goods.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

FOUR HOUR, Dec. 9th 1858.

SIR,—This morning I happened to be at the Port Hope and Peterboro' Rail Road Station, when the 8 o'clock Train was leaving for the last named Town, and was much gratified to see the passenger car so well filled with Ladies and Gentlemen travelling north.

Upon enquiry to my astonishment I ascertained that out of the large number of passengers only two of them purchased tickets, all the rest being dead heads; and on making further enquiry as to this system of dead heading passengers on the cars, I regret to find it is but too general a practice.

It appeared that the Directors are not satisfied with travelling free on the road and only on the business of the Company, as well as their own private business every few days, but they must make up a large party of their friends and cronies, and have them carried free over the Road. This is a course of dishonesty which in my the head of this extremely objectionable, and should cease at once, or how long are the Ratepayers of this poor unfortunate Town, to be plundered by a few self made Rail Road managers. Better by far, that the trains should cease running on the road, than to be kept up at such great expenses, to accomodate a few favored families and their friends, to enable them to travel at other peoples expenses. The Directors and managers should not travel free on the road except on the business of the Company.—They have no just right to go free on their own private business as some of them are constantly in the habit of doing.

While they are managing other peoples affairs, for which they are well paid, let them be just before they are generous. If not, then I say, throw open the road free to every one, and give all an equal chance.

Yours truly
A RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Please allow me a space in your valuable paper, as you are always desirous of conveying to the public the chiselling and cunningness of Municipal Corporations, in levying taxes on the Rate-payers to pay the unnecessary and exorbitant expenses brought upon them.

In this Township this year, the taxes were found when the Collector went around to be on some people double what they were the previous year, and on the Collector being asked the reason why they were so, he was unable to answer. The alarm spread rapidly; the people made up their minds to attend the meeting of the Township Council, which was held on the 7th ult., to ascertain if possible the cause of the increase in the taxes, as the County tax was less than on the former year.

Some of the aggrieved parties asked the Reeve, Mr. George Clarke, the cause of the enormous increase in the taxes. Mr. Clarke's reply was that he "did not know, that he was not the Council," although he had sanctioned the different items that formed the Assessment Roll. The Councillors were then each asked in their turn the same question, and each as promptly answered that "they did not know." Mr. Robert Casement, the Clerk and Treasurer, was asked if he had any knowledge of it, as he was the person who had made out the Assessment Roll, but he gave no better satisfaction than the Council.

The Rate-payers immediately suspected that something was wrong, and insisted that the Reeve should call a special meeting on the following day, for the purpose of ascertaining the real cause of the grievance. The request was granted. The Rate-payers without further delay employed Mr. Weller, Q. C., to attend in their behalf, to try if he could ferret out the evil. Mr. R. Casement, Clerk and Treasurer, presented him (Mr. Weller) with a copy of what he called the "items that formed the aggregate of the Assessment Roll." In this document was discovered part of the chiselling, in the shape of an item of $1,000 for School purposes, that never was asked for by the Trustees of Schools, as they had sent in their requisitions for the full amounts they required for the Schools, and which was already on the roll for collection. The other item that made its appearance was $472 for incidental expenses which were always paid out of the Tavern and Grocery licenses, fines, &c.

The case is still in the hands of Mr. Weller, and it is to be hoped the guilty party will suffer. The total amount raised fraudulently, and not required, is $1,472.

I sincerely hope that this may be a warning to other Municipalities, that they may not be imposed upon by dishonest Municipal officers, and that they see to it that their business is in the hands of trustworthy men.

R. J.

Douro, Dec. 15, 1858.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Dec. 16th, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 85	a	1 00
Oats "	0 25	a	0 30
Potatoes "	0 25	a	0 25
Apples "	0 40	a	0 80
Flour per barrel	4 00	a	5 00
Butter per lb	0 12½	a	0 13
Cheese "	0 10	a	0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a	5 25
Beef per cwt	3 00	a	4 00
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Wood first quality	1 50	a	1 75
Straw per load	1 00	a	1 50

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Died.

On Friday, 10th inst., ELIZA, wife of Mr. GEO. MADDEN, Smith, in the 35th year of her age.

NEW BOOT, SHOE,
AND
LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlane's Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at VERY LOW PRICES FOR CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. B. BISBEE.

Peterborough, Dec. 16th 1858. 4d.

RAILWAY HOUSE.

PURE ENGLISH

COAL OIL,

JUST RECEIVED and for Sale, also, a large assortment of Goods, CHEAP FOR CASH.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.

Peterborough, 16. Dec. 1858. 49-4in.

F. G. CALLENDER,

Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWN to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, for the past 12 years, intimates that he will continue to visit Peterboro', on the first Monday in each month, for the week, prepared to perform all operations of the profession, in defiance of competition as to neatness and durability, (except filling, both gold and platina, it being a business not cried out by the professors.) He is also prepared to insert Teeth on Vulcanized Rubber, a much approved new style, being free from taste, smell cheaper than Gold, and is said to be equal in neatness and durability, and much more agreeable in the mouth, than Gold or Platina.

Public information is invited to the above, Rooms over Mr. Chapman's Store.

Peterboro', 9th Dec., 1858. 49

SCHOOL TEACHER WANTED.

WANTED a School Teacher in School Section, No. 6 Township of Smith 1st Class. Apply to the undersigned Trustees.

[illegible] Chairman.
[illegible] Secretary.
JOHN THOMAS. } Trustees.

BOUND ADRIFT.

THE subscriber found a Red Heifer, coming three years old, on his premises, in June last, where it has remained ever since. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges, and take her away.

R. MALONEY.

Douro, Dec. 16. 1858. 49

TERMS OF THE

MONTREAL WITNESS
FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.
WEEKLY EDITION

2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
4 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependant on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to

JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

NOW IS THE TIME
TO SUBSCRIBE!!
FOR 1859.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,75 ..	New York Ledger	6s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	6 3d
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	8 7
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	3 1½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	6 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	6 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	8 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	1 7½
2,50 ..	Punch	6 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
2,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
3,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 3

HOUSE TO LET,

THE Dwelling House at present occupied by the Subscriber, adjoining Mr. Boyd's, Smithstown Hill. There is an excellent Well and good Sheds on the premises.

HENRY GRAHAM.

Peterboro', Dec. 6, 1858. 48-3in.

STRAYED.

CAME into the premises of the subscriber about one month ago, one red and white heifer coming two years old, one red steer calf. The owner is requested to prove property and take them away.

DENNIS DWYER.

Lot 10 in 7th con. Douro, Dec. 9. 1858. 48.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS
For Old and Young.

GIFT BOOKS; Toy Books; Games; Bibles, Testaments, Church Services, Handsome Papier Machie Blotters, &c., &c., &c., at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S.

A Beautiful Pocket Edition of the
HOLY BIBLE:

WITH Marginal References and Plates, handsomely bound in best Morocco for THREE DOLLARS.

A Very Chaste Pocket Edition of the
HOLY BIBLE,

With Marginal References, and Church of England Prayer Book in one Volume, in Flexible Binding for $2.00.

These and many other beautiful editions of the Holy Bible, Church Service, Prayer Book, &c., &c., forming the most appropriate Presents for the CHRISTMAS SEASON, at the New Book and Stationery Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

Peterboro'. Dec. 9, 1858.

MATERIALS FOR FLOWERS.

ROSE LEAVES in great Variety.
" Stems and Petals "
Variegated Tissue Paper, all shades.
White and Coloured Tissue, "
Spools of Wire, &c. &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

MERCHANTS.

HAVE you tried the New Ink Stand, "DRAPER'S PATENT AIR-TIGHT" now used in all the Public Offices in Town? It is decidedly the best! For sale by

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Peterborough.

TO THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS
OF THE Town of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,

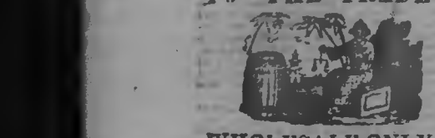
By an amendment in the Municipal Laws of Upper Canada, the Mayors of Towns and Cities are made elective directly by the people instead of through the Council as heretofore; and the duty therefore devolves upon you in addition to the election of Councillors to represent your different wards, to choose some person from among you to act as Mayor.

Having received a requisition numerously and most respectably signed, to allow myself to be nominated for the office, I have complied to the request, and now offer myself as a Candidate for your suffrages.

In consenting to their request, I have not closed my eyes to the responsibility of the position, and it is only because the large number of persons who have come forward to solicit my services, justifies me in the belief that I may rely upon their earnest assistance and support in the duties of the office that I have consented to accept their compliments.

The prosperity of the Town depends materially to the Mayor, and we shall look to the interest manifested by the candidates for the office, as to the best criterion of their fitness for the position. [illegible] I shall endeavour to [illegible] the affairs of the Town, and to [illegible] the Municipal Council [illegible] the Mayor, I shall [illegible] the Council [illegible] the Mayor [illegible] the Council [illegible] the Mayor [illegible] the Council [illegible] the Mayor

TO THE TRADE!



WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young,
" Twankay & T'wankay,
GUNPOWDER,
CONGOU,
SOUCHONG, &c.
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba,
Redpath's Crushed, A.
Dry Crushed & broken Loaf,
Loaves,
Ground,
Extra ground (for confectioners,)
Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina.

TOBACCOS, 8s. 10s. & lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal Dums, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, & do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (case Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Saltana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs.
50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
25 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

RATE'S Refined Sugar House Golden
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes.
For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles.
For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

Hunter Street,
Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 20 x 24 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting Team Dollars, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Season Tickets of admission to the Rooms (of Dusseldorf) and Western Galleries of the Association.

There will also be given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable works of Art, consisting fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Sculptures, &c., &c., from celebrated American and foreign Artists.

Subscriptions will be received up to February 1, 1859. On the evening of that day pictures will be awarded to Subscribers.

For full particulars, see Prospectus, &c. Any person can act as Agent, and receive Subscriptions. Specimen copies of the Engraving, Prospectus, &c., may be seen at the Office of

C. M. Clarke, Secretary C. A. A.,
or Gleason's Office, 548 Broadway, N. Y.

Or, Wholesale Agents, 168 Water Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Subscriptions received by R. S. Patterson, Book Seller, Peterboro'.

FARM FOR SALE.

E[illegible] from the Village of [illegible]. There are fifty acres cleared, and [illegible] a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

For [illegible] apply to [illegible]

W. R. SCOTT

Ashbodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative).
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW (Free Church)
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE (Tory).

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews....	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews....	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews....	7 00
For all four of the Reviews.....	8 00
For Blackwook's Magazine.....	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review....	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews....	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews...	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews.	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent, from the above price will be allowed to CLUBS ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

POSTAGE.

Subscribers in the British Provinces will receive the Reprints free of U. S. postage.

N. B. The price in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above named is $31 per annum.

Our Reprints versus Eclectics, &c.

As we have for many years been paying more than $3,000 annually to the British Publishers for the matter furnished in these Periodicals, thus virtually becoming copartners with them in the profits of the Reprints, we trust the public will consider this in bestowing their patronage, and give us the preference over Eclectic and other patchwork publications, whether monthly or weekly, which now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the Foreign Publishers or to us for the same. As to cheapness nobody can complain of paying $10 a year for the four leading British Reviews and Blackwood's Magazine, by taking these words entire subscribers are not obliged to be guided by others in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover taking into consideration the style in which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also to the advantage of an early issue by means of the advance Sheets—our series will be found as cheap as any one of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

☞ Remittances should always be addressed, post paid, to the Publishers.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,
47. No. 54 Gold street, New York.

Property in Ashburnham, TO RENT.

THE subscriber offers to rent for a short or long term, that desirable SALOON stand, situated on Lot No. 6, South side of Elizabeth Street, in the Village of Ashburnham. The size of the ground is sixty feet square, and a good building for a dwelling house is attached to the Saloon. The property is immediately adjoining the Station of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway.

For further particulars apply to
JOHN CRAIGIE.
Ashburnham, Oct. 21st, 1858. 41

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Shawlings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Whitneys,
Pilots,	Beavers,
Satinettes,	Ticks,
Denseks,	Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A BEAUTIFUL ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats,
Frock and
Shooting Coats,
Vests, Pants,
Drawers,
Shirts,
Waterproof
Coats,
Leggings,
and Caps.

And a general assortment of

GROCERIES

All of which they will offer at a great reduction of prices, for Cash or Farm Produce.

They would also call special attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT

of their business, where they are prepared to execute orders for all descriptions of Clothing of the latest styles, the best workmanship and warranted to fit.

L. ROBINSON & Co.

Peterboro', Nov. 5, 1858. 45

BOARD.

A FEW more Gentlemen can be accommodated with Board, with excellent lodging, on Hunter Street, on reasonable terms.

Apply at the Office of this paper.

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£110,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS ON THURSDAYS:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 31, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL

INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1858.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,607,200. Paid up Capital, $430,256.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON.
GEO. DUNCAN, JR., Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.
HON. J. H. CAMERON.
CAPT. P. WALLACE,
E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
JOHN CARMICHAEL, Esq., M.P.P.
A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
DUNCAN McDONNELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 49

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hackab.
AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken in the selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the city carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 3-tf.

QUADRILLES,

POLKAS, VARSOVIANAS,
WALTZES, SONGS, DUETS,
&c., &c., &c.,

IN THE

Musical Bouquet.

A LARGE SUPPLY ON HAND;

AS SOON AS POSSIBLE PURCHASED,

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S
MUSIC STAND,
George Street.

Peterboro', Dec. 2, 1858.

ALWAYS ON HAND.

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, heretofore known as the firm of Hurst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said firm will be received by the said Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

By the Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1858. 26

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW.
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

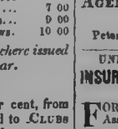
NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf



Mrs. Eliza Hunter,

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.
September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

BOARD! BOARD!!

FIVE or SIX respectable young men can be accomodated with excellent board, at a reasonable rate. Apply at this office.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-6in

FOR CHILDREN.

The Children's Paper	12½ cents.
The Play Hour	12½ "
Chess or Draught Board and Men....	25 "
Fox and Geese and Board.....	37½ "
Wolf and Lamb and Board.....	37½ "
German Tactics and Board.....	37½ "
Paper Dolls, Furniture, &c.,c	"

PICTURE BOOKS,

in almost endless variety, printed on Linen or Paper from 1½d up to 5s. Amusement and instruction of every description for Children, at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S
New Book and Stationery Store,
46 George Street.

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK,

and the best markets.

SUGARS,—Bright Muscovado and Cuba. Redpath's yellow and yellow refined; crushed and dry crushed; ground, extra ground and powdered loaf.

SYRUPS & MOLASSES,—A large Stock of extra fine quality.

TEAS,—Hyson, Imperial, Souchong, English breakfast Congou (imported direct from London); Oolong, &c., all finely flavored and of excellent quality.

COFFEE,—Mocha, Java, Laguyra, Rio; green and roast.

TOBACCOS,

of all sizes, and best Brands.

WINES & LIQUORS,—Ales and Porters, a large and well selected stock,

PORTS, SHERRIES,

CHAMPAGNES

of very superior quality, and cheaper than ever before offered here; Brandy, dark and pale, Hennessey's, Otards, &c., JAMAICA RUM, DeKuyper's Gin, Old Tom, Scotch and Canadian Whiskies.

RICE,—South Carolina, Patna, &c.
RAISINS,—M. R. Layers, Valencia and Sultana. Best Zante Currants; Superior Eleme Figs.
Nuts: Almonds, Filberts, Walnuts, Brazil and Pea Nuts.
CANDLES,—Adamantine, Belmont and Pat. B. Sperm and Peterboro.
SOAP,—Liverpool, Fancy and Peterboro'.
FISH,—Codfish, Herrings, &c., &c.

MACHINERY AND LAMP OILS.

SALT in Barrels and Bags; a large assortment of Sauces, Pickles, Salad Oils, Essences, Spices and general Groceries of every description.

ALSO

a large and varied stock of Glassware, Wooden ware, Willow ware, &c., &c., &c.

The whole having been well bought, will be sold wholesale for Cash at MONTREAL PRICES; and also retail for lower prices than have hitherto been charged in town.

COUPAR & OGILVY.
Peterboro', 1st Dec'r, 1858. 47.

PROCLAMATION!

THE Subscriber begs to inform his customers that his

ASSORTMENT

will be ready for delivery at the close of the

CURRENT YEAR,

when he would call their attention to the

[illegible]

Farms, &c., For Sale.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now as well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ December Number received, price 2½ cts.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
10th Lot, 12th Concession,
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORTH WOODS,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £3 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,
W. MOCOCK.

Peterboro'. Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 8

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 16 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., consisting of 100 Acres: 66 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', Nov. 2nd, 1858. 42tf

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE,

AND

CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 26, Letterworth and at the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor
Letterworth, Oct. 30, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 20, 1858. 26-tf

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.,

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 18, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11 1837. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12 Note " " " "	2
3 Steel Pens.....	1
1 Holder.....	1
1 Pencil.....	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....	½
Making a total of.....	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY,

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DEVTISTRY.

AS many persons are constantly calling on the undersigned during hours devoted to another business, he begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH CLEANED and ARRANGED. Put his residence, corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer Streets, on any Evening after six o'clock.

☞ Wednesdays excepted.

☞ When desired parties will be waited on at their own residences.

PRICES:—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary cavities) 5s 6d each; with silver, &c., &c., 1s 3d; Extracting 7½d.; TOOTH ACHE cured for 7½d.; and all operations warranted.

R. MOORE.
Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1858. 44

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL, which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features."

48

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

IF you want to secure a copy of that elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the ART JOURNAL, with the other premiums, assure and subscribe $3, before the 1st of JANUARY, 1859. Specimen copies of the above, and full particulars given, by applying to R. S. Patterson, Agent. See advertisement elsewhere headed—New Features, &c.

48

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,

THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 25 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 12 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address
C. L. DERBY,
548 Broadway, N. Y.
December 6, 1858. 48

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, December 6th, 1858, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay 7 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 10.40 a. m.

Leave Port Hope 12.30 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 4.10 p. m.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope 8.10 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 10 a. m.

Leave Peterboro' 1.10 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 3 p. m.

The Morning trains meet at Millbrook, 9.30 a. m.
The Afternoon " " " 5.30 p. m.

Giving Passengers from Lindsay and Port Hope, Three and 10 minutes at Peterboro' and Millbrook dep't.

☞ All the above Trains run in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. T. TWOMEY, D. McNICOL,
Superintendent. Managing Director.
Peterboro', Dec. 6, 1858. 49

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,

CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and put, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞ Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 7, 1858. 49

STRAYED.

FROM the Subscriber, in June last, one White 2 year old Heifer; also Black do.; one Spotted Steer, 1 year old past. Whoever will return the above to the Subscriber, or give such information as will lead to their recovery, will be suitably rewarded.

WILLIAM McMULLEN.
Otonabee, Lot 33, 11th Con., }
December 6th, 1858. } 48

CIRCULAR.

THE Ladies of the Presbyterian Church of Peterboro', intend to offer for sale, on TUESDAY, the 21st December, in the basement of the New Church, all the goods remaining from their Bazaar, with the additions they have since received, and refreshments.

Peterboro', Dec. 6, 1858. 48

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables, }
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 43.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 25

RITCHIE'S HOTEL, BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.
Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 21

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 9

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.
Port Hope, May, 1857. 21

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will always be ready to act at such to those requiring his services.

Auctioneer

Having had a long experience in the business as a Auctioneer in Toronto, and also in Montreal, (Goodwin's Stock), Gross's Commission Emporium, (Goodwin's Stock), Hope for the necessary for him to merit a share of every description which he will dispose of to the best advantage. Public sales will be held at the Auction Rooms every Saturday, at 10 o'clock, a.m., when all parties wishing to dispose of goods will please send in their orders as early as possible.

Peterboro', 1857. 1858. 1859.

PETERBOROUGH

Soap and Candle Works.

THE subscribers have now on hand, a supply of very superior Tallow Candles, of their own manufacture, which they are prepared to sell to the Trade at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.

COLLYT & HOOD.
Peterboro', 16th Nov., 1858. 44

STANDARD WORKS,

For Gifts or Public or Private Libraries

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.

Byron's complete works 8vo. cl. with plates				$2

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
[illegible]
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 50.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion £0	3 0
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 3 4
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 8
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobacco, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 44

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,

Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.

V. M. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

R. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART,
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

38 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MEDER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 26—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MURRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 18

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

CIVIL ENGINEER, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,

Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Rubidge, Esq. The bridge in connection to cross the river will bring the quarry within half a mile of the centre of the town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to Charles Rubidge, Esquire, or

GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.

Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

[illegible]

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX, for

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

at Sadler's Literary Stationery Store.

TO LET.

THE [illegible] lately occupied by [illegible] Esq., and on the [illegible] Hunter and Simcoe streets. [illegible] Apply to

[illegible]

QUALIFICATION of Municipal Councillors and Police Trustees.

In order that it may be more generally known what is required by the Municipal Corporations Act, as qualifications of Mayors, Councillors, and Electors, we transcribe the most important sections concerning them:—

Section 70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, members of a Council, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the County within which the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, freehold or leasehold property rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment-Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars or leasehold to eight hundred dollars.

In Police Villages—Freehold or leasehold to four hundred dollars.

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to forty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to eighty dollars per annum.

In Towns—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum, or leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And in Cities—for Aldermen—Freehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to three hundred and twenty dollars per annum: and for Councilmen—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum or Leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this Section, shall not include a term less than a Tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Section 73. No Judge of any Court of Civil Jurisdiction, no Gaoler, or Keeper of a House of Correction, no Officer of any Municipality, no Bailiff of a Division Court, no Sheriff's Officer, no Inkeeper or Saloonkeeper, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, or Township Councillor), and no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a Member of the Council of the Corporation.

ELECTORS.

Section 75. The Electors of every Municipality for which there is an assessment roll, and the Electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are naturalborn or naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally rated on the last revised assessment-rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors and tenants.

Section 76. In Cities, Town and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the annual value following:

In Incorporated Villages—Twelve dollars;

In Towns—Twenty dollars; and

In Cities—Thirty Dollars.

Section 78. When a Municipality is divided into Wards or electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one Ward or electoral division; and if entitled to vote in the Ward in which he resides, he shall not be entitled to vote in any other Ward or electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act.

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated at an amount sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, then each of them shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deemed so rated.

Which Car is the Safest.

The frequent speculations in the newspapers whether the forward, the binder, or the middle cars of the trains are safest in case of accident, cause a great deal of uneasiness among the over-sensitive traveling public. One person will not enter a forward, because if the locomotive should explode, the danger would be greater than in the last car. Another will not get into the last car from fear that it will be run into by the following train; or that it will be thrown off the track by the lateral motion of the train when going at high speeds; and then again the middle cars may be crushed, etc., etc. Now it is a lamentable fact that no position in the train will insure you from accidents, any more than walking on the left or right hand of the street will prevent you from being run over by a runaway horse; or save you from having your hat and head crushed by a falling brick. For the comfort of those railway travellers who are so sensitive upon this point of safety we can state that it has been computed by accomplished statisticians, from the actual results of the past few years, that the chances of a passenger being maimed or killed by an accident on the railway is only one to several millions against it; and as a further comforting reflection, they may rest assured that under the more systematic and careful management—of railways, the chances for being [illegible] are growing less and less daily. There [illegible] are growing less and less daily. There [illegible] are growing less and less daily. There

The British and the French Fisheries.

HISTORY OF THE DIFFICULTY.

From the British American Journal.

The serious nature of the difficulty with reference to the Newfoundland fisheries, and the great importance of the interests involved, render it desirable to acquire a full and accurate understanding of the entire question in dispute. The Convention concluded between the British and French Government last winter, was the result of tedious negotiations during a period of nearly twelve years, in the course of which the French displayed great perseverance in pursuit of those objects which the Convention ultimately yielded, and for conceding which the Colony repudiated it in such a decided manner. In the official documents by which these negotiations were carried on is the only complete explanation to be found of the origin of the present embarrassing state of affairs, and having examined them with this view, we now propose to communicate to our readers the essential history of the the case as clearly and concisely as possible.

The basis on which the French now claim their rights of fishing on the coast of of Newfoundland is contained in the Treaty of Paris in 1763, and that of Versailles in 1783, which have lapsed during the war, were restored in their original force by the Treaty of Paris in 1814. By the Treaty of 1783 the French had assigned to them the right of fishing on the western coast of the island, from Cape Ray, passing to the north as far as Cape St. John on the east. This included about the one half of the entire coast of the island, on which the French on virtue of the treaty, have asserted an exclusive right of fishing, in theory at least, if not always in practice. In the course of time a question has arisen as to whether this right was intended to be an exclusive one. From the Declarations which accompanied and explained the treaty of Versailles, the French view of the case would appear to be the correct one in the abstract His Britannic Majesty promises "to take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting in any manner by their competition, the fishery of the French," and for this purpose a pledge is given to "cause the fixed settlements which shall be formed there (namely on the coast of Newfoundland, within the limits specified in the treaty) to be removed." That the word "competition" here made use of was intended to apply to a concurrent right of fishing there can be little doubt. It was so understood at the time by the French, who translated "competition" as "concurrence" in their counterpart to the British declaration. In an Act of Parliament for carrying out the treaty, and in the proclamation of the Governor of Newfoundland in accordance therewith, the same view is implied, and provision is made for the removal of ships and boats, and of fishing works of every description from within the prescribed limits.

So far the French right here is clear enough. But the season during which they are entitled to fish only extends from April to October, and the settlement of British subjects on any part of the coast, for purposes that do not interfere with the exercise of this temporary right, is not prohibited. Moreover, the French themselves have not been particular in enforcing their rights in cases in which the violation of them inflicted no particular harm on themselves. Where it has been their interest to be exclusive they have been so, and they have shown a constant desire to encroach beyond the limits assigned to them in any direction where they have found it profitable to do so. They have accordingly allowed the settlement of British subjects and to a certain extent the carrying on of fisheries by them, in places where it was not an object of self-interest to exclude them. Hence the origin of the British settlements in St. George's Bay, the population of which collected from Nova Scotia, Cape Breton, and other quarters, now amounts to about 1,500, or did so previous to the recent forcible measures for their removal by the French naval authorities. These people were permitted by the French to fish in the bay for salmon and herring, a privilege of very little consequence, and one for which in many cases the settlers paid by a portion of the produce of their fishing, and by such services as they had it in their power to render to their annual visitors from France. There was no right of "concurrent" fishing, as the term is usually understood, and as regards the cod fishing, the most valuable of all, that has not been carried on in the bay, the fish not frequenting it in sufficient numbers for the purpose.

It is necessary that the precise position of affairs in St. George's Bay should thus be explained, for herein is the germ of the difficulty. The French in consideration of the permission they have been graciously pleased to extend to the British in this quarter, have attempted to get up a case, in virtue of which they might either obtain valuable concessions for themselves, or extend their fishing grounds without formal concession at all. In particular their hearts seem to have been set on the straits of Belle Isle, north and south, and the adjoining coast of Labrador. In the south straits they had been in the habit of fishing until 1841, when they were restricted again to their proper limits within a certain distance of the Newfoundland coast, which they had gradually encroached in the direction of Belle Isle. From this time forward they seem to have been bent on extending their fisheries to the north, where the cod fish are both larger and more abundant than on the Newfoundland coast. At Belle Isle, in particular, they have been anxious to have a right of landing on the island, with the convenience of the fishing on both sides. To this the British colonists have always been opposed, and on the most important grounds. The principal of these we find stated in a document issued by the Legislature last spring, embodying its reasons for rejecting the treaty with France:

"The fish which supply the Straits and the Labrador fisheries consist for the most part of two large shoals, one of which, entering the Gulf of Cape Ray, in April and May, passes through the Straits down to the Labrador shore, and the other coming from the eastward somewhat later in the season, strikes Belle Isle, and proceeds onward in the same direction. If, therefore, the French be permitted to occupy their large salmon and spread their batteries round Belle Isle, it cannot be doubted that the effect which we too surely know has by such means been produced elsewhere on our own coast will be reproduced here, both shoals of fish will be intercepted on their way to the Labrador, to the great injury if not to the entire destruction of our fisheries on that shore."

The French have also had an eye to their fisheries on the south of the Island, where [illegible] are confined by want of built [illegible] in the habit of resorting [illegible] British fishermen on that [illegible] has not quite sufficed [illegible] to buy as much [illegible] without any legal re- [illegible] consent of not being [illegible] which it for them-

This, then, was what the French desired to obtain by all their negociations, and tried to steal sometimes irrespective of negociation. They wished to fish on the coast of Labrador and in the straits of Belle Isle, with the privilege of using the strand for curing fish on that island. They wished also to be at liberty to procure bait as best they might, and without legal restrictions, on the south coast of Newfoundland. When they attempted, a year or two ago, to take this liberty without leave, they referred to their having given permission to English vessels to fish in the Bay of St. George as an equivalent on their part, so equivalent as to the precise value of which our readers have just been informed. The French claims, in short, were exorbitant, and even Sir Anthony Perrier, who was appointed to negotiate the matter in Paris some years ago, and who in so doing showed a considerable leaning to the French side, declared them to be "totally inadmissible." As given in his Memorandum of July 21, 1852, the offers and claims of the French Government were as follows:

"On the part of the French Government concession to British subjects of the right to inhabit St. George's Bay, Newfoundland, and to fish there in common with the French citizens, or in other words relinquishment of the exclusive right of fishing in that Bay, guaranteed to France by the Treaty of 1783.

"On the part of the British Government:

"1st. Concession to French citizens of purchasing and fishing for herring and caplin on the south coast of Newfoundland, without being subject to any tax or retribution whatever.

"2dly. Concession to French citizens of the right of fishery, without curing on shore, during two months of each year on the following points on the coast of Labrador, viz, Green Island, L'Anse a Loup, Black Bay and Modeste Islands.

"Recognition of the right of French citizens to fish at Belle Isle in the Straits, which right they exercised without its being put in question until 1841."

These claims were regarded as totally inadmissible by Sir A. Perrier in 1852, and in the following year, mainly through our exertions of Mr. Archibald, then Attorney General for Newfoundland, who represented the interests of the colony and the British fisheries, the negociations seem to have been entirely broken off. They were afterwards renewed, however, and in 1857 the colonists were astounded by the information that a treaty had been entered into by which the whole of the French claims were conceded, they receiving in return a confirmation of the privilege, commercially of no value, of forming settlements in St. George's Bay, and of fishing there. Mr. Labouchere's dispatch to the Governor, which announced the conclusion of this treaty, is the most abject apology in the shape of a State paper that can possibly be conceived. It is simply an adoption and endorsement of all the French excuses for the treaty, dwelling on the rights of the French on the coast of the island and their claim to have them respected, magnifying the importance of the concessions affecting the settlements and agriculture of St. George's Bay, slurring over and making light of the important rights that had been conceded by the British Government. A more provoking document never announced a more reckless disregard of the most valuable rights of a community; and no wonder that the colonial legislature and the colonists were indignant when they received it. They might have had some reason, perhaps, to expect a settlement of the question in disregard of their interests. This had been threatened some time before in a dispatch from the Foreign Office, in which it was stated that "Her Majesty's Government might find themselves compelled, in justice to the interests of the mother country, either to leave to the colony the future expense of the protection of the colonial fisheries or to negotiate with France, without further reference to the colony, for the adjustment of differences, the continuation of which is fraught with serious danger to the amicable relations now subsisting between Great Britain and France."

On being again appealed to by France the British Government, then under the administration of Lord Palmerston, with Lord Clarendon at the Foreign Office and Mr. Labouchere in the Colonial, did negotiate without further reference to the colony, and concluded a treaty in direct violation of its most valuable and cherished rights, a treaty which, if it had been carried out, would have rendered Newfoundland in a few years worthless and untenable as a British possession. The spirit and determination of the colonists, however, prevented this, and the treaty was rejected by the Legislature, whose co-operation in passing certain acts was necessary to give it effect. Thereupon, the French, in the following season, that is to say, during the late summer and autumn, proceeded to remove the British inhabitants of St. George's Bay, thus carrying out the threat by means of which they contrived to exact the treaty from the British Government.

Thus the matter stands at present. All parties in Newfoundland, we may be sure, and in the other colonies on the east coast, which are largely interested in these fisheries, are determined as thoroughly as ever to any concessions which would admit the French to their fishing grounds, or give them any increase of facilities in those they occupy already. If the competition were on equal terms the case would be different, and this jealous and exclusive spirit would not be called for. But British or American fishermen cannot compete with the French under their system of bounties, which is so profuse that the average for each man employed is about £14 for the season, nearly enough to pay the entire wages. Then again the French modes of fishing are very destructive, so that, apart from the question of competition in the market, it is almost useless to attempt fishing in the same waters with them. For these reasons the colonists set their faces, with a determination which nothing can resist, against any increase of fishing privileges to the French. What may be the issue of the difficulty, as concerns the southern coast of St. George's Bay, it is difficult to say. The commercial importance of that part of the question is not so great as the French from interested motives have represented it, and as the British Government seems to have been prevailed on to believe. Still the proceedings of the French in removing the inhabitants, many of whom have been located for more than half a century, can scarcely be submitted to without injury and disgrace. It must be remembered that the cause of these operations is British soil, within four days' sail of the British islands, already one of these islands we might almost say, and daily becoming of greater importance from more rapid and frequent communication. The steps required by the French are entirely of a [illegible] character [illegible] colonies [illegible] will [illegible] but [illegible] colonists [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] other [illegible]

Arrival of the Arabia.

THE "INDIAN EMPIRE" SAFE.

MONTALEMBERT PARDONED BY THE EMPEROR.

HE REFUSES IT, AND STILL APPEALS.

SUCCESS OF THE BRITISH ARMS IN INDIA.

Halifax, Dec. 16, 1858.

The Arabia, from Liverpool, arrived here at seven o'clock this evening.

The Arabia reports strong westerly gales during the entire passage.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The steamship Ariel sailed from Southampton on the 1st instant for New York; she took out the following news:

The steamship Indian Empire reached Broadhaven, County of Mayo, Ireland, on the 26th ultimo; all well on board, but her fuel was exhausted, and a portion of her cargo and woodwork was consumed. She was also short of provisions. The ship had to for a week within a day or two's steaming of Galway, during two furious storms.

An influential deputation of commercial men had waited on Lord Derby to urge him to extend a protectorate over Sarawak. Lord Derby discouraged the project.

James Davis & Sons, extensive leather and boot exporters in London, had failed; liabilities very considerable.

None of the English papers containing Montalembert's trial were allowed to enter France.

The ten deputies of Corfu had protested against the statement that the inhabitants desire incorporation with Great Britain, and say they wish annexation to Greece.

The London Times continues editorially to hold up the corruption which prevails amongst officials in the United States, as a warning against the adoption of universal suffrage. It likewise draws a similar lesson from the Canadian system.

The London Herald's Paris correspondent, says that it is asserted in political circles, that the British Cabinet has sent a circular to all European ports, stating in most explicit terms that it does not share by any means the views stated in Sir John Young's dispatch, surreptitiously obtained and lately published respecting the Ionian Islands.

An influential meeting of gentlemen connected with the Corn trade, has been held at Liverpool. Resolutions were adopted in favour of making the weight of 100 lbs. the standard weight in all sales of grain, flour and wheat. It was proposed to adopt the system throughout England on the first of February.

Much anxiety was felt for the troop ship Bombay, with 300 soldiers on board, bound for India; she was dismasted and lost some of her crew as she was proceeding around Cork for additional troops. She was afterwards seen battling the storm in a most distressing condition, but still making good headway under jury masts for Plymouth.

The Prince of Wales visits Rome this season incognito.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has issued a proclamation against ribbonism and other secret societies.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur of the 2d instant announces that, in consequence of the anniversary of the 2nd of December, the Emperor rejoiced Mr. De Montalembert from the penalties of the sentence passed upon him.

The London Times obtains this as a triumph of the English press; but at the same time censures the Emperor for numerous instances of vacillating that he has displayed.

Paris, Friday.—M. De Montalembert writes to the Moniteur to the following effect: "I appealed against the sentence passed upon me. No power in France up to the present time has had a right to remit a penalty not definitive. I am one of those who still believe in the right, and I do not accept the pardon. I beg you, and, if necessary, demand you to insert this." A letter from Montalembert to the Archbishop of Paris, published in the Independance Belge, declines the Archbishop's intercession for a remission of the penalty. Montalembert lodged a formal appeal against his sentence on the 2nd instant.

PRUSSIA.

The Prussian elections resulted overwhelmingly in favour of the Ministry. The Chambers are almost entirely liberal.

TURKEY.

An unsuccessful attempt had been made to assassinate Kamulieu at Bucharest, by means of a fulminating shell.

The telegraph between the Dardanelles, Syros and Cape Kilios had been successfully laid. That between Candia and Egypt had broken.

CHINA.

The Cochin Chinese were concentrating 20,000 men around the capital against the French and Spanish forces.

Consul-General Rapel and Bishop Diaz were at Japan.

INDIA.

Calcutta mails to October 23rd, and Hong Kong mails to October 5th reached England on the 20th ultimo.

The typhoon at Shanghae was of unprecedented violence, lasting hours and overpowering in force, and sinking vessels high on shore. About [illegible] Chinese were drowned, [illegible] several Europeans.

The Bombay mail of the 6th had been received in London.

The [illegible] commenced on the 20th [illegible] Bombay troops [illegible] many distinguished [illegible] engagements are reported, each resulting in victory on the British side, and heavy losses to the enemy. On the 20th the rebels were defeated near Mundgoor. On the 31st the fort of Berwah was taken by storm, and on the same day the strong fort of Beria was captured. On the 23rd a detachment was assailed by a thousand rebels, but were repulsed with loss of men and guns. On the 27th the fort of Rohez was taken, and on the 29th Banee Madho with 20,000 men was captured with loss. Tantia Tepee was a fugitive, his force having been routed with the loss of all their guns and 600 killed. The number of rebels was still very large, at the lowest estimate 50,000, but they are scattered about the country in small bodies.

A proclamation in which the British Crown assumes the entire command over India, and promises an amnesty on certain conditions, was read throughout India on the 1st November, and is said to have given great satisfaction to all parties.

Tantia Tepee had applied to know on what terms he could surrender.

London, 2rd.—Barry Brothers quote breadstuffs dull. Wheat slightly lower.

Liverpool Market.—Richardson, Spence & Co., report that there had been large arrivals of breadstuffs from the United States. Flour was very dull and nominal; Western Canal 17s to 20; Philadelphia and Baltimore at 20s to 21s; Ohio at 21s to 24s. Wheat dull and 1d lower; red Western at 6s 6d to 6s 8d; white Western at 6s to 6s 3d; white Southern at 6s 6d to 7s. Corn was slightly lower and freely offered, mixed at 26s 6d to 27s; yellow at 28s; white at 30s to 31s 6d.

The Sons of Robert Burns.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 23, 1858.

* * * Last night, Thursday, Mr. T. gave a dinner party, which I enjoyed so much, as you will believe when I tell you that I went to the dinner table on the arm of Colonel Burns, son of the celebrated poet, Robert Burns, and sat next to, and conversed with him all dinner time. Next but one to him sat "Willie" Burns, the eldest son of the poet—that is, older than his brother, Colonel Burns, although the latter appears to be very much older; he seems quite infirm, but tells me that he will be sixty-four years old only, next month—his hair is as white as snow, and his hand trembles very much. His brother, the eldest of the twain, is much stouter, his hair grey, and his step firm. I can hardly believe yet that he is the older, although Colonel Burns assured me that himself was the younger. He spoke of his father, of his mother, of Scotland—had lived in India thirty years, never during that time having had a day's sickness. He talks of and sings his father's songs. He sang the air which Robert Burns wrote to his mother, a very sweet thing, and "John Anderson my Jo."

I felt so anxious to send you their autographs, that when I found we were to meet them, I told W. we must get them. He was detained at the office, and had only time to stop at a book-store, where they had not such a copy of Burns as he wished to send you, and he said he did not like to ask them to write on a piece of paper merely. Mr. T. had a "Burns," and they each wrote in it and signed their names. We took our copy (which he said he would send you), and they wrote the same in that. Colonel Burns further took up a piece of paper, upon which he wrote a verse; I immediately made up my mind to secure it, and thought to myself—now if I can only manage to get their names to that, I shall be all right. The coveted paper was placed upon the table, and I made up my mind that as chance offered I would seize it, when W. stepped up, took it, and placed it in the book, at the same time giving me a very knowing look.

Dinner was announced, and Col. Burns gave me his arm. After dinner, when the gentlemen had retired to the parlor, Mr. Aikee, whom the Messrs. Burns were visiting, was talking with me. (Mr. Aiken's father was Robert Burns' most intimate friend; Mr. A. is Colonel and Willie Burns' most intimate friend; and Mr. A.'s daughter Annie and Colonel Burns' daughter Annie are most intimate friends.) I got up and took the book off the table, and took from the table the piece of paper, and said to him, "Now if I had only their signatures how glad I should be. Mr. H. has their autographs, but I want them for myself also." Mr. A. called out, 'Here, Willie Burns." The old gentleman came over to us, and I held out the paper, saying, "Mr. Burns, please sign this paper for me; I want your writing, too—this is your brother's." He sat down by me, and wrote some remarks on the lines his brother had written, and signed his name; and then Colonel Burns came over where we were, and took up the paper and signed his name too. Smiling, he looked at me for an instant, and went on making the curious hieroglyphics you will notice on the paper. I said to him, "What is that?" He replied, "James G. Burns, in Persian." He speaks the Persian language fluently. He was an East Indian officer, of a different rank from his brother, for very many years. They now live in Cheltenham, having retired from the army. If Robert Burns were living, he would be a hundred years old on the 25th of January next, when the Centennial Anniversary of his birth-day will take place. The elder brother remembers his father's funeral, and that comprises about all his recollections of him personally. I shall preserve the paper and send it to you; it will be something to have and to show which every one cannot boast of.

A Hell.

The gambling place in Washington owned by Pendleton who has lately died, is described in a letter to the N. Y. Courier thus:—

This House had a greater notoriety than any other in the country. As a fashionable hell it had no rival in Washington. It was reserbeche, exclusive, and aristocratic. To a large class of our public men, its interior was known as a dining-saloon, where generous wines and other potable liquids contributed to revive the mind after the fatigues of official labors; and where agreeable conversation and the abandon of sociality aided to calm the excitements of political life. To many or to most of its frequenters it was, however, known as the Hell of the Bleeding Heart, while the proprietor, a person of gorgeous imagination, loved better the gilded appellations of the Palace of Torture; and the few who were commissarily unemployed in wearing the blind goddess, accepted the name.

E. H. P. was at the head of his profession. He died too young for his fame, for he was gathering reputation that would have honor the highest fame. His establishment in Washington, called the Monroe Hall, did not engross his entire genius. He had branch establishments in Baltimore and New York. As a professional man the rules were rigid, and the conduct was upright. He was never by a chance admitted on his premises, [illegible] which [illegible] was [illegible] which [illegible] was [illegible] never to play for anything but cash. He was somewhat noted for his ostentation, for, indeed, display was a part of his capital, and accordingly "sported" an equipage which quite cast the most aspiring into the shade, and by the elegance and magnificence of its ensemble provoked multitudes of persons of refined tastes to enquire for the apartments of its owner. Few visited those hospitable halls without having occasion to remember it. The professional life of the subject of this notice extended through a period of a quarter of a century. The fortunes and salaries of many gentlemen of distinction passed through his hands, but his surest gains were from the hands of men who had no fortunes and no distinction. He belonged to an elevated family of Virginia, and he had his distributive share of the "best blood of the State."

The walls were hung with spirited and meritorious pictures, the art of carving was carried to great perfection in the sideboards, secretoires and tables, which served the various purposes of the establishment. The dining and supper-tables were loaded with plate of the pure metal. The cooking would not have shamed the genius of Soyer, and it is universally admitted that the wines were such as only had been selected by a connoisseur. This incomparable provider had ten thousand dollars invested in his cellar and closet. It is unnecessary to describe the rooms further than to say that they were lofty and well-proportioned, and that their walls were covered with pictorial transfers from the world of mythology and allegory, executed in the highest style of the upholsterer's art.—Carried away by the excitement of description, I have left to the last the most important point, the audiences which nightly assembled to see and to take part in the entertainments of the house.

They consisted of candidates for the Presidency, senators and representatives, members of the Cabinet, editors and journalists, and the master workmen of the third house, and Lobby. Pendleton's, in its palmiest days, might be called the vestibule of the Lobby. Its most distinguished professors might be found there. They lent money to their clients when the "animal scratched too roughly," that is to say, when the play ran against them, and they became "broke," as they sometimes did. E. H. P. himself was an operator in the lobby. His professional position gave him great facilities. He assisted in the passage of many useful bills of a private nature, involving considerable sums of money. A broken-in parliamentary voter is an inevitable retainer of broken voters.

But let us look at Pandemonium with its denizens and victims in action. Dinner is over. The evening has set in, the gas is lighted, and the game has begun. A suite of three handsome parlors has been thrown into an oblong hall. In the front room adjoining and overlooking Pennsylvania avenue sits the proprietor with compressed lips indicating that he can endure the despair of other men with unflinching fortitude, but possessed withal a certain ease of manner and a gentlemanly exterior. He is engaged at a game of "short cards," probably "set back eneabre" with Senator ———, Mayor A——, Captain T———, and Contractor P———. Around on the sofas and in various attitudes of careless ease sit or lounge members of Congress quietly discussing the days proceedings, the prospects of parties, and the character of public men. A fire-eater has just declaimed that in his opinion "Bill Seward, if elected, would make as safe and conservative a President as the South needs." Another remarks that though he shall vote for it, the Kansas bill is a piece of dangerous quackery. A few officers of the army add to the number and variety of the groups which occupy this apartment. He e all are drinking, smoking, and talking, generally on a light and jocose manner. Servants are gliding about with segars, toddies, cocktails, and "whiskey straits" on little silver trays. Among them are two old Virginny niggers, very obliging and popular, who pick up many quarters and halves, and not a few "white fish" representing one dollar each.

But let us go further into the recess of this "peculiar institution" of the Metropolis, let us enter another and the last of its Dantean circles. As you move, flashing and gorgeous mirrors repeat and multiply the form of the guest. In the third room the game is progressing with silent energy. The company around the faro table is playing mostly with counters of red circular ivory, called fish or chip, each of which represent five dollars. A few who are nearly "broke" are using the white ones of one fifth this value. The players are silent as the grave because some of them are in "great luck" and large piles of red chips are standing up different cards to abide the event of the deal, which indicates that they have been won from the bank; but alas! the close of the deal is unfavourable, and before the little silver box from which the cards are drawing yield the last of the pack the most of the red piles have been drawn to the bank side. But some of them have doubled, and the owner draws them down as his capitals for the chances of the next deal. If he has great good fortune and some prudence, he, the possessor of the red piles before named, may leave the house with a few hundreds or thousands of dollars, but the chances are that between midnight and dawn the gamesters will all retire minus the money which they have brought into the place, and all they could borrow from their friends. There are, however, exceptions. The largest amount ever won from the proprietor of this house was $12,000 from a stake of $100.

The largest amount ever lost by one person, at one time, was $8,500, but this was the case of a Collector of the Customs at a Lake port who had lost on previous occasions, over $100,000, and who, six months thereafter, was a declared defaulter for $200,000 and a fugitive from the law. The story of the winning of $184,000 by a Senator at a single sitting, is not only not true, but there never has been any approach to such an occurrence in Washington.

Night after night throughout the session this scene is reproduced until adjournement sine die ensues the fall of the curtain upon the last act. Most of the habitual players are then "dead broke." If members of Congress, the President of the Bank is bound by a sort of lex non scripta of the group, to frank them home. He usually takes an assignment of some part of their pay or mileage for the next Session. But it not unfrequently happens that the gentleman thus supplied borrows off to another gaming house, and takes the hazard of another turn of the cards. In this he loses all credit, and cases have been known of members being detained there, hapless victims of their own infatuation for many years. It is well to draw a veil over the sufferings, the dedications and crimes, the ruin of individuals and families which result from the engrossing passion which here found means and opportunity for indulgence.

A COUNTY GOVERNMENT.—The Fulton Herald contains a population of only twenty-seven men, women and children, and yet the State Assessment Roll presents the following salary appropriations to the officers of the county:—Governor, £800 per annum; magistrate, £400; chaplain, £400; surgeon, £100; surveyor-general, £300; first clerk and acting colonial secretary, £300; second clerk, £150; clerk to stipendiary magistrate, £96; school-master £32; magistrate's department, £192; total, £2836 a-year. It is understood that all the salaries are pocketed by three or four persons.

The Army Clothing in India.

A pattern specimen of the recently adopted new clothing for our troops in India, which is being sent out now with the regimental draughts to that country, is on view at the War Department, Pall-mall. Both in shape and material it is of the simplest kind, and seems to combine in an unusual degree those many qualifications that are rightly deemed essential to the comfort of the men. Hitherto the Infantry, and we believe the Cavalry also, have been supplied with a loose kind of shooting jacket, made of course red flannel or serge, with dark ordinary trousers of the same material. It is now intended to replace them with tunics with new jackets and trousers, different both in colour and material. The present pattern is made of a very strong description of corded jean of a grayish slate hue, similar to those "carkee" tunics which have been so often described by our special correspondent in India. It is is made to fit the wearer loosely, and is without braid or ornaments of any kind beyond a simple shoulder-strap, with the regimental number in white cotton figures, and a few stout brass buttons down the front. The trousers are of the same material and colour, made close to the waist, but fitting very loosely round the hips and legs; so that the whole costume gives the greatest possible freedom of action to all the movements of the body. Those of our readers even the least versed in military matters can at once appreciate the value of such a dress to the soldier when on the rapid and forced marches which seem likely to be the chief features of the approaching campaign against the rebels. The strength of the new material is also a great recommendation, while its pale gray neutral colour, so hard to distinguish at a short distance, will afford the wearer a protection against sharpshooting which he would never experience in the staring red tunic now worn. It now only remains to adopt this or some other dress as the recognized uniform for all Her Majesty's troops stationed in warm climates, for we trust that we have seen the last of the old style of things, when the Infantry were required to face a Canadian winter or an Indian summer in precisely the same clothing. It is only now that the Government have admitted that there is a difference in the temperature of Lahore in July and Newfoundland in December, but now that the fact is acknowledged let the change which it suggests be fully carried out in all branches of the service.—London Times.

India.

By the arrival of the Calcutta mail we (Times) have received our private correspondence and files of papers from Calcutta to the 9th of October, and from Hong Kong to the 28th of September.

The following is from the letter of our Calcutta correspondent:

October 9.

The cold weather is coming on apace, and the campaign is to commence in the last week of October. Lord Clyde has already gone to Lucknow, which will be the head-quarters for the season, and the Governor General is about to follow. The Commander-in-Chief keeps his plans secret; but, as far as I can learn, the campaign is not to be on an enormous scale. The actual work in clearing Oude will be intrusted mainly to two columns, which will enter simultaneously from the north and south.—The first descending from Rohilcund under Col. Troup, will clear Mahomedee and Bareitch, driving in the rebels towards Lucknow. The second, commanded, I believe, by Sir Hope Grant, will clear Azinghur and Gorackpore, now infested by powerful gangs of dacoits, and then, pouring into Gonda, drive the section of the rebel force which has found shelter there towards Lucknow. The garrison of the capital will at the same time be increased, and strong bodies of troops stationed at Cawnpore, Futtehpore, and other points along the river frontier. Very little fighting is expected, although the "Imperial Armies," as they call themselves in Oude, number some 68,000 men. They are chiefly armed ruffians with little discipline, and though formidable in a row, will not stand up long before an Enfield. The Hindostanees are said to be weary of the fight, convinced that their cause is gone, and sick of the field and its defeats. A native, however, never does the thing he is expected to do, and as the leaders, such as Nana, the Rajah of Gonda, and a few more, must be excepted from any amnesty, they may persuade their followers that it is merely a trick, or that we are completely beaten, or that the Russians are marching through the passes, or anything else sufficiently opposed to the evidence of their senses. The armed chases feel themselves beaten, but not subjugated. For instance, Rohilcund is reported as quiet. The Commander-in-Chief, accordingly, ordered one wing of a regiment from the great force there cantoned to Cawapore. He was immediately informed that the authorities would not answer for the safety of the Division if any of the troops were withdrawn. Rohilcund, it must be remembered, has not been placed under Sir John Lawrence, as originally intended; the regulations were abolished only in the Delhi division, and the detested civil courts and equally detested native revenue officers are all at work again in Rohilcund.

The effect of this recurrence to the old system your readers will, perhaps, best understand from the very important paper enclosed. It has been published by the Delhi Gazette as a manifesto issued by the King, but it was in reality circulated by Prince Feroze, and most probably written by one of his secretaries. Its authenticity seems to be everywhere admitted, and it is, I believe, the real statement of grievances which has appeared on the native side. It is elaborate, not to the fighting classes, but to the people, and expresses clearly the secret hopes of the landholders and the rich. Two or three points in it will require a little elucidation. For instance, it may seem almost incredible to the good folk at home, who give their guineas and half-guineas to all sorts of societies, that a whole class should consider a request for a subscription as a great political grievance. It is, however, a fact. I have heard the complaint fifty times in Bengal, where, besides more enlightenment, the people have some spare cash. The landholders look on these requests preferred by their rulers simply as unjust taxes, as extortions, under a smooth name. This is more especially the case in the North-West, where the enormous power of the collector magistrate, resulting from the peculiar land tenure, renders his frown a matter of the last importance to the Zemindar. The way the grievance works is this:—The magistrate asks a landholder for a subscription, say to a road, and is refused. Naturally he is annoyed; but, of course, as an English gentleman, beyond perhaps expressing an uncomplimentary opinion as to the intellectual position of the landholder, he does nothing. His Amlah, however, instantly marks the expression of his face, and sets down the landholder as a man who may be fleeced. Thenceforward the luckless Zemindar never knows that there is justice in the land. He can never get near the European. He is assailed on all sides with false complaints. The magistrate's mind is poisoned by incessant insinuations, and, unless the Zemindar is rich enough to buy up the whole office, or daring enough to imprison some Amlah's family, the Zemindar will be ultimately ruined.

Englishmen, again, may scarcely understand the complaint about the artizans.—The artizans have prospered wonderfully under our rule, and everywhere they are turning their mud huts into little brick houses. Still, it is a curious fact that the wrongs of the artizans are a grand topic of native declamation. The moon are better off as a mass, but they have lost the great prizes of life. All the manufactures requiring the highest order of skilled labour, the fine work in gold, and silver, and steel, and mosaics, and silk, and muslin, have perished, or are perishing out of the land. I doubt if there are 10 men left who can inlay ivory. The highest order of architects are gone also, for the British Government builds only ugly structures of brick, and as to the men who made damascened arms, Sheffield and Manchester have eaten them up. The loss of the great princes is felt by thousands who would never have gained them, and, coupled with the immeasurable native belief in protection, adds greatly to the discontent. No native can see why "Europe goods" should not be prohibited.

Lastly, as to the jumma, or land-tax. Writers in England are always asserting that India is lightly taxed—that the tax is, in fact, a rent, and that its amount is not equivalent to half-a-crown a-head. This is all true in Bengal Proper. The Delta has grown immensely rich since its permanent settlement, and as the rates are unalterable, they now appear even mischievously light. It would be true of the North-West, in a degree, did taxation fall on property, or even on the whole population. But it does not. It falls only on a class—the agricultural—and in practice only on that section of that class which own land. The consequence is that the rent—if you will have it a rent—is a rack-rent.

It is the fatal inequality of our North-West taxation, and the horror entertained by all classes of our courts which feeds the rebellion. How long, I ask you—for it is time to have done with generalities on this subject—could a rebellion last if opposed by 7,000,000 of armed peasants of the same class and breed of the rebels? It is because they are passive that the dacoits exist, and they will remain passive till we remove their two grievances.

The reports from almost all parts of the country speak favourably of the health of the Europeans. The Government deserves great credit for the rapidity with which they have been housed, and the admirable character of the temporary barracks. For the first time, I fancy, in the history of the British army, the existence of the men's wives has been properly recognized, and a separate room, 16 by 20, provided for every married couple. Great pains, too, are taken to keep the men from drink, and if the stock were abolished by order, instead of being, as at present, kept in the kit, and produced at inspection under a penalty of a fine of 1s, and if the winter clothing were a little less excellent and heavy, the men would have little to desire. When will the clothing authorities understand that a cloth coat lined with thick serge, and trousers which stand alone, are fitted for a Canadian winter, but not for Indian cold weather.

It is settled, I understand, that Sir John Lawrence proceeds to England, in January, and that he will be succeeded by Mr Montgomery, now Chief Commissioner in Oude. The office of Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West will also, it is reported, be filled up, probably by Mr. Edmonstone. It has been vacant since the death of Mr. Colvin.

Some valuable statistics have been published of the returns from the three Indian Railways. The Bengal line has returned:—

	Mileage.	Receipts per mile.
Jan., Feb., March,	121	£363 6s.
April, May, June,		360 3s.

Being an equivalent on a cost of £12,000 a mile, and with an expenditure of 46 per cent on working expenses, to a divisible profit of 6¼ per cent. In Bombay the returns were:—

	Mileage.	Receipts per Mile.
Jan., Feb., March,	88¼	£122 8s.

I am not aware of the cost of the Bombay line, and the expenses are heavy there, but those returns must still owe a dividend over the guarantee. In Madras, again, the returns are:—

	Mileage.	Receipts per Mile.
Jan., Feb., March,	81	£122 8s.
April, May, June,	81	100 10s.

This, I am told, is equal to a dividend of 2 per cent. The rates in Madras are too high for the pockets of the people, and the local Government has been advised to lower them. The railway company resist in spite of the evident prosperity secured in Bengal and Bombay by third-class passengers.

The comet is now blazing in the sky, to the horror of the natives, who, like our fore-fathers, consider it a presage of famine. It became visible in Calcutta first about the 25th of September, a great triumph for Mr. Hind.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE VICTORIA BRIDGE.—We learn from the Montreal Herald, that on Saturday, a workman employed at the bridge, by accident fell into the river. He was a good swimmer, and in hopes of rescuing him, three of his fellow workmen at once leapt into a boat close by and pulled hard to overtake him. Though the current was strong, and a considerable quantity of ice floating about, still the unfortunate fellow managed to keep above water, expecting every moment, no doubt, that the boat was about to rescue him. But in this he was fatally disappointed. Owing to some cause or other, the boat became filled with water to such an extent that one of the three men, in order to keep her afloat, was compelled to begin to bail out. In the meantime, the object of their solicitude appeared manfully to support himself, and at last had the satisfaction of seeing the boat close on him. His companions at once made an effort to drag him up, but before they had the gratification of effecting their purpose, the exerted swimmer, most possibly from coldness and fatigue, when almost within their grasp, sank to rise no more. Two more did not cause their exertions till the length of time which had elapsed from his disappearance told them that all human strength to recover their luckless fellow-workman, would be unavailing. The body, as yet, has not been discovered. The deceased was a powerful swimmer; a'so, in spite of current, cold and ice, as well as the inconvenience of his working habiliments, he could not have managed so long to keep himself above the surface. This is not the first, and we are afraid it will not be the last accident of this kind, which, through some cause or other, must take place at the Victoria Bridge.

Considerable anxiety has been felt respecting the fate of a new iron screw steamship called the Cuba, of 1,200 tons burden, leaving from the Thames, which was reported to have foundered off the Land's End during the recent heavy easterly gale, and it was feared that many of the crew had gone down with her. She belonged to Messrs. Robinson, of Mark Lane, the agents of the St. Petersburg Steamship Company, and was understood was on a passage from Waterford and Cardiff to London. She had taken in part of a cargo of coals at Cardiff, and was making round the Land's End to pursue her course round the English Channel, when she encountered the heavy easterly wind. She laboured fearfully for some time, and at length sprang a leak, which entirely baffled all efforts. The chief mate, Mr. Thomas E. Marsh, perceiving there was no chance of saving the ship, with the steward and 11 hands, took to one of the boats, and abandoned the vessel, leaving Captain Appleton, the master, and the crew, fifteen in number, on board, in the act of leaving in another boat to follow them; but whether they succeeded in getting away, the mate is unable to state, the darkness of the night and fearful weather that prevailed preventing them seeing the unfortunate steamer a few minutes after they had left her. The sea had extinguished her fires, the ship was quite unmanageable, and the water was two feet above the chief cabin (saloon) deck.

Trial of Montalembert.

From the London Times, Nov. 23.

"The Revolution," said Vergniaud, "like Saturn, is devouring her own children," and the Empire is destroying the first and noblest of its ornaments. The coup d'etat of December 2, 1851, successful as it was over the Chambers and the constitution, utterly failed to conciliate to the Throne of the new Emperor the support of men who had achieved character and position under the preceding 30 years of liberty, too lightly prized while enjoyed to be deeply regretted when lost. Almost alone among the class to which he belonged, M. de Montalembert at that trying moment stood forward to give his moral and intellectual support to the Imperial Throne while yet reeling from the convulsion which established it. He did not wait to see whether the new institution would take root in the soil of France; he did not wait to see whether the nation that had done and suffered so much and so vainly for its own liberties and the general rights of humanity would tamely bow beneath the iron rod of a master, but obeyed the strong impulse of his nature, which led him to throw himself heart and soul into the scale that bore the Emperor and his

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

House & Lot For Sale, or To Let—J. or B. Halliday.
Notice—T. Ridout.
The "Weekly Globe"—Sawers & Murray.
P. H. L. & B. Railway Company—T. Ridout.
Orange Dedication.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, DEC. 25, 1856.

The Nomination Over.

MR. SAWERS SHOWS THE SHOW OF HANDS!

MR. STEVENSON DEMANDS A POLL!!

The Corruptionists Discomfited. Honest Men Look About!!!

The nomination for Mayor took place in the Town Hall, on Monday last, in presence of a large concourse of people eagerly intent upon hearing the addresses of the candidates, and of determining for themselves the claims they were respectively expected to put forward for the confidence and the suffrages of the electors.

The Clerk of the Town, Jas. Edwards, Esq., who acted as Returning Officer, opened the proceedings by reading an essay of some length and much interest, his subject being the inestimable value of self-government and the duties and responsibilities incident thereto. The electors were then called upon to choose their Mayor.

Mr. W. A. Scott came forward, and without giving any reason for his selection, proposed Mr. James Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Morrow.

Mr. William Landy proposed Mr. Sawers, on the ground principally that the affairs of the Town appeared to be in great confusion, and that a particular party who are held in strong suspicion of unfairly dealing with the taxpayers, were making use of Mr. Stevenson, forcing him forward against his expressed wish, with the secret purpose of covering their past guilt, and protecting themselves in their schemes of the future. Mr. Landy expressed his confidence in Mr. Sawers, as a man who would do his duty independently of party, and exert himself in the work of uprooting corruption, which has now grown to such enormous dimensions. Mr. Landy's remarks were highly applauded by the audience. Mr. Wm. O'Donnell seconded the nomination of Mr. Sawers.

Mr. Archibald Haggert proposed Mr. Thomas White, Jr., seconded by Mr. Thomas Hutchinson.

Mr. Stevenson then rose to address the electors. He said he again appeared before them to ask them for their suffrages, and that now the office of Mayor was in the gift of the people, he would be more dependent upon them. He stated there were three distinct grounds, upon which he founded his claim to support. The first, that having already filled the office for two consecutive years, greatly to his own loss by the neglect of his proper business, he conceived he had acquired a right by possession, as well as by purchase, and ought not to be dispossessed. The second, that he had not received, directly or indirectly, any reward for his past services, nor did he claim or expect any. And the third ground was that the interests of the Town were also the interests of himself. He said that a great cry had been raised about the liabilities of the Town. Much of this was imaginary, or the fabrication of his opponent, who is the enemy of the Town and the detractor of its fair fame. The taxes of the Town far from being burdensome, are comparatively light, and are rated at only two shillings and nine-pence in the pound. He would not run down its credit like his opponent: On the contrary, whenever he was enquired of, he told a fair story; that was the way to sell debentures. After another year there will be an income from the Railroad, which has already cost us at least £37,000, and of that we owe the Government £20,000, which we will not be asked to repay until the road yields a profit. Of this he was certain, he had been told so by members of Parliament.—The Contractor declares he will pay nothing. When it was proposed to him (Mr. Stevenson) by the people of Port Hope, to change the securities we held on the Road for way of another class, he told them it was useless to ask the Town Council to do such a thing. The Town has been for some time fairly hard up. Members of the Council have been running about from place to place, trying to borrow money, now at Montreal, then at Toronto, and different other places, and they could not get it. His own name was on bank paper, to the amount of $2,000, in the Bank of Montreal, and in the other, he could [illegible] till the amount it was on for. The Town has now £4,000 of debentures on hand. He said he did not run down his opponent, but still he believed he could compete favourably with him. A short time since, Mr. Sawers published an article in the Examiner, stating that next year's taxes would be seven shilling and six pence in the pound. Did Mr. Sawers think that would be allowed over by the electors?—[illegible] first gentlemen sell your debentures in Montreal, after making such a statement? You can scarcely estimate the injury that was doing to the Town by making statements that have appeared in this paper; most if not all of the principal [illegible] of the Town have come under the [illegible] pen. No one, however [illegible] in any he, is opposed his [illegible] But only in this disposition [illegible] which other people are [illegible] responsible in such a way [illegible] Examiner circulates [illegible] Two Municipal papers [illegible] Mr. Stevenson then [illegible] not necessary for him to say much more, he left it to others who would follow him, to explain his position, which they would be better able to do than he was himself. He spoke of his letter to Mr. Wilson of Toronto, counsel for the Town, in the suit against Messrs. Conger and Whitmarsh, wherein he suggested that as there was a general feeling against following up Mr. Conger, and as his own opinion was that Mr. Conger was innocent of the charge, he ought for the present to be let free. Mr. Stevenson said that the remarks which had been made upon that letter were not fair. Mr. Burnham drew the resolution in the Council, upon which the letter was grounded. Mr. Burnham is the legal adviser of the Council. Mr. Stevenson said he did not approve of the resolution, but the letter is in accordance with it. He did not write the letter himself, he only signed it, and therefore is not responsible for it. Mr. Edwards, the clerk, wrote it by his directions, and he (Mr. Stevenson) showed it to Mr. Burnham, who said it was all right. Then there was a great fuss made about an item of supply in the estimated expenses of the coming year of £553. That would be easily explained. It was this, that at the end of the last year the Council found itself in debt, and took advantage of an old debenture for £400, which they sold.—This is the way that came. A great deal has been said about the Railway Committee, and that there was no resolution in the minute book to appoint it. I will show you that there is. This is it, (reading from the minutes,) moved by Mr. Hatton, seconded by Mr. Hogan, "That William Clexton and Elias Burnham be requested to act conjointly with the Mayor, and Messieurs. Poole, Hopkins, and the mover as a delegation or Committee to confer with the Council of Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company with the view to assisting them to construct a Branch railway from Millbrook to Peterboro'." If there was any mistake made, it cannot reast upon me. I am not responsible for the reports of my committee, my business is to act impartially to the committee. The dinner and drink at Coins's Hotel was a very paltry affair. I did not order it, I only agreed to it when it was ordered.—The people of Port Hope received us handsomely, and the little matter we gave them in return was not worth talking about. My opponent was asked to it. He would not have said anything about it, if he were not now a candidate. If any one wants to know what kind of a man my opponent is, I would recommend him to take a trip on his steamboat, as I have done, when he set me to work, carrying in wood along with himself, and I was like to die. He has no more respect for a person in a black coat, than if he was dressed like a common man. Hardly any one but knows he is not accommodating to his passengers. Mr. Stevenson here ended his speech, and was allowed to sink quietly into his seat.

Mr. Sawers took the platform amid great cheering. He said that when he came to the meeting, he anticipated great embarrassment in dealing with his opponent, because he felt that it would be expected of every candidate who came forward, to occupy himself with the task of fortifying his own position, & not of raising himself, by lowering his neighbour; and, as Mr. Stevenson was now Mayor he was still a public man, and could not well be separated from the criticisms of his opponent. But since the door had been so widely thrown open, by the course his opponent had thought proper to take in respect of him, Mr. Sawers said he did feel a greater measure of relief, than he could possibly have desired. Mr. Stevenson moved cautiously; he commenced with laying down a rule of propriety which every body would accept, and immediately departed from it, by addressing himself to a close examination of his rival upon some points, too which were more ridiculous than interesting. Mr. Sawers then proceeded, saying that he came before the town without any deception as to his motive, not professing indifference publicly, and soliciting support privately, as in too commonly the custom; but openly declaring his purpose to be supported, if he could persuade the electors to support him, and in return to do his duty manfully, fearlessly and faithfully. He would first call their attention to a letter of Councillor Burnham's in the last Review, wherein Mr. Burnham made a mis-statement as to his having paid taxes for the last three years and as to his having assisted Mr. Sawers to pass upon the council an overcharge in regard to the expenses of a journey on town business to Toronto. In the last Examiner Mr. Burnham had been told that he was of all men the best able to vote a present to Mr. Hall of $100 because he had not paid his taxes for three years.—He answered that it was not true, as would appear by application to the collector. Mr. Sawers showed that he had applied to the collector and received from him an abstract showing Mr. Burnham's unpaid taxes for 1856 to be £3. 10s. On for 1857 £22. 19s. On and for 1856 £16. 10s. On in all amounting to the sum of £47. 19s. On which being uncontradicted, he described as great injustice; for while these sums were unpaid, poor people, unable to pay, had their little things seized upon and brought to the market square for sale, and Councillor Burnham could laugh at their hardships.—The Collector was not to blame, because he was overruled in such matters by his superiors. Mr. Burnham had also intimated that he had exonerated an overcharge through the Council at the instance of Mr. Sawers by giving him $10 more than he was entitled to: this was disproved, but an argument was founded upon the baneful importance of Mr. Burnham, showing that if he would not hesitate to betray his trust as a Councillor in favour of Mr. Sawers, neither would he [illegible] Mr. Hall, or any other [illegible] The chairman [illegible] Examiner's were given [illegible] Mr. Stevenson [illegible] the Mayor [illegible] Mr. Stevenson then [illegible] charge one dozen of the champagne to John Fowler, leaving ninety seven dollars on the town, although the town has paid the whole amount, and thereby assumed the debt. Such cooking of accounts reflected very severely upon the treasurer as well as the mayor. The treasurer ought not to have charged it because the mayor told him to do it, and the mayor should not have attempted such a collusion, for the mere purpose of deceiving the eye. Mr. James Hall was very much complimented upon his success as a chairman of finance. He was not entitled to credit for what he had done. Long ago, and frequently he was told, and the mayor too, in the school board that there would be no money forthcoming when the payments to the contractors would be coming due, but they always answered with much assurance that the provision would be ready. Yet the payments were not met, the contractors were used by their creditors, the town assumed the costs of suit, and at last when not a day was to be lost Mr. Hall went to Toronto, carrying with him a quantity of town debentures, under the peremptory orders of the council not to return without the money, no matter at what price he might obtain it. The effect of such management was most damaging to the town now and prospectively, now because our money is wanted, and in the future, because it discourages contractors from undertaking its works. The idea of meaning that check of $100 to Mr. Hall to be subject to a deduction of the $90 he had already got, was all nonsense, and only occurred when the town rose in arms against it. What right had they to assume that Mr. Hall's bill was exactly $100? He never brought one in. Mr. Stevenson, too, had issued his checks to Mr. Hall one in June, for $40, and another in November, for $50, without the authority of his council, and without after he had done so, applying to them for an indemnification in the shape of an after resolution. Here Councillor Hopkins, who was immediately behind the speaker, said the statement was false, and Mr. Sawers should not allow himself to make false statements. Mr. Sawers offered the minute book containing the proceedings of the council to Mr. Hopkins, that he might correct him, if he was in error, but the councillor very prudently declined to point it out. (Great cheering.) Mr. Stevenson had complained of the construction of his letter to Mr. Wilson, and partly denied it. This is absurd, his signature makes it his, but the argument shows how willing he is to be led by others who want to make use of him. He ought not to have written that letter, it was not true that there was a general feeling against prosecuting Mr. Conger; that gentleman had first told us he paid over £1,925 to Wolford; then, when Wolford denied receiving it, he said he had paid it as back interest to the government, and when the government showed this to be false Mr. Conger very magnificently directed them to find out, without any more such impertinent applications to him. Who can believe Mr. Stevenson sincere in the prosecution of that suit when he writes that he believes Mr. Conger innocent? Mr. Sawers declared that, if he was elected, the suit should be followed up with the same energy as though it were his own individual business. It is too bad that numbers of ratepayers should have taxes imposed upon them, to make good the defalcations of this person. Mr. Cluxton is another of the tribe. He gets on to a railway committee, he owing no responsibility to the ratepayers, not being a concillor, and exercises the highest functions of their office, reporting to them upon accounts and getting them to pass resolutions to pay them. And Mr. Stevenson the mayor thought it so proper, he allowed the stranger, Mr. Cluxton, to be chairman, on the committee or delegation of which he was a member. Next, this Mr. Cluxton, having the appointment of trustee for the town, informs the council that he has accepted a power of attorney from Mr. John Fowler, under which he feels himself bound to do his utmost for his client, Fowler, against the town; and urges the appointment of some person by the council, to see that, in the settlement of their differences no injustice shall be done the town. The mayor, instead of rebuking the traitor, accompanies him in his treasonable practices, and sanctifies them with his official dignity. Mr. Sawers then spoke of the proposed new town hall, to be erected on the market square immediately opposite Mr. Burnham's new hotel; he said that however much he desired a handsome town hall, yet the state of the finances of the town was such, that no movement whatever ought now to be made in that direction. He spoke his mind on this subject, because, although it was not at present a question before the electors, he knew there was a conspiracy abroad to set it agoing, after the election, which the council could do, without obtaining the special sanction of the ratepayers.

Mr. Thomas White, Jr., then came forward, but as he declared after he had spoken that he had no intention of standing, but merely desiring the opportunity of showing his enmity to Mr. Sawers, while that gentleman was not free to answer him, we do not give any portion of his discourse. There is no great manliness in attacking a man when he cannot defend himself, unless honest men would take such an opportunity; but as Mr. White heaps out of Mr. Sawers' way at other times, we suppose he could not deny himself the safe gratification when it offered. Mr. White retired in favour of Mr. Stevenson, to whom we hope he may prove a joyful companion.

The returning officer called for a show of hands for Mr. Sawers, when a few were held up. He then called for a show for Mr. Stevenson, when, notwithstanding that members of his friends had left when Mr. White was speaking, a perfect forest was upraised. Mr. Sawers was declared elected. Mr. Stevenson demanded a poll, and the meeting dispersed.

Fatherhood Unmasked.

Councillor Burnham and Councillor Brailford publish a card in the last Review, their declared object being to establish that the resolution of the Town Council, granting $100 to Mr. James Hall, is not intended as giving that sum in addition to former grants. These gentlemen need not try to deceive any longer. Mr. James Hall demanded a check from the Treasurer for $100, under the authority of the resolution. That showed Mr. Hall's understanding of the matter. The treasurer, by direction of the Mayor, James Stevenson, Esq., issued a check upon the Commercial Bank of Canada for $100, and delivered it to Mr. Hall. That showed Mr. Stevenson's understanding of the matter. And if this is disputed, we will give the place where, and the time when, all this matter was concocted. Mr. Thomas White, Junior, will, we hope, not drive us to any unnecessary explanations, for he is involved in a plain matter of verasity. Our information is unimpeachable. The villainy of that single hole is enough to corrupt the morals of a nation.

Mr. Inspector Beavis.

There is something very fascinating about power, something tempting in public employment. Mr. Thomas Beavis has got a delicate and important office, and Mr. Thomas therefore puts on important official airs. It is of some consequence to his continuance in office, so he thinks, that Mr. Stevenson should still be Mayor. So, when, a short time ago, he was applied to by one —— Pye to get the balance of a cheque for the Surrey School transferred to him, without paying anything more, the Inspector had to be informed as to the disposition of the applicant towards the candidates for Mayor. "Who are you voting for, Mr. Pye?" blandly asks the official. "For Mr. Sawers," says he. Then says the other, "There is nothing to be done for you."

Now Mr. Thomas Beavis may be given to understand that he has nothing to do with the election, except as an individual. Whoever is Mayor, there will be an Inspector, and the public interest may not suffer, even though the miserable, snivelling, Tommy Beavis should go to the wall.

Besides being Inspector, Mr. Beavis has been getting snug little street-mending contracts, nobody but himself being called upon to offer for them. Nicely done they are said to have been, too, as all such matters are, when left to the discretion of the contractor. Mr. Beavis is a fit instrument for the corruptionists, it is by such men as him that rotten Corporations are sustained.

Many persons who were unable to leave their occupations on the day of the Nomination, and who would still like to hear explanations from the candidates own mouths, in presence of each other, have expressed a hope that, on some evening soon, a meeting may be called in the Town Hall, by mutual agreement among their friends. Mr. Sawers will be very happy to meet Mr. Stevenson in this manner, and will yield to him the choice of position, either to lead or follow.

Legal Pettifogging in Council.

The consequence of neglecting to collect taxes before they get too old, and the consequence of a pettyfogging lawyer in the Council, were exposed in a marked manner at the County Court last week. The late Judge Hall had not, at the time of his death, paid the taxes on the mill property which he held up to 1856, for the year 1854 and 1855. After his death, the trustees of his estate were sued by the Town, for the amount, about £40. Mr. Burnham, who Mr. Mayor Stevenson recognizes as the legal adviser of the Corporation, was asked by one of the trustees, to leave the matter to arbitration, and save costs, which Mr. Stevenson had agreed to, but Mr. Burnham did not like to lose a chance of making co ts, so he advised the Council there was nothing to arbitrate upon. He persuaded them to keep on, and the case came to trial. He got a verdict, but points of law sit in the way, and in all probability the Town will now lose the debt and pay the costs.—That's the advantage of allowing a lawyer to vote money into his pocket in Council, and of allowing taxes to fall in arrears, as is also the case with Mr. Burnham himself. No wonder Mr. Burnham thinks the people ought to be satisfied with Mr. Stevenson. He surely should be.

A Century Ago.

We are continually reminded by every one of our exchanges of an event, dating one hundred years back, a time far beyond the memory of living man, yet from the event to which we are now about to allude, a period of history to which attention is at present directed from all quarters of the civilized world. Our sympathies as an individual are strongly with that interest now manifested in this occurrence of a century ago, and we feel that not a few of our readers are no less closely interested in this circumstance than ourselves. Apart from this however, we feel justified in now turning to the contemplation of an event from which has resulted consequences of such deep moment to mankind generally. That such an influence has and doth still flow from this event of a century's standing, the present universal interest in the subject is ample evidence, and shall we then by silence ignore a participation in the beneficial results acknowledged to have been the fruits of this interesting event; [illegible] honestly not, and we record then our admiration and esteem for the character, and our deep reverence for the memory of the humble Scottish Ploughman, Robert Burns. He—nature's noble, and Scotia's noblest son—was born on the 25th of January, 1759, and ever, we believe nearly all the civilized world—wherever the influences Scot, has found a home, (and where has he not?) will the coming 25th of January be duly celebrated as the first Centennial Anniversary of this humble, yet noble Ayrshire Peasant. Who that knows the name of Burns needs be told of the mighty influence he has exerted not only over his countrymen, but, also, if not directly from himself and his writings, at least through his countrymen, over every nation, exhibiting the blessing of civilization? Perhaps 'tis only the Scot that fully appreciates and is influenced by his mighty genius; yet if he has created that Shakespeare has exercised an influence as extended and varied as the dissolution of his writings, it will surely be admitted that Burns has had an influence no less extensive and varied, [illegible] not an example to the appreciation of the genius itself, as by a contemplation of the [illegible] in a full cause kindred spirits with the Bard. This is not the place to enter upon a dissertation as to the influence of Burns' writings upon his fame granted it is an acknowledged fact. The propriety of a celebration of the hundredth anniversary of such a man, will not be questioned, at least by the Scotch part of any community. We think none, whatever their nationality, will be disposed to assail the celebration upon any grounds whatever. Our purpose at present is to ask if the coming opportunity of honouring the memory of Burns is to be passed over amongst ourselves. Our Scotch friends are numerous and influential, as was evidenced lately by the successful establishing of a St. Andrew's Society, and on the occasion of the celebration of the St. Andrew's Day, allusion was made by one of the speakers to the coming anniversary of Robert Burns. The suggestion was then thrown out that the Sons of Scotia in this district should bestir themselves to do honour to the memory of perhaps their noblest brother.—Now is the time for action. The day approaches when over the whole American Continent, in Europe and in Australia, the kindred assemblages "the land of brown heath and shaggy wood" will do honour to the memory of their national Bard. A hundredth Anniversary of Burns, none of us shall ever see again. Let us not loose sight of such an interesting occasion to do homage to the genius of one of Nature's Nobles.

Mr. James Jack, the speaker at the St. Andrew's Festival already alluded to, also drew a touching picture of "Scotland weeping o'er her thistle," and appealed to the Scotch of this section of the country to redeem themselves from the stain of having remained silent in regard to the National Monument, proposed to be erected on Abbey Craig near Stirling, to the immortal hero, Wallace. It has been suggested to us to revive this subject, and we do so with pleasure, and trust that Burns and his Anniversary will be duly honoured on 25th January next, and that then also will be taken, some steps to afford to those who wish the opportunity of expressing their deep sympathy with the Wallace Monument Movement.

Our apology—if any be needed—for introducing these matters shall be brief. Not a few individuals have expressed to us their desire to have these subjects agitated, and as our own sympathies are fully with them, and believing that to a great extent they are topics of universal interest at the present moment, we offer these remarks to our readers, hoping a committee will at once be formed to arrange for a celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of Robert Burns, in our own Town, Peterboro'.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—A letter appeared in the last number of your paper, signed a "Ratepayer," and written at Port Hope, in which the writer complains that on a certain specified occasion, the Directors of the Railway, with their friends, made an excursion to Peterboro' without paying their fare,—and he learns it to be inferred, that they were in number enough to fill or nearly to fill a passenger car.

The facts are simply these, and your correspondent was well aware of them at the time he wrote. Mr. Ward, the elder, a gentleman universally known and as universally esteemed and respected,—being now in his eighty-ninth year—and having never been on a Railway,—expressed a desire to take a trip over the road and visit Peterboro' once more before he died. The circumstance being communicated to the Directors, three of them proposed to join the party, one of whom was the President of the Company. These three gentlemen, accompanied by their wives,—with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ward and the old gentleman formed the party. Your correspondent the "Ratepayer" was upon the platform as the train started, and had he expressed any desire to form one of the party, would have been cheerfully included. The whole trip was accomplished without the cost of an extra farthing, to the Railway Company,—the public in general, or the "Ratepayer" in particular.

Your correspondent, not satisfied with suppressing the fact, which would have enabled the public to judge of the merits of his complaint,—must needs indulge, in a little characteristic misrepresentation. He says the Directors are "well paid" for the services connected with the Railway, and that therefore they should be compelled to pay fare over the road like any other "Ratepayer." He knows this to be untrue,—that there is not one of those he assails, in receipt of one farthing compensation for their services, and he knows that they have devoted years of labour and toil, and anxiety, in building this Railway and securing the trade of the back country for this town,—whilst he and others like him have been sitting quietly in their offices, attending their own private affairs,—nothing or losing as may happen, fortunes in the trade in which they are engaged,—and taking no further interest or part in the work, than by eternally grumbling at the Railway, the Directors and everything connected with it.

It seems to be the misfortune of almost every community to be cursed with a few of those unhappy individuals. Port Hope has however more than its share. With a very high estimate of their own importance and capacity, (in which the community at large by no means acquiesces,)—with much assured by the contemplation of the merited neglect with which they are treated by their fellow-citizens,—without a particle of public spirit or the faintest glimmering of enterprise in their composition, and incapable of appreciating it in others—the progress and improvements—even the little amusements and enjoyments of those around them, are to them, a constant source of annoyance and vexation, and they become a nuisance to the community in which they reside. Of this class is your correspondent a "Ratepayer."

It may be proper that I should state, that all the Directors are furnished with "passes" over the road, and that the same system prevails upon every railway in this province and on this continent, although in many instances Directors, in addition to the courtesy of a free pass, are paid for their services, which is not the case here. In no case, the Directors are the only persons who have contributed anything out of their own private means, towards the construction of the Railway,—and to their efforts and exertions is to be attributed, that the road has been commenced to its present completion, without calling upon the public for any further assistance, or for all of which they are the party in default. What right then has it to complain that the Directors are entitled to a free ride? And who is there in Port Hope or Peterboro' who would object to their taking a reasonable and enhanced remuneration like Mr. Ward over the road, on the regular train, thus avoiding any expense to the Company—when it is well known that opportunities have been offered to the whole population of both towns, to ride free over the road, on excursion trains, made up expressly for the purpose,—and run at the sole expense of the Company?

A DIRECTOR.

Port Hope, 20th Dec., 1856.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The following is from the Tribune's Washington correspondent:—It is said a movement will soon be made in Congress authorizing the President to send a commissioner to Mexico, to negotiate a treaty of alliance with Juarez, giving him material aid in consideration of commercial advantages and cessation of territory. Mr. Cushing is talked of as commissioner.

DIFFICULTIES.—There is nothing worth having that is not difficult. My life, and I suppose, the life of every man who has worked with head or hand, has been one long contest with difficulties, and most of us would be the men we now are, if we had timely allowed difficulties to overcome us. —Sir H. Holmes.

Book Notices.

THE CHURCHMAN'S PAPER. Toronto: Jas. Campbell; Peterboro': Sawers & Murray.

An exceedingly cheap and beautifully got up paper for children, containing reading matter suitable for Sunday or week day. The illustrations are truly magnificent for such a publication. We believe it is already extensively known among Sunday Schools, and certainly a more appropriate Sunday School paper could scarcely be produced.

THE ART OF BEAUTY—By Lola Montez. Montreal: John Lovell; Peterboro': Sawers & Murray.

A re-print by Mr. Lovell of this popular little treatise. An immense number have already been sold, and it is a work really worthy the attention of both sexes and all ages and conditions.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Dec. 23rd, 1856.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 95	a 1 00
Oats "	0 25	a 0 30
Potatoes "	0 25	a 0 25
Apples "	0 50	a 1 00
Flour per barrel	4 00	a 5 50
Butter per lb.	0 12½	a 0 15
Cheese "	0 10	a 0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a 5 00
Beef per cwt	3 00	a 3 50
Hay per ton	7 00	a 8 00
Dry Wood	1 50	a 0 00
Green Wood	1 00	a 0 00
Straw per load	1 00	a 1 50

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

HOUSE & LOT FOR SALE OR TO LET.

THE subscriber offers for sale or to let part of Lot No. 20, in concession 7, township of Smith, consisting of five acres of land with a large frame house and a good orchard.

For further particulars apply to
J. or R. HALLOWAY.
Smith, Dec. 20th, 1856. 50.

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporating the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Manvers Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board,
THOMAS RIDOUT,
Secretary.
P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.
Port Hope, Dec. 15, 1856. 50

The "WEEKLY GLOBE" OF FRIDAY, DEC. 17th,

CONTAINS an interesting Sketch of the Life of the Hon. Robert Baldwin. Description of the Funeral, &c.
NEWS BY THE PERSIA [illegible]'s Visit; Count Montalembert's Trial and Sentence; the Galway Line; Lord Napier recalled.
Meeting of Parliament; Orangemen Proscribed Recent Appointments to Office; the State Trials; the Great Northern Railway; the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind; and other Canadian news.
The Doings of the Filibusters, and other United States intelligence.
An interesting Story, Varieties, Markets &c., &c.

For sale by—
SAWERS & MURRAY,
Peterborough.

Remittances by Mail.

Price $3 a year. Six copies for $16; ten copies for $15; twenty-five copies for $36; eighty copies for $106. Address the publisher, Toronto.
Toronto, Dec. 14, 1856. 50.

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY & BEAVERTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Stockholders for the Election of Directors of this Company will be held at the OFFICE OF THE COMPANY, IN PORT HOPE, on Tuesday, the 20th January, at 12 o'clock noon.

By order,
THOMAS RIDOUT,
Secretary.
Port Hope, 15th Dec., 1856. 50.

ORANGE DEDICATION.

THE members of Orange Lodge No. 122, Smithtown, intend to dedicate their NEW HALL, on SATURDAY, JANUARY 1, AT 1 O'CLOCK, P. M.

The Public and the Brethren of the neighbouring Lodges are respectfully invited to attend.

Suitable addresses will be delivered on the occasion.
Smith, December 20, 1856. 50

NEW BOOT, SHOE, AND LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has just opened out his Stock of Boots and Shoes, recently purchased in Toronto, which he has made to suit the times and extent thereof.

[illegible]

RAILWAY HOUSE.

PURE ENGLISH
COAL OIL,

JUST RECEIVED and for Sale also, a large assortment of Goods, CHEAP FOR CASH.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.
Peterborough, 16. Dec. 1856. 49-tfn.

F. G. CALLENDER,
Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWN to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, for the past 12 years, intends visiting this old residence in this Peterboro', on the first Monday in each month, for the week, prepared to perform all operations of the profession, in advance of competitors as to assistance and knowledge, (except the Steel plate system, which I deny a substitute can be found by the profession.) He is also prepared to insert Teeth on Vulcanized Rubber, a fresh approved new style, being free from taste, much cheaper than Gold, and is said to be equal in neatness and durability, and much more agreeable in the mouth, being less weighty.

Public attention is invited to the above Rooms over Mr. Chanter's Store.
Peterboro', 9th Dec., 1856. 49

TERMS OF THE
MONTREAL WITNESS FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.
WEEKLY EDITION,
2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to
JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

NOW IS THE TIME
TO SUBSCRIBE!!
FOR 1859.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$3,25 ..	New York Ledger	0c 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
2,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
2,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
2,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
3,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1856. 2

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS
For Old and Young.

GIFT BOOKS; Toy Books; Games; Bibles, Testaments, Church Services, Handsome Papier Mache Matters, &c., &c., &c., at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S.

A Beautiful Pocket Edition of the HOLY BIBLE:

WITH Marginal References and Plates, handsomely bound in best Morocco for THREE DOLLARS.

A Very Chaste Pocket Edition of the HOLY BIBLE,

With Marginal References, and Church of England Prayer Book in one Volume, in Flexible Binding for $2.50.

These and many other beautiful editions of the Holy Bible, Church Service, Prayer Book, &c., &c., forming the most appropriate Presents for the CHRISTMAS SEASON, at the New Book and Stationery Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.
Peterboro'. Dec. 8, 1856.

MATERIALS FOR FLOWERS.

ROSE LEAVES in great Variety.
Stems and Petals "
Variegated Tissue Paper, all shades.
White and Coloured Tissue,
Spools of Wire, &c. &c.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

MERCHANTS.

HAVE you tried the New Ink Stand, "DRAPER'S PATENT AIR-TIGHT," now used in all the Public Offices in Town? It is decidedly the best! For sale by
SAWERS & MURRAY,
Peterborough.

TO THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS
OF THE Town of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,

By an amendment in the Municipal Laws of Upper Canada, the Mayors of Towns and Cities are made elective directly by the people instead of through the Council as heretofore; and the duty therefore devolves upon you in addition to the election of Councillors to say annual your different wards, to choose some person whom you vote to act as Mayor.

Having received a requisition numerously and most respectably signed, to allow myself to be considered for the office, I have decided to do this request, and now offer myself as a Candidate for your suffrages.

In coming to this request, I have not sought you to the disparagement of any other person, and it is only because the large number of persons who have come forward to publish my services, justifies me in the belief that I may rely upon their cordial support and support in the duties of the office that I have consented to accept their requisition.

[illegible] of the Police magistrate, [illegible] Peterboro' and [illegible] duties of the office [illegible] Mayor, [illegible] to the duties of the office, as managers of [illegible] I should therefore avoid the [illegible] and [illegible] my duties in such a manner as to [illegible] I have discharged [illegible]

In submitting myself to your suffrages, I beg to be [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] votes.

Peterborough, Nov. [illegible]

RAILWAY HOUSE.

PURE ENGLISH
COAL OIL,

JUST RECEIVED and for Sale also, a large assortment of Goods, CHEAP FOR CASH.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.
Peterborough, 16. Dec. 1856. 49-tfn.

F. G. CALLENDER,
Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWN to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, for the past 12 years, intends visiting this old residence in this Peterboro', on the first Monday in each month, for the week, prepared to perform all operations of the profession, in advance of competitors as to assistance and knowledge, (except the Steel plate system, which I deny a substitute can be found by the profession.) He is also prepared to insert Teeth on Vulcanized Rubber, a fresh approved new style, being free from taste, much cheaper than Gold, and is said to be equal in neatness and durability, and much more agreeable in the mouth, being less weighty.

Public attention is invited to the above Rooms over Mr. Chanter's Store.
Peterboro', 9th Dec., 1856. 49

TERMS OF THE
MONTREAL WITNESS FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.
WEEKLY EDITION,
2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to
JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

NOW IS THE TIME
TO SUBSCRIBE!!
FOR 1859.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$3,25 ..	New York Ledger	0c 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
2,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
2,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,00

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE Subscribers offer a large and well-assorted stock of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS,

SYSONS old and young Hyson, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGOU, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS,

Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confectioners,) Yellow Refined,

COFFEE,

Java & Mo; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP,

Redpath's refined.

RICE,

Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS,

6s. 10s. & 12s. & 1s in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES.

T D Glasgow & Montreal, Burns, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS,

Boxes, ½ do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES,

Bottled Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Capers and Pickles.

WINES & LIQUORS,

Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Chateau Boutern (case Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Found & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS,

An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS,

2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; seat of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT,

200 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,

HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Belmaza Raisins. 25 Drums Figs.
50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
25 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

DALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED Soap. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.

Hunter Street,
Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premium Engravings, &c., &c.

THE Cosmopolitan Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having been reorganized and confirmed by their Second Annual Meeting, on the Wednesday in the Exhibition week, will issue to subscribers only (an luxury under none can be obtained) an elegant line engraving, 22 x 28 inches, on the following

---

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 18, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, 4 miles from the Village of Norwood. This farm is well watered, has a good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to James Mason, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT.

Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 34tf

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative).
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW (Free Church)
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE (Tory).

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews....	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews....	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews....	7 00
For all four of the Reviews.....	8 00
For Blackwood's Magazine.....	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review....	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews....	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews...	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews.	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent. from the above price will be allowed to CLUBS ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

POSTAGE.

Subscribers in the British Provinces will receive the Reprints free of U. S. postage.

N. B. The price in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above named is $31 per annum.

Our Reprints versus Eclectics, &c.

As we have for many years been paying more than $3,000 annually to the British Publishers for the matter furnished in these Periodicals, thus virtually becoming copartners with them in the profits of the Reprints, we trust the public will consider this in bestowing their patronage, and give us the preference over Eclectic and other patchwork publications, whether monthly or weekly, which now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the Foreign Publishers or to us for the same. As to cheapness nobody can complain of paying $10 a year for the four leading British Reviews and Blackwood's Magazine, by taking these words entire subscribers are not obliged to be guided by others in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover taking into consideration the style in which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also to the advantage of an early issue by means of the advance Sheets—our series will be found as cheap as any one of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

☞ Remittances should always be addressed, post paid, to the Publishers.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,
47. No. 54 Gold street, New York.

FOUND.

THE subscriber found a Red Heifer, coming three years old, on his premises, in June last, where it has remained ever since. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges, and take her away.

B. MALONEY.

Douro, Dec. 16, 1858. 49

STRAYED.

CAME into the premises of the subscriber about one month ago, one red and white heifer, coming two years old, one red steer calf [illegible] to claim [illegible] and take them away.

DENNIS DWYER.

Lot 10 in 7th. con. Douro, Dec. 9, 1858

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Sheetings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Whitneys,
Pilots,	Beavers,
Satinettes,	Hosiery,
Denzaks,	Moleskins, &c.

Shawls, Dress Goods, Varied Hats, Caps, and Trunks, by the Package; also a Splendid Assortment of Prints.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats, Frock and [illegible] Coats, Vests, Pants, Drawers, Hats, Waterproof Coats, Lambs' Wool Shirts, &c.

And a general assortment of [illegible]

All of which they are in a great variation of prices, for Cash or Farm Produce. They would call particular attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT of their business, where they are prepared to [illegible]

Insurance.

TIMES AND HERALD

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£500,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS.

Chairman—M. C. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES HORTON, Esq. | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN HOWAY, Esq. | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro',
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 12.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF SHAREHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION OF ENGLAND.

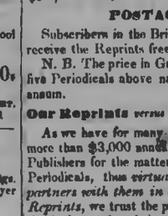
FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,997,600, Paid up Capital, $620,266.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON.	E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq.	GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.	JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.	A. M. CLARK, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON.	DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Robinson, DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Fire & Marine Insurance Company

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurances disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hoolan.

AGENT,
W. K. MEAD.

Peterboro', July 26th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL.

PETERBORO'

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House, to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

Good Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good Stabling and Sheds attended by careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 3-tf.

QUADRILLES,

POLKAS, WALTZES, VIANAS, SONGS, DUETS, &c., &c., &c.

IN THE

Musical Bouquet

AND OTHER SHEET MUSIC,

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

New Book and Stationery Store,

George Street.

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DEANE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Hurst's Mills, Peterboro',
July 2d, 1858. 29

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to Reform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 30

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.

Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 29-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter,

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. New York BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.
September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

BOARD! BOARD!!!

FIVE or SIX respectable young men can be accomodated with excellent board, at a reasonable rate. Apply at this office.
Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-6in

FOR CHILDREN.

The Children's Paper	12½ cents.
The Play Hour	12½ "
Chess or Draught Board and Men	25 "
Fox and Geese and Board	37½ "
Wolf and Lamb and Board	37½ "
German Tactics and Board	37½ "
Paper Dolls, Furniture, &c.

PICTURE BOOKS,

in almost endless variety, printed on Linen or Paper from 1½d up to 5s. Amusement and instruction of every description for Children, at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

New Book and Stationery Store,

George Street.

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK,

and the best markets.

SUGARS,—Bright Muscovado and Cuba. Redpath's yellow and yellow refined; crushed and dry crushed; ground, extra ground and powdered loaf.

SYRUPS & MOLASSES,—A large Stock of extra fine quality.

TEAS,—Hyson, Imperial, Souchong, English breakfast Congou (imported direct from London); Colong, &c., all finely flavored and of excellent quality.

COFFEE,—Mocha, Java, Laguyra, Rio; green and roast.

TOBACCOS,

of all sizes, and best Brands.

WINES & LIQUORS,—Ales and Porters, a large and well selected stock,

PORTS, SHERRIES,

CHAMPAGNES

of very superior quality, and cheaper than ever before offered here; Brandy, dark and pale, Hennessey's, Otards, &c., JAMAICA RUM, DeKuyper's Gin, Old Tom, Scotch and Canadian Whiskies.

RICE,—South Carolina, Patna, &c.

RAISINS,—M. R. Layers, Valentia and Sultana. Best Zante Currants; Superior Fresco Figs. Nuts: Almonds, Filberts, Walnuts, Brazil and Pea Nuts.

CANDLES,—Adamantine, Belmont and Pat. B. Sperm and Peterboro.

SOAP,—Liverpool, Fancy and Peterboro'.

FISH,—Cod, Herrings, &c., &c.

MACHINERY AND LAMP OILS.

SALT in Barrels and Bags; a large assortment of Scours, Pickles, Salad Oils, Brooms, Spices and general Groceries of every description.

A large and varied assortment of Glassware, Wooden ware, Willow ware, &c., &c.

The whole having been well bought, will be sold wholesale or Cash at moderate rates; and also retail from the above Stock.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro', July 29, 1858. 30-tf

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, that he has commenced business in the Village of Norwood, where he solicits a share of public patronage.

Norwood, Aug. 1858. 32

PROCLAMATION!

THE [illegible]

Farms, &c., For Sale.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ December Number received, price 25 cts.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ½ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and outbuildings, with every convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £300 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

10th Lot, 12th Concession, Otonabee, Aug. 18, 1858. 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.

Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858. 42tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th cons. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced: a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground to quick order,

W. MOCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

TO BE SOLD.

A FARM in Otonabee, Lot No. 14, 11th Con., consisting of 100 Acres: 66 Acres cleared; a good Dwelling House, Orchard, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', Nov. 2nd, 1858. 45tf

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE,

AND

CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 28, Lutterworth and at the River.

W. H. ROWBOTTOM,
Proprietor

Lutterworth, Oct. 20, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 4, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to purchase to great bargains, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 30-tf

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, that he has commenced business in the Village of Norwood, where he solicits a share of public patronage.

Norwood, Aug. 1858. 32

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.,

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Manor, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS

RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will as prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. T. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 2 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11 1857. 2

BOOK IRELIF.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	3
12 Note " " " "	3
3 Steel Pens	1
1 Holder	1
1 Pencil	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper	1
Making a total of	1s 9d.

NOW SOLD, FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY.

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,

Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambalo," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,

NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,

Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DENTISTRY.

AS many persons are constantly calling on the undersigned during hours devoted to another business, he begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH CLEANED and ARRANGED. His residence corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer Streets, on any Evening after six o'clock.

☞ Wednesdays excepted.

☞ When desired parties will be waited on at their own residences.

PRICES:—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary cavities) 5s 6d each; with Silver, &c., &c., 3s 9d; Extracting 1s 3d. TOOTH ACHE cured for 7½d., and all operations warranted.

E. MORRIS.

Peterborough, Nov. 18th, 1858. 45

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features." 45

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

IF you want to secure a copy of that elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the ART JOURNAL, with the other premiums, ensure and subscribe $3, before the 1st of January, 1859. Specimen copies of the above, and full particulars given, by applying to R. S. Patterson, Agent. See advertisement elsewhere headed—New Features, &c. 45

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,

THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 50 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 12 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address
G. S. BERRY,
548 Broadway, N. Y.
December 6, 1858. 48

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, December 6th, 1858, Trains will leave as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 7 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 10.40 a. m.

Leave Port Hope 12.30 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 4.10 p. m.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope 8.10 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 10 a. m.

Leave Peterboro' 1.10 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 3 p. m.

The Monday Mail coach at Lindsay, 5.30 a. m. The Saturday [illegible] 5.30 p. m.

Leaving Beaverton from Lindsay road, Port Hope, 2 hours 10 minutes after arrival of cars, and Peterboro' about [illegible]

☞ All the above Trains run in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. S. [illegible]
Superintendent.

Peterboro', Dec. 6, 1858.

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,

CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and set, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞ Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 7, 1858. 48

STRAYED.

FROM the Subscriber, in June last, one White 2 year old Heifer; one Black do.; one Speckled Steer, 1 year old past. Whoever will return the above to the Subscriber, or give such information as will lead to their recovery, will be suitably rewarded.

WILLIAM McMULLEN.

Otonabee, Lot 23, 11th Con., December 6th, 1858. 48

SCHOOL TEACHER WANTED.

WANTED a School Teacher in School Section, No. 6 Township of Smith 1st. or 2nd. class certificate to commence teaching early in January. Apply to the undersigned Trustees.

SIMON CULLEN,
MATTHEW MOIR,
JOHN THOMAS. } Trustees.

Smith, Dec. 16, 1858. 48.

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.

Peterboro', January 13th, 1858. 2

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL.

Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG. 19

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 26

RITCHIE'S HOTEL.

BOSCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has erected and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visiting and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.

Boboaygeon, May 25, 1858. 21

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 6

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.

Port Hope, May, 1851. 21

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENDERS, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken and opened as

[illegible]

and that he will always be ready to act on such terms as may be agreed upon.

[illegible]

PETERBOROUGH

Soap and Candle Works.

THE subscribers have now on hand, a supply of very superior Tallow Candles, of their own manufacture, which they are prepared to sell to the Trade at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.

GUILVY & HOOD.

Peterboro', 19th Nov., 1858. 44

STANDARD WORKS,

For Gifts or Public or Private Libraries

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE, GEORGE STREET.

Byron's complete works, 8vo. cl., with portrait	$2.50
Milton's " " " "	2.50
Burns' " " " "	2.50
Do. " " 5 Library calf	4.00
Scott's Life of Napoleon, cloth with portrait	2.50
Do. " " " "	2.50
Shakespeare, complete with Glossary, 8vo.	1.50
D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, 5 Vols. bound, are cloth with gilt edges	2.50
Potter's (Bishop) works complete, 8vo. cloth	1.50
United States Magazine, Vols 1 and 2 with numerous wood cuts, 8vo. cloth sheep	2.00
McCheyne's Life letters & remains, 8vo. cl.	1.50
Scott Worthies by John Howe, complete 8vo. cloth	1.50
Scottish Bards, beautifully illustrated, 8vo. cloth	2.50
Gilbert's wonders of the world, with illustrations, Gilt	1.50
Professor Wilson (Christopher North's) Recreations $1.25 for	0.75
Tolfourd's (Sergeant) Essays $1.00 for	0.60
Macgregor's (Rob Roy) Tales, Illustrated 4 Lyrics	1.00
Spurgeon's Gems—New Volume	1.00
Livingstone's Travels in Africa	1.25
Chambers's papers for the people, per Vol.	0.40
Infidelity, its aspects, causes and agenc

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND Ornamental.—Wrapping,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER.
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 51.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Two Dollars in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion .... $ 3 0
Each subsequent insertion 0 3 0
Five to ten lines, first insertion 0 5 0
Each subsequent insertion 0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion 0 per line 0 0 6
Each subsequent insertion 0 0 3

☞ Advertisements without written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing; verbal orders cannot be attended.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Boots, Glasses, Pots, Flour, Meal, Mackinaw, Spices, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobacco, Oatmeal Pearls, Axes—Cockeys, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Land Agents,
Office near the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. H. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,
Painter, &c., would most respectfully intimate that a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more modern patterns up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.
Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.
Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Buildings, corner of George and Simcoe Streets, Toronto. F. & B. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. B. J. Viard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Baldrige's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Carman, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumbermen Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Corner—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 23, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAWDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 26—3m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 23

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PAINTER AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
RESIDENCE—Corner of Hunter and Water Streets, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
Simcoe Street, Parkersburgh, Canada West.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, Science, Blank Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
Mrs Book and Stationery Store,
30 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 6, 1856. 28—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. HUME, Agent.
May, 1856. 10

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scotch Buildings, George Street.
Peterboro', July 10, 1856. 30

QUARRY TO LET.
Near Peterborough.
THE Quarry on the above farm is now open, and will be let on reasonable terms. Apply to the subscriber, who will be happy to show the Quarry to any person wishing to rent the same.
THOMAS A. STEWART.
Peterboro', July 14, 1858. 32

TO LET.

QUALIFICATION of Municipal Councillors and Police Trustees.

In order that it may be more generally known what is required by the Municipal Corporations Act, as qualifications of Mayors, Councillors, and Electors, we transcribe the most important sections concerning them:—

Section 70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, members of a Council, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the County within which the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, freehold or leasehold property rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment-Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars or leasehold to eight hundred dollars.

In Police Villages—Freehold or leasehold to four hundred dollars.

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to forty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to eighty dollars per annum.

In Towns—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum, or leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And in Cities—for Aldermen—Freehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, or Leasehold to three hundred and twenty dollars per annum; and for Councilmen—Freehold to eighty dollars per annum or Leasehold to one hundred and sixty dollars per annum;

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this Section, shall not include a term less than a Tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Section 73. No Judge of any Court of Civil Jurisdiction, no Gaoler, or Keeper of a House of Correction, no Officer of any Municipality, no Bailiff of a Division Court, no Sheriff's Officer, no Inkeeper or Saloonkeeper, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, Reeve, Deputy Reeve, or Township Councillor), and no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a Member of the Council of the Corporation.

ELECTORS.

Section 75. The Electors of every Municipality for which there is an assessment roll, and the Electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally rated on the last revised assessment-rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors and tenants.

Section 76. In Cities, Town and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the annual value following:

In Incorporated Villages—Twelve dollars;

In Towns—Twenty dollars; and

In Cities—Thirty Dollars.

Section 78. When a Municipality is divided into Wards or electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one Ward or electoral division; and if entitled to vote in the Ward in which he resides, he shall not be entitled to vote in any other Ward or electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act.

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated at an amount sufficient, if equally divided between them, to give a qualification to each, then each of them shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deemed so rated.

To the Municipal Electors of the Town of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,

I address you this morning, because of the appearance in this morning's Review of a letter from the Town Treasurer, Mr. Edwards, reflecting upon my credibility in the matter of a statement concerning the payment of money to Mr. Hall by the Treasurer. I prefer writing over my proper name when addressing myself to you, rather than over a fictitious signature, because, first, I am willing to be held responsible for what I publish, and, secondly, because I feel that I am not deprived of the confidence which I entertain people are ever willing to repose in those who they have not even had reason to suspect. When you read Mr. Edwards' letter, I can entertain the indignation with which, if you put faith in him, you will, as members of an honest community, regard the object of his reproach. Mr. Edwards has been entrusted by you, gratuitously, as a man of truth, and by the office of Treasurer ought, one would think, to shrink him above the temptation to do a mean action. You will now judge between us. It is for you to say, if the evidence herewith published, whether I stated falsely of Mr. Edwards, when reported in the Examiner and for which I am willing to be held responsible; or, whether Mr. Edwards in the Review wrote falsely of me. One or the other must eventually be the greater contemptible falsehood; and, as I am upwardly to be your Mayor, you, of having your interests served; or else, be compelled to fill the office of Treasurer. He tells you that something occurred between us before a reliable witness. I am glad he has proclaimed the words of that gentleman's testimony. I pass my reputation with the evidence which he produces. That gentleman is A. Morrow; let his evidence bring the blush to the cheek of my unscrupulous accuser, and it be a warning to them for the future, and let it have the weight which Mr. Edwards has claimed for it. But if corroborative evidence be asked then read the statements which other equally reliable witnesses have subscribed to, and if any more is needed, there is in reserve an evidence which strikes at the root of the tree, but which I do not insist upon, because the possessor of the information, is not in a position to venture before the public, lest his honesty entail upon him consequences which in his present position would be serious to him, depriving him perhaps, of a situation which he could not afford to lose. Mr. Edwards may have regretted to appear publicly, as he says, in a contest wherein he should remain neutral, but a sense of duty and a regard for truth are very strangely expressed, where his own witness proves the falsity of his accusations.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your most humble servant.
A. SAWERS.

Peterborough, Dec. 24th, 1858.

P.S.—Although of infinitely less importance than the charges of Mr. Edwards, I take the opportunity to be the means of setting Mr. Beavis right before you, in respect of a pretended statement of John Pye in the last Review.

Yours, &c.,
A. S.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—The statement in the Examiner of this morning that "the Treasurer by direction of the Mayor, James Stevenson, Esq. issued a check on the Commercial Bank for $100," is not in accordance with truth Mr. Sawers himself being witness. He stated to me last night in answer to a question, and in presence of a reliable witness, that I did not say that the check in question was issued by the Mayor's authority, and to satisfy him I invited him, if he chose to come and inspect the Mayor's checks, which he refused to do. A man so anxious for truth, should not first make a verbal statement and then publish the opposite.

The facts are these: Mr. Hall when in the office on the Tuesday morning following the passing of the resolution, asked me for the amount, and I gave him my check on the Commercial Bank for $100, without the authority of the Mayor for doing so, believing that the resolution authorized the Mayor to issue his check and not anticipating anything to the contrary.

The Mayor shortly after told me that the resolution was illegal not having the usual money resolution suspended, and that Mr. H. was only entitled to the difference between the sum formerly paid and the amount now authorized to be given, and consequently his check could not issue.

I immediately waited upon Mr. Hall and told him I had given him the money wrongfully, as the money resolution had not been suspended at the passing of the resolution and the Mayor refused to give me his check —Mr. Hall replied he would refund me the money and keep me safe and he has since done so.

I exceedingly regret having been thus called upon to interfere in this public manner in a contest, when I have been anxious to remain neutral, but a sense of duty and a regard for truth, would not allow me to permit a statement reflecting upon the conduct of Mr. Stevenson, when I was to blame, to pass uncontradicted.

I am Sir, yours, &c.
J. EDWARDS,
Treasurer T. of P.

Peterboro', Dec. 23rd, 1858

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Peterborough, Dec. 24, 1858.

SIR,—In answer to your application for my report of what was said by you and Mr. Edwards, on the evening of the 22nd instant, in regard to the sum of one hundred dollars which Mr. Edwards said he had paid to Mr. James Hall; I have to state that I entered your office with Mr. Edwards, at his invitation, that he said to you that you were not to understand that Mr. Stevenson gave a check upon him in favour of Mr. Hall, but that Mr. Stevenson's order was verbal. You said it was of no consequence whether the order was written or verbal, so long as it was given, when Mr. Edwards and I left your office together, Mr. Edwards agreeing distinctly that he had a verbal order from Mr. Stevenson to pay Mr. Hall the money.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

SIR,—Having read Mr. Edwards's letter in the Review, denying that he told you that he had Mr. Stevenson's authority to pay Mr. James Hall the sum of one hundred dollars as per resolution of the Town Council, we feel ourselves called upon to say positively that he did state to us that Mr. Stevenson directed him to pay the one hundred dollars to Mr. Hall, and that had there existed in any mistake about it, Mr. Edwards was subjected to a close examination and in particular the statement that he had paid Mr. Hall the $100, and under the Mayors direction. This conversation and statement took place about 3 p. m., of Wednesday, December 22, in the Examiner office, and was afterwards directed to Mr. Sawers as we

ABEL MURRAY.
ABEL GRAHAM.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—In answer to your enquiry of the Examiner as the effect that I had made use of any position as Librarian [illegible] to influence Mr. John Pye [illegible] Mr. Stevenson or the surveying service for the Shipyards, I refrain from replying to such a charge, but to end. Such a conversation as that alleged to have taken place between Mr. Pye and myself never did take place.

Yours truly,
THOS. BEAVIS,
Inspector.

Mr. Beavis has shown me the above letter, and the Examiner containing a report of the alleged conversation, and I hereby declare that such a conversation never took place between us.

JOHN PYE.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I have seen in the Review of December 24, a letter from Mr. Thomas Beavis, Inspector, with a piece attached to it bearing my name. The conversation that took place between Mr. Beavis and me on the occasion referred to was not unlike that published in the Examiner. It was like this: I wanted Mrs. Savoy's licence transferred to me and asked Mr. Beavis to do it, giving it to him for that purpose. He returned it to me on another day unchanged, and calling me into a side room asked me who I was going to vote for. I said, for Mr. Sawers. Mr. Beavis asked what was the reason I would not vote for Mr. Stevenson, had he ever done me any harm? I said no, but that I thought Mr. Sawers was the fittest man of the two for the office.

The way I came to sign what is in the Review is this: Mr. Beavis came to me with a piece of paper, having writing on it, which he tried to read, and could not, I and another tried and could not. Mr. Beavis then said he would get a copy that he could read He went to the door and turned back with the same writing, saying it would do well enough as it was. I then signed it, knowing not what it contained. I would not have signed what I have read over my name in the Review.

JOHN PYE.

Peterboro', Dec. 24, 1858.

The above was read over to John Pye and signed by him in my presence.

JOHN J. LUNDY.

Curious Action of Damages.

On Friday, a novel action of damages was brought before Sheriff Jameson at the Small Debt Court, in which Mrs. Wilkie sued Mrs. Veitch (both residents in the village of Slateford) for £12 damages, as compensation for injury done to her feelings and character, in consequence of the defendant having stated to some of the villagers that she had broken her pledge as a member of the Slateford Teetotal Society, by purchasing and being under the influence of whiskey or brandy in a public-house in Slateford. In answer to a question by the Sheriff as to the relevancy of the charge the agent for the pursuer said that the defender, in the statement complained of, had charged his client with a moral offence, which was not only calculated to damage the character of the pursuer, but rendered her liable to loose her situation as Secretary of the Teetotal Society in question.—Evidence was led on both sides, in the course of which it came out that, although, various parties alleged to having on one occasion seen the pursuer in a state which they considered the worse of strong drink none of them could state the dates so specifically as to prove that this had taken place within the period of her having become connected with the Abstinence Society of which she was an office-bearer.—Several of the members of the Society was also produced as evidence for the pursuer, who all declared that they had never witnessed anything to lead them to the conclusion that she had been unfaithful to her pledge. It transpired, however, that in the Slateford Teetotal Society the members are allowed to partake freely of ginger cordial —a circumstance which seemed rather to take the Sheriff by surprise; and he somewhat staggered several of the abstainers by asking them if they were aware that that beverage contained a large infusion of spirits After hearing evidence, he found that the action was a relevant one, and that to allege that Mrs. Wilkie, being a member of the Total Abstinence Society, had broken her pledge, was a libel likely to affect her feelings, character, and prospects. He considered, however that the latitude allowed by the Slateford Society to its members to indulge in ginger cordial, in which there was a large quantity of spirits, ought to diminish the amount of damages; and he therefore decerned for 5s damages, with £1, besides the usual Court expenses.

By late advices from South America, we learn that the States of Peru and Ecuador are on the eve of a war, the Government of Peru having decreed a blockade of the ports of Ecuador. One of the grounds of war stated by Peru, is that Ecuador has contracted the alienation of extensive territory belonging to Peru. Four ships-of-war were immediately dispatched towards Paita in the vicinity of Ecuador, after this decree was issued, having on board some 900 infantry and cavalry, to operate in the north. A New York correspondent quoted by the London Globe refers to the important letter in regard to an English settlement on the Amazon, recently published in the New York Times and adds: "This statement has no such foundation that the Government of Ecuador recently ceded to its British creditors certain tracts of land on the Amazon and Napo, over which Her Majesty, supposing the land to be absolutely yielding to British authority, has of course sovereign rights; but it is not quite true that a new British colony has been erected in the dark, nor that one is likely to be founded on the Upper Amazon just yet. Authentic documents relating to this subject have recently come into my possession, but their wide compass absolutely prevents a repetition of their contents being sent before the next steamer."

A Washington correspondent of the New York Times says: "I understand that the members of the British Legation have confidentially asked the purpose of the British Government to construct a railroad from the head-waters of the Mississippi River to the waters of the Pacific in the Fraser's River region.

PACIFIC RAILROAD.—Mr. Curtis, of Iowa, has introduced into the American House of Representatives a bill for the construction of a central Pacific railroad, with one branches, from the Missouri River; one starting from opposite Iowa and the other from opposite the Missouri, and both converging within two hundred miles of that river, and passing thence to the navigable waters of the Sacramento. The alternate sections of land to be donated are of six miles breadth on each side, and the contractors are also to get a subsidy of $12,000 a mile—the amount to be afterwards reimbursed to government in the shape of transportation of mails and troops. This bill is drafted on a comparatively economical scale, and yet it proposes to give away thirty millions in money, and thirty thousand square miles of land. The bill was referred to the select committee on the Pacific Railroad. Another bill for the construction of a Pacific Railroad, has been introduced into the Senate, and has already been debated for several days.

Health, Strength and Exercise.

We are happy to learn from many sources that the passion for athletic or healthy exercise is rapidly spreading over the Union, and that it has become the rage of late in the most fashionable circles of our cities. It is principally on account of the ladies that we rejoice in this. Of all investments of time, trouble, or money there is none which brings in such a glorious per centage of health or happiness as the devotion of one hour a day to calisthenics or gymnastics. When this is done for a few months, under a competent teacher, in a regular scientific manner, its effects are marvelous. A little regular training of this kind, steadily adhered to, will benefit more by the hour than common walking will by the week. In fact, of all exertions known there is scarcely one which is so far from being generally sufficient as walking. It is good, but only good for limited range of muscles.

Calisthenics is a science not inferior in any respect to any department of physiology so far as the practical application of knowledge is concerned. This fact is not generally appreciated. According to the crude old fashioned ideas of "exercise," it was thought that any one did full justice to health who walked a certain number of miles per diem, while miscellaneous tumbling around in a gymnasium as caprice suggested, was the ne plus ultra of physical accomplishment. Certain amusements were also endorsed a "good exercise"—unfortunately all of these latter were expensive, many connected with dissipation and "sport," and scarcely any of them adapted to women.

Meanwhile, the Germans found out that the number of persons in this generation who pursue sedentary callings is infinitely greater than in the last, that there is a great increase in the proportion since the world has gradually turned from war to industry, and that there has also been a fearful increase in neuralgia, complaints of females, and in short in all ailments resulting from want of exercise. In this country where we have worked the hardest, strained the mind most, and lived most in close air, the results have been worse than in Europe, as Miss Catharine Beecher's little book abundantly testifies. Well, the Germans learning all this, devised a remedy; it was in certain easy exercise, calculated to develop little by little all the muscles, and strengthen day by day those functions of the body on which health most depends. The most learned anatomists and physiologists contributed their experience. The higher gymnastic forms at present a gradual but effectual cure of numerous diseases, and may be ranked as a system, just as hydropathy is. It has this advantage, however, that beyond an hour or two a day, of time, it costs as nearly nothing as medicine well can.

Calisthenics are exercises without apparatus beyond a common cane or club, a pair of dumb-bells and a few similar trifles.—They consist of divers expansions of the limbs and muscles, and are neither violent nor painfully fatiguing. Gymnastics require apparatus, and are intended for complete and powerful development. No persons of a delicate frame or ad anced in life should attempt gymnastics, until they have passed through a course of Calisthenics. If possible, this should always be under the care of a scientific teacher. Where one cannot be had, a class may be formed, and instruction obtained from books. Mr. Sedgwick, of this city, editor of The Gymnast, may be referred to for information on this subject.

For the sake of the weak, the suffering, and the unhappy, we hope that this subject may meet with due consideration. What is the sure preventive of liver complaint? Exercise. What prevents and cures dyspepsia? Exercise. What is the only cure for incipient consumption? Fresh air and exercise. And the physicians accordingly says, "take plenty of exercise," and the patient begins to walk! whereby, perhaps, about one-twentieth part of the whole muscles are called into play which the health requires. She will not learn Calisthenics—that is too violent. What she wants at first that steps in judicious instruction in exercise, under a teacher who will gradually—very gradually—lead her from dependency and weakness and sickness, up to strength and confidence and health.

The exercise may seem strange, but we know that as we write, the strongest men in the country, and those capable of performing the most extraordinary feats of muscle and of destruction, are to be found in our cities among gentlemen frequenting gymnasia—We trust that the time will come, when every village in America, and probably every small town will have its regular devotees to health and strength, meeting in regular classes. It will be better for our young men than attending in bar-rooms, and will be found in every way productive of good.

A correspondent in Albany, gives us an interesting account of the doings of the Legislature there. We could be happy to receive it any time, from Indian or gentleman, (we regret that it is a matter more appropriate to the latter than to the latter) accounts or anecdotes, either humorous or serious, and of feats of strength and exercise.

The Mobile Mercury, in a very well-written article advocating the perfect development of the physical system, caustically remarks, while commenting on the evils of prize-fighting, that even a prize fight is, however, virtually excelled in cruelty, by the absurd rivalry and excessive study encouraged in some seminaries where every thing is done to stimulate the brain and nothing to strengthen the body of the pupil. "Indeed," remarks our contemporary, "perhaps it would be more humane, and the consequences would be more advantageous to literature, if they were pounding each other instead!" The fact is, that the gross dissipation of "sport" among men arises from the neglect of exercise by all classes, and its monopoly by a few men of leisure. Let everybody go to exercising, and we shall soon see the now prevalent affinity between vulgarity and strength scattered to the winds.—Ladies American Magazine.

The Comte De Montalembert.

Charles Forbes, Count de Montalembert was born in London on the 10th March, 1810. He is the representative of an old family at Poitou, and his father was a Peer of France and Ambassador at Stockholm from the Court of Charles X. His mother was an Englishwoman. At the outset of his career he was an advocate for the union of Catholicism and Democracy, of which Lamennais was the apostle, and was one of the editors of a journal founded to advocate that union called D'Avenir.—His opposition to the existing Government brought him at last before the Police Correctionelle; but during the process his father died, and as M. Montalembert then became a Peer of France, he claimed the right of being tried by the Upper Chamber by which he was condemned to a fine of 100f. His defence pronounced before the Chamber, may be considered as the beginning of his political career; but he was prevented, by his not having attained the legal age of thirty, from taking his seat until 1840. The condemnation of Lamennais by the Pope greatly increased the severity of M. de Montalembert's orthodoxy, and both by writing and speaking he made himself thenceforward known as the great champion of Catholicism. He published his famous "Life of Elizabeth of Hungary" in 1836. In 1842, he strongly opposed the educational measure of M. Villemain, and in the following year he published his "Catholic Manifesto." He married, in 1843, the daughter of a Belgian Minister —Mdlle. de Mercde—and, after a short absence from France, he returned to deliver in the Chamber of Peers his three celebrated speeches on the liberty of the Church, the liberty of education, and the liberty of the monastic orders. In 1847 he established a religious association, to work in favor of the Sonderbund. He also made himself notorious for the active part he took on behalf of oppressed nationalities; and on the 10th of February, 1858, he had a solemn funeral service celebrated at Notre Dame to the memory of O'Connell. After the establishment of the Republic, M. de Montalembert was elected a member of the Constituent Assembly, and there acted sometimes with one and sometimes with another of the parties that divided the Assembly. He was opposed to the measure for again requiring journals to furnish security, to the continuance of the state of siege, and to the admission of Louis Bonaparte. But at the end of the session he supported M. Dufaure in a bill for the restriction of the press, and was loud in his approval of the French expedition to Rome. He was re-elected by the department of Doubs for the Legislative Assembly. He there distinguished himself principally by the part he took in preparing the law to restrain the suffrage within narrower limits, by his frequent encounters with M. Victor Hugo, his only rival in oratory, and by his defence of the President. When the coup d'etat came, he protested strongly against the imprisonment of the Deputies; but he nevertheless was named a member of the Consultative Commission, a distinction he declined, and was elected in 1852 into the Corps Legislatif. As a French biographer laconically but happily expresses it, "il y representait presque seul l' Opposition." At the last election, in 1857, he was defeated in the department of the Doubs by the Government candidate, and had since retired from public life until this article in the Correspondant brought him again before the world.—Continental Review.

A Royal Squabble in Prussia.

The Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes thus:—You may perhaps be interested by the following extract of a letter just received from Berlin:—"The Princess of Prussia above all is behaving admirably just now, and with an exhilarance her best friends did not believe her capable. She stays away from the Capital at this moment in order to show that her husband can act without her, and to induce people to be less afraid of her imperial relations. If it had not been for the poor Queen's deadly hatred of her sister-in-law we should have had the Regency long ago. But all is going on admirably. The Queen's hatred was a terrible one, and its latest cause is the following: The Princess of Prussia, some years ago, was on the eve of obtaining from the Queen the pardon of some rebels in Baden. The Queen came in and upbraided her character for her Democratic tendencies and thirst for popularity. The Princess answered that the murders of the rebels in question had saddened her, and that she could not undo that appeal. To some distinct remarks made upon this by the Queen, the Princess then emphatically "Ah, Madame! you seem you are ignorant of what supreme fools I" This was just too, and how just how, the Queen felt it herself on the cool reflection of the grief of the Queen at being addressed, and her envy of her grandmother for being the mother of the one we see Crown. The Queen of Prussia is sister to the Archduchess Sophia of Austria.

THE BOY MORTARA.—The Civilta Cattolica publishes an explanation of the refusal to return the boy to his parents, which is supposed to be semi-official. It is a long and laboured document, and full of those painful perversions of scripture to which we are accustomed on writings on this side of the question. The writer extols the wisdom and gentleness of the Church, and fulminates anathemas against those who stand up for the sacredness of natural relationships, whom he accuses of descending to the level of the beasts, in whom the parental affections predominate. He insists very much that the mission of our Lord was not to send peace, but a sword. But as M. Paradol well remarks in the Debats, "the only sword in your hand is the sword of France, without which, far from being able to tear a poor Jewish child from his parents you could not defend yourselves against your own Christian people."

Berryer the Advocate of Montalembert.

Referring to the person and speech of M. Berryer, the Times' Paris correspondent says:—

"You are probably aware that in France M. Berryer has been long considered, by most people, as one of the greatest of French orators since the time of Mirabeau. In person he is rather under than over the middle size, but his features are full of experience, and reflect all the fire and passion which burn within him. There is something fascinating about his glance; and the look with which he surveyed the Procureur, seated on his lofty bench, as he entered the Court, after a few minutes' absence, seemed to take the measure of that functionary's intellect. His whole person is eloquent. The effect of M. Berryer's impassioned rhetoric cannot be given by the most skilful short-hand writer, for its forces lies in those qualities which cannot be transferred to paper. Who can give the exquisite intonations of that rich and melodious voice, or the graceful energy of the action? That action and that voice are never so much displayed as in the fire of his declamation. Other orators may be interrupted by the applause of their hearers, but M. Berryer is listened to with almost breathless silence, as if they feared to lose even one note of that deep voice, or miss one single wave of that arm. His voice is heard distinctly, whether it be low or high; and when it ceases you long to hear it again, and hesitate by the slightest movement to break the spell. The variety of his intonations cannot be surpassed, whether his words be simple and familiar, bold, or rich with ornament. In sarcasm he is powerful, and his person swells under interruption. During his speech, when alluding to "official and non-official gag" on the press, he was interrupted by the President, who thought proper to remind him that the renown he had won at the French bar was won by his defence of the laws, that the "warnings" given to the press from time to time were authorised by the law, an attack on which he would not tolerate, as it was a repetition of the offence he was at that moment prosecuting. M. Berryer effected his object in an indirect but far more forcible manner. He went over the charges one by one against his client, and scouted the notion that a mere statement of facts which were matter of history, the admiration of the institutions of another country, though not the same which existed in his own, could be tortured by any perversion of ingenuity into an attack on the Imperial Government of France. He read the incriminated passages one after another, and completely swept away the flimsy reasoning of the Procureur. He went over the early history of his noble client, his eloquence as a writer and an orator, his high character free from the slightest stain, his consistency, his devotedness to his principles, his unshaken fidelity to the cause of religion and freedom, his great talents as a public man, which, even without the advantages he possessed of noble birth and ancient lineage, would alone have won him distinction among his most ancient contemporaries. M. de Montalembert did not calumniate his country, for he declared that France could support liberal institutions as well as England; but it was when he came to the passage of the article, where he observes that "every man who sees in a Government something else than an ante-chamber, etc.," that M. Berryer was overwhelming. It did not follow that the Imperial Government was an ante-chamber; it referred to those men under whatever regime, under every form of Government, no matter who was king, President, or head of an Empire, were ready with their fulsome adulation to every one in authority—protesting fidelity to them to-day, and when fallen trampling on them to-morrow, and offering on the morrow the same unmanly incense to those who overthrow them. Such men were to be seen in the ante-chamber of every king and every minister. They were seen in those of Louis XVIII., in those of Charles X., in those of Louis Philippe, and those of the Republic. They were ready to insult those they formerly bowed down before, and to bow down before those they had formerly insulted. Such men belonged to no particular regime—they infected all alike; their own principle was base subservience. They were ever the same men, the same fawn, and were to be found at all times.

As M. Berryer buried his withering sarcasm in terms that made the wealth ring again, with flashing glance and arm uplifted above his head, a thrill ran through the hall, and all involuntarily acknowledged the irresistible charm of the orator's eye, voice, and action. The looks of some were directed to one corner of the hall, where it was supposed one or two were sitting, who, perhaps, felt the lash, and who seemed to shrink from the gleam of the sparkle.

M. Berryer's speech included two hours, and exhibited throughout power abundant. When he ceased a burst of applause arose in the outer chamber part of the hall; it was rapidly spreading in the whole audience, but was at once checked by the usher.

A London Clergyman and his Wife.

CRUELTY AND SEPARATION.

At the Divorce Court, London, on Saturday, the case of Marchmont versus Marchmont was heard. This was a petition for a judicial separation, promoted by the wife of Mr. Henry Marchmont, on the ground of cruelty. Mr Sergeant Pigott said that the petitioner had been the widow of the late Mr. Lockett, who for many years had been the keeper of an hotel (the Cock) in Thread-needle street, where he accumulated a considerable fortune. Such was the confidence he reposed in his wife that he bequeathed to her the whole of his property. The respondent, who was the minister of an independent congregation at Islington, became acquainted with her in Dec., 1856, and he soon afterwards made her an offer of marriage. She at first declined his proposals, but he had recourse to a species of threat which sometimes took effect on the timid people—he said that unless she became his wife he would destroy himself. The petitioner went with him to see his mother, who was at the point of death, and in consequence of a few words from the dying woman, coupled with what had fallen from her son, the petitioner consented to become Mrs Marchmont. The marriage actually took place on the same day that Mrs Marchmont, senior, died. The petitioner was a Roman Catholic, but the respondent did not seem to think that that constituted any objection to the match; and the nuptials were accordingly solemnized at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark, on the 17th of October, 1857. During the honeymoon the respondent commenced his ill treatment of the petitioner. At first he began with words; and very unpleasant they were to pass between man and wife. Mrs Marchmont would herself narrate the history of her married life, and the jury would be then able from her statement to draw what inference they pleased with regard to the motives that had prompted the respondent's very remarkable behaviour—Mrs Caroline Maria Marchmont; I was married to the respondent on the 17th of October in last year. I had known him from the previous December. I was a widow at that time, and I had at my disposal about £50,000, which my first husband had left me under his will. The respondent proposed to me in February. I did not accept his proposals at once. We were married at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark. Mr Marchmont was a minister. We were not married anywhere else —was not his wife. After our marriage we went to see his mother, who was dying, and then we went to Tunbridge Wells. I took Mr Marchmont's little boy with me, for he was just then exceedingly ill. The next morning we heard of the death of Mrs Marchmont. The Wednesday before we were married I had lent Mr. Marchmont's father £900, and he had had from me £110 before. I also lent Mr Marchmont £100. We remained at Tunbridge Wells about five weeks. The first Sunday after we were married Mr. Marchmont went to town, and I told him to bring his other two children back with him, which he did. On the 18th or 19th of November, he told me to go and hang or drown myself. The children were present. On the next day he said he should leave me; and he told the children to take off the things I had bought for them, and to put on their own. On the 21st he called me a liar, and he said that something was "a lie, a ——— lie." Some time afterwards he told me he wished to be separated, and asked me if I would give him £10,000. At first I could not think he meant it; but he told me to write to my trustees on the subject. I accordingly prepared a letter instructing them to make arrangements for our separation on the terms he had proposed, but he would not let me send it. The day after our marriage I had given him £100; and on the 9th of November I had lent him £91 to pay his solicitor at Cambridge. We went to Dover about the end of November. On the 11th of December he told me that if I was not a mean-spirited thing, or worse I should not stay with him. I replied that if he would allow me to go and get my bonnet I would go away at once; and I went upstairs to put on my things. He came up and spoke to me in a violent manner, but I went down with my bonnet in my hand, and left the house. He came after me and told me to go back and "pay the ——— bill," or he would throw me into the sea. He seemed very white, his eyes flashed fire, and he looked almost as if he would kill me. Some people, however, were coming up, and he went away. I walked about till dusk, for I did not know what to do. At last I got into a Canterbury omnibus; but when I got half way I got out and returned by another 'bus. I then went home and wrote a note to him. He sent me a kind reply, and I stayed with him. The next day he insisted on having a cheque for £1000, and another for £15. He made me take all the things out of my pockets, and wanted the notes I had by me. He held his fist up in a threatening manner, and I yielded at once. He often told me to go to the devil, and called me such names as "cur," and "cad," or "dirty slut." Towards the end of December he asked me to make it all up. I said, "Then give me back my £900 directly," and he did so. We were friends till the next morning, when we went to market together. In the afternoon we walked out with the children. Sidney, the eldest child, took hold of his papa's hand, and his sister Mary Ann pushed him off. I observed that it would be better if neither of them took Mr. Marchmont's arm. The respondent instantly said they should not carry the knife, and threatened to knock me down—He clenched my teeth violently under his, and he would give me in charge, and called me a "thief" and a "cad." I appealed to get away, and gesticulated, but I did not like to strike him. He then left me, and I stayed [illegible] I stayed [illegible] I stayed [illegible] countenance of his wishing to be separated of [illegible] him. At 9.30 he returned.—He was in the habit of bring out without the [illegible] and I [illegible] and I was up the whole night. On the 20th of December he ordered me to buy him [illegible] because [illegible] he said positive he felt that he was going to have an humour, and that he prayed he might not be. He told me, that he was like Mount Vesuvius, and that he felt the passion bubbling within him till it must come out; he could not help it. On the 28th of December we left Dover for Ostend, Antwerp and Brussels, and on the 7th of January we returned to Dover. On Sunday the 10th, he got up very early and in a very ill humour. When I returned with the children from church he told me to go to bed, and he said the sooner he saw me their the better. (Laughter) He again wanted me to let him have £10,000. He ground his teeth at me and called me "[illegible] spitfire cat." He then got ill, but shortly afterwards he broke out again. He said that I had £50,000, and he did not see why he should not have half. The servant was just then coming in to lay the cloth, and I repeated to her what he had said least he should make me agree my acquiescence to such a proposal. After dinner he told me I might go away if I liked. I went, but he followed me and told me that if I would not return he would drown himself. He then went on to the pier, I walked about for a long time, and at last I went on to the pier to see what had become of him. When I found him, he told me he was only waiting for it to get dark, and then he would drown himself.—(Laughter.) On the 12th we went home to my house in Percy place, Chapham road. On the 21st of January he was writing in the study and he asked me for a wax candle. Not thinking he was in a bad temper, I observed that if he would turn to the light he would be able to see for a long time yet. He instantly went into one of his passions, and said, "You're drunk, you drunken old faggot." He then rushed up stairs, and broke into my room. Then he returned, and took my account-book from me. He put it into the fire, but I recovered it though I burnt my fingers in doing so. He then tried to get it from me, and in the struggle it touched his face and blackened it a little. This made him exceedingly violent; he said that if I were a man he would spit in my face, and force me to fight a duel with him. After this he said to the children, "if that woman speaks to you, spit in her face." A number of people were collected round the house by the noise. I wanted to get out, but he followed me and tried to carry me back. I think I screamed. He took the children from me, and when I went into the parlour he thrust me out. I then went towards the back door, but he followed me in a passion, and struck me a violent blow on the forehead with his flat hand. I was doing nothing but trying to get out of his way. I spent the evening in the kitchen, and slept in the servants' room. In the course of that quarrel, he said he wished that God might strike him dead if ever he kissed me, or me if I kissed him again. Afterwards, he wanted to make it up, but I told him of the speech, and would not. Subsequently to this he desired me to take opera tickets, which I did. Soon after a quarrel occurred about a Newfoundland dog, in consequence of which he slept several nights on the sofa; and he refused to go to the opera after all. Some days later he told me to go to my solicitor and make an amicable arrangement for our separation. He told me that he had consulted his attorney, who had informed him that it was quite sufficient that he had found his little son in my bed. He asked me if I had seen my legal adviser; I had not, but seeing that he was growing violent, I said I should make an appointment with him. He said, "If you tell him that I struck you, I will torment you as long as I live, and shorten your life." The next day, when I declined to go out with him in the carriage, he said he should not mind swinging for me. I was so alarmed that I ran out of the house, and went for protection to a neighbour, Mrs Watson's. While I was there he wrote two letters to me, but I did not comply with his request. I went to my sister's, but finding her ill, I proceeded to the house of my niece, Mrs Walmsley. The letters I received from the respondent are as follows:—

"My dearly beloved Caroline.—If you still refuse to see me, I of course am powerless. This, my darling, is my last letter. Only see me two minutes, and then I will leave you peacefully. Don't refuse your husband, who loves you to distraction. If you refuse I shall go God knows whither—I do not. Think of what I have borne since last Thursday—more than tongue can tell. If you see me I will not say one word to reproach you. I only wish to bear a word of forgiveness from your lips. Of course I cannot stay in this neighbourhood, even today, if you stay where you are. I will take you to your trustees, to your lawyer, to your sister—anywhere you ask if you will only go with me. I will not enter your house while you are in it, if you will but go and see the children once more before I remove them. God make and keep you happy, Caroline. To me life without you is a burden, and the world a desert. Shall the last note of intercession be in vain from your husband? Heaven protect and bless you. So prays your devoted though despised and hated "HENRY."

Feb., 1858.—My dearest Caroline,—Do you think I deserve this? Pray see me and let me tell you how sorry I am for having caused you any pain; and then, if you wish me, I will leave you and make no further effort to see you again. My heart is almost broken by sorrow, mortification, and anxiety. I love you with my whole heart, in spite of any severity of manner that I may have shown towards you. God is my witness that I am thoroughly sincere in these professions. I love you beyond my own love for you. It was the dread of a separation—the thought of which I cannot endure—that made me appear severe. Come home with me, my own darling, and I will still do, as I have always endeavoured, to make you happy. Consider seriously the consequences of refusing to see your own husband, and that in the house of a lady who is a stranger to him. Do not, for your own sake, for the children's sake, put estrangement between our persons. Remembering my deserved love, the opportunity of such a reconciliation as you are now having. A fat outlook as one you have if you object.—Your loving husband,

"HENRY."

Respecting contempt.—My husband came to see me by stealth. There were fresh plots between Mr Walmsley and him; and he then dragged me down with such violence up stairs to the cab he had brought with him. He was in such a state that he could scarcely articulate, and he clenched his fists. Dr Dowse. What did he say to you? Witness. Am I obliged to tell it? The Court? Yes. Witness, with great reluctance, repeated the words, but they were too great to be written or printed. The witness continued—I screamed, and he said he had even my mouth and nose [illegible] me. He pushed his mouth as hard that he thrust my tongue down my throat. I thought I should be choked. I thought I should die. I did not struggle. He said, 'Tulips is out.' That is my cue. Sweet Rose! Poor Tulip! Will they ever be united! Alluding again to the esoteric commotion which his interview with the magistrate had caused him, he informs his wife that "the dreadful reformation had returned," and expatiates with a melancholy satisfaction on the probability of its putting an end to his sorrows. The curious contrast between these letters, and the evidence of Mrs Marchmont seemed to be generally regarded as placing the writer's eloquence in a ludicrous light; so that those passages which were of unequal warmth, solemnity, or pathos, called forth loud demonstrations of mirth, and in some degree disturbed the gravity of the bench itself.—The correspondence was, however, wound up by an anti-climax, with which the narrative of Mrs Marchmont had nothing to do. The respondent observed, "As I part with great regret that my letters have lost their weight with you, will you send them all back to me? . . . Anonymous letters were beginning to pour in upon me. I have just paid twopence for one." This naive statement was received with roars of laughter.—At the conclusion of Mrs Marchmont's evidence in chief the case was adjourned to Monday morning.

MONDAY, November 22.

Mrs. Caroline Marie Marchmont, the petitioner, added to her evidence that, first and last, her husband had received from her upwards of £2000, but about half of that sum had been lent at his instance to Mr. Marchmont, sen.—Cross-examined by Mr. Macaulay: My income at the time I contracted this marriage was more than £2000 a-year. He told me that he had £200 a-year. There was no arrangement as to our household expenses, except that he was to keep the carriage and pair of horses. The three children were sent to school, and I promised to pay for them the first year. I had known Mr. Marchmont about eight months before we married. I had been living in my house, No. 10 Percy place.—I had a niece living with me, who has since been married—Mrs. Uzzielli. Mrs. Walmesley, my other niece, is the daughter of my sister, Mrs. Davis. Mrs. Davis had lived with us at the hotel, in Threadneedle street. She has also a large fortune.—My husband's property was brought to Percy place, but I paid for his wine—£350. That was sometime before we were married. He came to me and said he was in debt; and I lent him the money. At Tunbridge Wells we lodged with Mrs. Bennett, at Jordon House, at the foot of Mount Ephram. I became unwell, and kept my bed. He stayed in my room with me, but he did very little for me—he was writing all the day long. The lady of the house nursed me. Never commanded him in my life—he would not bear that. Never said to Mrs. Bennett's niece that I hated marriage, and that I would not live with my husband.—Never said that Mr. Marchmont should wash, dress, and undress the children himself. He might have done it a few times, but it was because he liked to do it. Did not say that there should not be a fire for the children; there were fires for them.—Never said in reference to any little payments at Tunbridge, that he was trying to cheat me. The marriage party took place at my sister's. He told me he did not wish any member of his family to be invited.—At that time he did not own his brother-in-law, and his mother was dying. I had a conversation with him about his age. My sister drew my attention to his age, inserted in the marriage certificate, which was ten years younger than I thought. When he came in, I said, "Henry dear, you must tell me how old you are." He said, "Well I am 35. I never deceived you except in this matter, but I thought if I told you the truth you would not have had me."—(Laughter.) I knew he had had nine children. He did complain about having to spend his honeymoon in a sick room; and in consequence of that I wrote to my attorney to alter my will, in which I had previously left him half my property. I might have complained of the wine he gave me when I was ill. I never called him a "——fool." At Dover we lived at the house of Mrs. Byder. The circumstance which led to his calling me "a mean-spirited thing" must have been something that had happened a day or two before—perhaps when he said he would have the £10,000.—Mr. Macauley: If he said he would have it, why did he not have it?—Witness. Because he could not get it. (Laughter.) I never told him that he might go to the devil. I never made use of such an expression in my life. He said that he would send for a policeman and say that I was insane. What he said about Vesuvius was as I have stated. He did not say, when I charged him with behaving coldly, "Ah, but my coldness is only like the snow on Mount Vesuvius!"—(A laugh.) I may have given him money in very small sums when we went to Belgium; he ought to have taken money himself. I did not promise to pay the expenses of the trip. I did know that he might have left me if I had let him have much money. Did not forbid him and his children more than two meals a day when we were abroad.—When buying a box at Dover I might have told him to mind his own business, but if I did it was not said unkindly. My house in Percy place was not a very large one. I had there two servants, named Tobin and Lewis. It had been understood between us that a larger house should be taken, and we had looked at several. We looked at one, the rent of which was £200. I never told him that I would not be bothered with his things, for the house was mine. I did not forbid him to bring in a chest of drawers; I wished him to bring one. I had one of the children to sleep in my room to protect my life; that child is almost six years old. Did not say when the Newfoundland dog was brought home "I have dogs enough; I have four of you already." I did say when he was cutting some roast beef for the dog, that there were enough without having dogs. I did object to have a governess for the children, because there was no room in the house for one. He said he would rather be broiling in hell than feel as he did when the children came home. I did not reproach him with extravagance on the 21st of December, when the candle scene took place. He called me "a drunken faggot;" but he did not say I must be mad or drunk to refuse my husband a halfpenny candle, and look him out of his own room. I may have said to him "D—— you," once or twice. He did not afterwards come to me in the dining room, and say he hoped the storm were over. He did not pour out some wine and water for me, nor did I at that time throw wine and water over him when he had called me a dreadful name. He knew Mrs. Uzzielli before he knew me. Mrs. Uzzielli introduced me to him. She has told me that my temper was intolerable; and I replied that whatever it was he knew of it before he married me, and I could not change it. I never told him that his companions at Stoke Newington were a blackguard gang of hypocrites, but he told me that I should be "frustrated" if I were to go to the theatre. When he struck me on the forehead he did not merely push me, and say, "Get away, you insolent little creature." My forehead was thrown back from the blow. I did not perceive the green colour; he asked me to get them. I bought 12 guineas' worth, but he never ate them. On the 1st of February he told me that it would serve me right if he were to do something to get a divorce from me. When I went to Mrs. Wellesleys, I said I would not go home again till I saw him at my feet. I did not apply to Tobin that I would not go back till I was fetched. He tried to stop my mouth when I was in the cab, and hooped my teeth.—I was screaming at the dreadful names he was calling me. I begged the cabman for God's sake to stop, or I should be murdered. [illegible] and then a [illegible] guard," and —— cut-throat." When we reached the station I did not call him "a wretch," "a brute," or "a blackguard." I did not say before the police-sergeant, "You wretch, you tried to strangle me; but if I had said so it would have been true. I never said to him "I suppose you have had a nice time of it with your nasty —— while I have been away." I used to frankly tell him and he knew it. I may have complained to Tobin that he went away after kissing the children without giving me one kind look, but I never resigned that to her as a reason why I left home. Mr. Godwin was the solicitor who drew up the marriage settlement, and whom I first consulted about Mr. Marchmont had the business to speak of that gentleman and myself in such disgusting terms that I resolved that I would never see him [Mr. Goodwin] again. A letter written to him fell into my hands; and after that I ordered the servant to show me her masters letters before she gave them to him. I did not charge him with having improper intercourse with other women during my absence. I had a different opinion of him then; but I think he is that now. He showed me one letter, which purported to be from a young lady asking him to recommend her as a governess. He at first offered to let me answer it myself, but he would not allow me to answer it afterwards when I wished. If he had, it would have relieved my mind. I remembered his asking me to lend him 14s to pay the coachman, and I reminded him that he had promised not to ask for more money until November. I went to the window and told the servant not to pull down the blind. He snatched my purse out of my hands and put it in his pocket. There were neither sovereigns nor cheques in it. We then drove to a shop in Newgate street where he accused me of having left him seven times in six months, and of having lived with another man. On our way to Newgate street he had called at a money-order office, and I slipped out of the carriage and ran away. He saw me again in Newgate street. He told me to go to the Mansion House if I had any charge to make; but I did not know how to act. I went away from him that day. On the 24th of May I returned home in consequence of what I heard about the child. (The witness repeated her denial of having charged her husband of having improper intercourse with other women, and continued:—) I perhaps rode out with him afterwards, and made it up, because I am of too forgiving a temper, and he knew very well that one kind word would bring me round. He would not let me see my friends and relations. I wanted to have a party after my wedding, but he said if any relation came he would go out. On the 4th of June he was angry at my having been at my lawyer. He did not accuse me of carrying on a course of deception, nor did I call him a —— liar. I did not insist upon his giving up the chapel before I married him, but I wished him to do so, and offered to build him another. He told me I should be "bonneted" if I went to the chapel; I suppose because I was a Roman Catholic.—Sir. C. Cresswell: Very likely.—Cross examination continued: When he caught me in the garden, after I had escaped from the house, he flew upon me like a tiger.—When we were in the house I did not swear at him and say, "You murdered your mother and now you want to murder me." I was locked in all day and became ill. He did not attend upon me. He slept in the same bed with me that night, but remained at as great a distance as he could from me. He did not sleep with me on the Sunday night. I lived at Mr. Mitchell's for nearly three months—that is, within a few doors of my own house, where my husband is living.—The Court rose at five o'clock.

The French Government and the Bakers.

(From the Daily News.)

It would be easy, were we so inclined, to cite a score of instances where the French Government has unwarrantably meddled with existing interests in defiance both of constitutional forms and economical principles. The latest illustration consists in its interference with that most useful class of the trading community, the bakers.—Though aware that in some respects the parallel will scarcely apply, we would fain ask what would be the astonishment felt in this country by the community at large and the bakers in particular, were an Order in Council to make its appearance, intimating that, pursuant to some long-forgotten act of Parliament, every baker carrying on business in a given list of 161 of the most populous towns and cities, is required immediately to lay up a reserve of grain or flour equal to three months' consumption. Should we not rub our eyes and fancy we had gone back to the days of the Pharaohs? Yet astonishing as it may appear, this is practically what is ordered to be done in France, without further form of law than an Imperial Decree in the Moniteur. If the bakers have not the requisite amount of capital at their disposal, they are directed to borrow it, and it is vaguely suggested by the Minister that they will doubtless obtain it from the local capitalists or municipalities. The Government is even sagacious and considerate enough to obviate another impediment to the proposed arrangement. The bakers do not possess granaries or storehouses of sufficient capacity. In such cases, new storehouses are to be erected by the municipalities, and the bakers are to pay rent. Such are the literal provisions of a Decree, possessing all the force of law, which has been promulgated within the last few days throughout France. The population of the 161 towns comprised in the Decree, is stated at some seven or eight millions and a half of persons. A very moderate computation values at three millions and a half sterling, the quantity of grain and flour which is to be then compulsorily stored up. Moreover, it is apparently proposed to extend the ultimate operations of the Decree over a much wider area. [illegible] people will at once be ready with a string of objections and questions. How are the bakers to get the money? The answer is, they must look to the municipalities. But where are the municipalities to find the money to lend the bakers? They may, perhaps, [illegible] with? The Government has the answer ready—they may pay. How, then, do the municipalities propose to raise the money? Why, by a tax, of course. What guarantee is there that the bakers will be taken up? Supposing that they are prosecuted, as a matter of course, for not having taken up, or not having stored, the quantity of grain that very likely he cannot obtain the assistance of capital in the [illegible] on the security of the [illegible] of trade? Will not the [illegible] of quantities of [illegible] of grain [illegible] or in [illegible] quantity of flour [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Indeed it fell mightily strange that Mr. Edwards, even if he had been mistaken in his apprehension of his examination, did not, at some time, before or after publishing his assertion of falsehood in the Review, seek to correct such a wrong impression, in a more friendly manner. There was no interpretation of Mr. Edwards by the Examiner; he was represented as having done no more than he was ordered to do. What reason then could he have had for changing his disposition to Mr. Sawers? He had been friendly with him; when he admitted that he had paid Mr. Hall, under the direction of Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Sawers told him he would publish it, and all Mr. Edwards asked was, that it should not go abroad that Mr. Stevenson had signed a cheque ordering him to pay Mr. Hall, because Mr. Stevenson had given his order verbally. Now it matters nothing whether the order was written or spoken, unless people will consent that nothing can bind Mr. Stevenson, short of writing; which is a very poor compliment to pay him. But the article published was in exact accordance with the version of Mr. Edwards. What then was there to effect so great a change, as next day appeared by his letter in the Review? We can conceive nothing, and if there is, we hope that, although Mr. Edwards has since avoided us, he will not let to-morrow's Review appear without his explanation. Mr. Sawers is relieved from the charge of guilt which his unscrupulous adversaries would thin fasten upon him, and now that there is abundant evidence that Mr. Edwards told the truth, that he said he paid the money by direction of Mr. Stevenson, what sort of appearance does the denial wear? Will the Review repeat what he said last week, that Mr. Edwards COMES FORWARD PROMPTLY AND BRANDS MR. SAWERS AS A LIAR!

"A Rate-payer."

Mr. Elias Burnham writes over the signature "a Rate-payer," to the electors; his subject being the abuse of Mr. Sawers. A fortnight ago, Mr. Elias Burnham was reminded that he had not paid his taxes for three years, and that therefore it was no burden upon him to vote peasants to his brother Councillors. Mr. Burnham over his proper signature denied the fact, and referred us to the Collectors roll for proof. We examined the roll, and proved our statement by naming the three several years for which the taxes remained unpaid, and their several amounts. Here Mr. Burnham, as Mr. Burnham, dropped his remonstrance, as Mr. Burnham, dropped his remonstrance, the impeachment of error being referred back upon himself. But he reappears, immediately over a fictitious signature, the more so, that, paying no rates he cannot be classed as "A Rate-payer." Mr. Burnham is a Councillor, and for that reason, if for no other, he is deserving of notice. It would require much more time and space than can be afforded, if every objection that could be taken to his address, were considered; only the prominent points therefore will be grappled with. Now, Mr. Burnham, you charge Mr. Sawers with "having as a School Trustee compelled the Council to raise some £14,000 to aid in building a School-house." On the part of Mr. Sawers we deny the charge, without any qualification, and call upon you for your proof, which of course you can get by examining the School minutes. Next, Mr. Burnham, you accuse Mr. Sawers with "abusing the Council for treating hospitably and decently the officials and other gentlemen interested in our Railway, from Port Hope." Here again we join issue for our client. Mr. Sawers distinctly approved of the public men of Peterborough receiving the "officials and other gentlemen" from Port Hope; but here is the difference: Mr. Sawers did not approve of the working man's taxes, being drawn upon, to pay the bill. When the working men of Peterboro' understand that they are receiving the working men of Port Hope, he will be the last to exclaim against the outlay of their own money. You know, as a Councillor, Mr. Burnham, that the taxes contributed by any other class, than the working man, a mere drop in the bucket; and you ought to know, as a lawyer and a gentleman that it is not honorable or just to take his contributions, and apply them to any other purpose than the public use. But, Mr. Burnham, what interest can the working man take in the enjoyment which he is not allowed to share? It is all very well to say that you received the gentlemen of the neighboring Town; they certainly do not throw its population or chief attraction any more than others of their class do in Peterborough. You complain of Mr. Sawers that "he owns no property in Town except his press and types" you build upon that that [illegible] in common with our interests will be nothing to lose but everything to gain, and in this view he has the assurance to come before the ratepayers and to ask them to place him in the most important position of trust in the Town." Your promises, Mr. Burnham, are not correct; Mr Sawers owns a lease of the building which he does his business, and he [illegible] you. Or do you consider that [illegible] connect us for have misled [illegible] perhaps you look upon the free- [illegible] the only class who should manage [illegible] affairs. Do you, or does Mr. [illegible] only the taxes upon the premises you have put him in possession of? Is it [illegible] Sawers? Then is he, and not [illegible] interested in the good management [illegible] the interest of those premises is [illegible]? Mr. Burnham, you profess to [illegible] interest; your denouncement of the tenant who commonly pays the taxes, and your championing of the landlord or freeholder, your [illegible] with Railway facilities [illegible], has, do you deem, by that homely [illegible] "assurance," when you apply it to a [illegible], combined by the laws of the land, with ranks to form the principal, caused? Also, you assure that the owners of the soil are the community at the back? Who makes your properties valuable? Is it not the people? You cannot occupy all your ground. But you are no unprincipled class. You would have your system taken and make you rich. You would have them toil, and you would take every [illegible] they owe [illegible] of spending themselves, and give it exclusively to your own class. That has been of your municipal Reform, and perhaps it is a type of your political Reform. You respect that Mr. Sawers got from the Council, by your assistance, the sum of $30 for going on deputation of the Town to Toronto. Mr. Sawers has repeatedly denied that charge; the last time at his nomination:—Be so good, Mr. Burnham, as to offer proof of your assertion, so persistently adhered to. Your word may pass among those who know its value; there are others who have not had the advantage of testing it. You called upon Mr. Sawers to prove that you had not paid your taxes for three years, and he proved it to your satisfaction. You became silent as to that. Now, silence Mr. Sawers by showing that he got $30 for one journey to Toronto. The organ of your party comes out to-morrow. If you have not already seen the bill, you will find it in the Clerk's office. Your last charge, Mr. Burnham, is that Mr. Sawers got $40 "which he says, for he produced no voucher, he advanced for the Town."—When you are in the Clerk's office satisfying yourself that Mr. Sawers got $30 for going to Toronto, it will not be much trouble to turn to a certain letter addressed to the mayor by Mr. Eccles, of Toronto. You will therein find that Mr. Eccles acknowledges to have received the money, and if you will consult your own memory, you being the law advisor of the Council, will recollect the circumstance under which the debt was contracted. There is one question I may be allowed to ask you on parting. It is this: Are you not leagued with Mr. Stevenson and opposed to Mr. Sawers more for this reason than any other, viz: That Mr. Stevenson will go for commencing the new Town Hall, and thus raise the value of "Burnham's Block," even though the £12,000 is to be assessed on the outer parts, as well as the market neighbourhood; while Mr. Sawers refuses to commit so gross and flagrant injustice upon the distant ratepayers, at a time when debentures are sold at something like 2) per cent discount? Let us hear from you to-morrow, and take care that you do not do as you did about the taxes. Your law practice has been productive of little practical benefit to you, if it has not taught you to stick to an untruth.

Mr. Treasurer Sheridan.

This fidgety little gentleman has felt it necessary to deliver an address to the County Council, in which he complains of what he is pleased to call "the slanderous attacks and foul insinuations" of the Examiner. When the Council met, a fortnight ago, the fact of their being called together in special session was recorded by us, but the Review, in its remarks upon our notice, states falsely, when it says that we connected the embarrassment of the Treasurer's accounts with the cause of their meeting. We gave no reason for their then sitting, but only incidentally stated that there was an embarrassment arising out of a mixture of Mr. Sheridan's Bank account with that of the Treasurer. Now, although it may suit tendies of the Review stamp to carry favor with public officers, it does not suit our leanings at all, for we are very suspicious of their intentions. Therefore, as Mr. Sheridan desires it, we will give him the benefit of a small corner of our mind. You know, Mr. Sheridan, that there was an embarrassment in your accounts, and if there were proof wanting we have it in your address. You there state that you have been in the habit, for the seven years that you have been Treasurer, of keeping, in one account, large sums of money belonging to yourself and other individuals, and seven different kinds of deposits of public money. All these several kinds of accounts, your own, your friends' and those with the public, have been deposited in the bank in your own name. You say you have pursued this course for convenience, you are now going to [illegible] it, and keep the money of the Counties separate from your private account. Pray tell us, Mr. Sheridan, how it does [illegible] what was found to be such a convenient method for the last seven years, is now to be changed? You know very well that an investigation did take place, and that, singularly enough, it happened during the temporary absence from the Council room of one of the Reeves, who, above all the rest, had a desire to look into your accounts. You claim credit for the use of your name on behalf of the Counties. Can you not balance this, by using the County money when the Treasury is flush? Has not Dr. Ryerson set you an example? You say your vouchers are all right. Very likely they are, but what of the large balances at the credit of your name? Did you neglect to put your own balance out to interest for fear of issuing the public money along with your own; or did you consider the public money at the credit of your name to be at your disposal, for your own advantage, until called for by the public exigencies? This latter supposition is most in accordance with a remark you make that you have given bonds for the safe keeping of the public money. Your deposit account is worth a consideration, which if you do not get at the Commercial Bank, will not be refused elsewhere. But if you do get it, and look upon it as a perquisite of the treasurery do not think of changing your banker, Mr. Clinton is such a discreet young man, you could not be better suited. You invite the inspection of the best book keepers for their approval of the mode and system of your book keeping. Will you extend the liberality of your offer to an examination of your bank account? If you will, your invitation will not be long unaccepted, and, if the result of the investigation does not prove that you have used the public money for your own advantage, then you shall have the fullest acknowledgment of your financial abilities, perseverance, and industry, as evidenced by an extraordinary accumulation of wealth out of very insufficient means.

Inspector Beavis.

On our first take in a nice little affair in which Mr. Beavis figures rather largely. We had made a statement that Mr. Inspector Beavis was using the influence of his office to force tavern-keepers and saloon-keepers to vote for Mr. Stevenson. Mr. Beavis at the instance of some person, of whom it is to be hoped that he knows more than he does of his handwriting, for that he could not read, carries to Mr. John Fyfe, the party instanced by the Examiner, a document for him to sign; how, will be seen by reading Fyfe's explanation. The Review and Mr. Beavis dare to make use of their scandalous fiend to "brand Mr. Sawers as a liar." While Mr Beavis having what purports to be Fyfe's statement to shown to him, he is subpoened and calls it [illegible] Fyfe [illegible] Mr. Beavis [illegible] present of course have his recommendation disposed of; he could not have been persuaded to "brand Mr. Sawers as a liar" were he not an honest witness. That witness' testimony carefully explained and read over to him before signing, condemns Mr. Beavis in very strong terms, and re-establishes Mr. Sawers' credibility:

[The letters will be found on the first page.]

Now, what decency is there in the Inspector going about prostituting his office by asking Municipal favors from those over whom he has a lawful control; and what hypocrisy must it not be in Mr. Stevenson to profess to desire the reduction of the number of tavern-keepers, and the prominent watchfulness over their conduct, at the same time that his emissaries, and those clothed with official power, go about seeking interviews with them in private rooms, and suggesting the protection of Mr. Stevenson over their interests. When the Inspector is refused, he puts the very significant question: "Did Mr. Stevenson ever do you any harm." What does that mean, but that he has no disposition to interfere with their calling, or interrupt their proceedings? Shame! Inspector Beavis. Let Mr. Stevenson stand or fall, do not prostitute your honourable office, to prop up his hypocrisy or his sycophancy.

Fire.

Early on Tuesday morning, a devastating fire broke out in the premises of Mr. Stenson, at the corner of Water street and Hunter street. The tenants upon the property were Mrs. Hunter, dressmaker, Messrs Paplow and Milburn, provision storekeepers, and George Hicks, saloon and boarding-house keeper. Every thing was lost. The fire is not accounted for, but was doubtless an accident. Mr. Stenson, who came here sixteen years ago, and by thrift had accumulated what built up these premises, which were yielding him a handsome income, finds himself at an advanced age, but little further forward in the possession of this world's goods, than when he first cast his lot among us. His case like that of his tenants, who likewise lost all they had upon the premises, is very deplorable.

By the gross negligence and wanton abuse of the public property of the town by the Council, not only was it impossible for want of appliances to suppress the flames that rose from the building which was on fire, but it was equally impossible to protect adjoining buildings; and had there been the least wind, it could not have been otherwise than that a larger circle would have been swept bare. For some time past the organization of a fire company has ceased to exist. Had there been such a force, the Council might be excused for reposing confidence in their oversight of the fire department, but since there is none, it must manifestly have been the duty of the Council to make provision for the keeping of the engine in working order. They can compliment each other, reward each other, and drink each others healths in champagne, provided by the people, and against the consciences of a very respectable number, who refuse in any manner to countenance the use of intoxicating drinks, but they cannot apply themselves to the real work of protecting the town. But not only was there the most unwarrantable neglect of duty in allowing the engine, which is said to be a very excellent one, to remain unpacked; the most extraordinary part remains to be told. Not an axe, not a rope was to be found. They had been lent out and had not yet been returned. The rope is said to have been in use at the drawing up of timbers for the different houses which have lately been erected. The question then is not only of general negligence of the Council in the performance of their proper duties, but of the daring of the individual who authorized the removal of the ropes and axes. It seems that easy Mr. Stevenson has been in the habit of accommodating his friends with the use of the public property, forgetting the while that, when he gives what is not his own, he commits a robbery upon another. Gentlemen who are ambitious to become leaders among the people, should first instruct themselves that every man's interest is in their keeping, and therefore, that nothing should be granted to the request of one, but what if granted, will not be a tax upon the others. Mr. Stevenson persists in ignoring this doctrine; the Council offer him no opposition; it is left to the electors to deliver them their mind.

Opening Services.

The opening services in connection with the new Presbyterian Church under the pastoral care of the Rev. Mr. Roger, took place on Sabbath last in the basement story of the building, when the Rev. Mr. Smith of Bowmanville officiated in the morning to a very large and attentive audience; the Rev. Mr. Scott of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in the afternoon, and the Rev. Mr. Gilmour, of the Baptist Church, in the evening. Collections in aid of the funds of the Church were taken up at each service, the whole amounting to the handsome sum of £36. It is pleasant to see such harmony existing among the clergymen of the different denominations in town as was manifested on this occasion. It speaks volumes for the pastors and augurs well for the influence they will exercise over their respective flocks. More unanimity of this description would work better for the elevation of the social and moral condition of the community than almost any scheme that could be propounded.

Temperance Anniversary.

On Tuesday evening Peterboro' Division Sons of Temperance held a tea-party in the Division room to celebrate their Anniversary. By the politeness of the managers we were invited by the distributor. After the tea and edibles were served round and positions of, thanksgiving was offered up, when Mr. Robinson Rutherford was elected to the chair. Having delivered himself of some very appropriate remarks, a choir which was stationed at one end of the room enlivened the meeting by their eminent efforts which were highly applauded. Speeches were then delivered in aid, and with the music, filled up the time most agreeably. Among the company, we noticed Councillor Carlyle, a member of the order. It appeared strange, after reading in the editorial columns of the last Review that "not one member of the Council can be got to repudiate his share of the responsibility" in the champagne dinner ordered by them to be paid for by the people, Mr. Carlyle said not one word in contradiction to that statement so publicly made by Mr. Stevenson's organ. Can it be that this guardian of the working classes did so far forget his duty as to feed the rich at the expense of the struggling and neglected poor? can it be that those apostles of temperance have one theme for the Division room, and another different one for the Council? We do not believe either; neither do we believe that Mr. Stevenson had any authority for casting such a slur upon temperance societies. It is perhaps not our place to take our hosts to task for their absent mindedness, but we do so with the good intention of moving the members of the Society, who are Councillors, to deny what we believe to be a foul aspersion against the integrity of their temperance principles, and their devotedness to the sacred rights of the unpretending working man, whose education and habits are not supposed, by their insolent taskmasters, to qualify them to do more than pay for the entertainment of their friends.

The Municipal Election.

Next Monday and Tuesday will be the days of polling for the Mayor and Municipal Councillors. So far, the principal part of the discussion has been about the candidates for the mayoralty. It is as necessary, however, that proper persons be brought forward as Councillors, and no doubt, by Monday, our party will have a list of candidates that will be a guarantee of the honesty and ability of the new council. The friends of Mr. Stevenson, as well as himself, are using great exertions to favor his return. They are heard of canvassing the wards in every direction, and at all hours. It will be remarked that these are not the tactics of Mr. Sawers and his friends. They are equally anxious to obtain the suffrages of the electors; but they conceive that as both of the candidates are perfectly well known, it is sheer impertinence to annoy voters, by parading before them the virtues of the one and the vices of the other. Mr. Sawers relies upon his claims to be acknowledged as the defender of the rights and interests of those who are least capable of defending their own, and therefore he will not weaken his position by allowing it to appear for a moment that it is disputed. He is conscious of his strength as well as of his right, and awaits with calmness, the day of trial. The character of the support either of the candidates will receive is very plainly marked out. On the side of Mr. Stevenson are ranged publicans and office-expectants, "corruptionists, upstart gentry and offshoots from the growth of the old country; the aristocracy and the mobocracy. With Mr. Sawers are found the prudent dealer, the honest artizan, and such as have been born with iron and not silver spoons to their mouths; whose palates are not accustomed to champagne, but whose pockets nevertheless are always laid under contributions to provide luxuries for the idle and dissolute asserters of superiority. That Mr. Sawers has the best of it, even his opponents do not dispute. When he does succeed, he will owe it to the firmness of that great body of honest and determined opponents of corruption, who are always ready to withstand the enemy, and give their support to the candidate who practices as well as professes their principles.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Examiner.

Mr Stevensons Address.

Electors do some pity spare,
To ease my doubts and fears:
Remember I have been your Mayor:
Two Consecutive years;
Consider too my scanty pay
For unremitting toil.
Perhaps a slips might drop my way,
Or scamp of trifling spoil,
I never swerved from what was right,
In my official task,
Though I have fed the rich by night,
Granting what they might ask.
The ebbs of rank I strive to gain
Successful I must say;
To puff cigars and drink champagne,
For such your taxes pay.
But mark a rival is at hand,
I feel his dread embrace
True Mr. Sawers means to stand,
Against me in the chase,
Do not dismiss me for his sake,
Here you his kindness try,
I took a passage up the lake,
On board his steamer "Fly":
His imminent brought me near to death,
And blistered all my hands;
My easter that he did not scan,
Nor dint of deepest black,
He used me as a common man,
His trashing trading quack.
Could you support tee Sawers stamp
Before a goat like me?
Then the poor—the rich he changes,
But both I am quite free.
His simple statistic tale is told,
I love the civic chair,
In statute-mouth—to epitch hold,
Miss pattern for a Mayor!

Contrast the difference of his virile mind;
Friends for the poor, rank wealth in left behind;
The high or low is one to him in all,
He views alike the cottage and the hall;
He screams no clashing of your public cups,
To support two ends the object of his pro-,
No rank nor station fore-them from his path,
From thrones lowest to him that holds the cath.
He may have faults but is them one without,
His perquisite tokens few will ever doubt;
A perquisite—creeping he no scrip-scrapes,
From his treasurerial seat he no-scrapes,
In short if you wanted a man to do the needful
And bring to light deeds that thought lurking
Uproot misdemeanors of darkness, safe
Choose from your long list my humble

A Rambler.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I observed in a late number of the Review a request addressed to a reply to "Many Ratepayers" and knowing the object of inquiry is only an example of the whole question, and characteristic of the author, who is an expert at shuffling and throwing dust in people's eyes.

"Ratepayer" did not complain that old Mr. Ward or any one else had ridden free over the road to Peterboro', and would not have known that he did do so, if "Director" had not supplied the interesting information, or cared whether he did or not. It only proves the assertion of "Ratepayer" that many people act in the continual habit of going dead head over the road. That is what is complained of, not only by "Ratepayer," but by very many others also; it is the common talk in the streets of our Town. Descending to personalities, as "Director" does is no answer to the question, and if he thinks the Town is cursed by having its affairs looked after, he must be prejudiced to have his opinion, but I might tell him nevertheless that the people have who feel as much interested in the success of the road will express their opinion, whether this nobody Director approves of it or not. It is notorious here and elsewhere that some one allows a great many people to travel free on the road, and if this system is to be pursued, again I say throw open the road free to all.

Does "Director" mean to be understood that some of the Directors receive any pay for their valuable services?

The less that is said the better about the means contributed by the Directors to build the road. There is sufficient known about that.

Your correspondent would be better employed in removing the corrupt practices on the road, than writing falsehoods in order to humbug the people.

RATEPAYER.

Port Hope, Dec. 27, 1858.

Book Notice.

CANADIAN HOMES; or the Mystery Solved—By the author of "Simon Seek." Montreal: John Lovell; Peterboro: Sawers & Murray.

All who have read 'Simon Seek' will turn with pleasure to this little volume. The 'Mystery' in the difficult task of ameliorating the condition of the working classes, and the author has through the medium of an interesting tale propounded his views on the subject, which he admits are not novel, but which he has placed before the reader in a most attractive and effective style.—The little volume will beguile an evening most profitably, and we think the author loses nothing by his second appearance in public.

Married!

On Thursday evening the 23rd inst., at the residence of William B. Read, in Peterborough, by the Rev. J. Douglas, Mr. WILLIAM J. McOLAVERTY of Berwick, C. W., to JULIA ANN BOOKER, of Osnabruck, C. W.

On the 27th December, in this Town, by the Rev. J. Cameron, Mr. WILLIAM WILSON, of Peterborough, to MISS ISABELLA MILBURN, of the Township of Smith.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Dec. 30th, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 95	a	1 00
Oats "	0 25	a	0 30
Potatoes "	0 25	a	0 25
Apples "	0 60	a	1 00
Flour per barrel	4 00	a	5 50
Butter per lb.	0 12½	a	0 15
Cheese "	0 10	a	0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a	5 00
Beef per cwt	3 00	a	3 50
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Dry Wood	1 00	a	0 00
Green Wood	1 00	a	0 00
Straw per load	1 00	a	1 50

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LIFE AND ADVENTURES OF

SIMON SEEK,

or Canada in all its shapes, by Maple Knot. Price 50 cents.

CANADIAN HOMES or the Mystery Solved, by the author of Simon Seek, price 25 cents.

On sale at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

New Book Store George street.
Peterboro', Dec. 29 1858. 51.

Mr. C. R. DEARNALY,

WILL open a FENCING SCHOOL, or school of ARMS in the large room over Mr. Lundy's store, on January 1st, when young men desirous of acquainting themselves with this gentlemanly and athletic exercise will receive instruction in the art.

Application to be made to the drill master at Dublin Castle.

Peterborough, Dec. 20th, 1858. 51

NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that any person or persons found trespassing on North West quarter of Lot No. 16, 4th Con., Dummer, after this date, will be prosecuted according to law.

JAMES McINTOSH.

Dummer, 20th Dec., 1858. 51

TO THE TRADE!

PETERBORO'

Soap and Candle Works.

A large stock of very superior

CANDLES AND SOAP

now on hand and for sale at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞Orders are respectfully solicited.
Cash for Lard, Tallow and Soap Grease.

OGILVY & HOOD.

Peterboro', Dec 20th, 1858. 51

HOUSE & LOT FOR SALE OR TO LET.

THE subscriber offers for sale or to let part of Lot No. 20, in concession 7, township of Smith, consisting of five acres of land with a large frame house and a good orchard.

For further particulars apply to

J. or R. HALLOWAY.

Smith, Dec. 20th, 1858. 50.

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY & BEAVERTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Shareholders for the Election of Directors of this Company, will be held at the OFFICE OF THE COMPANY, IN PORT HOPE, on Thursday, the 13th January, at 12 o'clock noon.

By order,

THOMAS BIDOUT,
Secretary.

Port Hope, 10th Dec., 1858. 50.

ORANGE DEDICATION.

THE members of Orange Lodge No. 139, Peterborough, intend to dedicate their NEW HALL on SATURDAY, JANUARY 1,

AT 1 O'CLOCK, P. M.

The public and the Masters of Sister Lodges are cordially invited to attend.

Further arrangements will be announced on the evening of the

Peterboro', December 23, 1858. 50

MUSICAL!!

Every Lady may have a large assortment of the best Music for the Piano-Forte, at almost nominal prices by calling at the Book and Music Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY,

where there is at present a great variety of pieces to select from, published at the Musical Repository Office, London, and prices only 6d per single No.

QUADRILLES.

Piccolomini Quadrilles.
The Don Cossac De Baton Quadrilles.
Balaclavar &c.
Russia Dundee &c.
The Mangeuvres &c.
Pass in Review &c.
The Cabinetta &c.
Bobbing Around &c.
The Beggar's Opera &c.
Juvenile Ball &c.
The Bridal &c.
La Fille du Regiment &c.
The Standard Bearer &c.
Margaret of Anjou &c.
The Far West &c.
La Fete des Lilies &c.
Arabian Nights &c.
Jack the Giant Killer &c.
The grand Quadrille of all Nations.
Kratzwick. &c.
The Pantaverine. &c.
The Swiss. &c.
Le Postillion &c.
Francis the 1st. &c.
Quadrille from Meyerbeer's New Grand Opera "Le Prophete."
The Henry Russels Quadrille.
The Neapolitan Quadrille.

FANTASIAS.

La Violette.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.
Grand Galop Brilliante.
Wife o' Nodder.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Scotch Air—Caller Herrin.
Miania.
Far, far upon the sea.

POLKAS, WALTZES, GALOPS, VARSOVIANAS, &c., &c.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's &c.
The Bobbin' Around &c.
The Original &c.
Ash Mamma &c.
The Minnie &c.
The Silverhair &c.
The Bobbing Around Polka.
Old Dog Tray &c.
The Lady Fair Scottische.
The Pic Nic &c.
Magic Fan &c.
Spray of the Ocean, Waltz.
The Rustenia, &c.
Dustt, Begone Dull Care &c.
&c. When a Little Farm we keep.
do. I know a bank.
Minnie; Old Folks at Home &c.
Annie Laurie; Blue Bells &c.
Vilkins & Dinah, Waltz.
Balmoral, &c.
Pretty Airs for Little Fingers.
The Rippling Rill Varsovianas.
Sound the Loud Timbrell.
Ernani Involami, Popular Cavatina.
Vogs Vogs, from Bellini.
A ta o Caro.
Hercule Grand Gallop.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah call me.
Who wishes fresh for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
There ort my Joy.
Up for the Right.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
So Early in the Morning.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.
Lizzie Lindsay & My heart is sair.
The Male, the Sowing Main.
England, dear England by Chas. Mackay.
Lilly Lee and Chorus.
Who would not happy be.
I love to dwell in the bosom's cell.
Lucy Neal & Lacy Long.
Lillie Dale.
Caller Herrin,
Far Far upon the Sea.
Nancy Till.
Fare thee well & if for ever.
Buffalo Gals.
The English Emigrant.
Harry Bluff.
The Fairy Harp—by Mackay.
Who's dat Knockin &c.,&c.
John Brown.
Duncan Lee by Eliza Cook.
The old old Story by Eliza Cook.
Lord Lovel.
When the Kye Comes Hame.
Land Ho!—Russell.
Wae'ts Heart & Highland Mary.
The Canadian Sleigh Song.
Beautiful Star in Heaven so bright.
The Soldiers Wife, by Russell.
The Tight Little Island.
The Brook Song.
The Piper's Daughter.
Mary O'More.
Oh Boy's carry me 'long.
The Mermaid's Cave.
Sally in our Alley.
Why chime the Bells so Merrily.
Land! Land!! Land!!!
Emma Snow.
Hawthorn & the Ivy.
Tom Bowling
The old Church Bell.
The Laird O'Cockpen.
Hail Smiling Morn.
Sir Harold the Hunter.

N. B.—Music from any Publishers at the published price, procured on the shortest [illegible]

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
OF
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George St. Peterborough.

F. G. CALLENDER,

Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWN to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, for the past 12 years, intimates that he will continue to visit Peterboro', on the first Monday in each month, for the week, prepared to perform all operations of the profession, in defiance of competitors as to neatness and durability, (except filling teeth with platina, it being a substance not then used by the profession.) He is also prepared to insert Teeth on Vulcanized Rubber, a much approved new style, being free from taste, much cheaper than Gold, and is said to be equal in neatness and durability, and much more agreeable in the mouth, being less weighty.

Public attention is invited to the above. Rooms over Mr. Clinton's Store.

Peterboro', 9th Dec., 1858. 49

The "WEEKLY GLOBE"

ON

FRIDAY, DEC. 17th,

CONTAINS an interesting sketch of the Life of the Hon. Robert Baldwin, Description of the Tycoon, &c.

NEWS BY THE PERSIA.—Queen's Visit; Count Montalembert's Trial and Sentence; the Galway Line; Lord Napier Confined.

Meeting of Parliament; Gazetted Promotions; Appointments; Letter to Office of the State Paper; Census Returns Shewing Increase in Land, Income and Stock; and other Canadian news.

The Debate of the Fifteenths, and other United States intelligence.

An Interesting Story, Vindication, Markets &c., &c.

For sale by—

SAWERS & MURRAY,

Newsvendors and Bookstall.

NOW READY.—Price 5s. per Month.

NEW
BOOT, SHOE, AND LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlane's Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at very low rates for CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. J. DENNIS.

Peterborough, Dec. 16th 1858. ©.

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporating the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Beaverton Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board,

THOMAS BIDOUT.
Secretary.

P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.

Port Hope, Dec. 16, 1858. 50

TERMS OF THE

MONTREAL WITNESS FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WEEKLY EDITION

2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting two subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to

JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

NOW IS THE TIME

TO SUBSCRIBE!!

FOR

1859.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	6c 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	6 3½
2,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	6 3d
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	6 1½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	6 3½
2,00 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	6 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	6 4
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 6
3,50 ..	" Times	6 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	6 7½
2,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 6
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
2,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
3,50 ..	New York Mercury	6 3
2,50 ..	" Weekly	6 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	6 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS

MUST BE STRICTLY

In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

For Old and Young.

GIFT BOOKS; Toy Books; Games; Bibles, Testaments, Church Services, Handsome Papier Machie Blotters, &c., &c., &c., at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S.

A Beautiful Pocket Edition of the HOLY BIBLE:

WITH Marginal References and Plates, handsomely bound in best Morocco for THREE DOLLARS.

A Very Cheap Pocket Edition of the

HOLY BIBLE,

With Marginal References, and Church of England Prayer Book in one Volume, in Flexible Binding for $2.50.

These and many other beautiful editions of the Holy Bible, Church Service, Prayer Book, &c., &c., forming the most appropriate Presents for the Season, at the New Book and Stationery Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

Peterboro'. Dec. 9, 1858.

MATERIALS FOR FLOWERS.

ROSE LEAVES in great Variety.
Stems and Petals "
Variegated Tissue Paper, all shades.
White and Coloured Tissue, "
Spools of Wire, &c. &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

TO THE MUNICIPAL

ELECTORS

OF THE

Town of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,

By an amendment in the Municipal Laws of Upper Canada, the Mayors of Towns and Cities are made directly by the people instead of through the Council as heretofore; and the duty therefore devolves upon you, in addition to the election of Councillors to represent your different wards, to choose some person from among you to act as Mayor.

Having received requisitions numerously and most respectfully to allow myself to be nominated for the office, I have acceded to the request, and now offer myself as a Candidate for your suffrages.

In according to their request, I have not thereby cast to the responsibility of the position, and it is only because the kindly manner of you, upon whom have cause forward to solicit my suffrages, that I am led to the belief that I may safely place those interests in your hands and support in the duties of the office upon I have consented to accept their responsibility.

The proper discharge of the Police regulations of the Town is a duty paramount to all others, and one that must be strictly attended to, and I have the means and will be prepared to enforce them. Should I be honored with your votes, I will not be by challenge to your Police, which would bear a peculiar stamp, but I will be prepared to do my duty, and I would have it distinctly understood that I feel determined to do so.

In presenting myself before you, gentlemen, I beg to be regarded as your most humble servant.

Peterborough, Nov. 15, 1858.

NEW
BOOT, SHOE, AND LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlane's Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at very low rates for CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. J. DENNIS.

Peterborough, Dec. 16th 1858. ©.

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporating the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Beaverton Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board,

THOMAS BIDOUT.
Secretary.

P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.

Port Hope, Dec. 16, 1858. 50

TERMS OF THE

MONTREAL WITNESS FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WEEKLY EDITION

2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting two subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strict

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, Hyson old and young, Twankay & Imperial, Gunpowder, Congou, Souchong, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Lumps, Ground, Extra ground (for confectioners,) Yellow Refined, COFFEE, Java & Mo; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 5d. 10d. 1s. 1s 3d, & 1s 6d. In Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T'n Glasgow & Montreal, Bone, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, ½ do. & do. M. R. Layers & Valtana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batty's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutera (dose Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls, nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers, HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &C.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

RODGER'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS assorted kinds. For sale by

S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles Superior articles. For sale by

Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Rossiter's famous painting "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will issue a copy (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 20 x 26 inches, on the following Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the above Steel Engraving, and Rossiter's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

and a numbered and registered Membership Ticket. Also the Transactions of the Association for [illegible] and Western Addition of the [illegible]

[illegible] to give to the Subscribers [illegible] Premiums [illegible] Art Journal [illegible] Engraving [illegible] Premium [illegible] Subscription [illegible] Art Journal [illegible] Premium [illegible] Subscription [illegible] Art Journal [illegible] Premium [illegible] Subscription [illegible] Art Journal

JANUARY

1859

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the EXAMINER,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 1.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Two Sovereigns in Advance, for One Year; no charge for will be required.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

[illegible]

☞ Advertisements without previous instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobacco, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. R. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more than ten prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets, Toronto. P. & B. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 36

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, Lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Babidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Corner—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. H. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 23, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Looking Glass of all sizes, Room-Papers, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

Queen Street, Peterborough, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCIENCE, BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
29 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 6, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ROMNEY, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', May 23, 1856. 20

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the River Otho, above the rapids of Charles Dundas, Esq. The privilege is considered valuable to any one who will supply the County with limit stone of the finest quality. The stone is of a superior quality, and is [illegible]. For terms, &c., apply to [illegible] A. STEWART,
Peterboro'.
Smithville, July 13, 1857.

A. GRAHAM, P. P. [illegible]
Is a Real Estate
AND [illegible]
ONE DOLLAR PER [illegible], IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR.
Opposite A. Stewart's Stationery Store.

TO LET.

THE [illegible] Brick Building [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] Store, and [illegible] Store. The House is well finished throughout, and contains [illegible] Rooms, with Cellar under the whole. The Store is well [illegible] and has a Cellar under the whole. For [illegible] apply to [illegible] STEWART.
Peterboro', Nov. 26th, 1856.

President Monroe and his Doctrines.

(From the N. Y. Daily Times.)

If there be any sense of earthly things in souls set free, the late President Monroe must look with mingled scorn and surprise upon the scope of his mortal labors. With scorn, certainly, at finding that the lapse of thirty years has made men so wise; that grave national questions are handled now, as in his time they were, in the spirit of sixpenny partisan passion; and that the highest office in the land has become a mere Court of Appeals for Tammany Hall, in which the squabbles of New York wire-pullers takes precedence of the most important debates of war and peace as between the nations of the world; and surely with surprise, to find that he himself is playing a part he never dreamed of in his country's history; that his venerable ghost (left sleeping quietly so long within the borrowed grave to which his country's prudent economy consigned her chief's remains) has been invoked to stand before the Secretary of State's office and warn all foreign intruders off these premises, doing a kind of mystical policeman's duty towards all the kingdom's of the earth.

In the year 1823, Mr. Monroe, then President of the United States, was advised by Mr. Rush, then our Minister at London, that the Holy Alliance of Austria, Russia, Prussia, and France, having resolved to set the European house in order by knocking Riego and the Spanish liberals on the head, had also determined to bring America to reason, to re-establish the Castilian sway in the New World, and to strike down, in every place within their reach, whatever Power dared assert itself as founded on the right of the people to self-government. This determination, however veiled, was a virtual denunciation of the tenure by which the House of Hanover held England, as well as of the claim of the United States to an independent existence. England had, therefore, abstained from and protested against the joint action of the other Powers; and, through her Premier, Mr. Canning, she advised America to do likewise. Inspired by his Secretary of State, John Quincy Adams, who was always ready to take up the gauntlet of despotism whenever he found it thrown down on either side the Atlantic, Mr. Monroe responded to the appeal of England, and gave the rulers of Europe to understand in the mildest terms compatible with truth, that "we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

"With the existing Colonies or dependencies of any European power," said Mr. Monroe, "we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the American Governments who have declared their independence, and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great considerations and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States." * * * *

"It is impossible," he continued, "that the Allied Powers should extend their political system to any portion of either Continent without endangering our peace and happiness; nor can any one believe that our Southern brethren, if left to themselves, would adopt it of their own accord. It is equally impossible, therefore, that we should behold any such interposition in any form with indifference."

Again, in December of the ensuing year, 1824, Mr. Monroe alluded to this subject, for the purpose of asserting the completeness of the organization of the New World. The old "open territories" of the American, over which, with a sublime disregard of the heathen aborigines and their disputing rites, the Pope had exercised no absolute authority, giving them away to his faithful sons, were now, said Mr. Monroe, to be considered as closed. No Power was henceforth to take such liberties as those Catholics had taken with their newly pre-discovered. We had either exterminated or suppressed the natives to that degree that we, with our Spanish friends to the South of us, had ourselves become the genuine natives. Henceforth we should require to manage our own affairs, and to settle our own waste lands in our own way. This was a discreet, decisive and authoritative proclamation. In fact it opened a new era in history. It announced the formation of an American system, which might undergo many modifications, but which must find its own law, and be within itself what Europe was and is—a self-admired, self-controlling world of diverse interests, balancing and influenced under the operation of influences native to the several States. It was in this way the corollary of the declaration made the year before, and, as well be seen, had less reference to American beyond our limits than to Europe. It had, indeed, nothing to do with "manifest destiny," as now commonly understood—with the extension of the area of Freedom—with conversion, or with fraternization.

Judge, then, whether we are not right in saying that the shade of President Monroe would indeed be startled with its propriety (if there be propriety in shades!) on finding what the "Monroe Doctrine" has become on the lips and from the pen of General Lewis Cass. For General Cass speaks in no vile authority for declaring that we could not peaceably behold the cession of a Protectorate by a European Power over any independent State of Mid-Continent, even at the request of that State. The appeal is idle. Not to speak of the stultification which such language involves from the fact that we have looked peaceably on upon two such Protectorates, one in Hungary and one in Nicaragua, in any three short but ten or twenty years, the doctrine of this Monroe will bear no such construction. It was conceived in a very different spirit and for a very different end. We do not believe that General Cass has seriously meditated either and meant that—we believe, soberly and truly, that the one must come and will, when any Protectorate but that of the United States, over an American nation, will be impossible; and when the flag of this country will be recognized throughout this Continent as the symbol of peace and the guarantee of order. But we look for the advent of that time to a policy as unlike that of Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Cass as any politician can be; to a policy of justice abroad and law at home; to a policy constitutional at once and progressive, clearing away the incumbrances of the past by reforms in the sense of freedom, and opening the vistas of the future by bold assurance of absolute right.

Burns—Real Fame.

In one of my wanderings I happened to pass the month of January, 185– in a Benedictine Monastery at the base of Mount Etna. The superior of the establishment was one of the most perfect gentlemen, and the best informed priest I ever knew. As is pretty general in the order of Benedictines, he was a younger son of one of the noblest families in Sicily; and interest united with merit had elevated him thus high while yet a very young man. To this similarity of age, and in some measure of tastes, do I ascribe the most fraternal intimacy which soon subsisted between us. Never shall I forget the days we spent together. One evening is now present to my mind's eye as if actually passing. Conversation and reading had caused the early part of the night to wear rapidly away, to the nearly total forgetfulness of the storm without. As it grew late, however, the hurricane increased, so as to excite an almost painful feeling; and its natural associations of melancholy were deepened in my imagination by the hollow booming of the priory bell as it was occasionally half swung round by the blast. In the apartment of the youthful monk, however, all was comfort. The suite consisted of two chambers, the exterior, except in extent, little distinguished from those of the brotherhood; but the inner, in which we were seated, still more capacious, exhibited, in its walls, hung round with tapestry and ancient paintings—its massive cabinets, and high-backed chairs of dark and richly carved chestnut wood—the very ideal of monastic elegance. Over this antique garniture, a pile of fagots blazing in the high chimney, from a huge but picturesque stand of iron, threw a cheerful light, reflected in a thousand flickering shadows from the polished or broken surfaces upon which it fell. We had drawn our seats towards the hearth, consequently somewhat in advance of the table at which we had been reading, and still covered with books and papers. An illuminated missal lay open, and near it a silver bell and crucifix, while a bronze tripod of veritable Greek workmanship supported a lamp in the centre, showing, amid all these intellectualities, my substantial cold supper, where wine—true lacryma Christi—was not forgotten, with the prior's simple omelet in the remote corner. But with all these external appliances, both seemed to indulge in that quiet, unobtrusive, though, perhaps, somewhat selfish enjoyment, arising from the internal sense of security in the midst of danger and discomfort. It was probably this sentiment which caused me almost unconsciously to ejaculate—

The storm without might rair and rustle,
Tam didna mind the storm a whistle.

"That's Burns," exclaimed the prior, to my astonishment. Burns known to a monk at the foot of Mount Etna! That surpassed all my preconceived notions. The prior, doubtless observing my surprise, exclaimed that he knew only these two lines, but that they had excited a strong desire to know something more, concluding with the question, "Is it possible to procure a Latin translation?" I suppose my expression was not altogether consistent with perfect politeness at the idea of the rhymes of the Scottish ploughman writhing under the infliction of classic hexameters of Horatian lyrics, looking in my face, hastened to add, in an extenuating tone, "I should esteem it the most curious work in our library."—"And assuredly, my dear father," rejoined I, laughing, "such a volume would prove the greatest curiosity in any library."—"Nay, nay," interrupted the prior, perceiving himself to be getting deeper and deeper into some absurdity, though what he knew not, "hear my story out:—

"Two years ago, upon a night of storm similar to the present, the superior, for I was then but sub-prior, and myself, were seated together as we two now are; but," glancing his eye, with a half conscious smile, round the apartment, "this chamber then showed somewhat less of propriety. From a dull enough tete-a-tete, we were roused by a loud knocking at the outer gate, and in a few minutes a lay brother, despatched by the sacristan, announcing the arrival of strangers, who requested shelter. The situation of our house, on the rude bridle-road between one of the principal fruit and wine districts and Syracuse, exposes us to frequent visitors of this nature. From my smattering of languages, I was, as usual, deputed to see the guests accommodated in the refectory. They were six in number,—an English and Scotch merchant, partners to a firm at Palermo, and who were known to me; an Irishman, making the tour of the island, a German architect, with an American and a Frenchman, officers of an American vessel lying at Messina, completed the company.

"These gentlemen had been proceeding in opposite directions; but happening to meet in the vicinity of our establishment, had been recommended by their guides to turn aside with us for the night. I found them intelligent and well-informed on most subjects, [illegible] and [illegible] on every possible topic. Politics, trade, literature, successively became subjects of discussion and of quarrel. But all preceding topics had been as nothing compared with the rage of words which arose on the publication of their respective stations, the American claiming [illegible] the [illegible], by the prior declining with which he offered to [illegible] the guests rapidly proceeded to the appointments [illegible] by the Rules [illegible] convert the Refectories of Sleeping into dormitories, when the Scot, who had been among the heaviest, stood up, and, in a tone of defiance, repeated the lines you now quoted. The verse, however, appeared as a sedative on the spirit of strife; for the Englishman good-humouredly called out—"Ha, Stewart, on your hobby!—there, at least, you think you have the advantage, and I confess we possess no national poet who, like Burns, comes home to the bosoms of the poor, yet awakens the admiration and sympathy of the great." "Pardon me, replied the Irishman, "you speak, of course, only as respects England; the beauty of our national poetry is felt and allowed by all ranks; but I willingly acknowledge the merit of Burns." "None of you," interrupted the American, "ever felt his real power; read or listen to his strains in our deep solitude of forest or savannah, and think that five thousand miles of ocean separate you from the country of your forefathers, the home and sanctuary of the poet's imagery—then talk of feelings. No, no, you would be silent. I am," continued he, "myself a Yankee, as you contemptuously term it; and I am proud of being a genuine son of America; but my mother was Scotch. Often, when a child, have I sat upon her knee while she wept and repeated from Burns. For his sake, and for hers, I love the country of my mother. Whole generations feel as I do, and when every other tie is broken between Britain and America, Burns, and such as Burns, will teach our children's children that they are come of one race."

"Even the Frenchman," resumed the prior, "had heard of Burns as uniting the descriptive powers of Delile with the simplicity of La Fontaine; while in Germany, where English literature is generally known, the architect told us Burns had been described to him as combining the power of Goethe with the sweetness of Gelert. Collecting some idea of his character from these remarks, I, willing to say something, observed to the Scotsman, that I supposed his poet resembled the Sicilian bard Meli; and in this comparison found I had come as near as our more artificial literature permits. In short, we discovered that, in our admiration of a man of genius, we had; at least, one common feeling, and thenceforward the evening passed away in the most cordial and entertaining conversation.

"Now, my good friend," concluded the prior, with a smile, laying his hand on my shoulder, "why I should esteem the works of your Scottish bard the most valuable curiosity in our library arises from this—that I could point them out to our visitors as a volume, on the merits of which when from the most distant countries, and of the most opposite sentiments, coincided—although they in nothing else agreed."—Edinburgh Specutor.

The Campaign in Oude.

LORD CLYDE'S PROCLAMATION.

October 26th, 1858.

The Commander in Chief proclaims to the people of Oude, that, under the orders the Right Hon. the Governor General, he comes to enforce the law. To enable him to effect this without damage to life and property, resistance must cease on the part of the people. The most exact discipline will be preserved in the camps and on the march; and when there is no resistance houses and crops will be spared, and no plundering allowed in towns and villages.—But wherever there is resistance, or even a single shot fired against the troops, the inhabitants must expect to incur the fate they have brought upon themselves. Their homes will be burned and their villages plundered. This Proclamation includes all ranks of the people, from the Talookdars to the poorest Ryots. The Commander-in-Chief invites all the well-disposed to remain in their towns and villages, where they will be sure of his protection against all violence.

CLYDE.

THE CAWNPORE MASSACRE.

ANOTHER AND STILL MORE HORRIBLE ACCOUNT.

Mr. Russell, the special correspondent of the Times in India, gives another narrative of the massacre at Cawnpore, by an eye-witness and survivor, which throws a new light on this horrible event:—

"Some time ago a half-caste Christian, named Fitchett, presented himself for admission into the police levy before the local authorities at Meerut. His tale is as follows:—When the mutiny broke out he was a musician in the band of one of the native Infantry regiments at Cawnpore, and in the general massacre he saved his life by proclaiming that he would become a Mahometan, which he did by an easy process almost on the spot. He remained in the Nena's force, with which he did duty. On the 15th of June, when it became known that the British were advancing, a Council was held by the Nena, at which it was resolved that the women and children at the Bheebeegher, numbering about 200, were to be murdered. The news went rapidly through the Town, and the men of the mutinous 6th native infantry entered the enclosure, proceeded to take from our unfortunate countrywomen any articles of value or trinkets which they retained on their persons. It so happened that by some means not ascertained, four English gentlemen were at this time with the women and children in the enclosure. These have been identified beyond doubt, namely, Mr. Thornhill, magistrate and collector of Futtehgurh; Colonel Smith, 10th Native Infantry, and Brigadier Glasse. The identity of the Colonel has not been established, but is probable that he was one of the Commissioners. At half-past four o'clock a carriage was brought to these gentlemen at the Bheebeegher Ghaut, a native officer of the mutineers desired to see them, and they [illegible] to speak to his [illegible]. They walked quietly along the road, suspecting nothing, and when they had got on for some the Americ[illegible] were [illegible] from behind, [illegible] and cut them down on the spot. Meanwhile preparations were being made for the execution of the orders of the Nena and the council. There was some difficulty in getting instruments for this horrible butchery. The Sowars wished to save themselves from the defilement of blood—the infantry were equally averse to the task—but at last some soldiers of the 6th Native Infantry were compelled to go inside, with orders to fire on the poor helpless crowd. They fired in the air, or did so little harm that it was evident the views of the sensuine could not be accomplished in that manner.—They sent into the town, therefore, and the Sowars brought out two of the common butchers of the bazaar—two Bhooreeas, men of a wild, miserable, gipsy like caste, and a villaiytee, who were armed with hatchets and talwars and ordered to go in and kill every soul in the house and enclosure, while all egress was strictly watched by the Sowars outside. It was a long and dreadful butchery. Fitchett, who was near the place, declares that the assassins entered the enclosure about half-past five p.m., and that it was ten p. m. before they came out to announce that their work was accomplished. Once, he says, a butcher appeared with his sword broken in two, received a sabre from one of the Sowars, and returned to continue his hellish labor. The Nena was in the hotel close at hand, and when he heard that all were dead, he gave orders that the doors should be closed for the night and guards put over the place. That night the Nana gave a nautch—a kind of ball—to his friends. Early on the morning of the 16th the Nena gave orders that the doors should be opened, and that all the bodies should be flung into the well within the compound; but as it was far too small to contain so many bodies, it is probable that some were dragged away to other places or were thrown into the Ganges. On the 16th Fitchett fled with his new friends to Futtehgur, and here occurs a most interesting part of the story. He declares that he frequently saw Miss Wheeler, the daughter of the General, at Futtehgur, and that she travelled with a Sowar, who had taken her from Cawspore—nay, more, that he was shown into the room where she was, and ordered to read extracts from English newspapers which the rebels received from Calcutta, he being employed for the purpose of translating the news, in which, particularly that relating to the progress of the war in China they took great interest. She had a horse with an English side saddle which the Sowar had procured for her, and she rode close beside him, with her face veiled along the line of march. When the British approached Futtehghur, orders were sent to the Sowar to give Miss Wheeler up, but he escaped with her at night, and it is supposed he went with her to Calc[illegible]. [illegible] that the unfortunate young lady may be still alive, moving about with Tantia Topee, and that we may rescue her from her unhappy fate. There is another Christian half-caste still alive, who became a Mahometan at the same time, and under the same circumstances as Fitchett, in pursuit of whom the authorities are now most busily engaged. Line upon line, here a little and there a little, we shall soon know nearly all that can be known about that 'bloodiest picture in the book of time.'"

The Prosecution of the Canadian Ministers.

From the Scottish American.

Readers who have given attention to our articles on Canadian politics will be aware that a prosecution has been recently pending against the Canadian Ministers for having illegally taken their seats in Parliament towards the close of last session. The circumstances of the case will be remembered. The Ministry of Mr. Macdonald being defeated on the sent of Government question, gave in their resignation. Mr. Brown, the leader of the Opposition, was called to form a Government, which he did; but the Governor, after a vote of want of confidence in the new Ministry, which was passed in the House, refused the advice given to him to dissolve, and Mr. Brown and his colleagues thereupon gave in their resignation, their acceptance of office having in the meantime, however, caused them to vacate their seats in Parliament. The old men were again called in, each individual taking a different office from that which he formerly held. A few hours after, regardless of their oaths to perform the duties of their new offices, they all went back to their former places. The object of this movement was to obtain the benefit of an enactment which provides that a member of the Council changing from one office to another shall not be liable to vacate his seat in the House, if the interval between his resignation of one office and acceptance of another has not been more than one month. The pettifogging nature of this proceeding was obvious enough to all impartial onlookers. Its unfairness, considering that Mr. Brown and his colleagues had all incurred the necessity of a new election by their acceptance of office, was very glaring. The impression left on the minds of outsiders interested in the course of Canadian politics was that the "shuffle," as it was termed, suggested ill for constitutional government in the Province, which above all things requires for its just and successful administration a liberal and honest interpretation of the law, a strict adherence to the spirit of the system, and an honorable treatment of political opponents. The merely legal character of the transaction was of exceedingly little importance. If it was in accordance with the letter of the law, it was undoubtedly a violation of its meaning and intent, and one which denoted that the Administration was in the hands of pettifoggers, and not statesmen. As to this there could be no room for any difference of opinion, and there was room, except among excited partisans in the Province. For ourselves, it was only this, and some other transactions on the part of the Ministry equally questionable as to their character, that [illegible] us to take decided ground in regard to public affairs, which we fully intend to maintain in every case in which the Ministry for the time being, whether Conservative or Clear Grit, or people-was, it all attempts [illegible] of liberal statesmen [illegible].

The first sentence on the proceedings of Ministers has now been delivered in the Court of Queen's Bench 'did the Court of Common Pleas at Toronto. The decision, as we anticipated, is favorable to the Ministry. We cannot say that the exposition of the law in either Court is as lucid as we should wish in such a case. Chief Justice Draper summed up the verdict when he said "I do not think we can take judicial notice of what has thus been pressed upon us." It would have been well if the arguments of the judges had been confined to establishing this single point, and they had avoided any discussion of the legal merits of the case otherwise. Neither party could then have had any occasion for dissatisfaction, and there could have been no possible reflections on the impartiality of the judges. They should simply have disclaimed their jurisdiction, but as it is they have treated the question on its merits just to a sufficient extent to leave a disagreeable impression of a desire on their part to befriend the present Ministers. Yet Mr. Draper is constrained to admit that the statute not only did not contemplate such a case as that brought before the Court, and to acknowledge that he is still further from thinking that if a proceeding had been anticipated the provision in the act would ever have been adopted. But all this, he adds, is matter of opinion. What is the application of all law but matter of opinion, on which even judges may differ? It is the opinion of Chief Justice Draper that the Act was not intended or meant to cover such proceedings as those of the Ministry. Then how in the name of logic does he come to be of opinion, or to give any countenance to the opinion, that the Ministers have not violated the Act? Evidently it would have been better if the Chief Justice had confined himself to disclaiming the jurisdiction of the Court in the case. His province, we suppose, is to distribute law and not equity, in which case, certainly, the application made to him for redress was directed to the wrong quarter. The question was essentially one in which appeal was made from the most literal and restricted view of the letter of the law to its actual meaning and intent. It is not surprising that the Courts should confirm the legality of the course adopted by a dozen of legal gentlemen, acting on their own behalf; but no one is say the more likely to be of opinion that the proceeding called in question was a gross violation of those constitutional principles which, and not the mere matter of the law, members of the Government are bound above all things else to observe.

Management of Reformatories.

[illegible]

The interest which has been awakened by the establishment of a Reformatory Prison for each section of the Province, is asking for further information respecting the system which is going to be pursued. The mere separation of juvenile criminals from others is, though necessary, only a negative good—an avoidance of a contaminating process in connection with one that is positive. But much more than that is hoped for, and obtainable; and there is abroad a reasonable desire to know that attention has been given to the principles and methods from which the recovery of vagrant and criminal youth may be expected.

There are questions relating to this branch of social science which have engaged the attention of officials, philanthropists and deep thinkers in Britain, but have not come popularly understood. The degree in which punishment is to be pursued in Reformatories, or in which it is to be supplanted by a remedial course, is the primary consideration to be entertained. Are the confirmed children and youth to be released from all that is painful, so far as is compatible with penitence, instruction, and amendment? Or must the discipline to be employed be a carrying out of the awarded punishment as well as a means of restoration? If the infliction of the legal penalty is to be secured what forms of chastisement are to be used besides detention? It appears to be essential to have in operation a dealing with individuals rather than with classes amongst those young culprits—for in restoring moral sensibilities, and implanting those that are moral and religious, the temperament, and ideas, and habits of each such child will be found to be peculiar. Even in the matter of punishment in common jails it is found that little can be done to any good purpose without regarding the cases of prisoners separately. To take from one man his books would be torture; by another it would be unnoticed; solitary confinement, that almost makes the communicative being mad, is no punishment to the misanthropic; here is a man who may be controlled by the prospect of a higher or lower position on the prison books and there another who has lost all self-respect and is ready at once to take the lowest rank: some enraged prisoners seem to be as much beyond impression from corporeal punishment as are enraged bull-dogs. The great theory appears to be first to discriminate between the impressible and the unimpressible and then with the former class to find other than carrying tastes or passions which may be called into the service of discipline and reformation. Amongst youth, few should be considered incorrigible—and a close and continued observation will put an enlightened observer into possession of a clue to the retreats within, to which the most stubborn will in a child has resort. But in view of such a course being required with all the juveniles of our reformatories, how necessary it is to have enlightened principles and good plans in the systems put up, and patient, intelligent sympathetic, governors, more minded administrators for carrying systems into effect! The more reformatory performance of their service will not be a real performance of it at all.

It is certain that [illegible] and [illegible] employment, and the learning of some [illegible] and [illegible] business, must pervade the whole economy of these institutions. Experience on [illegible] point is quite in harmony with theory and [illegible] that useful [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] with the system is perfectly [illegible] of [illegible] to be [illegible] a place [illegible] of taxation [illegible] or [illegible] [illegible] number of cases is on the increase, that we scarcely [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] at present [illegible] the office of Comptroller [illegible] city of New York. This office is equivalent to that of Treasurer [illegible] Board of Education. Recently a vacancy [illegible] for the [illegible] [illegible] per annum, which is sole[illegible] duties [illegible] some New-York editor gave to [illegible] Spinnerdom [illegible]. Within the last week it has been raised to $7,000. But the [illegible] Wood, Comptroller of [illegible], has stated quite as to become remark that the Comptroller, has an oppor[illegible] [illegible] a hundred thousand dollars [illegible] [illegible] accordingly in no consideration, and the Democratic candidate [illegible] [illegible], who was fortunately defeated, certainly fell at the time a situation in which the legal emoluments were [illegible]

[illegible] before us are, we hope from the same in reply to the comments uttered by Mr. [illegible], we would by no means adduce them as affording reliable grounds of objection to [illegible] extension of popular government. We are most confident, the hope that the Administration of this country will be purged of those [illegible] corruptions without any material organic change in the form of government, or simply by the infusion of a new spirit and integrity into the existing part thereof, the public government, which has only to the intelligence and honesty industry the sway to which they are entitled. Already the necessity for this is strongly felt, and those more indicators of public tendencies, the leading daily journals, have all been pointing very decidedly in this direction. We say then, that the disorders and corruptions from which American society now suffers are not inherent in the system of government, and are not to be held as a warning against popular government, or as a plea for resisting the natural and necessary progress of the [illegible]. For ourselves we should have proceeded to use this public mind in that and directed towards some other reforms [illegible] more pressing kind. But since the question has been mooted, is best better be settled at once. By all means deprive [illegible] of unjust ground of complaint. Mr. Bright, we notice, is said to be alarmed lest an early settlement of the question may be carried through which would destroy his prospects of one of those well developed agitations which is make use of the expression by which he and [illegible] and the Brighton men, would "cause the thrones itself to rock on its foundations." We are glad to notice that the matter is to be taken up in a practical manner, and in what we conceive to be a right spirit, during the next session of Parliament. The franchise is to be extended and the inequalities of the existing system are to be removed. There is no reason, we believe, why the example of America should stand in the way of such extension, if any qualification be retained of the industry and intelligence of the new classes that are to be admitted to the privilege of voting. In Britain the only shared public opinion is too well organized and the rights of property too well represented through the press, for any ground of fear lest the democratic element should acquire undue influence. After all there is no country, however popular the form of its constitution, that is governed by the mass of the people. That is the evil here; it would be a blessing that the people did govern themselves. No more will the masses ever govern themselves in England. They will and the power to [illegible] class of men who are at the head of society in England now will continue to rule while they have the public spirited desire to do so, as long as the press continues pure, independent, and high-minded as it is now. The virtues of a country are secondary to and dependent on its social arrangements, and in America it is only because we have too little respect for position of any kind that we have allowed the worthless and unprincipled to ride roughshod over us.

Burns.

Memoir of the Sister of Robert Burns.

From the Ayr Observer.

Our obituary list of to-day (Tuesday) contains a name which will arrest the notice of very many both here and at a distance, and, at this particular time especially, excite regret and sorrow—the name of Mrs. Begg, the youngest sister of Robert Burns the poet, and the sole surviving child of that family circle of which he was the elder brother. She expired quite unexpectedly at her cottage near Ayr, on Saturday morning, at half-past eight o'clock.

Isabella Burns, or as she was more familiarly known, Mrs. Begg, was born at Mount Oliphant, near Ayr, on the 29th June 1771, and had she lived till her next birthday would have completed her eighty-eighth year. She was the seventh child and third daughter of William Burns and Agnes Brown, the members of whose family we may mention in the order of their age:—Robert, Gilbert, Agnes, Annabella, William, John, and Isabella. About the year 1775, or 76 she was married, at Mossgiel, Mauchline, to John Begg, who was accidentally killed at Lesmahagow, in 1813, and whom she thus survived for the long period of forty-two years. Her husband was an orphan, who had been brought up by an uncle, Mr. Campbell, Roughdike, parish of Sorn, and he assisted him in his work on the farm. On his marriage with Miss Burns, his brother-in-law, Gilbert Burns, who had by this time taken a lease of the farm of Dinning, in Dumfriesshire, on being appointed factor to Lord Blantyre, took Mr. Begg with him as overseer, where they lived for upwards of nine years. Here their first eldest children were born, and, being near the Academy of Mauchline, were sent to it. Mr. Begg afterwards became the tenant of Barlea, in the parish of Kirkmahoe, under Mr. Hope Weir, of Blackwood, and Captain Charles Hope, now of Lochend, Dalkeith, the present Earl of Hopetoun. Here, on the death of his uncle, Mr. Begg succeeded to the management of the property, which, however, he conducted till the period of his death, when it was taken possession of by the trustees for the behoof of the heirs. His widow and family, after residing for a short time in Mauchline, removed to Ayr, where they lived for a number of years. Here their eldest children, Robert, Agnes, and Isabella, went to the Academy of Mauchline, and were taught by Mr. Gilbert Burns, who had by this time taken a lease of the farm of Dinning, in Dumfriesshire, on being appointed factor to Lord Blantyre, with whom they lived for upwards of nine years. Here their familiar and easy communication one with another as that a man or boy eager for knowledge, in the valley twelve miles off, and should occasionally trudge to meet him, that the one might impart his learning in one branch of acquisition to the other. Yet this is a distinct and most important feature of this society. On the other hand it is not to be supposed that these honest men, however zealous, should as a rule succeed in establishing and maintaining their own institutions of themselves. It is obvious that combination must materially diminish their cost, in itself a vital consideration: and that experience, which is essential to the success of all combination, is especially so when its object is to diffuse the results of experience and of reflection. But the student of the pleasant and profitable history of this Society does not stop here in his learning. He finds with interest and pleasure that the Parent Society at certain stated periods invites the more eager and enterprising members of the local societies to submit themselves to voluntary examination in various branches of useful knowledge, of which examination it takes the charge and arranges the details, and invites the successful candidates to come to Manchester, to receive the prize and certificates of merit which it impartially awards. The most successful of the competitors in the last of these examinations are now among us; and those little marks of recognition and encouragement, I shall have the pleasure of giving them presently. I have looked over a few of the examination papers. They comprise history, geography, grammar, arithmetic, book-keeping, decimal coinage, measuration, mathematics, social economy, the French language—in fact, they comprise all the keys that open all the locks of knowledge. I felt most devoutly grateful, as to many of them, that they had not been submitted to me to answer. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) For I am perfectly clear if they had been, I should have had mighty little to bestow upon myself to-night. (Laughter.) And yet it is always to be observed, and seriously remembered, that these examinations are undergone by people whose lives have been passed in a continual fight for bread, and whose whole existence has been a constant wrestle with those twin gaolers of the daring heart—low birth and iron fortune.—(Applause.) I could not but consider with extraordinary admiration how these questions important questions, have been replied to, not by the men like myself, the business of whose life is with writing and with books, but by men the business of whose life is with tools and machinery. Let me name a few of the most interesting cases of prize-holders and certificate gainers who will appear before you. There are two poor brothers from near Chorley, who work from morning to night in a cotspit and who, in all weathers, have walked eight miles a night, three nights a week, to attend the classes in which they have gained distinction. (Hear, Hear.) There are two other poor boys from Bolington, who began life as pacers at a shilling and eighteen pence a week, and the father of one of whom was cut to pieces by the machinery at which he worked, but not before he had himself founded the institution in which this son has since come to be taught.—These two poor boys have taken the second class prize in chemistry. (Hear, hear.) There is a plasterer from Bury, sixteen years of age, who took a third-class certificate last year at the hands of Lord Brougham, and who has exerted himself so strenuously since that he is again successful in a competition three times as severe. (Hear, hear.) There is a waggon maker from the same place, who knew little or nothing until he was a grown man, and who has learned all he knows, which is a great deal, in the local institution. There is a chain maker, in very humble circumstances, and working hard all day, who walked six miles a night, three nights a week, to attend the classes in which he has won a famous place. There is a moulder in an iron foundry, who, while he was working twelve hours a day before the furnace, got up at four o'clock in the morning to learn drawing. (Hear, hear.) "The thought of my lads," he writes in his modest account of his work, "in their peaceful slumbers above me gave me fresh courage; and I used to think that if I should never receive any personal benefit, I might instruct them when they came to be of an age to understand the mighty machines and engines which have made our country, England pre-eminent in the world's history." (Applause.) There is a piecer at mule (frames, who could not read at eighteen, who is now a man of little more thirty, who is the sole support of an aged mother, who is the arithmetical teacher in the institution in which he himself was taught, who reports of himself that he made the resolution never to take up a subject without keeping to it, and who has kept to it with such an astonishing will that he is now well versed in Euclid, and in algebra, and is the best French scholar in Stockport. (Hear, hear.) The drawing classes in that same Stockport are taught by a working blacksmith, and his pupils will receive the highest honors of to-night. (Applause.) To pass from the successful candidates to the delegates from local societies, and to content myself with one instance, there is among their number a most remarkable man, whose history I have read with feelings that I could not adequately express under any circumstances, and least of all when I know he bears me—who worked when he was a mere baby at handloom weaving until he dropped from fatigue; who began to teach himself as soon as he could earn a few shillings a week who is now a botanist, and acquainted with every production of the Lancashire valleys; who is now a naturalist; who has made and preserved a collection of the eggs of British birds, and stuffed the birds; who is now a conchologist with a very curious and, in some respects, original collection of fresh water shells; who has also collected and preserved the mosses of fresh waters and of the sea; who is worthily the President of his own literary institution, and who was at his work till three last night as foreman in a mill. (Hear, hear, and applause.) So, stimulating has been the influence of these bright examples and many more, that I notice among the applications from Blackburn for preliminary test-examination papers, one who gravely describes himself as two years of age; and, with equal gravity, describes his occupation as "earning a little child." (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Nor are these things confined to the men. The women employed in factories, in millinery, and in domestic service, have begun to show, as it is fitting they should, a determination that they should not be outdone by the men. The trustees of Preston, in particular, have so honourably distinguished themselves, and their, in their valedictory papers, such an admirable knowledge of the need of household management and economy, that if I were a working bachelor of Lancashire or Cheshire, and if I had not cast my eye or set my heart, on any lass in particular, I should positively get up at 4 o'clock in the morning with the determination of the iron-moulder himself, and should go to Preston in search of a wife. (Hear, and laughter.) These instances, and many more fully pressing, always circumstances are surely justice to the working of this Association—that any number of speakers could possibly present to you. Surely, the presence among you of those indefatigible people in the Association's best and most affecting triumph, in the present and the past, and in its noblest stimulus to nature in the future. As its temporary mouthpiece, I would beg to say to that portion of the company who attend to receive the prizes, that the Institution can never hold itself apart from them, can never set itself above them—that their distinction and success must be its distinction and success, and there can be but one heart beating between them and it. In particular, I would most especially entreat them to observe that nothing will ever be further from the Association's mind than the impertinence of patronage. (Applause.) The prizes and certificates that it gives are mere admiring assurances of sympathy with so many striving brothers and sisters, and are only valuable for the spirit in which they are given and received. The prizes are of money simply because the Institution does not presume to doubt that people who have so well governed themselves, know best how to make a little money serviceable.—(Hear, hear.) Reverting once more to the whole collective audience before me,—of the advantages of knowledge I have said, and shall say, nothing. In the city of Manchester, in the County of Lancaster, both so remarkable for well-taught men, that were superfluous indeed. For the same reason I rigidly abstain from putting together any of the shattered remain of that poor clay image of a parrot which was once always saying without knowing why, or what it meant, that knowledge was a dangerous thing. (Hear, hear.) I should as soon think of piecing together the mutilated remains of any unfortunate Hindoo who has been blown away from an English gun.—Both creatures of the past have been, as my friend Mr. Carlyle, rigorously has it, "blasted into space," and there, as to this world, is an end to them. So I desire, in conclusion, only to sound two strings. In the first place, let me congratulate you upon the progress which real mutual improvement societies are making at this time in your neighbourhood, through the noble agency of individual employers and their families, whom you can never too much delight to honor—(hear, hear;)—elsewhere through the agency of the great railway companies, some of which are bestirring themselves in this matter with a gallantry and generosity deserving of all praise.—Secondly, and lastly, let me say one word out of my own personal heart, which is always very near to it in this connection.—Do not let us, in the midst of the visible objects of nature, whose workings we can tell off in figures; surrounded by machines that can be made to the thousandth part of an inch; acquiring every day knowledge that can be proved upon a slate or demonstrated by a microscope—do not let us, in the laudable pursuit of the facts that surround us, neglect the fancy and the imagination, which equally surround us as a part of the great scheme. (Hear, hear.) Let the child have its fables—let the man or woman into which it changes always remember its fables tenderly—let numerous graces and ornaments that cannot be weighed and measured, and that seem at first sight idle enough, continue to have their places around us, be we never so wise.—The hardest head may co-exist with the softest heart. (Applause.) The union and just balance of these two is always a blessing to the possessor, and a blessing to mankind. The Divine teacher was as gentle and considerate as He was powerful and wise. You all know how He could still the raging of the seas, and could hush a little child. As the utmost results of the wisdom of man can only be at last to help to raise this earth to that condition to which His doctrines, untainted by the passions and the blindnesses of men, would have exalted it long ago, so let us always remember that He has set us an example of blending the understanding and the imagination; and, that following it ourselves, we tread in His steps and help our race on to its better and best days. (Applause.) Knowledge, as all followers of it must know, is a very limited power indeed, when it informs the head alone. But when it informs the head and the heart too, it is a power over life and death, and the body and the soul, and dominates the Universe. (Great applause, during which Mr. Dickens resumed his seat.)

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Burns' Centenary.
Wolf Certificates—W. Sheridan.
1859—A. Fowlis & Co.
Fines & Forfeitures—W. Sheridan.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1859.

Who will be Mayor?

CAN THE HEAD OF A COUNCIL BE ELECTED?

That Mr. Sawers' friends may understand the grounds of his claim to be declared Mayor of Peterborough, we submit the following remarks, premising that his reliance on his indefeasible right operated to prevent any exertion to secure votes at the poll:

At the nomination two candidates appeared; one of whom, Mr. Stevenson, was then Mayor, the other, Mr. Sawers, whose qualification is not excepted to. The question is whether Mr. Stevenson was or was not disqualified by statute, whether, in the capacity of Mayor, he is or is not an officer of the Municipality. The Municipal Institutions Act came into force on Dec. 1, 1858. Section 403 recites that "The Head and Members of the Council, and the officers, by-laws, &c., of every Municipal Corporation existing when this Act takes effect shall be deemed the Head and Members of the Council, and the officers, by-laws, &c., of such Corporation, as continued under and subject to the provisions of this Act." Thus, after December 1, 1858, the Mayor among the rest, became subject to the provisions of the Act of 1858.

Section 120 describes the Mayor to be "the Head of the Council, and the Head and chief executive officer of the Corporation" whose duty is among other things "to inspect the conduct of all subordinate officers."

Section 72 declares that a Non-judge of any Court of civil jurisdiction, no police magistrate of a House of Correction, no officer of any Municipality, no bailiff of a Division Court, no sheriff's officer, no innkeeper or saloon-keeper, no person receiving any allowance from the Corporation (except as Mayor, Warden, reeve, deputy-reeve, or township councillor), and, no person having by himself or his partner an interest in any contract with or on behalf of the Corporation, shall be qualified to be a member of the Council of the Corporation."

By section 120 the Mayor is classed among the officers of the Corporation, and, by section 73, no officer of any Municipality shall be qualified to be a member of the Council; therefore the Mayor is ineligible. Superficial or unlearned readers may imagine that the portion of 73, enclosed by a parenthesis, releases more persons described in that section, than such as are receiving an allowance from the Corporation.—The grammatical construction of the sentence will not bear so liberal an interpretation. If it was intended that the Mayor should not be included among the disqualified officers of the municipality, the legislature would have excepted him then, as it excepts him further on when disqualifying such as receive any allowance from the Corporation. The reason why it was necessary to except the Mayor from the operation of the disqualification on the ground of allowance, is that, as the Mayor may receive compensation, under the law, he would although he resigned his office, before election, be still disqualified as the receiver of allowance from the Corporation. To free him from this disability, an exception is made in his favor, but in order to ensure to his benefit, he must also have parted with his office. And as if to show even more clearly its intention, the legislature, by section 148, enables the Mayor to resign, without first obtaining the consent of the Council, lest by refusing their consent, they might defeat his purpose of re-election.—When such a vacancy occurs, the Council, or its remaining members, shall elect from among themselves a qualified person to fill the office. But a member of a Council, other than the Head can only resign with the consent of the majority of the members thereof.

The Town Election.

The municipal elections are now over. The mayoralty is disputed. The Councillors are, for the North Ward, Messrs. Conger, Carlyle, and Whyte; for the South Ward, Messrs. Fowlis, Barnham, and Hogan; for the East Ward, Messrs. Kennedy, Henthorn, and Morrow; and, for the Centre Ward, Messrs. Scott, White, and Read. Of their qualities we have yet nothing to say; several are disqualified by statute, but, if the ratepayers are satisfied, and the councillors choose to take the oath of office, they will be of the council for the year. They are mostly new to municipal office, and may turn out better than is expected of them. Let them have a fair trial.

Universal quiet reigned throughout the election, although Mr. Stevenson and his friends adopted a course which was calculated to lead to disturbance, several of the Gateways being thrown open by them, free to all drinkers. Every thing is said to be fair at elections. A doctrine very dangerous in its tendencies, as leading men, otherwise honest, into immoralities of the worst description. It has, however, been very fully developed by Mr. Stevenson, in bribery, circulating false statements of his opponent, and by general corruption. Under those circumstances he will not surely complain if his wickedness should fall upon his own head, and that all his unworthy efforts should be in vain. Mr. Sawers will checkmate him at the end, and will of course be entitled to the reward of his honesty. Every thing that, during the canvass, was advanced against Mr. Stevenson was supported by proof, and was pertinent to the occasion. While every thing brought against Mr. Sawers, wanted proof, or, like Mr. Edwards' letter, was immediately disproved. Mr. Stevenson will yet learn that, even at elections, honesty is the best policy.

Mr. Carlyle, writes to Mr. Sawers, in the last Reviews, telling him that he was guilty of "impudence in attending the Sons meeting for the purpose of making a little capital," and Mr. Carlyle adds "But when you state that you were invited by the managers, I mean to tell you that it is not true. You were an intruder there." Whether Mr. Sawers was invited or not must be determined by what is considered an invitation. A member of the Division, of great respectability in the town, met with Mr Sawers in a store at 7½ p.m., and, putting a ticket into his hands, told him that he was sent to bring him up to a tea meeting. After a little hesitation, Mr. Sawers consented, and was conducted into the room, by the gentleman who conveyed the invitation to him. He was there very kindly treated, and felt himself highly flattered by the compliment. After two or three gentlemen had spoken, the chairman announced that one of the candidates for the mayoralty was in the room, and ought to be asked to express himself upon the subject of temperance, to which the meeting signified approval, and Mr. Sawers then addressed them. It is very unpleasant to Mr. Sawers to have to excuse himself for what one of his entertainers considers an intrusion; but since the Division does not seem to look upon it as their duty to protect their guest, he is forced to give this explanation.

☞ The returning officer will declare the election to-day, at noon, in the town hall.

CANADIANS IN THE BRITISH ARMY.—A correspondent of the Mercury gives the following particulars of "Quebec men" who have lately been promoted in the British Army:—"Ensign Stephen J. Sewell, one of the heroes of Jhansi, and son of our (Quebec) Postmaster, to a Lieutenancy without purchase, in the 90th Regiment. Ensign James E. Vaughan, at present stationed in India, son of Captain David Vaughan, to a Lieutenancy without purchase, in the Rifle Brigade. Ensign James Le Rondeau, son of J. F. Rondeau, Esq., to a Lieutenancy, by purchase, in the 9th Regiment. Mr. Richard Pemy, a son of Dr. Percy, has passed the usual examination before the Military Board in Montreal necessary to obtain a commission."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday a man named Alexander McBrine was engaged at Mr. Tebb's building St. Catherine street, opposite Wellington Terrace. While on the scaffolding with a young man named Grant, putting up the cornice, he directed a carpenter, Pasquette, to remove a support to further the work. The latter expostulated, but at length complied. The scaffolding was now kept in its place by one brace only. As anticipated by Pasquette the scaffolding gave way, and McBrine along with Grant was instantly precipitated to the ground; Grant fell on his feet, receiving but little injury; McBrine fell on his side, breaking his leg, his head at the same time striking the ground. The concussion ruptured several blood vessels in the head, causing almost instantaneous death. —Montreal Gazette.

NEW LINE OF STEAMERS FOR LAKE ERIE.—We learn from the Cleveland Plain Dealer, an excellent authority on such a subject, that it is contemplated to place a line of steamers on the lake route between Buffalo and Cleveland, and another between Buffalo and Detroit, the coming season. These lines will run in connection with the Southern Michigan; Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati; Cleveland, and Pittsburg, and Michigan Central Railroads —arrangements having been made with the respective companies. It is clearly apparent from such an arrangement that the object of the Western Railway Companies is to combine with the roads at the East for carrying trade of the Western States.—There can be no doubt that the Great Western Railway will still command a large portion of the travel and traffic: yet this movement argues a state of things altogether unexpected, and the result of the combination must be that the greater portion of the business will be done on the lakes next year.—Spectator.

RUMORS OF WAR.—There are continued rumors of a warlike tendency, which have not been checked, but rather the contrary, by the evasive articles in the semi-official press; the publication of letters from Turin in an evening paper, said to be written by a confidential friend of M. de Cavour, and which are not over re-assuring; the reproduction in the Patrie of certain suspicious articles in the Italian press; the report of a communication addressed to the district generals in the departments asking for information on the state of their military equipments, arms, ammunition, etc.; and, lastly, the rumor of an approaching journey of a confidential friend of the Emperor to Italy. These things—true, unfounded or exaggerated—occasion disquietude in the public mind, which the affair of M. de Montalembert is not calculated to diminish. —Paris Correspondence of the Times.

THE SEA AT GREAT DEPTHS.—Popular ideas with regard to sinking of bodies in the sea, have heretofore been vague; for the reason, perhaps, that the laws which govern their descent, and which are derived from the well known laws of fluids, have never been fully defined in their application to the depths of the ocean. Some imagine that ships which founder at sea sink to a certain depth, and there float about until broken to pieces, or thrown upon some bank beneath the sea; and indeed, a certain writer in England has published a book sustaining this absurd notion. Others, again, believe that the buoyant force of the water at great depths is enormous, and due to the whole pressure of the column of water above, and that all bodies which are lighter than water at the surface, will, if sunk to the bottom, rest deserted from the sinker, shoot upward with a great velocity; or in other words, that the density of the water increases directly with the depth. These views are erroneous. It is true the pressure increases with the depths, to the amount of 15 pounds upon every square inch for every 34 feet in depth; but the density is not thereby sensibly increased, owing to the incompressibility of the water; so that neither the buoyant force, nor the resistance to the motion of any body, are sensibly increased from the surface to the bottom. At the depth of 3,000 fathoms, for instance, the pressure upon a square inch is nearly 8,000 pounds, but the column of 18,000 feet of water is only shortened about 60 feet; the density is thus but slightly increased; but the effect of this enormous pressure upon compressible bodies, in air wood, &c., is to condense them in to a smaller bulk, by which they may be rendered heavier than water, and will sink of their own weight. A piece of wood cannot float at the bottom of the sea, but a very slight extraneous force will bring it to the surface. —Sill. Jour.

Arrival of the "Fulton."

Halifax, January 1.

The steamship Fulton arrived here on Friday night.

Lord Abercrombie succeeds Lord Napier at Washington.

INDIA.

Lord Clyde attacked Amorha on the 9th November. The Rajah submitted. On the 10th the fort surrendered; on the 11th the Sepoys fled from Seharee, which was captured by the English.

Fort Semree in Oude was taken by Brigadier Eraligh, on the 9th.

Tantia Topee in Salpoora Hills, the outlets of which are closely guarded from Indore.

Nov. 23d, Nathe of Banga separated from the rebels, is going over to General Mitchell's camp en masse.

Indore Samee, Newarree, the remaining rebel leaders have given themselves up to the Government.

Arrival of the "American."

PROJECTED INVASION OF IRELAND.

SERIOUS CONDITION OF ITALY.

Halifax, Jan. 3, 1859.

The America arrived at Halifax yesterday morning, 2nd.

GREAT BRITAIN.

An extraordinary general meeting of the Atlantic Telegraph Company was held in London on the 12th ult., Lord Stuart Worthy presiding. The report showed the total total receipts of the Company on capital account had been £307,420, and the expenditure £304,946. Twenty-six miles outstanding liabilities. Five shares to the value of £75,000 had been issued to projectors in purchase of their original rights and privileges. The chairman made a lengthy explanation of the condition of the Company. The cable had been submerged to the distance of 11 miles from Ireland, and found perfect. The grapnels, from want of funds, were unable to proceed further operations. They had appealed to Government for a guarantee of five and a half per cent. on £600,000 of new capital, with which to construct and lay a new cable; but no decision had been received. He urged upon the proprietors that immediate and energetic action was the only way; and moved the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously. Mr. Whitehouse, late electrician of the company, called attention to the establishment of another company, formed for establishing telegraphic communication with America by the southern route, and having half its capital subscribed. He had been instructed to state the condition under which a fusion of the two companies might be effected. Several shareholders suggested that such a matter could not be entertained by the meeting, and the chairman said that, pending negociations with the Government, the proposition ought not to be discussed. Mr. Whitehouse withdrew the subject, and an adjourned general meeting for February was unanimously carried.

The reform movement was progressing.

An influential meeting of shipowners was held in London, to take into consideration the ruinous condition of British navigation, attributing the cause to the repeal of the navigation laws, and praying that ships of non-reciprocity countries be placed as nearly as possible on the same footing in British ports as British ships are placed in those countries.

In regard to the invasion of Ireland by members of the Phœnix Club, the Cork Constitution says:—Treason was carried much further than suspected. There were daily and nightly drillings; pikes were manufactured, arms imported from America, and the use of them taught. The Government was not a minute too early in interfering. A body of military and militia had been distributed through the western portion of the county of Cork to prevent insurrection.

The Belfast Mercury says there is little doubt that the Phœnix Club is entirely seditious, and made up of the dregs of young Ireland. Seventeen persons had been arrested at Belfast, in addition to those at Cork. Government was expected to issue a special commission for the immediate trial of the prisoners.

Mr. Guernsey, indicted by the Government for stealing the Ionian despatches lately published in the Daily News, has been tried and acquitted.

A prospectus has been issued in London for the Madras Navigation and Canal Company; capital fixed at two millions is to be issued, the Indian Council having guaranteed five per cent. on that amount.

A prospectus has also been issued of the Canadian Landed Credit Company with a capital of two hundred thousand pounds, the object being to encourage the flow of capital to Canada, by making advances on mortgages of land.

The Government of New South Wales has deputed an agent to visit England and confer with the Colonial Office in conjunction with other representatives of the Colonies, on the best means of establishing a mail service via Panama.

LATEST.—The Times' (Satu.day) city article says that funds opened at lower prices on Friday, and soon exhibited further tendency on depression, and finally closed ¼ below official quotations. The weakness of the market is generally attributed to speculative realizations, capitalists at the same time being probably sensitive with regard to the effects to be apprehended from the disposition to keep the demand of India and the Colonies within reasonable limits.

FRANCE.

A meeting was to be held in Paris on the 30th ult., for regularly constituting the Suez Canal Company. It was positively stated that bona fide subscriptions had been obtained for the full amount of the nominal capital.

The Paris correspondent of the Globe says that Montalembert has read a letter from Count de Chambord, congratulating him on his independent attitude, and expressing the sympathy of the head of the Bourbon dynasty.

The Bourse had been heavy, but subsequently improved.

ITALY.

The correspondent of the Daily News says it is not easy to get authentic intelligence from Rome, Cardinal Antonelli having declared war upon foreign correspondents, stopped their letters, and threatened to turn them out of the city.

A letter from Turin states that the condition of Italy grows every day more serious. An impression is general that a political crisis is at hand. It is from a high source that rumours of warlike tendency proceeds. it is also believed that Piedmont is encouraged by the Tuileries.

The correspondent of the Times says her who were on furlough have received orders to join their regiments in Lombardy and notice has been issued that the military authorities want horses for cavalry and artillery. Necessary supplies were being set into fortresses in Italy, so that if an attack be made on Austria she will not be taken by surprise.

There were rumors at Frankfort of a new Austrian loan.

PRUSSIA.

The Order of the Black Eagle was conferred on the Prince of Wales, who has returned to England.

RUSSIA.

A powerful army is said to be formed among the nobility to frustrate the Emperor's emancipation schemes. They have a project for diminishing the power of the Emperor and increasing that of the nobility.

CHINA.

The London Times in a leading article, gives interesting details of the progress at Shanghai of Lord Elgin and the Chinese Commissioners. The demeanour of the latter has been such as to confirm the belief that the Court of Pekin is resolved to carry out the provisions of the treaty with entire good faith. The progress is of the most satisfactory termination of every question in dispute, and gives himself to anticipate that the vexed question of the opium trade will be settled upon a basis which shall prevent its becoming the cause of future difficulties.

Mr. Reed the American Minister was working harmoniously with the British Commissioner upon the tariff question.

Money in active demand, and minimum rate in all quarters of two and a-half per cent. At the Indian application continues to increase. Exchange with Russia has suddenly become less adverse for that country, the difference in the week being about three-eighths. Bullion of an approaching kind have consequently become current, Bullion for continental active demand. The amount for the East will take out £324,000.

The Daily West city article says a fall in building Companies railway shares formed a feature of the day.

Some of the Paris journals mention the rep. of this a reduction of the rate of discount of the Bank of France to one and a half per cent, is not improbable.

THE KANSAS TROUBLES.

The Washington correspondent of the Times, that Gov. Medary of Kansas Territory, with the sanction of the President, has ordered the military and the enlargement of the disturbances in the territory near Fort Scott.

Important dispatches were received yesterday from the Gulf of Mexico, which led to a long consultation between the President, Gen. Cass, and Mr Preston, the new Minister to Spain.

The Herald's correspondent says, it is understood that the Liverpool Consulate will soon be vacant, Mr. Tunker having signified his intention not to remain.

The Times' correspondent says, that the official report relative to the late troubles in Kansas was considered in Cabinet on Tuesday, when it was determined to adopt a course which should bring Montgomery and Brown to speedy justice, and orders for that purpose were immediately despatched to the Marshal of that territory.

THE FILIBUSTERS WRECKED, AND RESCUED BY A BRITISH WAR VESSEL.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—A sloop arrived here from Ruatan, reports that the schooner Susan landed her passengers at Puerto Cabello, Honduras, and that they forthwith prepared to cross the country to Leon, Nicaragua. The arms had been abstracted from the arsenal at Leon, and are now in the possession of the Democrats at Chanandega and Subtiaba, who are awaiting the advent of the Americans, in order to declare against Martinez. Chatres, a relative of Gen. Valle, was at Orilleval on the confines of Nicaragua. All Honduras was ready, as were also a large number of Democrats in Nicaragua, to unite with the Americans. Col. Natzmer had been sent forward by Col. Anderson, in order to complete the political arrangements with the Leonares.

LATER.

The correspondent of the Associated Press sends the following, dated Belize, Honduras, December 30th:—The schooner Susan was wrecked on the Glovers, a coral reef, 60 miles from Belizee, on the morning of the 16th. The passengers were saved, but the vessel is a total loss. Capt. Maury endeavoured to charter another vessel to carry his passengers. Gov. Seymour tendered the British steamer Bantisk to convey the passengers to any Southern port of the United States. An American captain circulated prejudicial reports, but the Governor chose to regard them as shipwrecked citizens of a friendly nation, and offered every assistance. The passengers will return to Mobile.

LATEST.

The British war steamer Basilisk, arrived in Mobile Bay this morning, with 100 shipwrecked passengers of the schooner Susan, who were taken on board on the 26th, by order of the Governor of Belizee, and treated gentlemanly by the British officers. The passengers have since arrived at Mobile. On landing, a procession was formed and the Nicaragua flag hoisted. Capt. Maury was called out, and made a speech to the crowd. There was much excitement.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Jan. 6th, 1859.

	$ c.	$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 95	a 1 00
Oats "	0 25	a 0 30
Potatoes "	0 25	a 0 25
Apples "	0 50	a 1 00
Flour per barrel	4 00	a 5 50
Butter per lb	0 12½	a 0 15
Cheese "	0 10	a 0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a 5 00
Beef per cwt	3 00	a 3 50
Hay per ton	7 00	a 8 00
Dry Wood	1 00	a 0 00
Green Wood	1 00	a 0 00
Straw per load	1 00	a 1 50

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

BURNS' CENTENARY.

A PUBLIC MEETING of persons interested in the celebration of the Hundredth Anniversary of Burns' birth will be held in McGregor's Hotel, on Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of arranging the necessary preliminaries and appointing a Committee to carry out the same.

Capt. Sutherland in the Chair.

Peterboro', Jan'y 6th, 1859. 1

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY & BEAVERTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Shareholders of the Company will be held at the Office of the Company, in Port Hope, on Tuesday, the 25th January, at 12 o'clock noon.

THOMAS BIDDULPH,
Secretary.

Port Hope, 13th Dec., 1858. 6

A RETURN OF FINES & FORFEITURES

RECEIVED from the Magistrates of the Town and Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, from the 1st day of September, 1857, to the 31st of December, 1858, inclusive.

(Published by Order of the Counties Council.)

1st Sept. 1857.	William Wagoner,	J. P.	1 50
10th Nov. "	A. & Fraser,	J. P.	10 00
" " "	J. W. Dunsford,	J. P.	2 50
14th Dec "	Lewis Davis,	J. P.	1 00
1st Feb. 1858.	A. & Fraser,	J. P.	17 00
2nd " "	A. & Fraser,	J. P.	10 00
29th May "	Samuel DeVeber,	J. P.	1 00
22nd July "	A. & Fraser,	J. P.	10 00
21st Sep. "	Timothy Coughlin,	J. P.	1 00
19th " "	[illegible]	J. P.	10 00
24th Dec. "	[illegible]	J. P.	1 00

$88.00

Walter Sheridan,
Treasurer.

31st December, 1858. 1

MUSICAL!!

Every Lady may have a large assortment of the finest Music for the Piano-Forte, at almost nominal prices by calling at the Book and Music Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY,

where there is at present a great variety of pieces to select from, published at the Musical Bouquet Office, London, and priced only 6d per single No.

QUADRILLES.

Pleasicomial Quadrilles.
The Don Cæsar De'Bazan Quadrilles.
Sulphegor do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
The Mesmerisers do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Caledonia do.
Bobbing Around do.
The Beggar's Opera do.
Juvenile Ball do.
The Ermani do.
La Fille du Regiment do.
The Standard Bearer do.
Marquess of Anjou do.
The Far West do.
La Fete des Lilias do.
Arabian Nights do.
Jack the Giant Killer do.
The grand Quadrille of all Nations.
Kenkydock. do
The Pantomime. do
The Swiss. do
Le Pantillion do
Francis the 1st. do
Quadrille from Meyerbeer's New Grand Opera "Le Prophete."
The Henry Russels Quadrille.
The Neapolitan Quadrille.

FANTASIAS.

La Violette.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.
Grand Galop Britania.
Wo're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Scotch Air—Caller Herrin.
Minnie.
Far, far upon the sea.

POLKAS, WALTZES, GALOPS, VARSOVIANAS, &c, &c.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Sitzerhair do.
The Bobbing Around Polka.
Old Dog Tray do.
Star of the Ball Redowa.
The Scotch Polka.
Now you must Polka.
Excursion Galop.
Chevy Chase Galliop.
Come per me Sereno.
Though poor my state.
Bonnie Dundee,—Piano only.
La Napoleonienne and L'Imperiale.
Kossuth March.
Ah yes my love.
La Calamalea.
Mazeppa.
Deserto Sulla Terra & Core di Zingaro.
Old Dog Tray.
The Lady Fair Scottische.
The Pic Nic do.
Magic Pen do.
Spray of the Ocean, Waltz.
The Lancashire do.
Dusty, Inegune Dull Care me.
do. When a Little Farm we keep.
do. I know a hank.
Minnie: Old Folks at Home &c,
Annie Laurie; Blue Bells &c.
Vilkins & Dinah, Waltz.
Valmoral, do.
The Jubilee for Little Fingers.
Sound the Loud Varsovianna.
Krasni Tavolarsi, Pommli.
Vogra Vogra, from Bellini.
A te o Caro.
Hercule Grand Galliop.
Ah La Morte, from Bellini.

POPULAR SONGS,
WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Who wishes for'at for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Love be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Thou art my Joy.
Up for the Right.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
So Early in the Morning.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.
Lizzie Lindsay & My heart is sair.
The Main, the flowing Main.
England, dear England by Chas. Mackay.
Lilly Lee and Chorus.
Who would not happy be.
I love to dwell in the bosom's cell.
Lucy Neal & Lucy Long.
Lillie Dale.
Caller Herrin.
Far Far upon the Sea.
Nancy Till.
Fare thee well & if for ever.
Bonnie Gals.
The English Emigrant.
Happy Bluff.
The Fairy Harp—by Mackay.
Who's dat Knockin &c, &c.
John Brown.
Duncha Lee by Eliza Cook.
The old old Story by Eliza Cook.
Lord Lovel.
When the Eve Comes Home.
Land Ho!—Russell.
Wae's Heart & Highland Mary.
The Canadian Boat Song.
Beautiful Star in Heaven so bright.
The Soldiers Wife, by Russell.
The Tight Little Island.
The Brook Song.
The Piper's Daughter.
Mary O'More.
Oh Boys carry me long.
The Mermaid's Cave.
Sally in our Alley.
Why chime the Bells on Merrily.
Land! Land!! Land!!!
Emma Favre.
Hawthorn & the Ivy.
Tom Bowling
The old Church Bell.
The Laird O'Cockpen.
Sir Harold the Hunter.

N. B.—Music from any Publishers at the publ shed price, procured on the shortest notice at the

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
OF
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George St. Peterborough.

F. G. CALLENDER,

Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWS to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, that the visit to which intimation was given in his advertisement on the first Monday in each month, for the week, ensued to universal satisfaction of the gentlemen, in defiance of competition on the same week and thereabouts, (except about such which, it being a subscription list circulated by the proprietor of [illegible] to insert. Teeth on [illegible] Gold, Platina, and Silver, in the most approved new style, being free from taste, much cheaper than usual, and fitted to last. He regrets to inform the public that he cannot remain in Peterborough more than a month, being here weighty.

Public testimonials to be seen at the above Rooms over Mr. Chenet's Store.

Peterboro', 8th Dec., 1858. 6

1859.

A. FOWLIS & Co.,

IN RETURNING THANKS to their customers for their kind support during the last year, would state, that

CASH PURCHASERS,

would find it to their advantage to call, and to peruse their Stock of

HARDWARE, &c

will be largely, better assorted and at lower prices than formerly, as they have now adopted to a greater extent the CASH system.

In future, accounts will not be opened or continued except under special agreement.

Parties whose Notes or Book Accounts are over-due are requested to call and settle immediately.

Always on hand,
Iron and Nails of all sizes and qualities.
House furnishing, Ironmongery,
Mechanics Tools, &c.
Agents for the sale of Nicholl's Axes and Chips Tools.
Straw Cutters, Moderator Lamps.
Carriage and Buggy Furniture, &c.
Window Glass in 8, 10, and 12 Glass.
Sperm Oil, Olive Oil, boiled and raw Linseed Oil, Seal Oil, chloric Mineral Sperm Oil.
Varnishes of the best description.
Peterborough, January 5th, 1859. 1

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY & BEAVERTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Shareholders of the Company will be held at the Office of the Company, in Port Hope, on Tuesday, the 25th January, at 12 o'clock noon.

THOMAS BIDDULPH,
Secretary.

Port Hope, 13th Dec., 1858. 6

NOTICE.

THE subscribers propose to keep Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month, the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms, viz:

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		$ c.
$2,50 ..	New York Ledger	0 [illegible]
2,50 ..	Merry's Weekly	0 [illegible]
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4 1
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 ..	Flag of our Union	0 [illegible]
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
6,50 ..	" " " Times	0 7½
6,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chambers Journal	1 0
2,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	1 0
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	1 0

PAY I

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, Hyson old and young, Young Hyson, Twankay, Gunpowder, Gunpowder, Gouchow, Souchong, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Manzanvde, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A Dry Crushed & Icebox Loaf, Lenvee, Ground, Rice ground (for confectioners,) Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, SYRUP, RICE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast. Redpath's refined. Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 6s. 10s. | 12s. & 1s in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bacon, Canty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, | do. | do. M. R. Layers & Cabinets in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batty's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champagne, Claret Eastern (ease Brandy), Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lemon & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 800 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers, HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Salmon Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes, For Sale by

44 S. E. CURRY.

Tea.

Gun[illegible] HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Super Rosin, Card and Split. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by

S. E. CURRY & Co.

Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 14, 1856. 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having increased and improved on itself, thereby proving its great merit, "The Village Blacksmith" will now have sole right (to subscribers only) on every plate copied, 20 x 30 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting Three Dollars, will receive a copy of the superb steel Engraving, after Hartley's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also one Bronze Picture of admission to the Reception (or Drawing-room) and Western Galleries of this Association.

Every effort will be given to the fulfilment of the above liberal offer, and the Engraving, Journal, &c., &c., are already in the hands of the Subscribers, and may be seen at their residences.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1, 1859. On the evening of that day the Engraving will be awarded to subscribers.

For full particulars see Cosmopolitan Art Journal, which is issued monthly, and can be obtained from any Subscriber, or on the receipt of 10 cents in stamps or coin. Address

C. L. DERBY, Actuary C. A. A., Bronze Office, 548 Broadway, N. Y.

Bronze Office, 548 Broadway, N. Y. } December 6, 1858.

Subscriptions received by S. E. Tetterson, Hunter Street, Peterboro'. 48

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT.

Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 3447

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative).
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW (Free Church)
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE (Tory).

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews....	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews....	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews....	7 00
For all four of the Reviews.....	8 00
For Blackwood's Magazine.....	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review....	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews....	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews....	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews.	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent, from the above price will be allowed to CLUBS ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

POSTAGE.

Subscribers in the British Provinces will receive the Reprints free of U. S. postage.

N. B. The price in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above named is $31 per annum.

Our Reprints versus Eclectics, &c.

As we have for many years been paying more than $3,000 annually to the British Publishers for the matter furnished in these Periodicals, thus virtually becoming copartners with them in the profits of the Reprints, we trust the public will consider this in bestowing their patronage, and give us the preference over Eclectic and other patchwork publications, whether monthly or weekly, which now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the Foreign Publishers or to us for the same. As to cheapness nobody can four plain of paying $10 a year Blackwood's leading British Rand these words entire Magazine are not obliged to be guided by subscribers in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover taking into consideration the style in which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also to the advantage of an early issue by means of the advance Sheets—our series will be found as cheap as any one of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

☞ Remittances should always be addressed, post paid, to the Publishers.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,

47. No. 54 Gold street, New York.

FOUND.

THE subscriber found a Red Heifer, coming three years old, on his premises, in June last, where it has remained ever since. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges, and take her away.

R. MALONEY.

Douro, Dec. 16, 1858. 49

STRAYED.

CAME into the premises of the subscriber about one month ago, one red and white heifer coming two years old, one red steer calf. The owner is requested to prove property and take them away.

DENNIS DWYER.

Lot 10 in 7th con. Douro, Dec. 9, 1858 48.

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Shootings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Waliseys,
Plain,	Reevers,
Satinets,	Beaver,
Doeskins,	Moleton, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats, Pilot Coats, Blanket Coats, Vests, Pants, Drawers, Shirts, Waterproof Cloaks, Leggings, and Caps.

And a general assortment of

GROCERIES AND LIQUORS

All of which they will offer at a great reduction of prices, for Cash or Farm Produce.

They would also call special attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT

of their business, where they are prepared to execute orders for all descriptions of Clothing of the latest styles, the best workmanship and warranted to fit.

L. HERRICK & Co.

Peterboro', Nov. 9, 1858. 45

HOUSE

A NEW cheap Cookstove, also in the basement, a cook stove, with an oven large enough to bake [illegible] at once. Apply at this office, or at the residence of the subscriber, Hunter Street.

Peterboro', November 24, 1858. 46

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£200,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE in CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq. | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOFFAT, Esq. | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston.
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',

W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,897,600. Paid up Capital, $450,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. [illegible] R. CAMERON.

Directors.

W. B. ROBINSON.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq.
J. K. HOWARD, Esq.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.
HON. J. H. CAMERON.
CAPT. F. WALLACE.
[illegible] ENNOR, Esq.
[illegible] CRAWFORD, Esq.
JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.
A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hamilton.

AGENT,

W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

The Bar

Great care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1856. 3-tf.

QUADRILLES,

POLKAS, VARSOVIANAS,
WALTZES, SONGS, DUETS,
&c., &c., &c.,

IN THE Musical Bouquet.

A LARGE SUPPLY ON HAND;

As FOR SINGLE NUMBERS,

AT

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

NEW BOOK STORE,
George Street.

Peterboro', Dec'r 2, 1858. 46

ALMANACS AND DIARIES

FOR 1859.

CALL and make your selection from a very large assortment of the above, at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S,

New Book and Stationery Store, George Street.

Peterboro', Dec'r 9, 1858.

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us and known as the firm of HUNT & BOSTON is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Boston, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HUNT,
HENRY BOSTON.

The business will hereafter be conducted on by W. Hunt, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', } July 26, 1858. 26

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which toney are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,

Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter,

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £300 or £900. Apply at this Office.

September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

FOR CHILDREN.

The Children's P.....	12½ cents
The Play Draught Board and Man....	25 "
Fox and Geese and Board.....	37½ "
Wolf and Lamb and Board.....	37½ "
German Tactics and Board.....	37½ "
Paper Dolls, Furniture, &c.

PICTURE BOOKS,

in almost endless variety, printed on Linen or Paper from 1½d up to 5s. Amusement and instruction of every description for Children, at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S

New Book and Stationery Store,

46 George Street.

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK,

and the best markets.

SUGARS,—Bright Muscovado and Cuba. Redpath's yellow and yellow refined; crushed and dry crushed; ground, extra ground and powdered loaf.

SYRUPS & MOLASSES,—A large Stock of extra fine quality.

TEAS,—Hyson, Imperial, Souchong, English breakfast Congou (imported direct from London); Colong, &c., all finely flavored and of excellent quality.

COFFEE,—Moche, Java, Laguyra, Rio; green and roast.

TOBACCOS,

of all sizes, and best Brands.

WINES & LIQUORS,—Ales and Porters, a large and well selected stock,

PORTS, SHERRIES,

CHAMPAGNES

of very superior quality, and cheaper than ever before offered here; Brandy, dark and pale, Hennessey's, Otards, &c., JAMAICA RUM, DeKuyper's Gin, Old Tom, Scotch and Canadian Whiskies.

RICE,—South Carolina, Patna, &c.

RAISINS,—M. R. Layers, Valentia and Saltana. Best Zante Currants; Superior Eleme Figs.

Nuts: Almonds, Filberts, Walnuts, Brazil and Pea Nuts.

CANDLES,—Adamantine, Belmont and Pat. B. Sperm and Peterboro.

SOAP,—Liverpool, Fancy and Peterboro'.

FISH,—Cod fish, Herrings, &c., &c.

MACHINERY AND LAMP OILS.

SALT in Barrels and Bags; a large assortment of Spoons, Pickles, Grind Oils, Essences, Spices and general Groceries of every description.

ALSO

a large and varied stock of Glassware, Wooden ware, Willow ware, &c., &c.

The whole having been well bought, will be sold wholesale for Cash at MONTREAL PRICES; and also retail at lower rates than have hitherto been charged in town.

COUPAR & OGILVY.

Peterborough, 1st Dec'r, 1858. 47.

PROCLAMATION!

THE subscriber begs to inform his customers that his

ACCOUNTS

will be ready for delivery at the close of the

CURRENT YEAR,

when his Books will be closed, and no accounts re-opened except on special agreement.

He respectfully requests all those indebted to him to make immediate payment, by so doing they will save costs.

☞ His pressing needs will be felt at our return, for Cash only.

W. B. READ.

Peterborough, 7th Nov., 1858. 43

MERCHANTS.

[illegible]

Firms, &c., For Sale.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the magazines for the Ladies, and now as well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ December Number received, price 25 cts.

PROPERTY IN ONEMEE

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No, 10, north side of King street, containing ½ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession, } Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.

Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MOCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, [illegible] Dry Goods, the other [illegible] both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 16 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1856. 22

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

GULL RIVER!

ON AND AFTER NOVEMBER 1st

PROVISIONS, HARDWARE,

AND

CLOTHING,

Will be kept for sale at moderate prices for Cash by the Subscriber on Lot 28, Lutterworth and at the River.

W. H. BOWBOTTOM,
Proprietor.

Lutterworth, Oct. 20, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 28-tf

A CARD.

WILLIAM SMITH,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has leased Shaws's to the Temperance House, Water Street, where he will carry on his business of

TAILOR.

In all its branches. Work executed in the newest and most approved fashion.

☞ Fit Guaranteed.

Peterborough, Nov. 11th, 1858. 44-tf

Mr. C. R. DEARNALY,

WILL open a FENCING SCHOOL, on and after [illegible] in the large room over Mr. Lynch's store, on Journey's Lot, where those desirous of obtaining a thorough knowledge of the art practically and scientific exercise will receive instruction in the use of the Sword, Foil, Single Stick, &c., &c.

Application to be made to the Actl. master at the School.

Peterborough, Nov. 20th, 1858. 51

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS

RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 6th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11 1837. 3

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUATER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12 Note " " " "	2
3 Steel Pens.....	1
1 Holder.....	1
1 Pencil.....	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....	1
Making a total of.....	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY.

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,

Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the most possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,

NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,

Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DENTISTRY.

AS many persons are constantly calling on the undersigned during hours devoted to another business he begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH CLEANED and ARRANGED. That his residence, corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer Streets, on any Evening after six o'clock. ☞ Wednesdays excepted.

☞ The desired period will be waited on at their own residences.

PRICES:—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary cavities) 5s 6d each; with Silver, &c., &c., 1s 3d; Extracting 7½d; TOOTH ACHE cured for 7½d, and all operations warranted.

E. MOORE.

Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1858. 44

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL, which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features." 48

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

IF you want to secure a copy of that elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the ART JOURNAL, with the other premiums, ensure and subscribe $3, before the 1st of January, 1859. Specimen copies of the above, and full particulars given by applying to R. S. Patterson, Agent. See advertisement elsewhere headed—New Features, &c. 48

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,

THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 50 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 12 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address

C. L. DERBY,
548 Broadway, N. Y.

December 6, 1858. 48

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, December 6th, 1858, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay 7 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 10.40 a. m.

Leave Port Hope 12.30 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 4.10 p. m.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope 6.10 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 10 a. m.

Leave Peterboro' 1.30 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 5 p. m.

The Morning trains meet at Millbrook, 9.30 a. m.
The Afternoon " " 1.40 p. m.

Mixing Passengers from Lindsay and Port Hope, to Hastings and 10 minutes at Peterboro' and return same day.

☞ All the above Trains run in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. T. WILLIAMS, Superintendent. D. BRAMLEY, Managing Director.

Peterboro', Dec. 6, 1858. 48

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,

CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and set, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞ Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 7, 1853. 48

STRAYED.

FROM the Subscriber, in June last, one White 2 year old Heifer; one Black do.; one Spotted Steer, 1 year old past. Whoever will return the above to the Subscriber, or give such information as will lead to their recovery, will be suitably rewarded.

WILLIAM McMULLEN.

Otonabee, Lot 32, 11th Con., } December 6th, 1858. 48

BOOT & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.

Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 3

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, } Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.

Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,

Cobourg, August, 1857. 25

RITCHIE'S HOTEL,

BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.

Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 21

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 8

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.

Port Hope, May, 1857. 51

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as

AUCTIONEER

and that he will always be ready to act as such to those requiring his services.

He also begs to intimate, that he has opened an Auction Room, that Store on George Street, first door North of Messrs. Ormond & Gilmour, Druggists, (Heathcote's Block,) where he will receive for sale by Auction, Goods of every description, on which he will if desired, make advances until such time as said articles be sold.

Punctuality and strict attention to business may be relied on by those entrusting to him Commissions for sale.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1858. 49

RAILWAY HOUSE.

PURE ENGLISH

COAL OIL,

JUST RECEIVED and for Sale, also a large assortment of Goods, CHEAP FOR CASH.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.

Pe

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notic. and in the latest style, at the Office of the [illegible]
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 2.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six lines, and under, first insertion	0	3	9
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	10
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobacco, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,

Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.

W. M. CLEMENTI. T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 24

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

R. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the international Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. B. J. Visard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL,

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

Burnham's Block, George-st.

93

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1856. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ACTUARY, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1856. 29

A GOLDEN PEN

IS A REAL BLESSING.

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX, FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

1859.

A. FOWLIS & Co.,

IN RETURNING THANKS to their customers for their kind support during the last year, would state, that

CASH PURCHASERS,

would find it to their advantage to call, and in future their stock of

HARDWARE, &c

will be larger, better assorted and at lower prices than heretofore, as they have now adopted in a greater extent the Cash system.

In future, accounts will not be opened or continued except under special agreement.

Parties whose Notes or Book Accounts are overdue are requested to call and settle immediately.

Always on hand,

Iron & Steel of all sizes and qualities.

Heavy furnishing, Ironmongery,

Blacksmiths Tools, &c.

Agents for the sale of Hoosick's Axes and ship Tools.

Stove Ovens, Kettle or Lamps.

Cartridge and Sporting Furniture, &c.

Patent Gun Caps, No. 10, Pretty and Glass Gun Cotton, Gun Oil, Sealed and rust Lizard Oil, Whale Machine Sperm Oil, Varnish, &c., &c.

Peterborough, January 8th, 1858. 1

The "Great Eastern" Steam Ship.

It is a matter of no small congratulation to all who take an interest in the development of British science and British enterprise that the success of the Great Eastern steamship is now on a fair way of being realized. This is no ordinary speculation or every-day venture. To have abandoned the noble ship in which so much of the national hope and pride were embarked, to lay a mass of useless iron, it were altogether too sad a result of the genius which had carried through the project up to the eve of success. It would have been an indelible stigma upon our commerce, and our science. To have rescued the great ship from the ignoble destiny which was all but assured for her should be a matter of just pride in each one of that small band of public spirited and far-seeing individuals who, amidst all the difficulties and discouragements of the work, have never "bated of heart or hope," and to which now the credit is due of having resuscitated the enterprise and restored it to so firm a basis of commercial security.

The very favourable terms upon which the new Great Ship Company has entered into possession of its magnificent property are an earnest of the good future which awaits the enterprise. To have obtained for £160,000 which cost originally nearly three times that amount is a very capital omen to begin with. The greatest and strongest vessel in the world is also, to her new proprietors, the cheapest. Six months more will decide whether she is the fastest, and upon the point of her speed will turn the whole question of her profitableness.—Should the calculations of her builders be realised, and the trial trip across the Atlantic give a rate of sixteen knots an hour (which is the lowest estimate), the new shareholders will have ample reason to be content with their bargain, and may look forward with confidence to the most satisfactory returns upon their venture.

At first sight it may appear that a vessel of 22,000 tons, carrying 8,000 tons of cargo, is too large for any existing line of traffic; that she will be unable to procure the necessary amount of freight out and home to ensure a profit; and that no markets are to be found large enough to supply her demands and consume her importations. But a little reflection will convince us of the fallacy of such ideas. It may be admitted that there are not many paths of commerce in which the great ship could possibly travel; yet there is one line and one traffic, at least, as suggested by some leading members of the new company, which offer the most favourable prospects even to a vessel of the size of the Great Eastern. That traffic is the trade to the East.

On looking at the whole import and export trade of Great Britain, it is impossible not to be struck with the fact that the main line of commerce is that which takes its way round the Cape of Good Hope, towards India, China and Australia. The traffic of all these countries follows nearly in the same track, at least so far as the island of Ceylon. On this fact the projectors of the new Great Ship Company have founded their scheme for her employment—a scheme which appears to be as sound and substantial in its basis as it is undeniably bold, far-sighted, and original in its conception. The total amount of tonnage entered outwards from British ports to the countries eastward from the Cape of Good Hope during the ten months of 1858 was no less than 964,000 tons. The estimated present value of the whole exports eastward from Great Britain amounts to £30,000,000. Naturally, therefore, the present course of commerce points out the Eastern as the proper line of employment for the Great Eastern steamship. But to take the greatest possible advantage of the Eastern trade, it is necessary that the great ship should be employed, so to speak, only in the great trunk line of communication, which is the line between Great Britain and Ceylon. She would there combine the carrying trade of India, China, and the Eastern ports, with a considerable portion of that of Australia. Supposing the speed of the monster vessel to average only fifteen knots an hour, there can be no doubt but that she would attract to herself as large a portion of the traffic as to afford her full cargoes, at remunerative rates, both outward and homeward. The port of Trincomalee, selected as her European terminus, offers every facility for such a purpose. The voyage to it from England would occupy but thirty days. From it to Calcutta is distant (by steam) only four days; Madras, two; Hong Kong, ten; and Sydney or Melbourne but fourteen. At the terminus, Trincomalee, the Great Eastern might transmit her cargo to smaller steamers for India, China and Australia, taking from them in return the valuable products of all these countries as a back freight to England.

That the Great Eastern upon this line would command a portion of the traffic to yield to her proprietors a remunerative return may be confidently anticipated. To the merchant the value of time need not be dwelt upon. To the shippers whose business is with India or China it is of special importance, as by the overland route news of the markets can always forestall the arrival of the goods. Hence the heavy rates of freightage so gladly given for the limited accommodation afforded by the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company.—Now, should the great ship fulfil even the most moderate of the anticipations as to her rate of speed, and be able to land goods in Calcutta within thirty-five days of their shipment in London, in Hong Kong within forty, or in Melbourne within forty-four, it is certain that she will take up, at higher freights, a large amount of goods now conveyed in ordinary vessels. Of the whole Eastern tonnage all that portion which will bear a minimum freightage of £5 per ton may be fairly calculated upon as cargo available for the great ship. Of such are the silk and silk piece goods of India and China, averaging from £2,000 to £3,000 per ton in value; indigo, from £500 to £1,000 per ton; tea, coffee, spices, saltpetre, hardware, shellac, &c., of the value of between £100 to £300 per ton. Among the export goods individually valuable to pay the higher rates of freightage may be reckoned the principal manufactures of Birmingham, Manchester, Sheffield and Leeds—woolens, silks, satins, velvets, millinery, haberdashery, oilmen's stores, and hardware; besides the costly productions of France and Germany. A few facts and figures deduced from reliable official returns may serve to give our readers some idea of the magnitude of the traffic which already exists available for the purposes of the Great Ship Company. Of the export trade to the East the registered tonnage to Calcutta alone in the eleven months of 1858 was 228,030 tons, of which 75,000 tons may be assumed as bearing a freightage of £3 per ton. The tonnage to Bombay for the same period was 147,997 tons, of which 50,000 can pay £3 per ton. Ceylon, China, and Singapore make up some 49,000 tons more. The goods already sent to the East by the overland route are not included in these amounts, nor the cargoes to the Mauritius, Rangoon, Moulmein, Kurrachee, &c. The greater portion of the overland goods traffic the great ship might reasonably look to have; while it is fair to presume that she would also attract a considerable portion of the exports of Australia were a line of branch steamers to be laid on from Trincomalee to the Australian ports.

The import trade to the East is even more valuable than the export, and could well afford a higher freightage in return for speedy transport. The Aberdeen clippers at present obtain from £8 to £12 per ton for the carriage of fine teas from China, in which trade they will be utterly unable to compete with the Great Eastern should she reduce the voyage from 80 to 40 days. Upwards of 50,000 tons of tea may be calculated upon from China, should the freight not exceed £6 to £7 per ton; while from Calcutta the export of tea, the produce of Assam and the Himalayas will, in a few years, reach a considerable amount. A large portion of the gold from Australia would also form a portion of the great ship's homeward cargo should she reduce the Australian voyage to forty-five or fifty days. The passenger traffic, also, from the East and Australia—at present by far the most remunerative of any in the world—would form a very considerable item to the credit of the great ship; while for the transport of troops her capabilities are such as always to command a preference from Government over vessels of smaller burden.

The establishment of a branch line of steamers to act as feeders to the Great Eastern is all that is required to procure her sufficient cargoes, even in excess of her demands. The question of speed being once settled it is safe to predict that a total revolution will be effected in the commerce of the world. Other vessels of the size and capacity of the great ship will be required to maintain the constant stream of traffic which will flow along the Great Eastern trunk line. And large and remunerative as is the existing trade of the East, it will bear no comparison to the magnitude and value of that which will be created by the employment of these monster vessels. With the daily increase of European enterprise in the East, with new fields of speculation opened out in China and Japan, with the development of the Indian railway system and the influx of European capital and industry into that country, with the increasing civilized communities in Australia, and a British army in India henceforward to be twice its former strength, not only are there just and ample grounds for believing that the Great Eastern will prove a profitable speculation to her proprietors, but that ere long a fleet of such vessels will be found necessary to carry on the commerce of England with the rich, busy, and populous countries of the East, representing a population exceeding four hundred millions.

The Mortara Case.

We extract the following interesting narrative from the New York Times:—

THE MORTARA ABDUCTION—THE TRUTH COMING OUT.—The Corriere Mercantile of Genoa contains some details of this distressing and scandalous affair which have not been published before, and which show the cruelty of the proceeding in a most unmistakeable manner. Little Edgar, who is six years and ten months old, was taken forcibly from his parents by some of the Popes gendarmes. They lifted him up from the ground and carried him in their arms out of the house, down the steps and put him into a carriage, without heeding the distress of the child's parents or the astonishment of the bystanders. All the way from Bologna to Rome he did nothing but cry and beg them to take him back to his papa and mamma. The brigadier (a sergeant of gendarmes,) who was with him tried to put a chaplet and cross round his neck, and the boy opposed it with all his little strength, refused to kiss it, and begged them to give him instead a mazzara. This is a sort of reliquary on which the name of God is inscribed, and which Jewish children are in the habit of wearing. All this was written to an influential person at Bologna, and confirmed subsequently by the child himself to his father during the interview at which the rector of the Catecumeni was present. In one of the visits which M. Mortara, the father, was permitted to make to his son, he told him he expected to obtain the Pope's permission to take him back to Bologna, and the poor child, overjoyed at hearing this, hoped it would get be long before, and that he should not mind sleeping in the carriage for the three days it would take to get home again. The father was a dealer in gold lace and brocades, and who has no other means of supporting his family was of course compelled to leave Rome and return to Bologna, where his business required his presence. He told his son and the rector of his intention, and of his speedy return. At his departure, the rector, in violation of his promise, refused to admit any Jew whatever into the College, and it was precisely at that time that the journals devoted to ultra-Catholicism proclaimed throughout the length and breadth of Europe how the child was filled with the fervour of his call to such a degree as to wish to devote himself to the conversion of the Jews. Zeal like this at the age of six years and a half is edifying indeed! The Armonia, an organ of the priests at Turin, in a recent number does not scruple to publish certain spiritual effusions put into the boys mouth to this effect, but in which none of our readers can believe. In the meantime, the afflicted father having arranged his affairs at Bologna started once more for Rome, and his poor wife, whose distress of mind since the child's abduction has been intense, decided accompanying her husband. But when they had reached Rome they were told that their son had been removed to Alatri—a place rather more than fifty miles off—and thither they resolved to go, though the mother was exhausted with anxiety and fatigue. As soon as they arrived at Alatri (as we learn from a correspondent who has sent us these details), they obtained the service of a woman to guide them to the house of the rector. This worthy was absent at mass with their son. The father left his wife at the rector's, and went to meet the rector on his return with the boy. The rector was accompanied by a brother of his, and when the father approached the gates of the church this churchman slammed the door in his face. The father then went and stationed himself in the street waiting for their coming out of the church; and, in fact, after some little time, the rector and his brother, and young Mortara did come out. Instead however, of advancing to meet him, they turned off by the opposite street, dragging the child along, who, from time to time, turned round to look at his father, and struggled to get away that he might come to him. M. Mortara returned to the rector's house, where he had left his wife, and there, for two hours longer, they waited for the son's return, but to no purpose. Looking out of a window, M. Mortara then perceived that two gendarmes were watching in the street. Thinking they might be waiting there for him he left the house with his wife and walked up to them to see what their intentions were. These men did not speak, but they followed M. Mortara and his wife wherever they went. A few moments later, the Jew and his wife perceived that they were being stared at in a menacing manner by the inhabitants, and soon became aware, by the cries they heard, that the people had been taught to believe that the object of their coming there was to murder their own child. Calumny, as we see, is always a favourite weapon with the priests. Seeing what danger they were incurring, the unhappy parents took refuge in a hotel. An officer of the gendarmerie, called a marechal, and an inspector of police, entered, and demanded their passport. As soon as it was held out to them, they seized and kept it, desiring M. Mortara and his wife to repair forthwith to the Governor's.—This official told them he was not ignorant of the motive of their coming to Alatri, but it was all of no use, for without a fresh permission from the Pope they would decidedly not be allowed to see their son, and he thereupon desired them to quit the town within the space of two hours. So they returned to Rome; and here they met, it is true, with more humane treatment, for the Secretary of State gave his word to the mother that the child should be recalled to Rome, and that she would be allowed to embrace him. On the 11th of October she was in fact enabled to see her child, and the poor woman, in a letter she wrote to a friend of hers at Bologna, thus describes the interview:—"This morning I and my husband went to the Catecumeni, and they told us that the rector and my dear child had just arrived: we mounted the flight of steps, and very soon after that we had our darling Edgar in our arms. As for me I kissed him over and over again, weeping and sobbing, while he answered my kisses and embraces with his whole soul; greatly excited and shedding tears, the little fellow struggled between his fear of those who have him in their power and his immense love of us, but this at last triumphed. He cried out quite loud that he wanted to go home with his parents to his brothers and sisters. I told him to remember that he was born a Jew as we were, and that it was his duty always to remain one. He answered, 'Yes, dear mamma, I shall always take care to say the Shemang every day.' I added that we had come to Rome to see him again, and that we should not leave the city without him, at which he appeared glad and happy. All this took place in the presence of the rector and of his brothers and sisters."

What sort of a heart must his be who can withhold its sympathy from this bereaved mother?

Let those pseudo-religious journals, the partizans of the Inquisition at Rome, gainsay the facts above stated, if they dare, supposing that any sense of shame be yet left alive in them.

Further by the "America."

The Times' Indian Correspondence.

INDIA.

The following is the letter of the Times' Calcutta correspondent:—

November 10, 1858.

"The Proclamation was published all over India on the same day, the 1st Nov. It has therefore been for a week in your readers' hands, and I need therefore say nothing of its terms. On this side of India it has been received with unmixed and cordial approval. The press is for once unanimous in its praise, and I have not yet heard a single distinct or intelligible attempt at criticism. Even the paragraph about Christianity, the point on which the greatest diversity of feeling exists, has been accepted as a fair and satisfactory solution of the question. Her Majesty, while pledging herself to toleration, still expresses her belief in a faith which is regarded in India, as the Established Church used to be in Ireland, as a standard of purity as well as a means of salvation. A question whether politicians of home yet understand how intense is this feeling among large classes of Europeans in India. A very large majority, particularly of officials, who will hear anything else from England, carry out any line of policy, or obey any orders, will not hear the slightest hint of what they deem the "anti-Christian" policy. A direct order, for instance, to abstain from contributing to missionary funds, would produce a direct refusal to obey; and, if necessary, resignation from scores of the best officers in her Majesty's service. For the rest the different parties write in praise of the proclamation. All, whether opposed to amnesties or not, allow that a wide amnesty was the fitting commencement of a new reign. On the only remaining point of dispute—annexation—there is no bitter controversy. The anti-annexationists are delighted with a paragraph, which they consider a pledge against further acquisitions, while the annexationists declare it is not half so strong as the Parliamentary resolution of 1813, and that neither pledges nor resolutions will stop a tidal wave. Native opinion is, if possible, more strongly pronounced. The natives in Calcutta, and in all stations from which we have yet heard, illuminated with the greatest good will, and in Calcutta at least without the slightest official pressure. Our native editor (the Brahmkur) places at the head of his paper in addition to the English and Hindoo dates, the day of the 'Victoria era,' and the Queen's name, which admits in Bengalee of the equivoque it would convey in Latin, is the basis of dozens of complimentary puns. On the 3rd instant, a meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta was called, to consider a Loyal Address to Her Majesty, and the following speech by a native merchant sufficiently conveys the national feeling:—

Bambo Rungopal Ghose said, "Gentlemen, since I came into the room I have been requested to second the resolution which you have just heard read. I consider it a privilege and an honor to have been requested do so. I feel that I am in a somewhat false position, inasmuch as I see around me many of higher rank and of greater influence among my countrymen, who would have more worthily and ably represented the native community on the important occasion, than I can pretend to do. But at the same time, my intercourse in life has been so much with Englishmen, and I know so much of the vast resources, the great power, and the great goodness of the English people, that I do not think myself altogether incompetent to offer an opinion on these points (Cheers). If I had power and influence, I would proclaim through the length and breadth of this land—from the Himalays to Cape Comorin—from Beramapeotra to the Bay of Cambay,—that never were the natives more grievously mistaken than they have been, in adopting the action foisted upon them by designing and ambitious men that their religion was at stake—for that notion I believe to have been at the root of the late rebellion (Cheers).—They do not understand the English character (hear, hear), they do not understand the generosity, the benevolence of the governing power,—the even-handed justice with which that power is willing and anxious always to do that which is right between man and man, without any reference whatever to the fact whether the men hold to the governing or the governed class (Loud Cheers). If all this were known, where would be the rebellion in this land? Certainly there would have been no such outbreak as that which recently shook the foundations of this Empire. The only remedy is education. Nothing has distressed me more, among the late acts of Government, than the positive prohibition against incurring any expense on the score of education (Hear, hear). Lord Wm. Bentinck, a name which must ever be remembered with reverence, in his reply to the address which we presented to him on the occasion of his departure from India, said, after enumerating all the evils, all the oppressions all the grievances under which India labors, that the first remedy was education,—that the second remedy was education—that the third remedy was education (Cheer-). Bube came round to the point. I read the proclamation of her Majesty with very great pleasure—with awakened feeling—and with tears when I came to the last paragraph (Cheer-). A nobler production it has not been my lot ever to have met with in my life. The justest, the broadest principles are enumerated therein. Humanity, mercy, justice breathe through every line, and we ought all to welcome it with the highest hope and the liveliest gratitude (Cheer-). Depend upon it, when our Sovereign Queen tell us, 'In your prosperity is our strength, in your contentment is our security, and in your gratitude our best reward,' the future of India is full of encouragement and hope to her children (Cheer-). What could have been nobler or more beautiful—what could have better dignified even the tongue of a Queen, than language such as that? Let us kneel down before her with every feeling of loyalty: let us welcome the new reign with the warmest sentiment of gratitude—the deepest feeling of devotion." (Cheers.

"Genuineness of Asiatic feeling is always a problem, but I have little doubt it is in this instance sincere. The people understood an Empress and did not understand the Company. Moreover, they have a very decided notion that the Queen has hung the Company for offences which must have been great, and that fact gives them hope of future justice. Lastly,—I am speaking of the masses, and repeating actual opinions uttered in my hearing,—they think her Majesty incorruptably, and I am afraid a little ridiculously, honest for accepting her predecessor's debts. Immediately after the proclamation appeared a Gazette Extraordinary, announcing a change in the form of the promissory note, which completed native satisfaction.

"The effect of the amnesty will not be known just yet, and it is useless to predict. The prevalent idea, however, is that it will be accepted by all except a few who are too deeply compromised to believe the offer is offered in good faith. How far they will be able to influence their followers remains to be seen. As yet no surrenders have been reported, and the columns are advancing.—Brigadier Evans, with a brigade from Rohilcund, is nearly at Seetapore, which he is to occupy. Sir H. Grant is moving, but with a heavy baggage train, upon Behar. The rebels beaten in little skirmishes, but not as yet in any great engagement are preparing for fight, or flying across the Gogra, and my next letter will, I hope, announce the final advance of Brigadier Rowcroft, who, moving from south-east to north-east beyond the Gogra, will drive the rebels into the trap prepared for their extinction. Throughout Oude they appear to have lost heart, and scarcely wait to be attacked. They are brave enough—some of them, at least—but like some European troops, they need hope to make them fight well, and they shrank with something almost of cowardice from the immeasurable superiority of the Enfield.—That weapon has been worth an army.—The bare fact that its range is three times that of Brown Bess has given the Sepoys a sense of hopelessness which usually is produced only by actual defeat.

"In Central India, Tanti Topee, still alive and unsubdued, is reported to be moving towards the Deccan, whither according to our spies, he is always going the moment they lose the trace. A number of the servants of his ally, the Nawab of Banda, recently gave themselves up at Saugor, and gave a curious account of his position.—They say he has plenty of treasure, which is true, and 15,000 regular soldiers which is false. He has, however, no ammunition and no guns, except a few rounds in the Sepoy's pouches, and has issued an order to his men not to fight if they can avoid it. The fugitives are cumbered with women, and perfectly aware that escape is hopeless and that they have only to keep on marching till they die or starve. The amnesty will, probably, give them the courage to disperse.

In Shahabad, also, the rebels are in full flight. It is quite useless repeating the incorrect or half correct reports of skirmishes which reach us here; but the general result is sufficiently intelligible. The rebels have been driven out of Shahabad towards the Rhotas hills. They have lost, chiefly from the terrible rapidity which they were pursued by Sir Henry Havelock, upwards of a thousand men, and are not only quarrelling but fighting among themselves. By the last official accounts Hurkissen Singh had been killed, and Umar Singh, the only leader of any real importance from his feudal authority, had fled. The remainder will, it is believed, try to reach Oude in two and threes. Messrs. Burn & Co., the railway contractors, have engaged to cut down the Jugdespore jungle, twenty three miles long by three broad, and have commenced the task. On entering it it was discovered that the rebels, with an imbecility they do not often display, had thrown up an earthen entrenchment some six miles round, which, when built, they had neither numbers to garrison nor hearts to stand by. The jungle was their true defence, and the axes of the railway men will soon clear that away. I scarcely think Omar Singh will return, and the campaign in Bahar may be considered over.

"It is believed that a decree will be issued disarming Behar, as Mr. Montgomery is disarming Oude. I told you in my last letter he had determined to carry out this policy at once and effectually, and the proclamation is stern enough.

"Nothing short of the most determined severity will induce the nobles to surrender their cannon, and cannon are wholly useless except for rebellion. There is more to be said for the swords while our police is so corrupt, and in practice I suspect that the edict will only be enforced vigorously against firearms. Swords do not matter much against the Enfield.

"The telegraph from Galle to Madras, through the submarine cable across the straits of Manaar, is now open to the public. A bit of the coast line between Madras and Calcutta is still imperfect, the bamboo posts put up in extreme haste, and for a special purpose, having rotted away. The overland mail of the 9th October was, however signalled from Galle to Calcutta, via Bombay in 24 hours. The line from Kurrachee to Bombay is also complete, and there is not now an important city in India from which intelligence cannot be flashed to Calcutta in 12 hours. If you remember that India is as large as Europe, Russia included, that the entire country is within the range of the tornados; that our lines are all above ground; that we have just regained the North West; and that the first idea of a mutineer is to cut the wire which conveys the 'lightening mail,' you will appreciate the energy and services of the department. All is now ready for the Red Sea telegraph, which is watched with extreme interest, notwithstanding a very general though vague notion that it will prove an infernal nuisance.' Indian merchants are too speculative altogether to appreciate certainty, while Indian statesmen abominate the idea of being puppets pulled by a wire.

"The Parliamentary return of our revenue has been, of course, for months in your hands. I may notice, however, that it bears out the conclusion I reported to you three months ago. The deficit for 1857 58 is stated there at £9,500,000. That of 1858 59 will be larger; for, though the million-and-a-quarter stolen by the mutineers will not recur, there is a huge addendum to be made in the shape of the cost of new levies. Add the value of Government property destroyed which must be replaced, the claims for compensation, and the cost of refilling the arsenals, and you have a loss of at least £25,000,000, sterling in the two years. There is then the old deficit of 1857, £2,000,000, and the cost of 45 additional regiments of Europeans. No mode of calculation will reduce the deficit below £9,000,000 a-year, to be met out of a revenue as yet unknown. This, and a reorganization, will be the primary difficulty for Lord Stanley to meet, and if he succeeds without crippling our military strength—that is, without putting the empire—he will have well earned the right to be considered the first of modern Indian statesmen. On this side of India he is already trusted as no President since Dundas has been."

MUTINY ON BOARD A CONVICT SHIP.—The Bermuda Gazette gives the following particulars of an attempted mutiny on board a convict ship which had arrived at the place:—Wednesday last, considerable alarm prevailed in the colony by the information that the Convict Ship True Briton had arrived in a state of almost open mutiny. The most prompt and vigorous measures were taken by His Excellency the Governor to tranquilize the public mind by the summary trial and punishment of the ring-leaders, 12 of whom, upon the evidence of the Surgeon and military guard, were severely flogged on deck in the presence of their companions. It appears that before the Ship had been many days at Sea, a daring conspiracy was formed to break into the magazine, and after surprising the Guard to try and seize the ship. They had managed to cut through the bulk heads and flooring, so as to effect an entrance into the hold, when they were fortunately detected by the discovery that the spirit-room had been broken into during the night. The fact of their becoming intoxicated was no doubt the means of saving the ship. As soon as their intention was discovered, every precaution was taken on board, the cannonades on the Poop were kept loaded, and an attempt to cross the barricade was defeated by finding the Guard doubled and all on the alert.

The Cuba Question.

CAPTURE OF SLAVERS BY THE BRITISH.

NEW YORK, January 6.—The Washington correspondent of the Tribune says, the House committee on foreign affairs have now under consideration a proposition for purchasing Cuba, but the prospect for a favourable report is not very flattering.—It is understood that the committee on ways and means propose in their modification of the tariff, to transfer brandies and other liquors which now pay thirty per cent. to the fifty per cent. schedule. This single chance will add one million dollars to the revenue.

The administration has authorized the marshall of Kansas to offer a reward of $250 each for the capture of Montgomery or Brown, and to increase his posse to any number desired.

A letter from Havana states that the schooner Kate Ellen, formerly of Portland, and brig Rufus Sewell, formerly of New Orleans, have both been captured on the African coast by British cruizers.

Fire in Montreal.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH BURNED.

The Montreal Pilot of the 5th instant informs us that, one of the greatest, if not quite foremost of the architectural piles of our city, which but a few hours ago reared its stately head, like a secular oak, fitted to brave the storms of centuries, is now spread abroad on the earth, a shapeless mass of smoking ruins. That noble fane, the Catholic Church of St. James, virtually exists no more. The first outside signs of the consuming flame within manifested themselves soon after nine o'clock last night. About half-past nine an alarm was given, when a considerable body of firemen arrived, but all their attempts to reach the scene of combustion were fruitless, mainly owing to the dense smoke which all but filled the whole interior, blinding the vision, and preventing the respiration of every one who attempted to approach. There was, therefore, nothing for it then, but to play at random on remoter parts of the ground floor, whence the clouds of smoke proceeded; and, for a short time, this seemed to be done with good effect, but at length the flames, hitherto confined, it is supposed, to the substructure of the edifice, burst through a central opening, into the grand area, in so furious a manner, that all further attempts to control the conflagration became utterly vain. Before midnight, the destruction of the stately "Bishop's Church" (popularly, but erroneously so called,) was all but complete. Our readers may remember that it stands, or rather stood, in St. Denis street, on the site of a pre-existing building, of the same appellation, which was consumed in the great fire of 1852; and that it was not considered to be completed so as to be fit for public use, till within the last few months. The pecuniary loss incurred by this deplorable event, is very great, as we are informed, upon official authority, that the building and fittings cost £22,000, and that the money value of the property deposited in the sacristy, and used in the services, including sacramental plate, vestments, &c., —not a particle of what was combustible being saved—may be fairly estimated at £2,500 more. Only £6,000 of insurance, effected with the London and Liverpool Company, partially covers all this loss. So far as can be ascertained, or rather guessed at as probable, the fire originated in the heating stoves, seated in the basement of the church; but whether its spreading was due to mal-construction of the apparatus, or the carelessness of those whose duty it was to attend it, remains to be looked into, as assuredly it will be.

LOUISVILLE, January 6.—Twelve Buildings in Memphis-street, between Adams and Washington streets, were burned yesterday. Loss nearly $300,000. Forsyth & Jamieson and Sturges & Son are among the losers. Several persons were injured by the falling walls.

WASHINGTON, January 6.—It appears from documents which have been communicated to the House in response to a resolution that a correspondence between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Collector at Mobile, has been in progress since April last, in relation to the Wanderer distributers. In response to the Collector's inquiry as to what should be done with the returned shipwrecked distributers, the Secretary telegraphed on the fourth instant, that the principals should be prosecuted, and desired the Collector to furnish him a list of those who arrived in the British vessel. The Secretary of the Navy also transmitted copies of the instructions given to Commodore Melancton. He was directed not to seize any vessel or act on mere suspicion. He is commanded not to interfere on land or on any harbour for the purpose of arresting any filibustering expeditions.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

(From the Times.)

Electric communication with the New World is an object not likely to be abandoned. A year or two ago it was joined with aerial travelling and self-supporting combustion in the sneers of the practical; now it is at least a possibility. A message has been sent to the New World and an answer received within two hours and a half. Although for the moment disappointment has produced a kind of stupor, yet it cannot be doubted that we will soon have an attempt to renew the enterprise. It is said that the Atlantic Telegraph Company is about to apply for a further subsidy, and to endeavour to sink another cable in the course of next year. The advantages of this route, if we may call it so, are obvious. It joins Ireland with Newfoundland, the wires from Trinity Bay are carried directly to the United States territory, and in half an hour from the despatch of news from Valentia it might be known, not only in New York, but in New Orleans, Chicago, or even further West, in the new cities of Minnesota. The direct line between the two great civilized continents, Europe and North America, must always have the preference, the only question being the possibility of laying and preserving the cable in one long length and through such vast depths.

In the meantime another project not less ambitious has just been laid before the public. We had long since heard of a scheme for crossing the Atlantic by a wire stretching from Caithness to Orkney and Shetland, thence to Iceland and Greenland, and so Southwards along the frozen coasts of Labrador. But the Company of which we speak have adopted, not the Northern, but the Southern route. They propose to reach the United States by a line sunk between the African Coast and Pernambuco, in Brazil. Were this line intended only for communication with the United States and Canada the projectors would certainly have much difficulty in bringing sensible men to adopt their circuitous course, which involves a great many thousand miles of wire and a multitude of repeating stations. But their own notion is to make communication with Brazil and the West Indies and the African coast their principal object, the transmission of intelligence to the States being incidental or supplementary. However this may be, here is their proposal:—The line would start from Falmouth, and "touching at Cape Finisterre, Lisbon, Cape St. Vincent (with a branch to Cadiz and Gibraltar), the Canaries (with a branch to Madeira), the Cape de Verde Islands, and the Islands of St. Paul and Noronha, it will arrive at or near Pernambuco, in the Brazils. A land telegraph will continue this line through the Brazilian Territory as far as Para, whence a submarine line will be carried to the British settlement of Demarara, in Guiana. From here a combination of land and submarine wires will be constructed through the principal West Indian Islands to New Orleans in the United States, where it will join the network of existing telegraphs belonging to the American companies." The line would run up the Brazil and Guiana coasts, across to Trinidad, pass along the semicircle of Islands to Porto Rico, thence to Cuba, and across the Gulf to New Orleans. The character of the project may be understood from this sketch, which requires no amplification of ours. We cannot agree with the prospectus, "it offers probably the most efficacious and practical method of opening telegraphic correspondence with the United States of America," for a telegraphic line of 9,000 miles to New York would certainly be a most unwieldy instrument of communication. Telegraphic communication with the African Coast, Brazil, and the West Indies, not to speak of the Pacific Provinces of South America, would, however, be insured by such an enterprise as the one we are discussing, and, should the traffic of these countries be of sufficient importance to warrant the investment of the required capital, the scheme would have a solid basis. This, of course, is a question for the future shareholders.

The scientific details we are unable to discuss. Of course the great recommendation is, that nowhere is there any space to be traversed equal to the distances between Valentia and Trinity Bay. The longest cable, that between Cape de Verde Islands and St. Paul, would be, we are told, only 890 nautical miles. It must, however, be remembered that these Islands rise up in mid-Atlantic precipitously from vast depths; and that the danger of a break in the cable is not to be measured solely by its length. It is also urged in favour of the new scheme that the decreased length of the cable will allow stronger and more frequent currents to be sent through it. The risk also will be less, inasmuch as a break at any point need not cause the abandonment of so great a portion of the cable. This, then, is one of the schemes which have followed the first attempt to lay a telegraph between the two worlds. We notice it because there is reason to suppose that in a year or two there will be plans afloat for electric communication with pretty nearly every region of the earth. The Red Sea cable is in process of manufacture, and within a twelvemonth we will probably be in daily communication with India. The Atlantic Company will soon be in the field again, while Companies for telegraphs to China and Australia are already at being.

It is for the Government to decide how far it will assist these schemes. Our ques opinion a fatal check. We wish [illegible] graphic communication all success, and shall [illegible] and therefore [illegible] of Great Britain [illegible] correspond [illegible] Bay on [illegible] [illegible] ago we [illegible] supply to the [illegible] enterprise based on the principles of Free Trade. If a cable is wanted across sea or [illegible] let any company [illegible] English, French, or American shall [illegible] the money to lay it and to receive the profits that arise. No national interest should [illegible] the public of Europe invested in such schemes of cosmopolitan usefulness. But to a great system of guarantees and subsidies, we decidedly object. There is, indeed, one exception. The telegraph to India is a matter of Imperial policy. That vast and distant province is inhabited by millions of suspicious and unexpected Asiatics, and at any moment political disturbances may demand the attention of the Home Government. Not far from 100,000 European troops are now employed within its limits, a host of civil servants are continually requiring advice or orders, there are continually Governors or Generals in doubt or danger. In such a case, and on grounds merely of public policy, the Government may, without passing beyond its proper functions, guarantee a system of communication. But telegraphs abroad from everywhere ought not to be made at the responsibility of Government. If sub-oceanic communication be feasible, companies for the construction of lines will find shareholders without the assistance of the States. If the communities interested are not confident enough in the success of a scheme to take up the shares, it had better be abandoned. Government interference will only create monopolies and hinder the development of the science. To give a Company an exclusive right to telegraph the news between two countries, guaranteeing them a good per centage, and we may bid farewell to progress in rapidity, accuracy and cheapness. We trust that neither of the two schemes for communicating with the New World will receive further help from Government.—The Atlantic Company have already had State assistance, in the value of, perhaps, £100,000; it has also a large guaranteed income from the Governments on both sides of the Atlantic so long as its line is in working order. This may be defended on the ground of the originality and risk of the undertaking; but no guarantee upon the capital of the Company should be granted. The best kind of cable, the best paying one therefore, and the proper method of using it, will soon be determined, and then the construction of a line will be merely a matter of ordinary calculation. There will be no more reason for the State to guarantee its capital than when a Lancashire cotton spinner builds a new mill. By the policy of subsidies and guarantees we shall only raise the public expenditure, while we change the ground of telegraphic enterprise from health and vigour into a state of lethargic feebleness.

Government Arrests in Ireland

On Sunday, the 12th, considerable excitement was caused by the general report that a Ribbon Lodge had been captured at Belfast. The facts are as follows:—At 6 o'clock, a party of police, fully armed, surrounded a public house in Coromac street, kept by a woman named McKee, and arrested some 15 persons who were there assembled, on the charge of being members of an illegal society. The prisoners were immediately marched to the police-office, where Mr. Tracey, resident magistrate, and the inspector and sub-inspector of constabulary were in attendance. The committal was made out, and the men were immediately marched off under a strong escort, and lodged in the County of Antrim gaol. The men who were arrested are believed to be all Roman Catholics, and, of course, the report goes that they were members of a Ribbon Lodge. They are of the class of working men, and of ages ranging from mere lads to gray-haired men. Mr. Wm. Sharman Crawford in a letter to the Times attributes the instigation to Ribbonism to the land system of Ireland, the land laws by which this system is maintained, and the consequence resulting therefrom.

We have already published a telegram announcing the arrest of fifteen members of a secret society, having for its object the invasion of Ireland by American fillibusters. The prisoners, three of whom are attorney's clerks, and the rest rather respectable, are charged with being members of an illegal secret society, and with illegal drilling with fire-arms, pikes, and other weapons. There are a great many other persons accused of being members of the same society. On Saturday, the 11th, the police, acting upon information supposed to have been supplied by the same approver who gave evidence upon which the arrests were made at Skibbereen and Bantry, apprehended nine persons in Kenmare, on the charge of being members of the Phœnix Association. They are young men of the respectable class, such as clerks, shopkeepers' assistants, &c.—Two parties against whom warrants have been issued, managed to make their escape. The prisoners were duly dispatched to Tralee, under a strong escort of police, for committal. On Saturday evening, Mr. Laurence O'Sullivan, assistant to Mr. Richard Linnegan, apothecary, Killarney, was arrested on a warrant charging him with being a member of a secret society called the Phœnix Club. At a subsequent period of the night the following arrests were made:—Patrick Cronin, assistant to Mr. John Martin, grocer; Daniel Murphy, assistant to Mr. John Martin, grocer; Daniel Murphy, assistant to Mr. Coglin, grocer; and Joseph Murphy, assistant to Mr. Lewis. The above were all about 20 years of age.

A Cork paper in noticing the recent apprehension of members of the Phœnix Club, amounting altogether to 60 persons, says that "treason was carried much further than any one not engaged in it suspected." It seems there have been nightly and daily drillings, pikes have been manufactured, arms have been landed from America, and the use of them has been taught. The very day after the arrests, however, a party of about 60 men were observed in a field near Durrus. As a person approached in his gig they lay down, but when he had passed, and was supposed not to be observing them, they resumed the attitude out of which they have been frightened, and went on with their manœuvres. A rumour prevails that it is the intention of the Government to issue a special commission for the immediate trial of the suspected parties.

The Belfast Mercury, in speaking of the Phœnix Club, says:—"There is little doubt that the organization is entirely seditious, and made up of the very dregs of Young Irelandism. It is perfectly ridiculous to attach any importance to the secret and criminal associations of such elements. To endeavour to magnify the incoherent schemes of a few madmen into a formidable conspiracy, is a rank absurdity. The club was preparing to receive with open arms the regiment of American militia which we lately heard so much about as coming to Ireland to see once more their native land. This was the ostensible object for such an unprecedented visit from the American militia; but, coupling their intention to come, with the fact of an illegal society being established in Ireland to receive them, it is evident to us that they only wished to 'feel their way.' Colonel Ryan was to command them, and their stay in Ireland was to be something about six weeks.—During that time they were to encamp [that was the military work employed] in the south and in the north. Great things were no doubt expected from these Yankee invaders, who would have endeavoured to spread an amount of disaffection and disloyalty as possible in the breasts of the ignorant people who would have flocked around them. In fact, there cannot be a doubt of the object of their intended visit, and the result now proves it. The British Government at last have very properly put a stop to their coming, and since they have been stopped, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has issued a proclamation against illegal societies, and the recent arrests of the members of the Phœnix Club have closely followed the proclamation."

Brutal Murder in Hamilton.

THE MURDERER CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

The Inquest.—Verdict of Wilful Murder Returned.

On Saturday one of the most deliberate and cold-blooded murders which it has ever been our lot to record was perpetrated in Hamilton. The victim is a woman named Eliza Welsh, said to belong to Toronto, and the murderer is a man named John Meagham, or Mitchell, who passed as her husband. The murderer, for so we must term him, has lately been employed in the vicinity of this city in the capacity of a railway labourer. The facts of the awful tragedy, so far as our reporter could learn on the spot shortly after the fearful occurrence took place, are as follows:—It appears that Mitchell left on the afternoon of Thursday by the train for Hamilton, accompanied by the woman Welsh, with whom he cohabited, and an infant about 3 months old. On reaching Hamilton, they proceeded to a small tavern, situated on the north side of York street, between Bay and Park street, kept by a person named Morden. The unfortunate woman told the landlady of the saloon that her husband's name was Meagham, and that he was on his way to work on the Hamilton and Port Dover Railroad. As the parties presented the usual poor appearance of labouring persons out of work, they were in consequence not treated as very welcome guests. They stayed, however, at the house, paying for their bed and providing themselves with food, and whatever else they were in want of in the best way they could, until Saturday morning. Between nine and ten o'clock on that morning the wife came down stairs, and, procuring some tea, she returned to the bed-room, where she had left the man who called her wife. She had hardly entered the room, when the landlady of the saloon, Mrs. Morden, was startled by a loud scream from the bed-room. She immediately rushed up stairs to learn the cause, when she was horror-struck at seeing the unfortunate woman lying on the floor in a pool of blood, and struggling with the man, who was holding her down to the floor. Upon seeing Mrs. Morden enter the room, the woman endeavoured to call out, and tried to speak to her; but the only word which could be distinctly heard by the landlady were "Neighbors!" and "Murder!" and almost immediately afterwards she expired. The words were evidently meant to signify that she had been murdered, and to get assistance from the neighbours. Mrs. Morden also states that when she opened the door of the room, the murderer was still busily engaged doing something to the throat of the woman; but that she (Mrs. Morden) was so much frightened and excited by the fearful scene which met her eye, as to be unable to see what he really was doing. She instantly gave the alarm, and a large number of persons, accompanied by the police, were soon in the house, and Mitchell was taken into custody. It is reported that a servant girl belonging to the tavern accompanied Mrs. Morden to the bed-room, when they heard the screaming, and that deceased informed the girl that it was her husband who had done the deed. Mrs. Morden also states that when Mitchell was discovered, he commenced to inform her that his wife had committed suicide; but that the woman, who could not speak from want of blood, held up one of her hands, which was badly cut as if to contradict his statement. On a search being made for the weapon with which the deed had been perpetrated, a razor, with marks of blood on it, was found in the bed close by where the woman was lying, and the bed-clothes were thickly coated with blood, as were also the clothes of the man and the woman. The gash in the woman's neck is one of the most fearful character. It is very deep, and seems to extend over fully three-fourths of the surface of the neck, being from the back part of the head round under the chin.

Mitchell, on being taken into custody, was securely handcuffed by constable Montgomery, and taken to the lock-up to await the result of the CORONER'S INQUEST.

Coroner Roseborough, assisted by Coroner Bull held an inquest on the body of the unfortunate woman in the afternoon. The prisoner gave his name as John Mitchell, which he said was his right name, that of Meagham being a patronymic by which he was better known. He also stated that the name of deceased was Eliza Welsh. She was not married to him, but had lived with him as his wife for a length of time. She must have been somewhat older than the prisoner, who gives his age at twenty-seven, but he has the appearance of a man thirty-four years of age. He is a very dark complexioned, thick-set man, about five feet six inches high, and of a very repulsive appearance. He was quite cool and unconcerned as if nothing particular had happened, and seeming not at all inconvenienced by the handcuffs with which constable Montgomery who made the arrest, had provided him.

Two witnesses swore to the fact, that the woman told them before she died, that Mitchell had murdered her. In corroboration of this she had a desperate cut on the right hand, between the thumb and forefinger, which was of itself pretty strong proof that she had not committed the act herself.

The Coroner having concluded his charge the jury, after a short consultation, returned a unanimous verdict of wilful murder against John Mitchell.

The prisoner says, that the woman cut her own throat, on being told that they could not lodge at the house any longer.—They had some words, he said, before she did it; but all the circumstances, as well as the positive evidence of eye-witnesses, and the dying declaration of the woman herself, are in direct contradiction of his statement. It appeared from the evidence of the witnesses at the inquest, that the parties were both sober at the time the murder was perpetrated. After the jury brought in their verdict, Mitchell was taken in the County jail on the Coroner's warrant, where he stands committed for trial at the next assizes on a charge of wilful murder.—Globe.

The Irish Conspiracy.

THE ARRESTS IN THE SOUTH.

From the Times' Correspondent.

The arrest at Skibereen and Bantry of 15 persons charged with being members of an illegal society has created some excitement here, although the event could not have been altogether unexpected, inasmuch as so far back as the end of October the existence of unlawful associations in the west of Cork and part of Kerry was distinctly announced in some of the respectable Dublin journals. Indeed, the fact was made plain in the celebrated correspondence between the editor of the Nation and Mr. Smith O'Brien and it is now said that from that time the Government have not been inactive, a close watch having been kept upon the parties on whom strong suspicion rested of complicity with the foolish conspiracy which has thus prematurely exploded. The following particulars of the capture of the 15 very green Nationalists are taken from the Cork Examiner of yesterday:—

"BANTRY, Tuesday Night, Dec. 7.

"The truth of your judicious and truly excellent articles on the results of secret organizations has been fully and plainly illustrated to-night in this peaceable little town by the unexpected arrest of three respectable young men—boys I should rather say, as the oldest cannot have attained his 20th year. They have been arrested on sworn informations made, it would appear by some fellow who is at present in safe keeping in Cork. The parties arrested are Messrs. Dennis Sullivan, Jeremiah Cullinane and Timothy M'Carthy, all members of respectable families of the town, who have been thrown into a state of the greatest terror and affliction by a proceeding so summary and unexpected. Report is that 14 other arrests of a similar nature were to-day made in Skibereen also. Reappears that all will be removed early to-morrow to Cork to undergo examination there in the course of a week, before some tribunal or authorities constituted for this special purpose. It is said they will be detained in Cork Gaol (bail being refused) until the assizes. It is to be hoped that the suddenness and unpreparedness of the measures adopted will not be unfairly availed of to their prejudice, by depriving them of the advantage of competent legal assistance. Of their guilt their nearest friends, it appears are unaware, and utterly disbelieve that they have in aught committed themselves in any manner to justify those proceedings.

SKIBBEREN, December 8.

Our town this morning presented an unusual appearance indeed. Numbers of our respectable townsmen and women might be seen with hurried steps and palpitating hearts running to the police-barracks, several arrests have been made during the night; 12 were arrested in their beds—all respectable—though misguided young men. They have been forwarded on three coaches to Cork gaol, under a large police force commanded by Sub-Inspector Potter.—They were arrested on warrants signed by Mr. Fitem Maurice, R. M., on oath appears, an information sworn by a man named Sullivan, from Kenmare, son to a person, it is said, in W. S. Trench's employment, and sent specially to become a member of the society to enable him to betray his associates. As far as I can learn, the parties arrested are Dan M'Carthy, jun., Jeremiah Donovan (Rossa,) John Stack, jun., M. Moynahane, Patrick Downing, Eugene M'Carthy, M. Downing, Jeremiah Driscoll, John Shea, and others whose names I did not learn. Immense crowds gathered round the coaches as they left, and strangely enough, they were loudly cheered by the people, men and women, until out of sight, the prisoners themselves joining in the cheers. No one here believed in any serious conspiracy nor do many yet. Your articles on the subject was very good. There is a further examination of the prisoners in Cork on the 14th.

A despatch, dated from Belfast last night, supplies later particulars. The writer says, "The number of persons now in prison charged with being members of an illegal society is 17, one having been arrested late on Saturday night in his own house. I understand that the information which applied to the lodge meeting in widow M'Kay's public-house, included the names of two other persons who have not yet been taken into custody, and the police are supposed not to be unaware of members of other lodges meeting in the neighbourhood of Smithfield and the Pound. The greatest excitement prevailed in these districts when it became known that arrests had been made, and the more so, as the precision with which the police acted in making the arrest, leads almost irresistibly to the conclusion that the informer must have been an active member, when he could take not only the names of those who would be present, but also their residences. The prisoners all lived within a few minutes' walk of the public-house in which they held their Sunday evenings' assembly, and it is therefore presumed that the lodge, whose deliberations were so unceremoniously interrupted is but one of several with which we are favoured in the 'Northern Athens.' The most absurd rumours are in circulation regarding the affair, but most of them are unworthy of notice. It is a remarkable fact, however, that both here and in Skibbereen lawyers' clerks were found to be most deeply implicated. I am informed that one of the Roman Catholic priests warned the people in St. Malachi's Chapel, on Sunday evening, after the arrests were made, against having anything to do with such illegal societies. It is almost impossible to believe that a society with ramifications so extensive, as the information could exist unknown to the priests; but, in this town at least, they never hinted at it till it was no longer a mystery. If they be in earnest, such combinations cannot exist contrary to their permission. At the police-court this morning, Mr. Tracy, resident magistrate, who made out the committals, mentioned that a great deal of the crime of Belfast was to be attributed to drink, and that this was the cause of the trouble into which so many people had got on the previous night, and out of which they were not likely to get in haste. No further examination has yet taken place that I am aware of."

There are some curious revelations in yesterday's Cork Constitution respecting the arrest of the Clubbists in the southern districts. According to the Cork paper, "the treason was carried much farther than any one not engaged in it suspected." And further:—

"There have been nightly and daily drillings, pikes have been manufactured, arms have been imported, and the use of them has been taught. All this was not for nothing, and Government was not a minute too early in interfering; but it did wisely in waiting until satisfactory evidence was obtained. The very day after the arrests, however, a party of about 60 men were observed in a field near Durrus. As a person approached in his gig they lay down; but when he had passed, and was supposed not to be observing them, they resumed the attitude out of which they had been frightened, and went on with their manœuvres.—If rumour be correct, shopmen in Bantry and Skibbereen are not the only shopmen who were aware of what was going on, and people who until Thursday last supposed themselves safe, feel very uncomfortable in the prospect of disclosures that may affect them. A hundred militia left yesterday for Bantry, and a party of militia or of military will, for the present, be distributed through the west of the county. But why should this arrangement be temporary?

Would it not be well for the magistrates to memorialise for the permanent location of a military force? Except at Kinsale, there is not a soldier in that vast tract of country. The police are few, and the Coastguard fewer. And, see the consequences! Arms have, we understand, been securely landed from America, and a few weeks ago a vessel, it is stated, ran into Dunmanway Bay and landed a Cargo of tobacco, which was carried off and the ultimate destination of it has not we believe, been ascertained. We cannot blame either Coastguard or Police for this; for they are too few in number and too far apart for the duty to be done. Now, however, that preparations for an insurrection have shown Government how little appearances are to be relied on in Ireland, and that they find a portion of the population in treasonous correspondence with brother disaffectionists in America, the country ought not to be left dependent on so feeble a protection."

The Cork Reporter, of yesterday, contains the following intelligence. The visit of Sir Mathew Barrington is believed to be significant as confirmatory of the rumoured intention of the Government to issue a special commission for the immediate trial of the suspected parties:—

"Sir Matthew Barrington, Crown Solicitor, arrived from Dublin yesterday, by the first P. M. train and proceeded at once accompanied by the Mayor, to the Tuckey-street police-station, where they remained for a considerable time in consultation with Mr. Brownigg, the new sub inspector, and Mr. Humphreys, petty sessions clerk. It is our, of course, is busy with its thousand tongues, and we hear of intended arrests in Cork—nothing more, perhaps, than an inference from the movements we have just chronicled. We understand that it is in contemplation to hold a magisterial inquiry this day into the conduct of the alleged members of the Phœnix Club, who have been lately arrested and imprisoned. As yet, we have been unable to ascertain whether the investigation is to be public or private. So much public anxiety has been excited, and so many conflicting rumours are in circulation, that we sincerely hope the authorities will decide upon the expediency of holding a public inquiry. We have been informed that Mr. M'Carthy Downing has arrived in town in order to conduct the prisoners' defence."

At the tail of this statement, the Reporter this announces what it calls, "Warlike Preparations against the Fillbusters in the West:—

"A large detachment of the Staffordshire Militia, about 120 men, will proceed from Cork this day to occupy the temporary barrack recently hired at Bantry. We understand the army contractors for provisions have been notified to be ready with large supplies for the western towns upon the shortest notice. The artillery at Ballincollig are held in preparation for movement, should necessity arise, at an hour's warning."

Good News From Fraser River.

The correspondent of the New York Times at the gold diggings writes as follows:—

Victoria, Nov. 15, 1858.

The oft-quoted maxim that "When matters are at the worst they will mend," has been singularly verified in this region by recent experience. A month ago the crowds of miners who rushed hither on their way to California, driven from Fraser's River by the discovery that all the claims on that stream did not become richer as the water receded, sent our thermometer of popular feeling down to zero, and all was despondency. Even the few who based hopes of a "reaction" in the Spring on the fact that many of those returning had been comparatively successful, and that nearly all assigned as a reason for leaving dread of apprehended rigorous Winter weather, were damped in their ardor by the general depression. It was, therefore, matter of surprise to all when a steamer arrived from Fort Hope, some three weeks since, with large orders for goods, an event which had been followed up by similar ones to the present time.

Simultaneously with the improved business prospects comes encouraging accounts from the diggings. It now appears that all the banks and beaches of the river between Forts Hope and Yale will pay well in sluice mining, and it is a matter of extreme surprise that so many Californians should have idled away months last summer without digging deep enough to discover this fact. Now ditches are being dug, shafts sunk and the town of Fort Yale itself staked off into mining claims.

From the Upper Fraser (now that the Lillooet trail is through) accounts are also encouraging. The road-cutting party has been settled with by the Government on terms much more liberal than were called for by the original agreement, and most of them have gone to work in the vicinity of Bridge River, where they intend to stop through the Winter. As that vicinity is comparatively an open country a rigorous Winter is not apprehended, and those who should know assert that the Lillooet trail will be passable all through the winter season. When it is taken into account that those on the river below its junction with Thompson are paying at the rate of a dollar a pound for provisions, (supplied by the river route via Fort Yale,) and that higher up, the miners who receive their provisions by the Lillooet route, will be compelled to pay sixty to seventy cents per pound for provisions all through the winter, it cannot but be conceded that the diggings which will support men under such circumstances, and afford them sufficient extra inducement to continue at work, must be good.

But these diggings are bank diggings, and although affording more regular and extended operations than the river bars, they do not come up to the extravagant accounts which reached California in May last, for this reason: In January, February, and March, the river is at the lowest stage, and the bed-rock can be reached—a point which none of the new-comers have attained. Last winter many Oregonians spent months on the Fraser, packing through their provisions from the Dalles. Most of these returned to Oregon in June, and did not intend to revisit the Fraser till the season for good river diggings should return again. Thus it will be seen that the diggings upon which the original accounts were based have not been worked by any of the new-comers who reached Fraser's River after the first of last June. Recent discoveries, though less extravagant than the first accounts in point of richness, are much more promising for the country, as they show an extent of the gold fields not hitherto suspected, and establish an analogy between British Columbia and California in every respect, except the quartz lodes, few of which have as yet been found in the former region, though individuals who have been through the country north of the Fraser, and traversed the rivers emptying into the Gulf of Georgia in that vicinity, assert that region to be rich in auriferous rock and coarse gold. This is a point which next year, when the Hudson Bay Company has no longer the power to prevent traders from following and supplying prospecting miners, will be decided.

I send you herewith copies of the proclamation shortly to be issued in British Columbia, providing for the government of that region. The indemnification document is a curious paper, and worthy the attention of persons interested in noting the difference between republican and monarchical institutions.

I should have mentioned above that our market is now bare of many articles in great demand, and large quantities of which were re-shipped to San Francisco less than a month ago. To show the character of the panic that prevailed here, I may mention that large quantities of bacon (worth thirty-five cents per pound here now) were sent to Columbia River at that time—action equivalent to the proverbial absurdity of sending coals to Newcastle. This scarcity would soon be followed by a glut were it not for the fact that at this season the coast is very dangerous for small sailing vessels, and orders must be supplied from San Francisco by steamers; which mode, being expensive as a matter of freight, and limited in carrying capacity, will not be likely to accumulate over-stocks before Spring.

After several weeks of "busy preparation" the American residents of this town gave Mr. John Nugent a dinner a few nights since. I inclose you a copy of the proceedings, as well as the document which the "Special Agent" has addressed to Americans sojourning in this colony. The latter is a fine specimen of Buncombe composition.

The British Minister at Washington.

An erroneous report received by telegraph from Halifax, was published in the daily papers of Saturday, to the effect that Lord Napier was to be succeeded by Lord Dunfermline as British Minister. The despatch said Lord Abercrombie; but as the present Lord Abercrombie is a minor, it was supposed that Lord Dunfermline, late Mr. Abercrombie, the British Ambassador at the Hague, was the person indicated. As Lord Napier is going to the Hague, the report of Lord Dunfermline coming here did not appear improbable, but it turns out to have been a mistake. Lord Lyons, as formerly stated, is to be the successor of Lord Napier, and his arrival is expected by an early mail.

In connection with this subject there has been quite a series of ludicrous statements, some of them ridiculous enough. The "English organ" in the first place gave its readers to understand that Lord Napier was going to Florence for the benefit of Lady Napier's health. It disclaimed, indeed, any authority for this statement, which it put forward only as a speculation, but then we know from our contemporary's manner that when he makes such a disclaimer he means to give his readers to understand, in a delicate, indirect way, that he is speaking under inspiration from the Embassy at Washington. Next it appeared that Lord Napier was going to Berlin, and that statement was followed by one, which now turns out to be correct, that his destination is the Hague. There have been as many conflicting reports regarding the cause of his Lordship's removal. From the other side we were told that it was on account of his alleged sympathy with the Monroe doctrine; from Washington we learned last week that it was because of an undue leaning to the Pro-Slavery party of the South. Both stories may be disregarded till we have some better foundation for either than can be discovered in his Lordship's past conduct, which we believe to have been in all respects discreet and impartial. His change to the Hague, probably, is only in accordance with diplomatic routine, and from considerations not in any way connected with the performance of his duties in this country otherwise than favourably. It is matter of general regret that Lord Napier is to leave so soon, for scarce any British Minister to Washington has ever earned such universal and cordial esteem both among Americans and his own countrymen.

There has been one thing in Lord Napier's conduct which it may not be out of place to notice in this connection, seeing we have referred to a contemporary who would fain be thought the organ of the British Embassy. Lord Napier has never given encouragement to the supposition that the British representative in this country has any organ for the expression of his opinions, least of all a journal that does not profess to be American. Any information which his Lordship has had to communicate has been handed to the agents for the leading daily papers, and one such piece of information was a very positive statement to the effect that the journal in question did not represent the views of the British Embassy. Yet our contemporary, notwithstanding this severe snubbing, continues to maintain an air of confidential knowledge, while disclaiming that he is a mere tool. A journal which assumes such airs seldom possesses the knowledge it pretends, and in the case of the Albion this is sufficiently manifested from the unbroken succession of blunders it has made on every question of importance that has arisen. We do not know whether to be most amused at the gross error it committed with reference to the "Outrages," which it defended in an authoritative manner as all right, simply carrying out the policy of suppressing the slave trade,—at its perplexed leaping from one side of the fence to the other, and then back again, in the matter of the Canadian "shuffle," winding up the other day with a promise to reconsider its views on the subject,—at its knowledge of the state of Lady Napier's health,—or at a laughable blunder into which it has just fallen, to the indignation rather than the amusement of its Provincial readers, the announcement that the Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's Forces in British America had offered a prize for the best snow-balling (!) when the well-known exercise of running on snow-shoes was the object which the Commander-in-Chief proposed to encourage. Our contemporary may flatter himself with the notion that people regard him as an "organ," but they only quiz him when they talk so. For ourselves, we never can think of the Albion except as "the organ," the idea is so funny, in connection with such extraordinary blunders as the above.—Scottish American Journal.

Mr. Sicotte, Chief Commissioner of the Board of Works in Canada, has resigned on account of differing in opinion from his two colleagues with reference to the Seat of Government question.

The North West Exploring Expedition.

Mr. Hind returned from his last exploring expedition to the North West territory about ten days ago, accompanied by Mr. Dickenson, engineer, Mr. John Fleming, surveyor, and Mr. Hime, artist. Mr. Hind was accompanied by Lord Campbell and Mr. Ashley as far as Chicago. Lord Grosvenor, a few days before the party left Red River, took a fancy to go on a buffalo hunt, and started off on horseback, with a half-breed guide, on a journey of several hundred miles, although the thermometer was below zero. The young gentleman's love of sport must be strong where he could leave his companions when they were about to return to civilization, to go off upon such an expedition.

Mr. Hind and his party thoroughly explored the neighbourhood of the Assiniboine and traversed the south branch of the Saskatchewan some hundreds of miles. He used canoes going one way and for the other took horses, by which he secured a more thorough knowledge of the country than the fur traders who travel by water entirely. The company's people have always reported the Saskatchewan as running through a sandy plain utterly unfit for cultivation. Mr. Hind's people almost filled the flasks of the river to be sandy, but say that five miles from it the land is even richer than on the Red River. The climate is much milder, and vegetation most luxuriant. From the accounts of the hunters, it would appear, however, from the slope of the land at the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains in the finest part of the territory. The snow is said never to lie deep there, snow shoes being unknown to the Indians, and it is a well timbered country. This is the locality, also, in which the coal beds exist. Mr. Hind did not penetrate so far, but he had undoubted proofs of their existence. At Fort Edmonton, and other western posts of the Company, they used the coal for their forges. It would appear from Mr. Hind's researches that the hopes of finding good coal on the Assiniboine have proved groundless. Lignite is found, but not in such quantities as to be found profitable. There is, however, over the whole country, sufficient wood for building and fuel during the first settlement of the country, and afterwards there are ample stores of timber to the north for which there are easy means of transportation to the prairies.

In the way of transportation it is believed that Mr. Hind's party made a discovery. They found that an affluent of the Assiniboine approached within a very short distance of the Saskatchewan. If the two streams could be joined, there would be a very great saving in distance. The only route previously explored was, by the lake, to the mouth of the Saskatchewan, and thence past the barrier of the falls, up the river. The northing and the southing would be saved, by the newly discovered route, since this branch of the Assiniboine runs almost due west from Red River. At the highest point at which Mr. Hind saw the Saskatchewan, it was half a mile broad and seven feet deep.

Some of the Indians who had guided Captain Palliser and his party over the Rocky Mountains, arrived at Red River just before Mr. Hind left. Capt. Palliser himself was to winter at Edmonton House, and resume his explorings in the spring. Two companies of Americans were in the territory on their way to Fraser River. They were ordinary emigrants, travelling with wagons drawn by oxen. They were not very well provided with food, and had suffered some hardships. They would probably winter at Carleton House. There is no doubt that they will be followed by numerous companies in the spring, the route being far superior to any other overland track yet discovered.

Mr. Hind and his party travelled by dog train from Fort Garry to Crow Wing, and made the transit in fifteen days. The reports of the expedition will be drawn up immediately and submitted to Parliament when it meets.—Toronto Globe.

A Bible Over 900 Years Old.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

THE articles which have lately appeared from time to time in the Free Press in regard to old bibles, have had the effect of bringing to our notice one of the rarest and most valuable specimens of biblical literature in the world. This is a volume of six hundred pages, containing the whole Bible in the Latin language. It belongs to the Rev. Dr. Duffield of this city. The book is made entirely of vellum, and the printing is all done by hand with a pen and ink.—Every letter is perfect in its shape, and cannot be distinguished by any imperfections in form, from the printed letters of the present day. The shape of the letters is of course different from those now in use, but in no other respect can they be distinguished from printed matter. The letter is about the same size as that in which this article is printed, which will give an idea of the difficulty of forming so perfect a work. The immense amount of labour may be conceived from the fact, that there are two columns on each page, each of which lacks only about six letters of being as wide as the columns of this paper. They will average sixty lines to the column—the columns numbering 1,200. We have about 72 000 lines in the whole book. Nothing short of a life-time would accomplish such a work.

The date of the book is A. D. 930. It was consequently made 500 years before printing was invented, and is 928 years old. There is probably nothing on this continent in the shape of a book equal to it in age.—The vellum upon which it is printed is of the finest kind, and is made of the skin of young lambs and kids, dressed and rubbed with pumice stone until it is very thin.—It is somewhat thicker than common paper, being a medium between that and the drawing-paper now in use. The fine veins in this paper are distinctly visible in many places. A pencil mark was drawn by the operator to guide the construction of each line. Many pages have these lines visible on their whole surface, no effort having been made to rub them out. Two lines, running up and down, divide the columns with mathematical accuracy. At the beginning of each chapter, highly colored ornamental letters are placed. These are the only marks of the division of chapters.—There are no sub-divisions into verses, the chapter running through one paragraph to the end, and no descriptive headings.

This invaluable relic was presented to Dr. Duffield by Lewis Cass, jun. our Minister resident at Rome. He procured it of a Greek monk, who brought it from the Greek Convent of St. Catharine, at the foot of Mount Sinai. Mr Cass befriended this monk, who was in trouble, and he, in return, presented him with the volume we have described. According to his story, it is the work of one of the ancient monk scribes in the convent above named.—When it became known that Mr Cass was parting with it, and that it was going out of the country, the round sum of $3,000 was offered him for it by the monks of the city of Rome. This was of course refused, for the pleasure of owning so invaluable a relic in the hands of one who can appreciate its value so well as our learned divine Dr. Duffield. At the time of the late fire at the Doctor's house, this book was thrown into the street among others, and came very near being lost. It was picked up on the side-walk by one who recognized it as one of Dr. Duffield's most valuable relics, and preserved it.

Quack, Quack, Quack.

From the New York Tribune.

Long before the days of Pancakes, unhappy Man, with his aches and his ills, and his general most delightful heritage of physical woe, was made the sore spoil and victim of quack-cadgers. Nor has the world, in this regard, very much improved since. A great many people who would at once detect any other quack, are thoroughly humbugged by the quack of pill or of potion. They give implicit credence to the gibberish of every medical mountebank, and it makes but little difference whether he be a fool who believes in his own medicines, or a knave who would not himself take them without strenuous resistance. The case of Bennett vs. Bennett is now pending in the courts of New Haven, from which the complainant seeks a divorce from the respondent, her husband, upon the ground of cruelty. The respondent is a manufacturer of pills, which are calculated for the region of the liver, but will answer for the adjoining parts. The complainant, in order to show that the Doctor was a notorious, consummate and most accomplished liar, put in a pamphlet put out by him; and it is to the unparalleled and really sublime mendacity of this Pill-pamphlet that we wish to call attention of Amateurs of Lying. In the course of this wonderful work, Dr. Bennett stated to an invalid public, and especially those who wept their childlessness, that he was at one time, without offspring, while the languishing health of Mrs. Bennett forbade him to indulge in the hope of paternity which would otherwise have gilded his waking hours and filled his sleep with rapturous dreams. But the Doctor is a man of tremendous science. He invented a pill of such power, force and virtue that, after taking it, Mrs. Bennett, in an incredibly short space of time, became the mother of "twelve blooming, healthy and interesting children." At the head of this passing and almost incredible narrative of truthfulness the Doctor placed a wooden cut, in which he was represented with a baby in his arms, and Mrs. Bennett was represented with a baby in her arms, while around his legs and her skirts, were gathered ten other children, making, we may be sure the prettiest work of art ever designed to illustrate the virtues of a pill. Divested of romance, the solemn truth was that, so far from taking the Doctor's medicine, the Doctor's wife, who knew too well what it was made of, and was in fact obliged to visit in making it, would as soon have swallowed henbane.

Having used up his wife by thus restoring her to health, the Doctor as he states in the pamphlet, next tackled his father.—He signs this little medicinal idol with great unction and pathos. He represents the elder Bennett, aged 95, in a woodcut, reading the Bible. He then narrates that the said senior Bennett, "a number of years ago was very sick." He was attended by "eight celebrated doctors night and day," and they for once the wonder is that he lived for twenty-four hours. The household is in despair. The dying man then delivers a speech, in which he states, that, although he had spent incredibly large sums in making Dr. Bennett jr., a doctor, yet that the vagrant practitioner was now in foreign lands, acquiring by personal observation, a knowledge of Indian Vegetable Remedies. "Tell him when he arrives," said the dying old Bennett, that I leave to his mother the sum of $2,000,000, together with all my vessels." He was taken with a shortness of breath; the neighbors were sent for, and praying was commenced, 'a rumbling noise' was heard in the street. 'Twas the youthful Bennett, M. D. A rumbling noise was heard in the distance, 'like a mighty chariot wending its way with great speed nearer and nearer, when all at once" [exquisite bull!] "a beautiful coach stood before the door, out of which alighted a noble and elegant looking man." This was young Doctor Bennett. He kissed his mamma, and she fainted. He rushed to the bed side of his dying papa. He hastened back to his coach, which was freighted with "plants and roots," such as are always used by the red men of the forest" when they feel unwell. Young Bennett gave old Bennett a root and an herb. Old Bennett began to feel better in just two hours. He kept up the doses. He kept the system regular. And the result was that the ancient person entirely recovered, and lived to be ninety-five, and the grandfather of young Doctor Bennett's twelve children.

The mystery to us is that such incredible nonsense as this should impose up anybody—even upon the poor people whose understandings are impaired by disease. That people are thus daily cheated, we are sorry to believe. But it is not of on that we have the chance of exposing such cruel knavery; and it is a ch nce which we have to the best of our ability improved.

The past and future of Mexico

From the London Times, Dec. 7.

When, some four centuries ago, the enterprise of Spanish navigators opened the vast continent of America to the admiration of Europe, the civilization of the New World was found to be concentrated in two spots, and two only, of that enormous territory. One of those favored regions was Peru; the other was Mexico. It was in Mexico especially that art, politics and science had received their greatest development. All the rest of North America, from the shore of Hudson's Bay to the mouth of the Mississippi, was desolate and barbarous, diversified only by swamp, forest, or prairie, and populated by savages without knowledge or laws. Mexico alone redeemed the character of the new continent and presented to the eyes of the invaders a spectacle so marvellous as to satisfy even the expectations which the great discovery had raised. There the Spaniards found an organized State, an ancient polity an opulent capital, an exalted dynasty, a formidable priesthood, and a people well skilled in mechanical and decorative arts. So great in fact was the proficiency of the workmen, so elaborate the system of government, and so impressive the whole evidence of wealth and grandeur, that for some time the civilization of Mexico was superior to that of Europe. Although, indeed, the researches of modern inquirers have enabled us to apply some corrective to these ideas, it is really probable that in certain respects the Spaniards found Mexico more advanced than Spain; and we have been recently assured, on the authority of a comprehensive history, that this assertion was the necessary incident of geographical and natural advantages. Such was the situation and configuration of Mexico that it could hardly fail to make progress; and all that was discovered there in the shape of national wealth or political order represented the extraordinary opportunities which nature had provided.

Such was the picture given of Mexico 300 years ago. Our foreign intelligence of yesterday gave us another sketch of the present; yet it exists at the moment, and it would be hard to imagine a contrast more surprising. There is probably no spot in the entire American continent, from the Arctic seas to Cape Horn, which presents such a spectacle of disorganization and [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] ordered than the Mexicans of [illegible] the old seat of American civilization there is now no government, no recognized polity, no order. Life and property are insecure, and through the [illegible] political revolution, or as the consequence of a [illegible] conspiracy, has prevailed permanently, from the utter inanity and break-up of all the institutions designed for their protection.

We cannot find in any European history—not even in that of Spain itself—any parallel or illustration of the present state of things in Mexico. The country is split into factions, but no faction has any principle, nor does it seem to be so much as anticipated that there is any party, or any leader of a party, by whom the anarchy or predominance the existing anarchy would be terminated. When in the year 1824, a Republican Government was definitely substituted for the dominion exercised by Spain, room was left for contests between Federalism and Centralization,

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Annual School Report—Wm. Clarton.
Annual Statement—Wm. Hall, A. Sawers.
Notice—J. Jobb Gilbert.
Patent Medicines—A. Hamilton.
Materials for Flowers—Sawers & Murray.
Cures—Murray.
Entertainments' Celebrated Remy—Sawers & Murray.
Abbott Register of Rural Affairs—Sawers & Murray.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, JANY 12th, 1859.

Meeting of Parliament.

Parliament is to meet on the 29th and it seems that a decision is immediately to be come to on the question of Ottawa as the future seat of government. The Ministry are understood to be prepared to stand or fall, according as the Queen's decision is accepted or rejected. The continued cry of disloyalty is still applied to all who refuse to approve of the choice of Ottawa. The Ministerialists pretend that the Queen herself has made the selection, and that, therefore, it cannot be gainsayed, without offering a direct affront to Her Majesty. "Probably the Queen never heard anything about the matter, but that it was settled in the usual way by her Secretary of State. There can be no good reason supposed for a departure from the ordinary rule of the Colonial office.—Neither the Queen nor the Colonial Minister know anything of themselves about the local advantages of the rival claimants for the seat of Legislature, and therefore it would perhaps have been wiser for the Secretary to refer the matter back to the people of the country. There is no immediate necessity for a disposal of the question; the alternating system is certainly inconvenient, but a temporary inconvenience is to be preferred to a permanent waste. If any change is made in the territorial disposition of the North American Provinces, it will of course affect the Capital, and, in no other combination, that at present exists in this Province, can Ottawa have any attraction as a political centre.—If, therefore, Ottawa is rejected and the present Ministry resign, another Ministry without doubt be got together who will agree upon a further delay upon the Seat of Government Question, rather than sacrifice the future interest of the Province to a present expediency. If the Capital cannot be obtained for a Western city, and it must be established, then let Montreal, which will be within range of a larger confederation, receive the distinction. The buildings will not at any rate be thrown away, neither will a federal union be thereby endangered.

The New Council.

On Monday, the new Council organises, if there can be a quorum got, which we believe there cannot. In the North Ward, Mr. John Whyte, finds his property qualification insufficient, and will therefore abstain from claiming his seat. In the South ward, Mr. Hogan, a saloonkeeper, is disqualified. In the East, Mr. Kennedy is disqualified, as assessor; and Mr. Morrow has not such a property qualification as will justify him in taking the oath. In the Centre Ward, Mr. W. B. Read is disqualified, as auditor; Mr. Scott as being lessee of town property; and Mr. White, as not possessing the property qualification. The Mayor, Mr. Stevenson, may sit, until removed by the judge's decision; the matter of his disqualification being now before the Court. It is to be hoped that disqualified Councillors will not offer violence to their conscience; but rather pass the book, and give no occasion for the further interference of the Court in this election. Out of the twelve elected Councillors, only five at the outside, can take their seats, conscientiously. Of these, Mr. Burnham is doubtful he being the legal adviser.

New School Trustees.

An election of School Trustees was held yesterday, when the North Ward chose again the outgoing trustee, Mr. Conger: the South Ward sent back Mr. Ferguson. In the East Ward, Mr. Nicholls went out, and refused to sit again,—Mr. John Kennedy was returned. In the Centre Ward, Mr. Fortye went out, and refused to be re-elected. The returning officer, Mr Robert Rowe, with utter shamelessness, closed the poll in three minutes after the time for commencement. Mr. Rowe receives £10 0 0 a-year, as a Pensioner upon the Town, and therefore may have thought himself bound to serve Mr. James Stevenson, by preventing any other candidate than Mr. Thomas White, Jr., from being proposed, unless the parties were punctual to the minute. Three minutes can hardly be called a reasonable time to wait for an opposing candidate. The election can be readily upset. It is to be hoped it will be, and some other returning officer than Mr. Rowe, appointed. He is too much of the partizan, to conduct it upon fair manly principles. Mr. White calls him, and he calls himself to Mr. White.

Official dispatches confirm the impression that the difficulties in Utah are far from being healed. Outrages committed, or supposed to have been committed, by the Mormons, have incensed the troops, and the question whether Saints and Gentiles can live together may yet require to be settled at the point of the sword. It is thought that the army will be enabled to occupy Salt Lake City.

We have from Washington rumors to the effect that a formidable protective movement has been inaugurated by the iron-masters—a general organization of iron-masters having been held for the purpose at the national capital on Monday.

The Manchester School.

From the Times.

The country has been pretty well accustomed to the audacity of statement—distinguishing speeches of the Manchester school, but on Tuesday last Mr. Milner Gibson carried every one of his predecessors in the hardihood of his assertions and the incredible impudence of his appeal. The great Duke of Wellington is not yet forgotten, and most people will be prompt enough to remember that one of his last public acts was to beseech the attention of the Government and the public to the defenceless condition of the country. Point by point in his memorable letter to Sir John Burgoyne he showed how steam had bridged the Channel, how the navy could no longer present an insurmountable barrier, how our coasts were unfortified, and how our military establishments had been allowed to decay. "I am bordering," added that famous soldier, "upon seventy-seven years passed in honour. I hope that the Almighty may protect me from being the witness of the tragedy which I cannot persuade my contemporaries to take measures to avert." It would be strange indeed if these impressive words had yet faded from the public mind; but Mr. Gibson either thinks so, or is willing to take the chance of the matter, for, being in want of some authority to support the Manchester policy of cutting down the estimates and pooh-poohing the national defence question, he actually appealed to the Duke of Wellington himself!

"During the Duke of Wellington's time," said Mr. Gibson, "in 1835, he thought £11,000,000, or £12,000,000 a year sufficient to defend the country." Such an assertion is enough to rouse the great warrior from his grave. The Duke not only never thought that such votes were sufficient votes, but he was the first to call the attention of the country to their insufficiency. For a long time in private, and at length, when his feelings could be restrained no longer, in a public letter, he urged upon those in power the imperative necessity of taking instant measures for the national defence. When he penned his celebrated address to Sir John Burgoyne, in 1847, things were far from being so bad as they had been in 1835. All the three services were in a better condition. Between 1835 and 1847 the expenditure upon the Army had been increased by about half a million, that upon the Navy by more than three millions. Yet even then the Duke looked upon the country as without any sufficient means of protection. We had no defence, he said, and no hope of defence, excepting in our fleet, and if the fleet could no longer be expected to maintain absolute command of the Channel, we "should not be safe for a week after the declaration of war."

But the Great Duke went even further than this. For a considerable time after the peace of 1815 he was in office himself, and therefore responsible at first sight for the state of things against which he was protesting. Even the estimates of 1835—that favorite year of Manchester economists—did happen to be produced during the brief interval of a Tory Administration in which the Duke of Wellington bore a part. But did he therefore think this provision made by these estimates "sufficient to defend the country?" No; he had placed his views to the contrary on public record. "I have in vain," he wrote to Sir John Burgoyne "endeavored to awaken the attention of different Administrations to this state of things, as well known to our neighbors (rivals in power, at least former adversaries and enemies) as it is to ourselves. I hope that your paper may have been attended with more success than my representations have been." Of the sufficiency of our military establishments in 1847, when the Army, be it understood had been augmented by fully 15,000 men, above its number in 1835, he simply spoke thus:—"The whole force employed at home in Great Britain and Ireland would not afford a sufficient number of men for the mere defence and occupation, on the breaking out of war, of the works constructed for the defence of the dockyards and naval arsenals, without leaving a single man disposable." And he then proceeds to state what, in his opinion, is the least that should be done. He takes this estimate of 1847—itself a considerable augmentation on that of 1835—and he asks for an increase of the regular army at a cost of £400,000. This being done, he requires the embodiment and organization of 150,000 good disciplined militia, "and then," says he, "I will engage for the defence of the country, old as I am." This was the very minimum of what, in his judgement, national security demanded. He felt and he owned that it was so barely sufficient that he might be deemed foolhardy for accepting it. "But I know," said he, "that I shall get nothing better, and I may get this."

It is in the face of these facts and declarations—notorious, public and accessible—that Mr. Milner Gibson has appealed to the Duke of Wellington's authority for the assertion that the establishments of 1835, when the whole number of effective Infantry of the Line present in Great Britain amounted to exactly 11,693, were "sufficient to defend the country." We say nothing about the change of affairs in Europe or India since that period. When the Duke was writing there had been no modern revolutions to convulse the Continent, no Eastern War, to set nations once more by the ears; steam had not absolutely by metamorphosed the entire navies of States nor had military tactics been changed by a new system of projectiles. The Duke was living in an order of things which, though it dates but twelve years back, we may already term old fashioned, and yet he expressed himself as we have seen. Even if he had really been of opinion that the standards of 1835 or 1847 were sufficient for the national security at that time, his conclusion would not be applicable to the state of things under which we live; but, considering that he even then recorded his judgment to the contrary in the most emphatic and earnest warning which words could be made to convey, it does astound us that even a Manchester orator could publicly quote the great soldier's authority on behalf of the estimates of twenty years since.

The fact is, that in this matter Mr. Gibson and his friends are directly at variance, as they well know, with that very opinion which they profess to represent—the opinion of the people. The persons who really disbelieve in the possibility of an invasion, or who, though not disbelieving it, would run any risk for the promotion of their own political theories, are exceedingly few in numbers. Those who would buy the country off from the necessity of defending itself by any sacrifice of principle are fewer still. The reasons—the millions—are true Englishmen at home, as the Manchester politicians before now have found out to their cost. Mr. Bright made a clean breast of it the other day, and owned that 99 people out of every 100 differed from those views of his, which he modestly thought the only true ones. So, as the country is not to be left defenceless, as is the very fault in which Mr. Gibson spoke he would have found nine-tenths of his audience prompt to demand that the national security should be placed beyond any question, he was fain to declare that an expenditure of £11,000,000 or £12,000,000 was ample for the purpose, and that the Duke of Wellington thought so. What this argument was worth we leave the people of Ashton and the public at large to decide for themselves.

The Iron Trade.

This time last year. There is nothing so necessary to the strength of a nation or to its material development as this convenient metal, which can be turned to so many purposes and worked into such various conveniencies and forms. It is not, however, found in equal quantities everywhere, and even when found it requires abundance of charcoal, or its substitute, coal, to bring it into use. It scarcely exists in a virgin state, but is widely diffused in forms that hardly pay for the smelting. In our southern counties there are vast districts containing iron ore which was worth smelting so long as the forest existed, and the cost of carriage from the middle and north of England clogged competition from that quarter, but it would be madness to attempt anything with our southern ironstone now, and the most rabid Protectionist of Kent or Surrey would not venture to ask Government to protect his iron against Derbyshire or Wales. In France the iron ore is neither so abundant nor so rich as in this country, nor is there anything like the same supply of coal. Nature has given that country many great advantages, and a situation only second, if second to our own; but she has placed her far below ourselves in the supply of these useful, though vulgar materials. The French, however, are an industrious, ingenious, and enterprising race. Give them the material, and they are as likely to bring it to perfection as we are, and will so become formidable competitors. In this case common sense suggests that everything should be done to cheapen the supply of raw material; and we can even imagine a very ambitious Government offering a bounty for the importation of good iron, to supply the natural deficiency, and place the French manufacturer on a level with the English. What has been done, and what will probably continue to be done to the end of the chapter, is the very contrary of this. Everything has been done to strangle France, first by stopping, then by narrowing and clogging, the inward current of this most precious of all metals. By existing decrees, on every ton of pig iron or bar iron imported into France there are levied duties of 50 and 70 per cent., or more than half its value; and even iron rails, so necessary to the development of France, are only admitted at or near 40 per cent. of their value. Ten years ago, in 1847, the make of pig iron in France was a little under 600,000 tons. Under Protection it has diminished. In 1858 it fell to about 470,000 tons; in 1849 and 1850 to little more than 400,000. In 1852 it had recovered to above 500,000 tons. The make in the best of these years was less than one-sixth of our own, and it follows from a simple calculation that besides exporting immense quantities, we annually use at home 160 lbs per head of the whole population against only 36 lbs used in France. This use of iron has long been agreed upon as the best test of material advancement, inasmuch as it enters into all work, agricultural and manufacturing; buildings, and railways, and shipping, whether for commerce or for war. It appears then, that we use four times as much as France per head of the population, and therefore make four times the progress in material things. —London Times.

Austria and her Enemies.

[From the London Times.]

THE situation of Austria's Italian Provinces does not improve. All attempts at conciliation have been useless: the Milanese and Venetians have been attracted by neither the visit of an Emperor nor the administration of an Archduke. At the present time, too, the political position of Austria is by no means easy. The speculations that have been rife within the last week or two concerning a speech of King Victor Emmanuel the policy of the French Emperor, and the designs of Russia, are not quite unimportant. There is certainly no reason to suppose that Sardinia intends to go to war next spring or France to help her, or Russia to send a force into Austrian Poland. But still Austria has incurred the ill-will of these three Powers; and, though the late reports may have been the work of speculators on the Bourse, still they would not have taken this form unless there were some ground for believing that they would be accepted as probable. The very fact that they had acquired such consistency as to oblige the Moniteur to contradict them, shows how unsafe, in the opinion of the world, is the Austrian position in Italy.

We do not, however, believe that there is any present danger of a disturbance in Europe. The discontent of the Italians, and the necessities of the French Emperor, are, no doubt, causes of disquiet. A little ambitious State like Sardinia would probably accept a quarrel without reluctance, and Napoleon III. has 500,000 soldiers whom he has exalted into the masters of his people, and whom it may become necessary some day to employ more gloriously than as a police. Should the designs attributed to these Monarchs be attempted, and should Russia's vindictiveness against the Viennese Court overbalance her dislike of parvenu and liberal potentates, Austria would no doubt be in considerable danger. But the principles of peace are now too securely established, and the advantages of peace too thoroughly appreciated, for Europe to be lightly convulsed. The experience of the past, too, seems to show that Austria would be no contemptible enemy even to a combination of three powers with a rebellious province of her own. The Austrian troops have fought at greater disadvantages, and the Austrian State has surmounted at least equal dangers. Whatever may be the hopes of a disaffected province, or the designs of secret and patient ambition, it is not likely that the present tranquillity of Europe will be disturbed by any war either of empire or nationality. But, if anything is likely to keep up the apprehensions of the world, and to encourage plots by proving that they are anticipated and feared, it will be the renewal of such violent and inquisitorial proceedings as that of which the Austrian police has just been guilty. Austria must hold her own in Italy by the strength of her armies in open field, and not by the machinations of spies and gendarmes.

We have important news from Fraser River. Governor Douglas had issued proclamations, declaring the organization of the new Government of British Columbia, and the regulation of the Territory by English law; publishing the revocation of the act of 1838, granting the exclusive privilege of trading with the Indians to the Hudson's Bay Company; and announcing the royal mandate of indemnification to the Governor and all other officials for acts done before the establishment of legitimate authority in British Columbia,—a measure of protection against future legal proceedings.

Decadence of Ship-building in the United States.

From the New York Times.

It is not in the nature of a Yankee to give up and cry "beat;" or, at least, we loyally delude ourselves with such an idea. Our favorite figure, which is supposed to represent the true spirit that animates us on all points, is that of a sailor nailing the colors and flinging to the mast-head, to indicate that we will never cry beat. And there has never been a phrase which so impressed itself upon the heart of our people as the dying exclamation of the brave Lawrence, "Don't give up the ship." It has been repeated so often, and has become so familiar, that we fear it is beginning to lose something of its force and significance, and that we shall give up the ship even while we repeat the immortal injunction. We are not only giving up the ship figuratively, but literally, and by and by we shall have no ship left. As long as ships were built of wood we had no competition to fear. Though we imported the copper, the cordage, the sails and the iron which were necessary to their construction, we could still build ships better than any other people, because our forests furnished us the best timber for their spars and hulls. With our live oak, our yellow pine, locust and cedar, we needed no protection to save us from the effects of our untaxed competition with other maritime nations. We could not only supply all our own necessities, but build ships for the rest of the world; which we did. But the advantages which had been so prodigally bestowed upon us by nature, to make us the ship-builder of the world, have suddenly lost more than half their value by the substitution of iron for wood; and we are now looking supinely on while Great Britain has vaulted into the proud position which we once occupied. The great power has become the ship-builder of the world by means of her abundance of iron. The vast fleet of wooden ships is daily diminishing, and the new class of vessels is taking their place. In a few years more a wooden ship will be regarded with the same curiosity with which we now look upon an old stage-coach.

At present we make a very respectable show with our wooden ships, and a considerable number will be required for many years to come to convey heavy freight on distant voyages. But we are building no new ships, and the ship yards from Maine to Maryland are being dismantled and broken up; and this great business, which has been our boast for fifty years, will soon be nearly extinct. It is concluded that we cannot compete with Great Britain in building iron ships, solely on account of the dearness of iron, and there appears to be little chance of the relative value of the material in the two countries being changed; so that the inevitable consequence of this condition of affairs is a relinquishment of the whole business of our great rival.

How to escape this degradation is now one of the most important questions before the country. Degradation it would be of the most mortifying and humiliating character, for a country like ours to give up one of its most valuable manufacturing interests upon which its maritime rank chiefly depends, and become dependent upon a rival, nation for the means of navigating the ocean. A proposition has been made by certain parties, to avert the danger from us, by admitting British-built iron ships to be purchased duty free, by American citizens; and the Journal of Commerce seems to be among the advocates of this policy. It would be simply dealing a death-blow to our shipping interest, which is now nearly in articulo mortis. But while there is life there is hope, and it is not becoming in us to yield up so great a prize while there remains any possibility of retaining it in our own hands. If iron-built ships can be imported, or purchased, duty free we may never again hope to see another American built steamer.

There is, however, one method by which we may save ourselves from the impending misfortune, and that is by allowing a drawback on the iron used in the construction of iron steamers. If a drawback is allowed on salt used in curing fish, and on other articles which are exported, why may it not be allowed on iron used in building a ship, which otherwise could not be built here?—We cannot look for an immediate reduction of the duty on iron, and the manufacturers of iron among us are even clamoring for an increase of that duty. Our shipowners are fully alive to the true condition of this question, but they look on in hopeless dismay at the constant increase of foreign built iron "marine," which are taking the freighting business out of their hands, while they are unable to make headway against the fearful odds with which they have to compete. If the plan were adopted which we have suggested, the business of iron-shipbuilding would at once be commenced here; and the impetus it would impart to other trades would create an increased demand for the production of our own furnaces, so that in time American iron would be produced more cheaply than the foreign.—There is no other difficulty that stands in the way of the business of iron ship-building in this country but the cost of the raw material, and as that can be so readily removed without danger to any other branch of industry, there is no reason why we should permit this great business to be monopolized by our only rival on the ocean.

A WRITING TELEGRAPH.—A. Moigno in a late number of Cosmos, gives an account of a telegraph which transmits drawings or fac-similies of written dispatches.—Signor Bonnelli is the author of this adaptation. His process is to write the dispatch, or draw the sketch to be transmitted, on a metallized or conducting paper on non-conducting ink. It is then placed on the transmitting machine, and passed by clock-work under a number of fine conducting wires, arranged in line like the teeth of a comb. These conducting wires (there are 60 in Bonnelli's machine) are insulated separately in a gutta percha cable, which is stretched between the two places in communicating. At the other end they are spread out in the same comb form. Under this receiving comb is passed, by means of similar clock-work, a chemically-prepared paper, the yellow color of which is changed to green by the action of the magnetic currents which pass over the wires. When the wires at the transmitting end are passing over the insulating ink, they of course convey no fluid, and make no change in the color of the receiving paper. The message appears, therefore, in yellow letters on a green ground, the letters being composed of lines, the sharpness of which depends on the distance between the wires. Ten wires would be amply sufficient to convey phonographic writing written at verbatim speed. The conducting paper used by M. Bonelli is of tin surface covered with silver or copper, and the ink used contains oil. The receiving paper is dipped in an alkaline dynamist.

The Toronto Globe asserts that it is the intention of the Ministry to dissolve Parliament in the event of a defeat. They adhere to her Majesty's choice of Ottawa as the seat of Government, and intend to try the question again.

Setting Type by Machinery.

At length the problem of setting type by machinery appears to be solved. Requiring, as this operation does, the exercise of the most careful attention, it would seem as though it could not be performed by any automatic invention; but Mr. Alden has overcome the obstacles. Composition is performed by the ordinary modus operandi, which there any one learned and forgot. In the interior of the apparatus is a "register-ink wheel, capable of holding sixty ems, upon which the types indented by the compositor are first arranged, and are transferred from it to the groove in front of the keys, there to be taken, justified &c. This wheel, revolving five times a minute, enables a skilful compositor to set up thirty six thousand ems in ten hours—thus doing the work of three men. The distributing process is performed in the same time. The type are collected by conveyors "from a "stick" at the right hand of the compositor. The selection is directed by the nicks in the type, into which they are fitted, no two having a similar nick. Thus a letter a can be taken by only one arrangement of conveyors, and the other cannot possibly be taken. For book work Mr. Alden's invention is admirably adapted; and it may be to a considerable extent in newspaper offices. But where a great variety of letter is employed, it could not be adopted to so much advantage.

The inventor, Mr. Timothy Alden, is a native of Barnstable County, Massachusetts, and a practical printer. About twenty years since he took charge of the Farmer's Gazette, a paper published at Barre, Worcester County. There, as is usual in country offices, he was publisher, editor, and foreman. He used to declare that he would do away with the wearisome work of composition; and from day to day for years he employed his moments of leisure, if such men can be said to have leisure, in devising how the work could be performed by machinery. He has at length succeeded. A machine was constructed, the works of which, though comparatively rude and imperfect, accomplished the desired object. The labors of composition and distribution were performed simultaneously, and more correctly than is often done by the printer. The imperfections were remedied in a second machine, the work of Messrs. Reere & Co., at the corner of Canal and Centre Streets, and now little further improvement appears to be necessary before the invention shall be introduced into large printing establishments.—N. Y. Evening Post.

The cars have ceased to run on the Northern railway, from Toronto to Lake Huron, in consequence of the pecuniary difficulties of the company.

Henry L. Ellsworth has given, by his will, all of his large property, except about $100,000, to Yale College. It is estimated that the College gets $700,000.

A couple of shocking railroad catastrophies happened on Friday on the road from Columbus to Macon, Ga. The most disastrous was caused by the train running off the track in consequence of a culvert having been washed away by heavy rains. Between twenty and thirty lives have been sacrificed.

John Nugent, Special Agent of the United States, had published an address to all Americans in the Colony, in which he censures the British officials for their unlicensed rudeness and the Courts for ignorance. The publication of this document had produced a remarkable effect, the British residents regarding it as an insult to them.

We learn from Central America that the British fleet at San Juan del Norte has been reinforced by two vessels of war, one a ship of the line. Sir William Gore Ouseley, the British Minister, who was in ill-health, had arrived at Aspinwall and crossed to Panama, and on the 8th inst. embarked on board ship bound for Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

The New Year's festival in the city of New York was signalized by an unusual degree of violence. No less than three murders are reported, together with a number of stabbing cases. A most desirable place for a residence!

Toronto Markets.

TORONTO, Saturday, January 8, 1858.

Taking into account the day of the week, the arrivals of farming produce generally to-day were light. From the subjoined quotations, it will be seen that is not a few the market prices evince an advancing tendency.

WHEAT.—The arrivals continue very light, in the face of an improved demand. To-day the quantity offering did not exceed some 300 bushels, and prices underwent a still further advance. Prime fall wheat sold at 6s a 7s, the highest price paid at this point for a considerable time past.—The average rate for this quality was about 6s 7d.

SPRING WHEAT sold at 5s a 5s 4d per bushel.

BARLEY was in demand at 3s 6d a 4s per bushel.

PEAS 3s 6d a 4s per bushel.

OATS have again advanced, and were to-day in excellent demand at 2s 7d per bushel.

POTATOES are in demand at 2s 6d a 3s per bushel.

EGGS are getting still scarce; and were such a rarity to-day that 1s 6d per dozen was paid.

BUTTER (fresh) is plenty at 10d a 1s per lb. Tub butter shows symptoms of an advance in present rates. But we still quote No. 1, at 15c per lb; No. 2, 12½c, and ordinary 10c.

CHEESE (American) is still worth $9 a $10 per 100 lbs; Canadian $7 a $8.

HAMS $11 per 100 lbs.

BACON $9 per 100 lbs.

PORK is still quotable at $5 50 a $6 per 100 lbs, without much probability of a decline in current rates. Should the present cold weather continue, prices will remain firm at prevailing rates, if they do not advance. A good deal of light pork continues to be brought forward.

BEEF.—In this market rates have declined in consequence of a glut, which took place yesterday, when there were large arrivals of beeves from Whitby and elsewhere. Prime beef now sells at $4 50 a $5 per 100 on foot. But it is likely that, quotations will find a higher level are long should the glut not continue. Slaughtered beef sold in wagons at $3 a $6 for fore quarters, and $6 for hind quarters.

VENISON is in pretty good supply at $3 a $5 for good bucks.

CALVES are dearer, being more in demand, at this time of year. Some-sized, tolerably fat go to-day at $6 each. At present they are quotable at $4.

SHEEP are also dearer, and now commanded $3 50 a $4 each.

LAMBS are worth $2 each.

TURKEYS were plentiful and offered at 5s a 7s 6d each.

GEESE were sold at 2s 6 d. each.

APPLES $3 a $4 per brl.

HAY is worth $9 a $10 per ton.

STRAW $7 a $9 per ton.

TENDER

Of the Finance Committee, to the Joint Board of Public and Grammar School Trustees, of the Town of Peterborough:—

The Finance Committee in accordance with the usual custom at the close of the year, beg leave to submit a statement of the Receipts and Expenditures of the Estimate to the 31st of December, also a statement of the Building Fund, to the present period with their report thereon, as required by the Act 12 Vic. Cap. 81, Sec. 13, and the Regulations of the Board of Trustees.

The Committee would first [illegible] estimated expenditure for 1858 was made up as [illegible] $3,200 00

To which Tuition Fees were put down at..... $900 00
Government Grammar School grant at 600 00
Government Common School grant at..... 160 00
And as required by Assessment..... 1,030 00 — $3,240 00

Of the sum required to be levied by Assessment, the Board asked the Council in order to enable them to keep their engagements with the Teachers and others to pay in $400 on the 30th June, $400 on the 30th September, and the remaining $1,200 on the 31st of December.—Your Committee regret to announce that their request has not been complied with, the result of which is that the indebtedness of the Board for previous Bank accommodation has been but little reduced, and now stands at $4150—after frequent renewals—the last of which has again expired, without the Board being in a position to take this liability up.

On all other matters of Finance connected with the ordinary management of the Schools, your Committee have pleasure in stating that they are satisfactory; and that there are but few outstanding accounts in comparison with former years; one cause that has greatly aided to produce this change, has been the liquidation of incidental charges monthly, out of the Tuition Fees; and the payment by the Board for matters of a similar nature as they arose.

Your Committee regret they cannot announce the completion of the new School Buildings contracted to be finished on the first of November last. The work however is well advanced, and the Architect having recently inspected it and expressed his approval of what has been done, it is hoped the Board will be able to obtain possession of the premises complete in the early part of the ensuing Summer.

The accounts show an expenditure on the new Buildings of £1,304 7s. 3d., and receipts of £4,322 18s. 8d. Of the latter sum £1,000 has been recently paid by the Town Council, out of £2,618 asked for, to finish the Building, over the Chairman's [illegible] £1,618 to be yet paid by the Council under the agreement.

Your Committee have pleasure in stating that the Council have succeeded in making a sale of the whole of the School Debentures, and your Committee can see no reason now to apprehend any difficulty in [illegible] the requisite £1,618 as soon as required, to meet the demands of the Board when called upon by the Building Committee, on behalf of the Contractors, and for furnishing the Institute with suitable fittings.

It will be observed from the accounts that the Contractors are paid up in full, according to the certificates of the Superintendent of Works and the Building Committee at the request of the Contractors have advanced the sum of £228, with the view of affording them every possible aid, pending the issue of the usual certificate from the Superintendent, and which if demanded now by the Contractors, your Committee have every reason to believe would fully cover the advance allowed to.

On the general condition of the Schools, your Committee may remark, that for the first six months or more of 1858, the same vigorous and healthy vitality was not so apparent in the Schools as in previous years, while the number attending fell away from 250 and upwards down to 200, and sometimes under that number. This state of things was greatly to be regretted, and caused much uneasiness to the friends of the Schools.

Latterly your Committee have pleasure in stating the Schools would appear from the Monthly Visitors reports—have rallied, as the number steadily increases, which from the efficient staff of Teachers under the charge of the Board, is what might reasonably be expected, it is apparent that the Schools are again gaining in popular favor, and it is believed that under the present able management they will continue to do so, by imparting a sound secular education to the young of both sexes in this rapidly growing Town and surrounding neighborhood.

WILLIAM CLUXTON,
Chairman

Peterboro', Jan. 12, 1859.

ANNUAL STATEMENT

Of Income and Expenditure for School Purposes within the Town of Peterborough for the year 1858, as required by Law:

RECEIPTS.

1858.
Dec. 31.	By Monthly Tuition Fees rec'd,	$629 96
"	By Balance on Town Tax, for 1857, rec'd,	700 00
"	By Town Tax for 1858, $3000 rec'd,	900 00
"	By Grammar School Grant, do.	400 00
"	By Common " "	241 78
		$2,871 74

N. B.—Due from Town Council on Assessment of $1,100 00

EXPENDITURE.

1858.
Dec. 31,	To Balance at debit last ann't.	$ 3 11
"	To Salaries paid in full to date,	2,167 63
"	To rent paid in full, 1857,	100 00
"	To Mo. Expenses paid by head master,	111 43
"	To paid for fuel	49 00
"	To paid on Notes renewed,	170 00
"	To paid Discount and Costs on pro. Notes,	44 90
"	To paid sundry acc'ts, 1857,	144 46
"	To balance cash, per Bank account,	21 03
		$2,871 74

STATEMENT OF BUILDING FUND FOR NEW SCHOOL PREMISES

The Building Committee in Account with the Board of Trustees.

RECEIPTS.

1857.
Nov. 13th,	By Received from Building Fund,	£250 0 0
1858.
March 8th,	By " "	242 0 0
July 7th,	By rec'd Balance of Fund.	605 0 11
August 31st,	By Instalment on Denny's Mortgage of Lot sold in South Ward,	52 14 1
Sept. 17th,	By proceeds Rent £125,	123 9 4
Nov. 22nd,	By " " £50,	49 14 1
"	26th, By Town Council of estimate of £2,618,	1,000 0 0
		£2,322 18 5

N. B.—There is due and unpaid by Town Council to the Board of Trustees £1,618 or $6,472 on the sum estimated to complete the New Buildings.

EXPENDITURE.

1858.
Dec. 31,	To paid Contractors, on Certificates, Superintendent Works,	£1,829 13 3
"	To paid Contractors in advance,	228 0 0
"	To paid labor, levelling around Building,	42 11 0
"	To paid Architect on account for plans, &c. &c.	25 0 0
"	To paid Superintendent Com. on £1,820 13 3	45 4 10
"	To paid Architect pro. cent of visit to inspect work,	2 10 0
"	To paid on account of Note on Renewal,	11 8 2
"	To paid Secretary for services to date,	20 0 0
"	To balance cash on hand for Bank Book,	18 11 2
		£2,322 18 5

We certify that we have examined the above accounts and compared them with the vouchers and find them correct.

WM. HALL,
A. SAWERS,
Auditors.

Peterborough, Jan'y 11, 1859.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Jan. 13th, 1859.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 95	a	1 00
Oats "	0 50	a	0 52
Potatoes "	0 25	a	0 25
Apples "	0 50	a	1 00
Flour per barrel	4 00	a	5 50
Butter per lb	0 12½	a	0 15
Cheese "	0 10	a	0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 00	a	5 00
Beef per cwt	3 50	a	4 00
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Dry Wood	1 50	a	0 00
Green Wood	1 00	a	1 25
Straw per load	1 00	a	1 50

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

MONTALEMBERT'S

CELEBRATED Essay on the COLONIAL POLICY OF ENGLAND. Price 25cts. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAYS.

ANNUAL Register of Rural Affairs for 1859. Price 25cts,
McLEAN'S Canadian Almanac for 1859.—Price 12½ cts.
COUNTING HOUSE DIARIES, still a few left at
SAWERS & MURRAYS

NOTICE.

THE subscriber begs to notify all those indebted to him by Note or Account,
that all debts remaining unpaid at the end of the current month, will be charged with interest at the rate of 12 per cent.
LEWIS GLOVER.
Ashburnham, Jan. 7th 1859. 3-dis.

NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Peterborough & Chemong Lake Railway Company will apply at the next session of the Provincial Parliament for an Act to amend their Act of incorporation and to enable them to extend their Railway to some point on French River or Lake Nipissing and for other purposes.
ASA A. BURNHAM.
President.
P. & C. L. R. Co.
Peterborough, Jan. 10th 1859. 3

MATERIALS FOR FLOWERS.

ROSE LEAVES in great Variety.
Roses and Pinks
Scented Cotton Paper, all shades.
White and Colored Tissue.
Spools of Wire, &c. &c.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.

NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that any person or persons found trespassing on North West quarter of Lot No. 19, 6th Con., Dummer, after this date, will be prosecuted according to law.
JAMES MACKENZIE.
Dummer, 30th Dec., 1858. 6

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!! FOR 1859.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,26 ..	New York Ledger	6c 3d.
2,00 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 4½
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 3

A Beautiful Pocket Edition of the
HOLY BIBLE:
WITH Marginal References, and Clasps, handsomely bound in best Morocco for THREE DOLLARS.

A Very Cheap Pocket Edition of the
HOLY BIBLE,
With Marginal References, and Church of England Prayer Book in one Volume, in Flexible Binding for $2.50.

These and many other beautiful editions of the Holy Bible, Church Service, Prayer Book, &c., &c., forming the most appropriate Presents for the Season, for sale at the New Book and Stationery Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.
Peterboro'. Dec. 8, 1858.

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporating the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to connect at a Branch from Mosquito Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.
By order of the Board,
THOMAS BIGOUT.
Secretary.
P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.
Port Hope, Dec. 22, 1858. 6

NEW BOOT, SHOE, AND LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this and the surrounding townships, that he has taken the Store lately occupied by Mr. Farlinger, on George street, where he intends to keep and offer for sale a large and select Stock of
BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,
both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at very low rates for cash, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞ Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. J. [illegible]
Peterborough, Dec 16th 1858.

MUSICAL!!

Every Lady may have a large assortment of the best Music for the Piano-Forte, at almost nominal prices by calling at the Book and Music Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY,
where there is at present a great variety of pieces to select from, published at the Musical Bouquet Office, London, and price only 6d per single No.

QUADRILLES.

Pincolensini Quadrilles.
The Ton Cmsar De Banan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
The Musqueters do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Caledonia do

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS,

HYSONS old and young
Twankay & Imperial,
GUNPOWDER,
OOLONG,
SOUCHONG, &c.
In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS,

Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba,
Redpath's Crushed, A.
Dry Crushed & broken Loaf,
Loaves,
Ground,
Extra ground (for confectioners,)
Yellow Refined,

COFFEE,

Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP,

Redpath's refined.

RICE,

Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS,

&c. 1's, ½ lb, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES,

T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bear, Cutty and Fancy Pipes.

RAISINS,

Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do. M. R. Layers & clusters in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES,

Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS,

Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (case Brandy, Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskay in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS,

An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS,

2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT,

500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &C.

25 Drums Solaena Raisins. 25 Drums Figs.
50 Boxes halves and Quarter Layer Raisins.
10 Boxes Shelled Almonds.
For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.
Hunter Street,
Peterboro', Nov., 16, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 20 x 29 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Premium Tickets of admission to the Exhibition (or Rooms,) and Western Gallery, of the Association.

These will also be given to the Subscribers several valuable works of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Statuettes, &c. &c., from celebrated American and other Artists.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1, 1860. On the evening of that day premiums will be awarded to Subscribers.

For full particulars, see December Art Journal, price 25 cents. Specimen copies sent to those desiring to subscribe, on the receipt of 15 cents in postage stamps or coin. Address

C. L. DERBY, Actuary C. A. A.,
348 Broadway, N. Y.
Or, William Olley, 143 Water Street, } Agents
Cincinnati, Ohio. }

Subscriptions received by R. S. Patterson Esq., Secretary, Peterboro'.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession (La Auphode), three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water up to the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.
Terms, Liberal.
For further particulars apply to Messrs Mason, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to
W. B. SCOTT.
Auphodel, 19th June, 1858. 42tf

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINTS OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative).
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW (Free Church).
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE (Tory).

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews	7 00
For all four of the Reviews	8 00
For Blackwood's Magazine	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent, from the above price will be allowed to CLUBS ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

POSTAGE.

Subscribers in the British Provinces will receive the Reprints free of U. S postage.

N. B. The price in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above named is $31 per annum.

Our Reprints versus Eclectics, &c.

As we have for many years been paying more than $3,000 annually to the British Publishers for the matter furnished in these Periodicals, thus virtually becoming co-partners with them in the profits of the Reprints, we trust the public will consider this in bestowing their patronage, and give us the preference over Eclectic and other patchwork publications, whether monthly or weekly, which now extract so liberally from our works and pay nothing either to the Foreign Publishers or to us for the same. As to cheapness nobody can complain of paying $10 a year for the four leading British Reviews and Blackwood's Magazine, by taking these words entire subscribers are not obliged to be guided by others in the choice of the articles they may desire to read. Moreover taking into consideration the style in which our Reprints are published and their acknowledged fidelity to the original editions, and also to the advantage of an early issue by means of the advance Sheets—our series will be found as cheap as any one of the competing publications to which we have alluded.

☞ Remittances should always be addressed, post paid, to the Publishers.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,
47. No. 54 Gold street, New York.

FALL IMPORTATIONS.

THE Subscribers beg to call the attention of their Customers and the Public generally to a large and carefully-selected stock of

Fall and Winter Goods

which they are just opening at their Store in Harper's New Brick Block on George Street, consisting in part of

Flannels,	Blankets,
Sheetings,	Shirtings,
Broad Cloths,	Cassimeres,
Tweeds,	Whitneys,
Pilots,	Beavers,
Fashiontoes,	Rivetts,
Pumadis,	Moreens, &c.

SHAWLS, DRESS GOODS, CAPES, HATS, CAPS, AND FURS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND A SELECTED ASSORTMENT OF PRINTS.

Also, a large stock of

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

In Over Coats,
Frock and
Shooting Coats,
Vests, Pants,
Drawers,
Shirts,
Waterproof
Coats,
Leggings,
and Caps.

And a general assortment of

GROCERIES

All of which they will offer at a great reduction of prices, for Cash or Farm Produce.

They would also call special attention to the

TAILORING DEPARTMENT

of their business, where they are prepared to execute orders for all descriptions of Clothing, of the latest styles, the best workmanship and warranted to fit.

J. ROBINSON & Co.
Peterboro', Nov. 2, 1858. 43

BOARD.

A FEW more Gentlemen can be accommodated with Board, with or without lodging at Mrs. Bibby's.
For particulars apply at this office, or at Mrs. Bibby's, Hunter Street.
Peterboro', November 11, 1858. 44

TO THE TRADE!

PETERBORO'

Soap and Candle Works.

A large stock of every superior

CANDLES AND SOAP

now on hand and for sale at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.

At the Late Stand of Messrs. Gilmour & Co.

GOLDY & BROS.

Peterboro', Dec 20th, 1858. 51

Insurances.

TIMES AND ÆTNA

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

MAKE PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, TORONTO.

The Hon. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES BOSTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS.

Chairman—W. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairmen—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
James Morrow, Esq., | A. J. McDonnell, Esq.
Jno. Mowat, Esq., | James Hamer, Esq.

AUDITORS.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company,

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

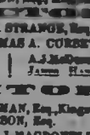
UNITY FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Cannon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,267,000. Paid up Capital, $620,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON,	E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
Chs. Duggan, Jr., Esq.	GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. Howard, Esq.	JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
Wm. L. Perrin, Esq.	A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. Cameron.	DUNCAN McDONNELL, Esq.
Capt. P. Wallace,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and Montreal, Canada.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hackett.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

THE BAR

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken in the selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the Stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1858. 5-tf.

PETERBORO

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. STEPHENS, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will always be ready to act as such on reasonable terms.

AUCTIONEER,

His office is in Hunter Street, (but he has opened an Auction Room on Water Street, near Post Office, for the sale of Dry Goods, Groceries, Crockery, Hardware, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, Furniture, Stoves, Tinware, Books, Stationery, Drugs, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Glass, Ready-made Clothing, Saddlery, Harness, Leather, Carpets, Oil Cloths, Rugs, Mats, Buffalo Robes, Fancy Goods, Jewellery, Watches, Clocks, Musical Instruments, Agricultural Implements, Waggons, Sleighs, Cutters, Harness, Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Pigs, Poultry, Grain, Flour, Potatoes, Produce, Real Estate, Mortgages, Notes, Bills, Accounts, Debts, Shares in Joint Stock Companies, Steamboats, Vessels, Boats, Canoes, Timber, Logs, Lumber, Shingles, Staves, Heading, Wood, Coal, Iron, Steel, Nails, Spikes, Rails, Machinery, Engines, Boilers, Saw Mills, Grist Mills, Carding Machines, Factories, Foundries, Tanneries, Distilleries, Breweries, Potash Kettles, Pearl Ash Kettles, Stills, Vats, Tubs, Pails, Barrels, Kegs, Casks, Hogsheads, Puncheons, Pipes, Tierces, Boxes, Trunks, Carpet Bags, Valises, Portmanteaus, Saddle Bags, Whips, Spurs, Bridles, Saddles, Harness, Collars, Horse Clothing, Blankets, Robes, Rugs, Mats, Oil Cloths, Carpets, Hearth Rugs, Stair Rods, Curtains, Curtain Fixtures, Window Blinds, Looking Glasses, Pictures, Picture Frames, Engravings, Lithographs, Maps, Charts, Globes, Mathematical Instruments, Surveying Instruments, Drawing Instruments, Paper Hangings, Wall Paper, Window Paper, Fancy Paper, Writing Paper, Printing Paper, Envelopes, Pens, Pencils, Ink, Inkstands, Sealing Wax, Wafers, Wafer Stamps, Rubber Stamps, Seals, Seal Presses, Copying Presses, Letter Presses, Letter Copying Books, Ledgers, Journals, Day Books, Cash Books, Bill Books, Order Books, Receipt Books, Memorandum Books, Pocket Books, Diaries, Almanacs, Blank Books, Printed Books, Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Hymn Books, Psalm Books, Sermons, Lectures, Novels, Tales, Romances, Poetry, Plays, Dramas, Farces, Comedies, Tragedies, Operas, Songs, Ballads, Music, Musical Instruments, Pianos, Harmoniums, Melodeons, Accordeons, Flutinas, Violins, Violoncellos, Guitars, Flutes, Fifes, Flageolets, Clarionets, Bugles, Trumpets, Cornets, Trombones, Bassoons, Drums, Fifes, Tambourines, Triangles, Cymbals, Jews Harps, Tuning Forks, Metronomes, Gymnastic Apparatus, Dumb Bells, Fishing Tackle, Guns, Rifles, Pistols, Powder, Shot, Percussion Caps, Gun Wads, Gun Cases, Powder Flasks, Shot Belts, Game Bags, Shooting Jackets, Shooting Boots, Shooting Shoes, Shooting Caps, Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, Clothing, Dry Goods, Groceries, Provisions, Liquors, Wines, Ales, Beers, Porters, Cordials, Spirits, Brandy, Rum, Gin, Whiskey, Alcohol, Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Tobacco Boxes, Cigar Cases, Snuff Boxes, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, Tea Pots, Coffee Pots, Tea Kettles, Tea Caddies, Tea Chests, Tea Boards, Tea Spoons, Table Spoons, Soup Ladles, Sugar Tongs, Sugar Bowls, Cream Jugs, Butter Knives, Knives and Forks, Carving Knives and Forks, Table Knives, Dessert Knives, Pocket Knives, Razors, Razor Strops, Shaving Boxes, Shaving Soap, Shaving Brushes, Hair Brushes, Clothes Brushes, Tooth Brushes, Nail Brushes, Combs, Perfumery, Soaps, Cosmetics, Hair Oils, Pomatums, Hair Dyes, Medicines, Drugs, Chemicals, Dyestuffs, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Glass, Putty, Turpentine, Camphine, Lamps, Lamp Wicks, Lamp Chimneys, Lamp Burners, Lamp Shades, Candles, Candlesticks, Candle Moulds, Candle Wicks, Soap, Soap Dishes, Soap Boxes, Soap Moulds, Soap Cutters, Soap Stands, Soap Kettles, Soap Ladles, Soap Stones, Soap Barrels, Soap Tubs, Soap Pails, Soap Boilers, Soap Frames, Soap Racks, Soap Shelves, Soap Boards, Soap Scrapers, Soap Scales, Soap Weights, Soap Measures, Soap Gauges, Soap Testers, Soap Presses, Soap Cutting Machines, Soap Stamping Machines, Soap Wrapping Machines, Soap Packing Machines, Soap Boxing Machines, Soap Labelling Machines, Soap Shipping Machines, Soap Loading Machines, Soap Unloading Machines, Soap Weighing Machines, Soap Measuring Machines, Soap Gauging Machines, Soap Testing Machines, Soap Pressing Machines

FEBRUARY

1859

RUGGLES PATENT.

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER,
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 5.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	10
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards: George-Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,

Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.

V. M. CLEMENTI. T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

S. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vizard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Babidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 16th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 2

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1856. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1856. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

1859.

A. FOWLIS & Co.,

IN RETURNING THANKS to their customers for their kind support during the last year, would state, that

CASH PURCHASERS,

would find it to their advantage to call, and in future their stock of

HARDWARE, &c

will be larger, better assorted and at lower prices than formerly, as they have now adopted to a greater extent the CASH system.

In future, accounts will not be opened or continued except under special agreement.

Parties whose Notes or Book Accounts are overdue are requested to call and settle immediately.

Always on hand,

Iron and Nails of all sizes and qualities.

House furnishing, Ironmongery,

Mechanics Tools, &c.

Agents for the sale of Mowatt's Anne and other Stoves.

Stove Gutters, Mechanics' Lamps.

Carriage and Sleigh Furniture, &c.,

Paints, Oil and Putty and Glass.

Lamps, Oils, Olive Oil, Refined and raw Linseed Oil, Sperm Oil, Shaker Standard Sperm Oil, Wicks, &c., &c.

Peterborough, January 9th, 1859. 1

F. G. CALLENDER,

Surgical and Mechanical Dentist,

RESPECTFULLY informs the Inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity, that he will continue to visit Peterboro' on the first Monday in each month, for the week, and will perform all operations in the profession, by the different modes of application as to insensibility, (except taking teeth only without pain), in which he guarantees not less used by other Dentists. He is also prepared to insert Teeth on Gold Plates, in a manner that cannot be surpassed, being done from moulds, much cheaper than the usual mode, and to be equal in appearance and durability, and much more agreeable in the mouth.

Further information is invited to the above, Rooms over Mr. Chisholm's Store.

Peterboro', 9th Dec., 1858. 49

The Earl of Carlisle's Address to the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, on Punishment and Reformation.

On the return of the members from their visit to the Akbar reformatory ship, the Earl of Carlisle proceeded to deliver his address to the members of this department. He said,—As I did not invite myself into the place which I have now the high honor to fill, and which confers upon me at once the privilege and the duty of presiding over the counsels of the Punishment and Reformation Section at the present meeting of the association, I will now enlarge upon the inadequacy of my pretensions to such a distinction. This responsibility must wholly rest with those from whom the invitation proceeded. It appears to me that I shall best enter into the spirit of the functions which thus devolve upon me, if, in now offering some remarks of my own, I entirely forbear from meddling either with the history or philosophy of the reformatory movement or system. The history has become matter of general notoriety; and several of those who are now here have been among its most prominent actors. As to the philosophy, I do not doubt that this also will meet with admirable exponents during our approaching session, attended as I perceive it to be by many reformatory worthies, with Mr. Adderley to head them,—one who has practically and legitimately taken the lead on the subject; it may, at all events, suffice that I feel myself unequal to such high argument, and I think that it will be more acceptable, as I am sure it will be a politic course, for me to confine myself, as much as I am able, to such points connected with this all-important subject as happen to have in some measure fallen under my own personal experience and observations. It has so occurred that I have been brought into some contact with reformatory processes, as applied both to adult and juvenile criminals; to the adult, during the period of my holding the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; to the juvenile, at my own Yorkshire home. I begin, as would seem more decorous, with the Viceregal experience.—My task, however, upon that head is materially lightened, and might indeed have been wholly superseded by the very full and very able statement which was delivered at the last meeting of the association by Mr. Hill, the learned Recorder of Birmingham, who is justly esteemed a foremost authority upon the whole subject of prison discipline. It appears that Mr. Hill, thus pre-eminently adapted to the office by his talents, his experience, his zeal, and his benevolence, had been induced by what had reached him respecting the system pursued in the Irish convict prisons to inspect minutely the different establishments in that country; and to test the soundness of the principles adopted by what he could ascertain of their actual operation. It was inexpressibly gratifying to the friends and well-wishers, but above all to the founders and originators of the system, to find that a man like Mr. Hill should have thought himself warranted to declare, as the result of his investigations, that the board of directors of Irish convict prisons had practically solved which had so long perplexed our Government and our Legislature—"What shall we do with our convicts?" To such a verdict I can have little indeed to add beyond the slight supplement with the intervening period may furnish, and the small gleanings derived from my own personal opportunities of approach. The opening of my recent term of my administration in Ireland was nearly contemporary with the first experiments in the system of convict discipline which has excited so much attention in that country. Whatever may be the merits of that system in the main features of its conception, and whatever the success obtained in its practical working, the credit as the responsibility, most principally rest with the Chairman of the Board of Directors, Captain Crofton. He has been largely aided by the practised experience and intelligent zeal successively of Captain Knight and Captain Whitty, and throughout by the benevolent ardour of Mr. Lentaigne: he has been perseveringly seconded, as I know he will be most ready to admit, by the different members of the Irish Executive, and by the singular exertions and adaptability of some of his officers and agents. No one, however, who has watched the progress of the proceedings will fail to acknowledge the pervading influence and inspiration which have been derived and caught from the perseverance, the enthusiasm, the determination to succeed, the disbelief in the possibility of failure, which have distinguished the administrator in chief; and looking back, as I now can do, to the series of our conferences and expeditions in connection with this object, as among the most gratifying recollections of my official career. I feel most happy in having the opportunity of publicly recording my admiration, my regard, and my gratitude. It can hardly be a secret to those who have taken an interest in matters relating to prison discipline that statements of rather a controversial character have recently been put forward by Colonel Jebb and Captain Crofton, upon the respective merits and tendencies of the English and Irish systems. Speaking upon general grounds, and under the influence of old official associations, I should have been naturally inclined to deprecate any disposition to invest one portion of the public service with a quasi-antagonistic character between departments; but upon a field of enquiry so wide, so important, so imperfectly defined, as this whole new philosophy of prison or reformatory discipline, forced too upon our attention, in part by our growing population, in part by our stationary number limits, in part by our colonial and geographical relations, and most of all peculiarly by the increased spirit of conscientiousness and reasoning benevolence which happily distinguishes our age, I think it is a ground for satisfaction that there should be such a thorough sifting of opinions, and even if repulsive such a collision of authorities, as to learn the least risk of preposessions, partiality, or mistake, and the best chance of ascertaining and adopting truth. Colonel Jebb comes into these honourable lists, recommended by a long series of active and meritorious exertions: Captain Crofton flushed with the achievement of a recent and brilliant success. Assuming, indeed, for the moment that the Irish experiment has been entirely satisfactory, I have always felt that the persons entrusted with the responsibilities of English or Scotch administration must decide upon the moment or extent for similar experiments in England and Scotland. It is certainly not impossible that there may be circumstances in the condition of these countries, or even in the national character, which would yet insure corresponding results from the same methods. My own means of observation have been almost wholly confined to Ireland, and it remains for me to state as succinctly as I can the impressions left upon my own mind. Mr. Hill, in the able paper already referred to, has sufficiently explained the successive stages or gradations of imprisonment now subsisting in that country, and which constitute a sort of criminal or convict hierarchy, beginning with Mountjoy Prison in Dublin, for the early periods of every sentence, and for the further detention of the wholly unpromising and unclassed; thence passing to Spike Island for the able-bodied, to Philip's Town to those better adapted to handicraft, both being appropriated to associated labour and cellular dormitories: ascending from Spike Island to Camden Fort, at the entrance to Cork harbour, where a greater degree of reliance on good behaviour is exhibited, as, for instance, allowing some of the men to form the crews of boats despatched about the harbour upon the business of constructing the fortifications; and, finally, culminating in Smithfield prison, in Dublin, or on the commons of Lusk, intended to form the intermediate stations and transitional periods before emerging into the outer world and entire freedom. Smithfield and Lusk, in fact, constitute the distinguishing novelties of the Irish system, and it is with Smithfield mainly that the neighbourhood of my own residence naturally brought me into the most frequent contact. As I know that too great reliance ought not to be placed upon the mere outward demeanor of prisons on any superficial symptoms that may attract the eye, it may be well just to recapitulate, in passing, the dry actual results which it has yet been possible to obtain of the working of the system since its very recent origin. It appears, then, that from the month of January 1856, up to the latest date to which accounts have been made up, the number of the discharged from the intermediate prisons is 1,327, of whom 511 were discharged unconditionally, and 816 on tickets of license. Of the 511 unconditionally discharged, only five have been recommitted to convict prisons. Of the 816 discharged on license, only 45 have had their licenses revoked, out of whom 15 were so dealt with for keeping bad company, drunkenness, or failing to report themselves; the re-convictions amounted to 30, which is under 4 per cent. The majority of these last 816 cases, have been made the subject of special reports from the police charged with the supervision of prisoners discharged on license, and, therefore, so far the whole truth is known concerning them. Captain Crofton augurs most favourably of the effects of this system of police supervision, as it has been tested in Ireland in the cases of prisoners discharged on license, and would evidently wish to apply it, in great measure, equally to those discharged unconditionally. On the first blush our prepossession might naturally be rather against such a proposition, as militating against the freedom of the subject then under no sentence of law. However I think that society is clearly entitled to give the full benefit of its scruples on the side of its honest members against those who, by the ascertained commission of crime, have rendered themselves legitimate objects of suspicion; and Captain Crofton insists very powerfully that this supervision, when rationally and discreetly exercised, has, within his own experience, proved to be, and in the nature of things is calculated to be, of real service to the well-disposed convict himself, as both coming between him and temptation, and as affording confidence to those who might be disposed to give him employment. Of the palpable repugnance of the ill-disposed convict I think we are bound to take little heed. On this head I will quote a passage from his recent notes in answer to Colonel Jebb:—"When I further add, that from 50 to 60 discharged convicts are under constant notice in the city of Dublin, and that among them are those whose evil and daring deeds have formerly made them but too notorious to the police; that many of these have for upwards of two years been in daily work; that I am in the habit of constantly and regularly communicating with the police for the purpose of checking and correcting any report I may receive, it will, I think, be evident how much the intermediate system and its training have accomplished, not alone, but in conjunction with the firm, judicious, and not inquisitorial use of the police." The proportion of criminals reckoned capable of profiting by admission to the intermediate prisons is still considered by Captain Crofton to amount to about 75 per cent of the whole. The improvement adverted to by Mr. Hill in the bodily health of the prisoners, as having decreased in two years from a mortality of 8 per cent, in 1854, to one of 2 per cent, in 1856, still happily subsists, or rather advances. The last annual report of the directors for the year 1857 states that the mortality has been 45 deaths in 2,342 prisoners, averaging 1·8 per cent. on the entire prison population. Feeling then a right to be thus encouraged and corroborated (by actual results and dry figures, I may the more safely seek to convey the impression derived from ocular observation. I never made a visit to Smithfield during the hours allotted to the evening schooling, and lecture without being most pleasantly impressed by the propriety and alertness of demeanour, and by the general absence of all sullenness or sullenness of the countenance or manner which distinguished the prisoners. I may here, perhaps mention that although I stood among them on these occasions with the full power of giving immediate pardon and freedom to any or all of them, and although occasionally anything particularly striking in the bearing or expressions of some among them might have tempted me to an exercise of partiality in their behalf, I never once allowed myself to interfere with any sentence except in the regular routine, upon the recommendation of the responsible authorities. After a complimentary passage devoted to Mr. Organ, the lecturer at the Smithfield and Lusk Reformatories, and another to the general good conduct of the prisoners in those institutions, the noble earl proceeded to notice the hold which Mr. Organ endeavours to establish upon the after careers of discharged prisoners.—The Law, he said, provides a map of this country of Dublin, upon which are marked the various stations where they are employed, or where there is a likelihood of employment being procured for them. He visits these stations frequently, either for the purpose of enquiring into the conduct and position of the men, or of securing fresh employment. Of 60 discharged prisoners now in the city of Dublin, not one has been out of employment for more than a few days except from failure of health. In many cases as may have been anticipated, the labour has been of a description not much sought after by those whose previous lives entitle them justly to greater latitude of choice, such as vitriol works and the like. This, however, speaks volumes for those who prefer even such labour to dishonesty and a recurrence of crime: it speaks surely not a little for the system which has thus trained and reclaimed them. As a mark of the influence Mr. Organ has been enabled to obtain over the men, even after their period of confinement is over, he has generally induced them to place £1 or £2 in the hands of their employers for a security, not so much for their honesty as for their regularity and continuance at work; and in case of the man having no earnings, or next to none, to his credit then to consent to a corresponding stoppage, for a certain time, from his wages. Having quoted at some length from the letters of discharged prisoners who had obtained honest employment, addressed to Mr. Organ in proof of the excellence of the system adopted by that gentleman, his Lordship continued:—My remarks have hitherto chiefly applied to male prisoners. The treatment of female prisoners will probably be rendered more systematic when the large metropolitan prison at Mountjoy, especially intended for them, shall have been completed. It can never become so easy in their case to apply the same number of progressive stages which public works out of doors make available for the men; but the system of draughting off the best behaved and most promising female prisoners into refuges has been tried with the happiest results. The Government have been fortunate enough to find establishments where this pious office has been voluntarily undertaken both in the Protestant and Roman Catholic communities of Dublin. Of the Protestant establishment, beyond rendering a just tribute to the conscientious care with which it appears to be managed, I need say but little, for a reason which certainly ought not to give any umbrage to the community, —I mean the very small number of prisoners who have hitherto belonged to that persuasion. The care of the Roman Catholic prisoners of this class has been undertaken by the ladies of the Sisterhood of Mercy at Galderbridge. Feeble and wholly inadequate, indeed, would be any words of mine to do justice to the unremitting self-devotion and cheerful alacrity with which the manager of the refuge, herself well-born and refined (I ought, I suppose, to confine myself to her assumed name of Sister Mary Magdalen), with her coadjutors, discharges this labour of great love. To prove that I am not using the language of mere compliment, an idle sentiment, I may present the following results, which, I believe, have never yet been given in so complete a form, at least from the first opening of the St. Vincent's Reformatory, in April, 1856, down to the present month,—152 have been received; 67 are at present there; 85 have been disposed of—you will remember that these were women, for the most part reared and steeped in crime, and from general experience, if discharged in ordinary course, would have given no hope of reformation; 21 have been sent to the situations in Ireland, and are ascertained to be doing well; 26 are in the colonies; 2½ have returned to their homes; 16 married, and are now living respectably; 8 were received by their parents; 5 have been received into an asylum; 2 have been married in Ireland, and are well reported of; 6 have been sent back to prison. So that out of the whole 86, there are only 6 to whom subsequent misconduct can be traced. I should be inclined, then, to sum up somewhat thus, the principles which pervade the system of convict discipline in Ireland, and which form the groundwork of whatever success it has obtained. At the outset the strictest form of penal discipline, the least amount of communication, except with the few privileged persons, and the lowest scale of diet consistent with health; subsequently progressive stages of employment and treatment, give scope to hope, stimulus to exertion, and room for the display of meritorious habits and trust-worthy qualities; finally, at the last stage (intended to form the transition to freedom), actual tests of obedience and honesty, and what I certainly should be disposed to put the chief strain upon, the surrounding of the prisoners, by the choice of agents adapted and qualified for the purpose, with an atmosphere of sympathy, encouragement, and beneficent influences: the power of individualizing them, and bringing the battery of advice and persuasion to bear upon their special cases; the causing them to feel that there are those in the world who care for them, and will watch their course, and glory in their good conduct. The proper agents for such a ministry of reformation may be difficult to find, but I am confident they are to be found; indeed I may say, in Ireland, they turned up for us ready for use as soon as they were wanted. To give proper verge for such a system to work, sentences of imprisonment ought to be of adequate length. I believe that the discretion of remitting the later periods of actual imprisonment, upon the condition of strict supervision and liability to re-imprisonment, might be advantageously extended. From all I can hear of the results of the experiment in Ireland, the supervision of discharged convicts by the police works extremely well both as a guarantee to the public, and a protection and preventive to the late criminal. The mode in which this whole difficult and momentous subject has been dealt with in Ireland has now, for the second time, been brought under the notice of the National Association. It has been made the subject of distinct inquiry from foreign governments, and I sincerely trust that its benefits will, before any long lapse of time, be extended to other communities and over wider fields. I now turn to the subject of the reformatories established for young criminals in England. The establishments in Scotland, to a great extent, have more the character of Ragged or Industrial Training Schools; but about these I have no details to give. The act authorising institutions in Ireland, corresponding with those now existing in England, was only passed in the late session of Parliament. The first report of the Inspector of Reformatory Schools in Great Britain has recently been issued; and it is of happy omen for these institutions that they are placed under an overlooker who brings to the work so much congenial experience and so much genuine benevolence as Mr. Sydney Turner. We learn from his report that 40 English certified reformatories have come under his inspection, and he gives a brief but interesting suggestive summary of their respective conditions. I have the less need, however, to dwell upon the contents, as they are probably in all your hands, and especially in Liverpool, where Mr. Turner states that the Reformatory Act has been more extensively applied than in any other place. I have as yet only had the opportunity of seeing four reformatories, and three of these only very cursorily; these three are Calder farm near Mirfield, established by the thoughtful benevolence of Mr. Wheatley Balme, most happily situated in a meaded range of hills, overlooking the valley of the winding Calder, and happier in the more important elements of kindly and efficient management; next, one yet in its infancy, at Adel near Leeds, where the lads are still employed in the rougher parts of the building work, and in reclaiming a piece of stony moorland, with an obvious will and vigour, which promises as well for their health as it speaks well for the wholesome moral influence of the master set over them; another, at Market Weighton, is appropriated to Roman Catholics; it now contains 85 boys, and ultimately will have accommodation for 200; it is built with more attention to architectural effect than any establishment of the kind I have yet seen, and is managed by a staff belonging to the confraternities of the Roman Catholic Church, apparently with a devotedness which so often distinguishes these bodies. The remaining school to which I have referred is nestled among my own meads at Castle Howard, and I can say with truth that I regard it as one of the chief attractions of a place not deficient in its adornments. The main cause of the success which the institution has hitherto obtained—for it must be remembered that, with respect to all of them, we are as yet speaking only by the light of very early experience—as well as of its special attraction for myself, is undoubtedly to be found in the character and qualities of the superintending chaplain, Mr. Fish. I have already borne my testimony to the merits of Mr. Organ, and I should wish to dwell for a moment on those which exhibit a large amount of correspondence and of contrast with them. I feel the less hesitation to indulge in this line of remark from the thorough conviction that the speedy success of all reformatory influence, whether upon the adult or youthful criminal, must, under the divine blessing, be mainly dependent upon the men who are employed as the conductors and agents. The same single-minded devotedness to duty, the same straightforward simplicity of character, the same tenderness of sympathy for the working classes, among whom they have both spent their young years of toil, distinguished alike the Church of England chaplain and the Irish Roman Catholic teacher; but the appearance and the disposition of the Englishman have that mild, mellow, pensive character which would seem to have retained something of the sadness which familiarity with scenes of suffering, and contact with rude and bitter tempers, might naturally have imparted; while the moods of the Irishman were so impulsive and racy of his own soil, of its quick-witted humour and gleaming pathos, as to make one of his common grammar lessons as entertaining as any play. I think it not unimportant to show that the minds of various textures may be drawn into the service of mercy, provided there be the indispensable ingredients of earnestness and discretion. Whether there be good reason or not for indulging in the hope of a large amount of adult reformation, there is every ground for expecting palpable and extensive results in the matter of juvenile reformation. I believe it will be found that all those who have most considered the subject, as well as been most engaged in its practical operations, entertain the conviction that in by far the greater number of cases of youthful crime the training of the children has been such as to give a criminal direction to their habits, and that they have thus become what their parents or their circumstances have made them. The distinguished president of the first provincial meeting of the National Reformatory Union held at Bristol in 1856 (Lord Stanley), put the case of 100 criminal children thus:—Born of dishonest parents, 60; born of profligate parents, 36; born of honest and industrious parents, 10. The Castle Howard Reformatory statistics nearly confirm these proportions. Sixty-four have passed through the school, and are now inmates. Of these there are:—Born of dishonest parents, 39; born of profligate parents, 23; born of honest and industrious parents, 12. I will add these very brief illustrations which, I think, throw considerable light upon more than one branch of reformatory inquiry. It shall be that of the very first they committed to the Castle Howard School. He had been a worker in a cotton mill, the foreman of which apparently discovered special aptitudes in him extending beyond his work, so he kept him when the other hands were dismissed, and taught him to pick pockets!—For two years our boy Tom regularly picked pockets on the pier of Hull, and at the High Church, giving the proceeds to his instructor. In return he was comfortably lodged and fed, and often taken to the theatre. He remembers instances of robbery from the person, the aggregate proceeds of which exceeded £200, all of which were perpetrated before he was convicted at all. When once he had been caught, convictions followed in rapid succession until they had reached seven, at which point the Castle Howard School was opened in his person. After the treatment of two years, partly there and partly at Calder Farm, he is now pursuing an industrious and honest career. From this short narrative I would deduce the following points:—The exposure of young children to corrupting influences; the great expensiveness of even the most youthful crime, as evidenced both in amount of undetected plunder and the cost of repeated prosecutions and convictions; and, the most important of all, the hopefulness of the reformatory process, which I should have felt myself less emboldened by this single instance to lay stress upon, if I had not the authority of the Superintendent for stating that the large majority of cases already completed, of which he has been cognizant, have been equally satisfactory. I am aware that many of the farmers in my neighbourhood are not only willing to avail themselves of the labour of the boys while they are still inmates of their school, but are ever anxious to take them into permanent service upon their discharge. There have been some very pleasing instances of boys making restitution after their discharge to persons whom they had previously robbed. The chaplain of the jail at Hull writes:—"The effect of the reformatory movement on the juvenile criminals of Hull has, I think, been of the most beneficial character; some weeks ago, we had not a single boy in gaol." I believe that similar satisfactory testimony can be given from other districts, but I have deemed it best to confine myself to my own. There are several points connected with reformatory tactics which must be considered, so to term it, as still afloat, and upon which I am willing to hope that our present gathering may be destined to shed light. A prominent one is the amount of reformatory accommodation which ought to be supplied. This, however, for its adequate solution, hinges upon another, probably the most important and the most difficult of all that await decision. What ought to be the condition of admission? Ought the once convicted, ought the twice convicted, ought, in any case, the wholly unconvicted to be admissible? It certainly appears to me that, with a view both to the due protection of the money, partly at least received from the State, and to the inadequacy of the accommodation as yet provided for the criminal class, it would not be right to allow any admission except of an actual convict. Then, with respect to the once convicted, though I can conceive cases where it might be so desirable to remove a child from evil influences and companionships as to overcome all other scruples, yet, as it is the duty which the reformatory owes to the State to operate preferentially upon the most hardened and abandoned classes, and as there also may be many cases where a boy or girl may have lapsed or been led into the commission of some isolated fault or act of lawlessness without any such perversity of temper or will as to make them fit associates of the thoroughly depraved, but yet, which some short, sharp instrument would probably be the best method of cure, it seems to me that, at all events, till there is more than sufficient room for the aggravated cases it would be advisable to make a plurality of convictions the general condition of admission. On this head the chaplain of the gaol at Hull has remarked, in a letter addressed to our superintendent, "It has always appeared to me unreasonable, as well as unnecessary, to send a boy to a reformatory for a first offence, except in extreme cases where such cunning or depravity is exhibited as indicates a most deprared disposition." In our own case, we manifestly want increased accommodation in any view of the case. It appears from some returns we have obtained from the East Riding House of Correction at Beverley, and from the Hull borough gaol, that the boys convicted during the last three years under 16 years of age there are,—convicted once, 275; twice, not included above, 58; more than twice, 42. Of these 50 have been sent to reformatory schools. The total number convicted more than once is just 100; so that, supposing none to have been sent to reformatories who had not been twice convicted, 50 would still remain at large in the Riding. In like manner, Mr Shepherd, the Governor of the Wakefield prison, has recently said that he knew of more than a hundred West Riding cases for which he could not find room in a reformatory.—I believe that different opinions are entertained respecting the best sources of supply for the maintenance of the schools. In some instances local rates have been already resorted to. It is obvious that such a resource cannot be called in without some sacrifice of independence on the part of managers and superintendents. Probably different methods may be suitable to different circumstances; time and experience will develop their own exigencies, and I am not aware that they are yet ripe enough for any further appeal to legislative provisions. I feel that no doubt can be entertained either of the propriety or expediency of the aid of the Government being given to meet voluntary efforts and subscriptions. Whether the withdrawal of the grants hitherto made by the Committee of Privy Council is justified on the ground of the necessity of two separate streams of supply proceeding from the State, I will not take upon myself to decide; but I think that in any case there has been reason to regret the abruptness of the determination. It behoves the managers and friends of the schools all the more to strain every nerve to make them as independent as they can of all extrinsic aid beyond the still remaining grant from the Home Department. I cordially embrace conclusions at which I believe the collective thought and wisdom which have been exercised on this subject had already arrived, that the relations of the State to the reformatories which have been established should embrace inspection, but exclude interference, except of course, in case of patent and obvious abuse; and that it would be inexpedient to lay down any rigid or undeviating rule of management, such for instance, as any exact scheme of rewards and punishments, to what extent corporal punishment should be applied, and the like. The great essential condition is to procure the right men for superintendents or masters; the interior details will best be confided to their discretion, acting upon the materials with which they are called upon to deal. It appears to me next desirable powers of levying contributions from the parents of children placed in reformatories should be enforced as extensively as possible. A most important and pregnant subject for consideration is the after disposal of the pupils.—Their ever best security against relapse to evil courses and dangerous associations would probably be found in emigration.—Could the State be properly called upon to contribute to this end, at all events, in aid of private effort? Boys may, in many cases, be fit to go out as emigrants, before it would be safe to discharge them at home, within reach of old haunts and comrades, so that a more than corresponding saving in the State contribution to their maintenance would be thus effected. Some of the inmates will unhappily continue unfitted either for emigration abroad or for employment at home. I think it well worthy of reflection whether, for the thoroughly incorrigible and unmanageable, it might not be desirable to have a more exclusively penal reformatory. I am informed that Mr. Sydney Turner has recommended the employment of the prison at Parkhurst for this purpose. Consideration must, of course, be given to the lawful duration of sentences; but it clearly would be conducive to the general welfare that the periods of detention should be sufficiently long to admit of the full process of reformation, and that as few as possible should be let loose anew on society till it has been thoroughly accomplished. I may sum up what I have thus imperfectly said on both branches of my subject, by stating that the same principle of treatment appears to me to apply alike both to adult and juvenile reformation, as might have been expected when human nature supplies the material to be worked upon in either case, with whatever modification of degree and circumstances. The almost indispensable condition of success seems to be that the criminals, of whatever age or description, should be brought together in such numbers, and under such arrangements, as admits of their being—to use a term which, I believe, is now understood—individualized; of their being each, in his own person, the subject upon whom influence, argument, advice, sympathy, are brought to bear; that before they are restored to a world which would naturally look upon them with distrust and suspicion, they should have had the opportunity of submitting to some trustworthy test their altered resolutions and dispositions, and that throughout this whole reciperative process the machinery upon which, under the blessing from above, we can mainly rely, in one human heart mainly acting upon another human heart.

The Right of Visit.

From the London Examiner.

What is the right of search but the passport system of the sea? Well, but the claim of search has been abandoned, and all that is asked of the Americans is some means of identifying the vessel with the flag she carries. What is this, however, still, but the passport system of the sea? Will you let a boat come alongside and ask civilly for the ship's papers? asks England. No, replies the United States, our vessels must be free to traverse the seas without let or hindrance. And we believe we must confess America to be more in the right than our prejudices prepare us to admit. All our arguments for identification of the nationality with the flag are precisely the arguments used in defence of the continental passport system. We advocate a Police for the seas analogous to the French and Austrian Police for the land. We want to know who is who at sea. We hold it desirable that our naval gendarme should have power to ask all mercantile vessels the question: Who are you, and what are you? The Americans claim for ships at sea the same freedom of passing without question or interruption as of men on land, and maintain that the evil of an occasional abuse of the flag is less than that of the frequent interruption of vessels which would result from the enquiry proposed. It must be borne in mind that a ship has something of a corporate character, and does a man relish being stopped with the question, Who are you, and show that you are not a thief? But how are piracy and slave-dealing to be discovered and prevented, if no inquiries can be made to ascertain whether vessels are entitled to the colors they show? How is the thief or cut-throat discovered on land? The capture is generally made at the risk of the officer, if there be error, but how seldom does error occur? And the practised naval officer is not less shrewd than the detective in discovering the signs and tokens of a guilty traffic. We do not, then, believe that much will be lost by the abandonment of the right of search, or of visit and inquiry; but whatever may be the value of these things, certain it is that we must submit to do as best we may without them, as other nations will not consent to a stricter sea policy, and we cannot go to war with all the maritime world in order to put down the slave trade. It is not agreeable to the national pride to surrender any power or pretension once asserted, but so it must be. Time was when the foreigner in our waters was compelled to lower his footstep in homage to the British flag. That time-honoured usage we were obliged to abandon. The right of search followed, and now is denied the request to see the ship's title to her flag.

Rumors of the 'London Times' Supplement.

From the Boston Evening Courier.

It may not be generally known that the London Times has long daily published an extra, or "supplement," as it was formerly called—we believe that the name is now dropped,—containing only advertisements. As a general rule, with us, this part of a newspaper has not a deep interest; but in a city like London and in a journal like the Times, the reader will find entertainment and instruction. On the first column stands the record of births, marriages, deaths; following these are advertisements of sundry funeral companies, stating the scale of prices for which they will bury the dead, giving them the following styles from which to choose:—"Best class funeral with hearse and four, two coaches (pairs,) full equipments, shell, lead coffin-case, &c., £30; Tradesmen's funeral, hearse and pair, and coach and pair, £6 6s.; Artisan's funeral, hearse and one, coach and one, £3 13s." In England it seems tradesmen and artisans are content to carry even into the grave the distinctions which separate them while in the flesh. A few advertisements of monuments and tombstones take us naturally back again into the world, and introduce us to the two columns of amusements which follow. There are announcements of magicians, equestrians—including "The Great United States Circus,"—balls and casinos, dissolving views, Shakspearian readings, concerts of all sorts—including some companies of negro minstrels—pictures lectures and masked balls, by our old friend Julien. But here a well known name meets our eye:—

"Barnum on Making Money—St. James' Hall.—On Wednesday, Dec. 29, Mr. P. T. Barnum, of New York, will have the honor of addressing a London audience for the first time, upon the Science of Money Making, in the course of which he will introduce all original definition of humbug, sustained by experiences, arguments, examples, anecdotes, and illustrations, vindicating his theory. Doors open at 7, commencing at 9 precisely. Carriages may be ordered at a quarter to 10. Stalls, 3s; balcony, 2s; body of hall and gallery, 1s.

We shall look with interest to learn what success Peter the Great has met with. Miss Julia St. George appeals to the British public for patronage; her entertainment consists of miscellaneous songs and recitations; she quotes a line from some poet:—"The comic and the serious, the tender and the warlike, proceed from the same versatile mind!" This strikes us as a little worse than any of the "critical notices" of our own land.

Looking farther we learn that we can "dine economically, and yet like a gentleman," for two shillings at a tavern in Bow Street. Numbers of carriages and horses are to be sold, and, in London as elsewhere no one seems to sell because he wants money, only by reason of ill-health, or contemplated absence. Next we find many columns of boarding-places and apartments to be let; all varieties of circumlocution are tried, to escape from the disagreeable imputation of "keeping boarders," or "taking lodgers";—

"A married gentleman, having a larger house than he requires, wishes to engage with either one or two ladies."

"Imatints archer! Could not one suffice?"

"An agreeable gentleman is also desired to complete a cheerful social winter in a warm, well regulated house, with liberal domestic arrangements."

A startling heading of "Neglected Education" is only a prelude to the mild announcement that the advertiser will receive two sisters who desire instruction. The following is suggestive:—

"To Widow Ladies.—A gentleman, widower, about giving up housekeeping, is desirous of finding the comforts of a permanent home in the house of a widow lady of good position and means, where there are no other inmates or children."

Looking on we find that a young physician wishes to buy a practice. Two others are willing to sell. The balance seems to be in favor of poor humanity. Several married couples desiring places as servants, advertise that they are without incumbrances." What can they mean? Can this word be in their minds a synonym for children!

There are four columns of people wanting places—principally governesses, coachmen, valets, gardeners, and governesses. As an additional inducement to hirers, most of these parties except the poor governess, of whom it is expected as a matter of course, state that they "would not object to make themselves useful!" The ladies' maids are particularly obliging; they are kind enough to say that they "would not object to travel," which considering their generally delicate organization, is a great concession. A number of these advertisers, principally the cooks, boldly say:—"Good character." But a majority, with the kind of humanity which inspires some of us when we call ourselves miserable sinners, only claim a good character for the few years immediately preceding their offer of themselves, thus we see, 5 years good character?" 2½ years good character?" but "12 months" is the very lowest mark, as the retailers say to bargaining ladies. One cook advertises that she is accustomed to Jew's cooking," and hopes to save her bacon in that way. Our grandmothers always told us that if we only behaved well we should be handsome; but this theory seems to be at variance with English ideas for we continually see 'Cooks—good plain.' Several nursemaids advertise that they "understand their duties," a somewhat desirable quality.

Among the personal notices we find the following:

"If Jim, who left his wife, and said he would return when a better man, will let his mother know where he is, he will hear of something to his advantage."

The supposition is that 'Jim' never found his moral nature sufficiently healthy to warrant his return. There was certainly a falsity about this parting speech of Jim's; if his wife was a good one, how could he expect to become better when absent from by? If, on the other hand, she was so bad a wife that he could only improve by having her, why should he not stay away altogether. Then, too, another thing puzzles us; why does this summons to return and hear something to his advantage come from his mother and not from his deserted wife? It looks a little as if, by this vague phrase, the mother wished to inform him of Mrs. "Jim's" decease. In conclusion if a copy of the advertisement sheet of the Times falls in the way of our readers, they ought not to look contemptuously upon it; nor liften it to last years directory, a literary work not generally attractive; for a hasty perusal of some announcements therein contained will show many curious peculiarities of English life.

(The following letter has been sent to us. We suppose that the writer intends us to publish it.—Ed. Colonist and Atlas.

GEORGE BROWN TO A. A. DORION.

Church Street, Toronto, 26th Jan. 1859.
1 o'clock A. M.

My Dear Dorion,—I have just returned from the two celebrations' of the Burns' Centenary Anniversary, and should I live to be a hundred years old, I must solemnly declare I never will go to another. Both affairs passed off very differently from what I expected they would, and I must confess very unsatisfactorily. In the first place, although everybody was invited to be there at sharp 6. our pompous little Mayor did not make his appearance, and at a quarter past 7, a motion was made that the business should be commenced. Fortunately we had a live baronet, whom we moved into the chair, and Sir James Hay kindly consented to preside till the Mayor should arrive.

The company showed much dissatisfaction as to the arrangements. Being under the impression that the Banquet was to take precedence, many had in consequence not dined, and when they found that speaking was to come on before eating, many declared that they would prefer five minutes' treat of Mrs. Webb's repast to an hour of D'Arcy McGee's 'feast of reason,' or to Mr. McLauchlan's Lyrics, which they were quite sure were not suited to their taste.

"Long ere the appointed hour, the stewards were busily engaged in conducting the guests to their seats, and before proceedings commenced all the room was occupied.—Down the aisle and surrounding each doorway were heaps of compressed crinoline and broadcloth, rendering ingress and egress equally impossible. It was no use pushing and looking sulky, and grumbling, the walls could not expand, neither would the seats, the crinoline was confined in the smallest possible space, so the pressure had to be borne; those so inconvenienced deriving much comfort from the knowledge that they would be first in at the supper."

In the absence of little Wilson, the Mayor, Sir James Hay introduced Dr. McCaul to the company, who opened the proceedings with a very nice speech; but there were certain allusions and quotations which a certain Highland Laird of six feet and more inches in height declared (looking at D'Arcy) was a hit at our party The quotation from Burns was as follows:—

"The King may make a belted Knight
A Marquis, Duke, an' a' that,
But an honest man's aboon his might,
For a' that an' a' that"

"Now, Sir Edmund," said the Laird, "has made some queer Honorables, but he could not make them honest men."

Whilst McCaul was speaking little Adam came into the room and apologised for the absence of the Governor General, who being expected to be present at both celebrations, wisely abstained from going to either. Adam then burst out in a fit of oratory, and amongst other incidents mentioned that this 1859 was also the anniversary of the taking of Canada from the French, when D'Arcy pulled him by the coat tail, and he launched forth into the praise of Burns, and informed us that he (Burns, not Adam) was very fond of women and whiskey. McLachlan spoke next, and was followed by McGee, but the impatience of the company became so great that the doors of the "Banquet Room" were opened, and the real business commenced "Castles of Sugar" were stormed and taken; "Crosses of St. George and St. Andrew were overturned" lions rampant and couchant" were devoured; "hon-hons and turkeys, ices and salmon, "hams real and unreal" went the way of all flesh; the usual toasts were given and when the "health of the Governor General was proposed I entered the room. The cheering was great, but whether for me or the Governor I could not scarcely ascertain. However, I bowed but said nothing. Dancing then commenced, but as I do not dance I left for the Rossin House, where the more respectable portion of the community had assembled, and I arrived there just as Sir John B. Robinson was replying to the toast of "The Bench and Bar of Canada, and (fixing his eye upon me) he made the following remarks as to the duty of the Bench:—

"The course to be taken by those who occupied a seat on the Bench was perfectly clear. They should first make up their minds according to the best of their ability upon the question brought before them, and then deliver their judgment. It was not their duty to attend to any political consideration whatever. Neither was it their duty, nor should it be their object to conciliate any particular party." (Hear.)

Here was a speech in the heart which I did not expect, and that fellow Connor when he spoke endorsed all that the Chief had said, but you know his brother-in-law Blake was mixed up with the toast.

My toast was, "Our Universities and Schools," and I had prepared to pitch into Egerton Ryerson like a "thousand of bricks' but the Doctor was not present, and I was compelled to go off in praise of Scotchmen generally, and of Burns in particular. I also stated that it was but a few years since the Prime Minister of England was a Scotchman; and was upon the eve of hinting what Scotchman besides John A. was once Prime Minister of Canada; but I didn't.

Chief-Justice Draper in honied tones followed me in a speech upon the scientific institutions of Canada, and I fear that my braying did not chime in very musically with the language used by the two Chief Justices.

Connor's toast came off next, "The Genius of Song," and a pretty song he sung.—Here are his words, he must have been drunk! He would have remark that from one end of Canada to the other the honorable gentlemen who sat upon the Canadian Bench were not regarded with greater admiration and respect than by the bar of the Province. He was not peculiar in saying this, inasmuch as some of the ablest men from the Universities of the old country who had visited Canada had declared that the honorable gentlemen who adorned the Bench of Canada would be an ornament to any bench in the world. What are we to expect from him? I was completely astounded, not thinking somebody for Mowatt's guardian, when he gave the "Press" but his speech was rank Grit and water affair, (as usual) that I doubt if the reporter will give him more than some lines in the Globe.

I did not feel comfortable amongst the set who were assembled, this knocking of elbows against Chief Justices, Vice Chancellors, Chancellors, Professors, and other gentlemen, is not to my taste; and had I not seen Mowatt, John Bell and Terry O'Neil, amongst the guests, I should not have sat down at the table although I had paid for my ticket.

The wine and whiskey toddy which I drank has given me a racking pain in my head. I hope however, a few hours sleep will enable me to rise and look after a note for $200, which falls due to day. (By the way should Holton not arrive before 3 o'clock, I shall draw upon you, for $300, and before the draft matures you can draw upon me at 60 days, and as the House will be in session at that time, I shall be in funds)

I shall have a few minutes to add to this letter before the post leaves if I had occasion, in the meantime believe me,

Faithfully yours,
G——e B——n.

A. A. Dorion, Esq., Montreal.

P.S.—9 o'clock, p. m. | Holton has arrived, but I have not succeeded in getting a rise out of him, so I have sent the draft.—You need not be apprehensive about the payment, you can leave word with Patrick to stop it out of my Sessional allowance.

I wrote a feeling note to Sicotte, but whether or not he knew the writing on the superscription, it has been returned to my address unopened. Now I know that the Seat of Government question is to be introduced into the speech. There is likely to be a new election—I shall not run for Toronto.

Mr. Sellar the Secretary of the St. Lawrence Burns' Anniversary, has just been to inquire whether D. McGee's travelling expenses should be paid out of the proceeds of the Banquet—as he finds that D'Arcy will be paid for his trip up by the House. He thinks that he is also to be paid for travelling up to give a lecture on Thursday night, and D'Arcy threatens to go back to Montreal if he is not paid his expenses from Monday till Saturday, at $6 per diem.

G. B.

Provincial Parliament.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Saturday, Jan. 29, 1859.

A few minutes after the departure of His Excellency, the Speaker took the chair.

Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet moved,—"That the House do take into consideration the speech of His Excellency on Monday next."

Hon. Mr. Morris hoped the hon. gentleman would, according to custom, allow a day to interrene.

Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet had no objection if such was the desire of the House.

Hon. Mr. De Blaquiere would be glad if the consideration of the speech were proceeded with on Monday next. There was no use in losing a day. The country could not afford the expense.

Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet said it was the duty of the Government to be prepared to proceed with the business on every occasion, and to curb expenditure as much as possible. But where there was any general expression of feeling on the part of the House, the Government would not feel itself bound to yield.

After some further conversation, Mr. Vankoughnet's resolution was amended by the insertion of the word "Tuesday," which was accepted.

Hon. Col. Prince laid upon the table a petition from Mr. Ure and others.

The Standing Committees for the session having been struck, the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

The second session of the present Parliament was opened on Saturday afternoon. With the exception of about 40 all the members were in their seats. The following were present:—Messrs. Aikins, Alleyn, Baby, Beaubien, Bell, Bellingham, Benjamin Biggar, Brown, Bureau, Burton, Malcolm Cameron, Carling, Caron, Bayley, Atty. Gen. Cartier, Cauchon, Chapais, Cimon, Clark, Connor, Daly, Dionne, Dorion, Dorland, Drummond, Dufresne, Dunkin, Ferguson, Ferres, Finlayson, Foley, Fortier, Foster, Fournier, Galt, Gill, Gould, Gowan, Harcourt, Harwood, Heath, Hebert, Hogan, Holmes, Howland, Jobin, Labelle, Lacoste, Laframboise, Langevin, Loranger Macbeth, Atty. Gen. Macdonald, D. A. Macdonald, MacLeod, McCann, A. P. McDonald, McDougall, McGee, McKellar McMicken, Merritt, Morin, Morrison, Mowat, Munro, Notman, Ouimet, Panet, Playfair, Rose, R. W. Scott, Sherwood, Sicotte, Simard, Sidney Smith, H. Smith, (Speaker) Somerville, Talbot, Tasse, Tett, Thibaudeau, Wallbridge, Webb, White Wright.

Many of the members sat on different benches from those occupied by them last session. Hon. Mr. Drummond, took the seat hitherto filled by Mr. Mackenzie.—Mr. Hogan was in Mr. Wallbridge's place; Dr. Connor in Mr. Hogan's; and Mr. Wallbridge in Dr. Connor's.—Mr. Bell was in Mr. Christie's seat, and Mr. Biggar in Mr. Bell's. Mr. Morin and Mr. Dufresne exchanged seats, the former crossing over to the Opposition, the latter to the Ministerial, side of the House. Hon. Mr. Cayley, Hon. Mr. Sicotte, and Hon. Mr. Loranger sat together on the three front cross-benches on the Ministerial side. Immediately behind them was Hon. Mr. Thibaudeau, who retains the old seat. Hon. Mr. Galt took the seat by the side of Atty. Gen. Cartier, vacated by the retirement from the Ministry of Hon. Mr. Sicotte and on the two benches behind them were Hon. Mr. Rose and Hon. Mr. Sherwood.

The speaker took the chair shortly after three o'clock immediately upon which the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod commanded the attendance of the House in the Chamber of the Legislative Council. Thither the Speaker preceded, accompanied by many of the members and proceeded by the Sergeant-at-Arms. On their return—

ELECTIONS DURING THE RECESS.

The Speaker informed the House that during the recess he had received certificates of returns of the following hon. members who had been elected to sit in the House in the place of members who had vacated their seats:—Hon. Mr. Galt, for Sherbrooke; Hon. Mr. Lemieux, for Levi; Charles Alleyn, Esq., for the North Riding of Wellington; Hon. J. S. Macdonald, for Cornwall; Hon. Mr. Foley, for the North Riding of Waterloo; Hon. Mr. Sherwood for Brockville; Hon. Mr. Brown, for Toronto; Hon. Mr. Thibaudeau, for Portneuf; Charles Joseph Laberge, Esq., for Iberville Hon. Mr. Dorion, for Montreal; Shellaton-Conner, Esq., for the South Riding of Oxford; Hon. Mr. Mowat for the South Riding of Ontario; Asa B. Foster Esq., for Shefford; Hon. Mr. Drummond for Lotbiniere; and Michael Harcourt, Esq., for Huntingdon. The Speaker also informed the House that he had received certificates of returns of members, pursuant to his warrants issued during the recess, in the following cases:—Hugh Finlayson, Esq., for the East Riding of Brant; and George Caron, Esq., for Maskinonge. The Speaker likewise informed the House that he had received a notification according to law of a vacancy in the North Riding of Wellington, occasioned by the death of Charles Allan, Esq., and that he had issued his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery for a new election.

THE NEW MEMBERS TAKE THEIR SEATS.

Hon. Mr. Brown, and Hon. Mr. Dorion then formally introduced Hugh Finlayson, Esq., the newly-elected member for East Brant, and conducted him to his seat.—Michael Harcourt, Esq., the member for Haldimand, was escorted to his seat by Hon. Mr. Foley and Hon. Mr. Drummond. Mr. Dunkin and Mr. Webb conducted to his seat Asa B. Foster, Esq.; the member for Shefford. And George Caron, Esq., the member for Maskinonge, was brought in by Hon. Mr. Loranger and Hon. Mr. Sicotte.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS TO JUSTICES.

Atty. Gen. Cartier brought in a Bill (pro forma) to provide for the administration of oaths of office to persons appointed to be Justices in this Province.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The Speaker informed the House that when the House waited upon His Excellency in the Legislative Council Chamber, His Excellency was pleased to make a speech, of which, to prevent mistakes, he had obtained a copy and which he then read to the House. (The Speech will be found elsewhere.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

Hon. Mr. Alleyn laid upon the table copies of despatches and other documents connected with the seat of Government.—

DEBATE ON THE SPEECH.

Atty. Gen. Cartier moved that the Speech of His Excellency be taken into consideration on Monday next.—Carried

VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS

Atty. Gen. Cartier moved that the votes and proceedings of the House be printed for the use of members, and that no one but such persons as Mr. Speaker shall appoint shall presume to print the same.—Carried.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Atty. Gen. Cartier moved that the usual Standing Committees be appointed:—1st, Privileges and Elections; 2nd, Expiring Laws; 3rd, Railways, Canals, and Telegraph Lines; 4th, Private Bills; 5th, Standing Orders; 6th, Printing; 7th, Contingencies; 8th, Public Accounts—with power to examine and enquire into such things as may be referred to them by the House, and to send for persons, papers, and records.—Carried.

Atty. Gen Cartier gave notice that he would on Monday move the appointment of a Select Committee to prepare lists of members for the Standing Committees.

The House, then, at five minutes before one, adjourned until three o'clock on Monday.

SPEECH:

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

It is my duty, on the present occasion, to call your attention to the question of the Seat of Government of Canada.

The Legislature of Canada having resolved that a fixed Seat of Government should be selected, solicited Our Gracious Queen, by an address of either House to exercise Her prerogative in making such selection.

An Act, moreover, was passed adopting beforehand the decision of Her Majesty, and appropriating the necessary funds.

This Act of the Canadian Parliament and the decision of the Queen are binding on the Executive Government of the Province, and it will be their duty to carry out the understanding which existed at the time when the reference was made, by which the Government will be transferred to Quebec for a fixed period, until the necessary arrangements shall have been completed.

The correspondence with Her Majesty's Government will be laid before you, and I cannot doubt that you will recognize a selection made by Her Majesty at your own request, and that you will duly acknowledge Her gracious compliance with the Address which you yourselves caused to be presented to Her.

It affords me much satisfaction to state that the commission for the settlement of the Seignorial tenure will shortly close its labours, and that a moderate outlay beyond the appropriation of 1854 will satisfy all reasonable expectations on the part of the Censitaries.

The Municipal Law of Lower Canada requires revisal and consolidation. A measure for this purpose will be submitted for your consideration.

The possibility of uniting, by some tie of a federal character, the British Colonies in North America, has formed the subject of correspondence, which will be placed in your hands. I will also cause to be submitted to you despatches from Her Majesty's Secretary of State, in relation to questions affecting the Hudson's Bay Company, and on the subject of the Inter-Colonial Railway.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

The accounts for the year just expired shall be laid before you as soon as possible. I regret that the financial and commercial depression which has weighed upon us, in common with our neighbors, has not wholly passed away.

But it is gratifying for me to state that symptoms of amendment have begun to show themselves, and I trust that should Providence bless Canada this year with her usually abundant harvest, she will recover her former prosperous condition. The exercise of a sound and rigid economy in every department of the public service will, I hope, again enable us to bring our whole expenditure within the limits required by our Revenue.

I have the satisfaction to inform you that an arrangement respecting the debt due to the Imperial Government, and the sinking fund connected with it, of a character highly advantageous to the Province, has been effected in England. The papers relating to this matter shall be laid before you.

In asking at your hands the supplies for her Majesty's Service, I desire to assure you that everything will be done with a view to placing the tariff on a satisfactory footing. The principle of ad valorem duties will be proposed for your adoption in all cases in which it can be properly and advantageously applied.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen:

The important work of the revision of the Statutes is, I am happy to say, nearly completed, and Parliament will soon be required to pass such a measure of consolidation as you may see fit to sanction.

I believe that I have summoned you to meet on the present occasion at the time most convenient to yourselves. So much beneficial legislation on important subjects has been dealt with in the last few Sessions that I shall hope to congratulate you on your release at a time somewhat earlier than usual.

With this hope I now leave you to your Parliamentary labors."

The ceremony of opening Parliament being completed, the Governor General took his departure, and was followed to the entrance to the House by his staff. When the carriage drove off, escorted in the same order as it had arrived, his Excellency was saluted with cheers, followed by groans and hisses.

Tuesday, Feb. 1

The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.

HON. MR. SICOTTE'S RETIREMENT FROM THE GOVERNMENT.

After the disposal of the usual routine business, the Speaker desired that the Order of the Day for the consideration of His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the session might be called.

Hon. Mr. Sicotte then rose and said—Before the Order of the Day is called, I believe for the information of the House, that an explanation should be given to the House as to the cause which led to my retirement from the Government. I am about to submit to the House a statement of facts which has been agreed upon between the two parties, setting forth generally the issues relating to the question which finally had the effect of causing my resignation from the Government. Of course, this statement of facts was agreed upon as simply marking out the General action of the Government so far as I had anything to do with it. To prevent any mis-statement or misunderstanding, I will read the statement of facts agreed upon between the Government and myself. It is as follows:—"The Government of which Mr. Macdonald was leader, and Mr. Sicotte a member, having been defeated on the vote against Her Majesty's decision, resigned, and Mr. Cartier having been recently charged with the reconstruction of a Government, a difficulty at once arose with respect to the Seat of Government question. Mr. Sicotte contended that we were no longer bound to stand by the Imperial decision after the vote of the House—that we had sufficiently vindicated the law by upholding the decision in the House once, and retiring on the adverse vote, and that the House having expressed an opinion against the decision, we should abandon it, and that he considered that any policy on that question contrary to the vote of the House, would be a violation of the right of the majority to rule. Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Vankoughnet both contended that if it was right once to uphold the Queen's award, it must be right again, and that the mere fact of a majority of the House of Assembly having differed from us on the particular vote which was taken was no reason for our changing our own opinions or altering our course—that our duty was to try and change the opinion expressed by the House and not to yield to it—and that, at all events, the law could only be altered by Parliament, and not by one branch of the Legislature. Mr. Sicotte did not take this view; but as it was agreed to take up earnestly the subject of federation, and to press its consideration upon the Imperial Government and the sister colonies, it was arranged that the matter of the Seat of Government should lie over until it was ascertained how this project was received, and what advance it was likely to make before the commencement of another session. Mr. Scotte reserved to himself the right to retire in the event of the Government determining, as a policy, to uphold the Imperial decision, and Mr. Mcdonald and Mr. Vankoughnet declaring that unless the the policy of maintaining the Queen's decision was adopted, they equally would retire. On this understanding between Messrs. Cartier, Sicotte, Macdonald, Vankoughnet, Galt, and Ross, Mr. Cartier's Government was formed. After the return of Mr. Cartier from England, and after the receipt, subsequently, of despatches from the Colonial Office, on the subject of a federal scheme, it was agreed by all the members of the Government, Mr. Sicotte included, that it was necessary the Government should have a policy on the Seat of Government question, and should announce it to the House. Mr. Cartier states his policy to be to uphold the Queen's award. Mr. Sicotte declined to accede, and, after much discussion, finally retired from the Government, and sent to the Attorney General East the following note:—

"Toronto, 24th Dec., 1858.

My Dear Sir,—I did not give my assent to the policy and principle contained in the proposition which you laid before the Council relating to the question of the Seat of Government, viz.—to maintain the decision of the Imperial authorities, and the choice of Ottawa.

"In consenting to join the administration after the vote of the House on that question, I did declare that I refuse to acquiesce in any action which did not take that vote into account, and I did tell my colleagues, that in case the Government should decide to ask the Legislature to maintain, against the decision of the House, the decision of Imperial authorities, I believe it would be my duty to retire.

"After the decision of the Council, it is my duty to put my resignation at your disposal, and to ask you to make it known to His Excellency.

"I have the honour to be,
"Your obedient servant,
(Signed) "L. V. SICOTTE."

The hon. gentleman then repeated the foregoing explanation in French, after which he said he desired to correct an error which had crept into one of the printed despatches that had been laid before the House. It occurred in the communication of His Excellency to the Colonial Secretary. By a mistake made by the printer, or the copyist, the words "The Government felt bound to carry out the Queen's decision" was made to read, "The Government feel bound to carry out the Queen's decision." He (Mr Sicotte) did not intend to supplement the explanations he had made by a speech, inasmuch as he would have an opportunity before the debate closed, of expressing his views more fully on the whole question.—(Hear, hear.)

Atty. Gen. Cartier quite agreed in the statement of facts made by the hon. gentleman. He moved that the Order of the Day be now taken into consideration.

The Peach Crop Destroyed.—The lovers of good fruit will regret exceedingly to learn that the peach crop of Western New York, was destroyed by the excessive cold of the 10th inst. Besides information from fruit growers in various parts of the country, shows that on the examination of many hundreds of fruit buds all were found dead. It is a well established fact that the fruit buds of the peach, ordinarily, cannot endure more than about forty four degrees of frost, and consequently when the thermometer sunk to 12, 15, or 20 degrees below zero, the germ of the peach will be destroyed.

Mr. Bright and the British Aristocracy.

The London Saturday Review has stood prominently forward in opposition to Mr. Bright's views on the Reform question. The following article expresses somewhat strongly the sentiments of the liberal Conservative school of politicians represented by the Review; and the vigorous ability with which it is written tempts us to quote it entire, though it is somewhat lengthy. It is not less interesting as affording an illustration of the high and responsible position now held by the press of England, compared with that of public men, than as a reply to Mr. Bright:

When we had occasion to discuss recently the question of an Anonymous Press, we pointed out that the existing system of journalism was necessary—if for no other reasons—for the purpose of correcting and counterrailing the mischiefs which flow from the cowardice of public men. This point is one which the present aspect of politics tends remarkably to enforce. The Times, in the course of the week, has with much justice pointed out that the defence of the constitution against the demagogues who are laboring to subvert it from its foundations has been left wholly to the press. The profession of journalism is often reproached with an absence of that sense of responsibility of which the politicians of the platform and the hustings flatter themselves they enjoy the exclusive monopoly. We invite our critics to compare the conduct which has been pursued with regard to a question so vitally affecting the interests of the country as that of Reform by the press on the one hand, and by the politicians who claim to direct public opinion on the other.

We are about to have a Reform Bill, which is more or less to be an organic change in the supreme power in the State. It is not our present intention to discuss the merits or expediency of such a change. The point to which we desire to direct attention is the manner in which this capital question has been dealt with by the whole class of Parliamentary politicians. Those who have studied Mr. Bright's orations must have been struck with the fact that the single argument by which he demonstrates the popularity of Reform is deduced from the rival manœuvres of the leading men in the House of Commons. Everybody, he says, had admitted the necessity of Reform, for there is no party leader who has not promised a Reform Bill. This is the sorry substitute which he is obliged to put up with for that popular fervor which his mendacious and inflammatory libels on everything that is English have failed to evoke. If the secret motives of these pledges whose authority he emphatically parades were really laid bare, we doubt whether they would much tend to establish his argument. If it be, indeed, the pressure of popular opinion which has induced the Conservative leaders to throw open to their bitterest foe the gates of the fortress which they undertook to defend, the fact would entirely cut away from beneath him the stock invectives of the Birmingham demagogue. If the public voice is unanimous in favor of Reform, and if all the public men in the country, yielding to that opinion, have become Reformers in spite of themselves, what becomes of the argument that popular feeling is wholly misrepresented, and that the existing constitution is a fraudulent deception by which the will of the people is deliberately defied?

Mr. Bright, however, belongs to that school of logicians who are always wanting to eat their cake and have their cake. He does not see the absurdity of insisting in one and the same breath that all Parliamentary politicians are pledged to Reform in obedience to public opinion, and also that public opinion, in the present state of the representation, is wholly inoperative in Parliamentary politics. When a gentleman has the advantage of inventing all his premises, he might be expected at least to take the trouble of squaring his conclusions with the imaginary facts from which he pretends to deduce them. If Mr. Bright's assertion, that the premises of future Reform Bills, which have been so lavishly scattered by successive Governments are the result of popular pressure, were the truth, or anything like the truth, he would, indeed, lose the benefit of his favorite dogma that public opinion is suppressed, yet he might still retain his demonstration of the strength of the feeling which had extorted a universal though reluctant acquiescence. But he knows just as well as every body else, that the batch of embryo Reform Bills which have been tossing about for the last six years are not the fruit of popular pressure, but the offspring of rival jealousies and the contrivances of contending factions? Why did Lord Palmerston promise a Reform Bill? Was it popular pressure, or profound conviction, or inevitable necessity which forced it on him? It was none of these things, but simply that he was afraid of Lord John Russell. Why did Lord Derby surrender the Conservative camp by an ignominious capitulation? For no other reason but because he was afraid of Lord John Russell and Lord Palmerston, because, in short, he chose rather to throw overboard his party and his principles than endanger the tenure of his Administration. And so we are treated to the spectacle of all these courageous and consistent politicians bidding against one another, not for popular support, but for the favor of Mr. Bright, whose principles they detest, and who, we must say, not without reason, very heartily despises the men who truckle to him with an insincere servility. It might, perhaps, have been but decent that the leaders of a party which pretends to preserve rather than to destroy, should at least, if they thought an organic Reform indispensable, have stated the defects which they proposed to remedy, and the principles of reconstruction on which they intended to proceed. As it is, it stands on Lord Derby's confession that the constitution is in a state which requires a thorough overhauling, but the nature of the repairs which are to be done he leaves the public to learn from Mr. Bright.

Taking for granted that there is to be a Reform Bill next session, let us ask whether the public have been fairly dealt with by the men who claim to influence public opinion. Why is Mr. Bright to be left by those ardent Reformers as the sole exponent of the principles of Reform? Have not we a right to know from Lord Palmerston whether the Bill which he had in preparation, and the principles of which he had of course thoroughly satisfied, included electoral districts, ballots, and household suffrage? Why does not Lord Derby let the people of Glasgow know whether the object of the Reform which he has promised is to put an end to the House of Peers, to place in other hands that "portion of the public rev[illegible] at present entrusted to the Church of England," and to compel the subdivision of landed property, so that every Scotch weaver may have the allotment of a deer forest?

The Times has but half the mark when it rebuked the insolence and want of spirit with which the aristocracy had permitted the libels of Mr. Bright against their order to be recorded without remonstrance and without refutation. It is not the aristocracy alone that he has attacked. His calumnies are directed against the whole property and intelligence of the country. The principles which he has enunciated are those of a man who is bent on subverting the whole framework of political society. The doctrines which he preaches are those which history and experience have proved to be destructive of property, liberty, and order. When he tells an ignorant and excitable audience that the House of Commons has uniformly laid the burden of taxation on the poor, while it exempted the rich, he says that which he knows to be false, and which he intends to be mischievous. He knows that in the very first Parliament in which he himself sat, Sir Robert Peel, as the political leader of the landed interest, imposed the income tax upon the wealthier classes, in order that he might lessen the burden which pressed upon the industry of the people. He knows that, since that period, the spirit of that legislation has been systematically and self-denyingly pursued. Of the burdens of the poorer classes there has been no increase; and it is, as Mr. Bright very well knows, by the voluntary acceptance of extraordinary imposts on the part of the enfranchised classes that those burdens have been greatly and beneficially diminished. He tells an assembly that knows no better, whose judgments he distorts by his mendacity, and whose passions he inflames by his rhetoric, that they had no part in the increased expenditure which is defrayed by an unjust taxation. Yet he knows that the sanitary measures and the educational rates of the last ten years have been passed exclusively from a regard to the interests of those whom he labors to mislead. No doubt there have been men returned to Parliament who, in the calculating selfishness of a commercial inhumanity, have been insensible to the claims of justice and dictates of mercy. But it is convenient for Mr. Bright to forget who it was that labored to defeat the Ten Hours' Bill—a measure which we believe did more both for the moral and physical interests of the operatives whose cause he hypocritically pretends to plead, than all the platform platitudes which he vents in a month. Mr. Bright tells the populace, on whose ignorance he calculates, that the late war was got up by the enfranchised class for their own benefit, at the expense of those who are deprived of the suffrage. He knows full well that the cost of war was defrayed for the most part—indeed, almost altogether—by a tax which could hardly by possibility fall on any individual who had not a vote.

It is these audacious and malignant falsehoods which have aroused the indignation and disgust of the intelligent classes from the lowest to the highest, throughout the country. But there remains always in every people an immense mass of the ignorant and misinstructed, who are the natural prey of the demagogue. It is to these that Mr. Bright addresses himself, and it is on their support that he relies. What, then, is the duty of men who claim a title to public confidence on the ground of their practical knowledge of public affairs and their devotion to public interests? Is it not to counteract the effects of the poison thus dishonestly spread? We are told that the working classes want the protection of the ballot from intimidation and corruption. But where are they to find protection from the worst of all intimidation and the vilest of corruption—the corruption of the demagogue who defrauds them of their judgment by pandering to their passions? Public discussion, which is the great safeguard of free countries, is the sovereign remedy against the pestilence of lying tongues. Men who have the means of encountering these scandalous falsehoods with the refutation which they deserve, have no right to decline the responsibility which their position imposes on them. They have no right to sacrifice the public interests to their own selfish advantage. While politicians are hanging back for fear of damaging their partizan positions, the English press has done its duty. When the institutions of the country are being reviled, when the cause of liberty is being undermined, when truth is grossly violated, and justice shamefully outraged, we have not stopped to consider whether it will be advantageous or not to our personal interests to strike at the defamer of his country. There is, indeed, one exception to the interested cowardice which has been so disgracefully prevalent. The very singularity of the instance makes it the less necessary to mention the sensible and courageous speech of Mr. Lowe at Kidderminster. Let it be remembered that on the formation of public opinion at this moment will depend the form which the impending change will assume. The issue before the country is nothing less than this, whether we are to exchange our regulated liberty for an unmixed democracy—in other words, whether we are still to be a free people or to fall into one of the two conditions which France and America respectively exemplify. The formation of that opinion will ultimately depend upon the course taken by those who assume to instruct the public mind. We ask whether in the performance of that duty, it is the press or the public men who have shown the truer sense of the responsibility which their position imposes on them?

Austria and France.

(From the Continental Review.)

There can be no question but that the probability of Austria and France coming into speedy collision on the plains of Lombardy becomes every day greater. There are numerous stories current to show how open the separation between the two countries has become, and the Emperor, rarely as he allows his policy to be divined from his personal conduct, is said to have been much more explicit than usual when addressing Baron Hubner, the Austrian Minister at Paris. But it is not by the diplomatic differences of Emperors and Ministers that the chances of an impending war are really to be calculated. The state of Italy is such that some explosion is sure to take place before long. The upper classes of the Lombards are now in a state of open disaffection, and numberless signs are given that the breach between them and their masters is not to be bridged over, and that they are preparing to try once more the issue of a struggle. Austria answers their attacks with increased severity on her part, and the daily life of the two nations in Italy has become one unending series of petty skirmishes. The Italians have given up their favourite luxury of smoking, lest the tobacco duty should swell the Austrian revenue.—The Arch Duke could not give a ball on Christmas day, because no one would go. Directly he appeared in his box at the opera the audience would have retired en masse had not the police prevented them from quitting the theatre. On the other hand, Madame Lestori has been refused her passports for Naples because she is supposed, in the character of Judith, to have appealed to the patriotism of the Italians. The University of Pavia has been practically broken up, because the students were suspected of revolutionary designs. Everything is ripe for an outbreak, and the most serious of all symptoms is, that those who have most intercourse with the Italians promise their support, that if they will but avoid partial and unconnected insurrections in the winter they shall be rewarded with a great war in the spring. There is a definite time fixed, until which the Lombards are asked to wait, and it will not be easy to hold them in any longer if the spring comes and they find themselves disappointed.

But we must not look only to the Lombards. The Italians might revolt and be crushed. Austria is not weaker than she was, and she has often come out the conqueror from Italian revolt. But we must add to the interests of Italy the interests of France. There is nothing which Louis Napoleon could do which would hold out so great a promise of advantage to him, as to quarrel with Austria, and assert himself to be the champion of Italian independence. It would give occupation to his army; it would take off the attention of the French public from the great difficulties under which the empire is labouring; it would give him popularity with the nation that is most prolific of the assassins whom he dreads, and it would help to throw over the empire that mock of liberalism which it is one of his greatest wishes to import to the system with which his name is connected. It is also tolerably certain that Austria expects war. A military council has lately been held at Venice, and it is supposed that this can have had no other object than to provide for the military defence of the country. The Arch Duke has retired to the fortress of Mantua, and every possible means is taken to enable Austria to take the field with advantage.—She has even taken the strong measure of compelling the Italian municipalities to buy the Government Buildings in the larger towns—a measure which can have no other object than that of ensuring the safety of these buildings in an insurrection, by making them the property of the insurrectionists.—It is possible that the Austrians might be driven out of those towns, and then return to them if the tide of fortune turned. In this case they would find the advantage of a possession by which all the public buildings were kept safe for them.

It must also be added, that Austria refuses all concessions. She has only very lately created new feelings of bitterness in Lombardy by an increased severity in the laws of conscription. And generally throughout the Peninsula she will not permit any change in her own policy nor in the policy of those to whom she sets an example. This is more visible, perhaps, in the Papal States than elsewhere. The Papal Government is as bad as a Government can be. It does not protect life or property; it allows bandits to pillage the population openly; it squanders money; it represses all life, hope, and thought; it subjects all families of respectability to a constant, petty, tyrannical interference; it makes life a burthen to all who are fitted by nature, by sentiment, and education to turn life to useful and honourable ends. This state of things is maintained solely by the presence of foreign troops.—If it said that France has recently offered to withdraw from the occupation, and to insist on some concession being made to the just demands of the unhappy inhabitants of the States of the Church. But Austria would not agree: the French may go away if they please, but she will stay there and keep things as they are. Austria, in fact, has no answer to any demand or entreaty, but that she will not yield or alter, and that if she is attacked she will defend herself. And if this is thought a dangerous and short-sighted policy, it must be remembered that it is not very easy for a nation like Austria to make the change that is required. She is wound up with the extreme Catholic party. To support clerical government, or even clerical misgovernment, is not only regarded as part of a traditionary policy, but as a private religious duty, by those who govern Austria. They would be yielding to the Evil One, favoring heretics, infidels, and and all the wickedness of the world, if they allow laymen to govern priests and revolutionists to board authorities. Englishmen are so entirely without these feelings, they so utterly disbelieve in the claims on which clerical usurpation rests, they are so accustomed to speak their mind freely, that they hardly makeallowance for the sincerity and earnestness with which the dominant party in Austria cling to its belief. Even when we look merely to the secular policy of Austria we may see how dangerous any manifestation of vaccillation must be to her: her empire rests on success. There is nothing to bind her heterogeneous elements together except the consciousness of each of them that she is their stern, unalterable, unconquerable mistress. In 1848 the Slaves saved the empire because they thought it was a good thing and worth saving, a source of glory to them and their race. But if the Italians were humored, they were supposed to be dreaded; and if the empire was afraid, it would sink in the estimation of its supporters.

If war breaks out in Italy, what is England to do? We think her course is plain. She could not think for a moment of actively aiding Austria, so long as the only question at issue was the freedom of Italy. As little could she think of taking a part in the war as an ally of France. We have had quite enough of alliances in which France reaps the glory, and we have to find the money and do the hard work. The notion, also, of England and France joining together to promote liberty is a chimera. If liberty in France means the empire, we cannot help to spread abroad a liberty so unlike what we mean by liberty. Nor can we again join France as champions of international law and the rights of nations. Louis Napoleon has chosen to trample on international law, and to violate the first rights of independent nations, by her conduct towards Portugal. What England must do is to stand strictly neutral. If the Austrians, as is possible, provided they are not threatened by Russia in their rear, succeed in holding their own in Italy, we shall pity the Italians most sincerely, but we shall have no call to intervene. If the Austrians are driven out of Italy, then will be the time for England to come to the siege, and to insist, in conjunction with Prussia, that the war should not be carried into Germany; and also that Italy shall be left to her own princes and governments according to her unfettered choice, and that she shall not merely change her masters and become the tool of France instead of the slave of Austria.—We most heartily wish that the struggle between Austria and the Italians could be delayed until France is free. We dread the effect of imperialism on the Italians after they have assumed a nominal independence. But we cannot disguise from ourselves that it is hard for desperate men to wait with the patience of a long-sighted policy. The struggle may come sooner than the best friends of Italy wish. If it does come it will be the part of those friends to counteract the evil effects of this precipitation to the utmost of their power.

Military Adventures in India.

From the Times Special Correspondent.

On the 21st we had another night march. We started from our camp before Roy Bareilly at 1 a. m. I had no opportunity of visiting that very ancient and remarkable town except on one night, and I much regretted that I had not seen a place so venerable and interesting when I heard, too late, of its antiquities and ruins. Our advance guard of Carabineers went wrong, or we did not go right. The guns stuck in the narrow streets of the town; the column was unable to move for more than two hours. It was long after 3 o'clock in the morning before we were clear of the wonderful labyrinth of deserted your faults, he who trusts and treats you well is ever sure of your willing obedience in camp or quarters, as he may rely on you in the shock of battle. And yet the British soldier had something to try his good temper that day. We crossed the Sie about 9 o'clock; our tents were up and pitched about 12 o'clock, after a march of 9 or 10 miles. At 1 p. m. orders came round for the force to start at 3 p. m.—a short rest. Eyre leigh reported the enemy to have actually fallen back upon Dhoodia Kera. We had turned south from Roy Bareilly, and were now marching south and west towards the Ganges. At 3 o'clock the force was once more in motion, Carabineers, police, Field Battery, Irregular Horse, 5th Fusileers, Delhi Pioneers, and marching rapidly through an extremely luxuriant country, reached Oonaie, or Woonaie, at nightfall, though it was some time after dark before our baggage and tents were up. We dined by moonlight under some trees, and most of us either bivouacked or crept into the small servants' tents, called pall tents, instead of having our canvas cottages pitched so late. We are in the Byswarrah country—the land of the Bys or Rajpoots. From the little hamlets which dot these wide sealike plains of corn and forest came the materials from which the great bulk of our Bengal army was constructed. Thither they flew when treason had done its worst, and thus it was that every talookdar was able to assemble his little corps of trained Sepoys from his immediate neighborhood. During the little periods of the feeble rule of the Oude Nawabs and talookdars had been in the habit of enlisting armed men with whom they garrisoned their fortresses and jungle fortresses, in order that they might resist the troops of the King, or make aggressions on their weaker neighbors. The existence of one fort, and of one force compelled the creation of another, and thus Oude was studded with castles, such as they were and such as I have tried to describe them. The power of the talookdars was absolute over life, limb and property, for, practically it had no effectual limitation. They were proud of their order, jealous of their privileges, and by marriage strengthened their connexions, so far as the Hindoo law would allow them. Such were the arrogant, haughty race who were suddenly called upon to surrender their powers by a foreign official, and to submit the very titles by which they held their estates to scrutiny. We can readily fancy how a Montmorenci, a Fitzgerald, a Percy, or a Howard would relish the position. Many of the talookdars were deprived of estates which they had held for half a century. Others were justly ousted from the more recent acquisitions of fraud or force; but in no case could the result be favourable to our rule, for we did not substitute for the incensed proprietors any class which would in emergency aid us, even if it were disposed to forget that gratitude is only an expectation of favors to come. I have seen a paper written by a native of Oude for one of our officers, which shows, at all events, the native opinion in reference to some of the causes of the dislike which is too evident and notorious for us to deny. Lord Canning and Mr. Montgomery may flatter themselves that the mass of the people are with us.—Let them go out into the villages with an armed force and see. Let them judge whether, in this contest, the sympathies of the people, ground to the earth as they have been by native taskmasters, is against their chief or against their present rulers. Now, this native says that, among other matters after annexation, Hunwunt Singh, of Kalakunker, was brought into court by a Mahomedan gentleman who claimed the land on which the fortress of Rampore was built, as having been the property of his ancestors in times gone by. The cases were adjudged against Hunwunt Singh; and his hostility, which up to his recent submission was bitter, is accounted for on that ground. Bauset Singh, of Simurpaha, we are told, was ridiculed by one of our officers, and was jestingly told to climb up a tree to see if the King of Oude was returning to Calcutta. The proud savage on his return to the fort poisoned himself. Rugonauth Singh, of Khijoorgnou, was insulted to such a degree that he vowed he never would live on his estates again, and moved his residence to Allahabad. The whole order of talookdars are naturally against the power which controls them, and reduces the country to order and quiet. I have only further to remark that the various clans were strengthened and kept alive and active by marriages with races foreign to Oude, for the Hindoo code does not allow any marriage between the remotest relations—one of the reasons, perhaps, why this extraordinary race constantly maintains its full numbers without any addition by adoption, conversion, or conquest. Bainie Madhoo is one of the greatest of this race. He has refused every favor; he has risked vast possessions, independence, life itself, on the issue of a most unequal contest; and now we have fairly dogged him to his last stronghold. Here, with his back to the Ganges, his Brahmins tell him he may nobly die, and he declares he will do so—just as old Nirpart Singh, of Rowrah, who is a cripple, says that God has taken one part of his body, and that he will give the rest to his faith; and then flies with all speed to live to fight another day.

Ecclesiastical Swindling.

(From Galignani's Messenger.)

A singular case of swindling was three days ago submitted to the Tribunal of Correctional Police of Beaupreau (Maine-et-Loire.) A man named Bourasseau, after being a monk of St. Laurent-sur-Sevre, a naval gunner, coachman in a house of Jesuits, servant to a lady of rank, and a concierge, entered in 1856 as monk in the monastery of Notre Dame de Bon Secours at Marseilles, founded specially for providing for indigent sick, and he assumed the name of Brother Raphael. In May, 1855, the Bishop of Marseilles authorized him to go about France to collect subscriptions for the community, and he got himself presented to the Emperor and Empress at Biarritz; he too obtained from the Bishop of Nancy, first chaplain to his Majesty, a letter of recommendation to railway companies, by means of which he was allowed to travel at a reduced rate. He made a large collection, but (as was afterwards discovered) he, instead of handing it over to the community, abstracted 1,600f., and a silver watch, which he deposited in his own name with a tradesman at Marseilles. Some time after the Bishop of Marseilles authorized him to make new subscriptions in the north of France, and on getting to Paris he obtained the protection of the late Archbishop Sibour. He was, on the Archbishop's recommendation, admitted to distinguished families, and he pretended to see visions. "I see the Virgin, the saints, and the angels!" he used to cry; "they speak to me and encourage me." But suspicion was aroused, and the subscriptions he had received to collect were withdrawn. He then went to America, and at Quebec, New York, Boston, Baltimore, &c., he represented to Protestants that he had abandoned Catholicism; to Catholics that he was authorized to collect money for the establishment of Mussulmen, and he obtained money from both. The Bishop of Marseilles hearing what he was about, wrote to say that he was an impostor. At the end of November, 1855, he sailed for New Orleans, but was wrecked; he then gave out that by that disaster he lost 75,000f.—He afterwards visited the Danish islands of St. Thomas and Guadaloupe, and raised subscriptions in both; in the latter island with the authorization of the Bishop whom he imposed on.

In August, 1858, he arrived at Brest with a considerable sum in his possession, and from that place he went to Marseilles, where he asked the tradesman who had received his first deposit to accept a second one. He then applied for readmission to the monastery of Bon Secours, and, in the hope that he would give up the money that he had received in America, it was granted. But nothing could be got from him and he was expelled. Towards the end of 1856 he had obtained admission to the Dominicans at Lyons, but being found to be devoid of all religious principle, he was, at the end of four months, turned out. He was next heard of at Montpelier, where he bought a house for £5,500, and lived in it for some months. He afterwards went to Lyons, where he endeavoured to obtain admission to the Order of the Freres de la Sainte Bellay, but did not succeed; he, however, was accepted in another community in that city, but did not stop in it long. Afterwards he went to Caen, where he was received in an orphan asylum, but was expelled in a fortnight. He then entered a similar asylum in Bourray-les-Rouen, and stopped there two months. He afterwards returned to Marseilles, then went to Nantes, then obtained hospitality in the monastery of La Trappe, at Bellefontaine, then in a monastery at St. Martin de Beaupreau, and then from the cure of Cholet. In all his peregrinations he solicited and obtained subscriptions for Notre Dame de Bon Secours at Marseilles, and he appropriated the whole to his own use. At Cholet, a commissary of police from whom he solicited a gratuitous passport on the plea of poverty, questioned him, and not being satisfied with his answers had him searched. A sum of 2,200f. in gold was found on him. The commissary arrested him, and all the preceding circumstances were then brought to light.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

FOR SALE—James Ryan.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, FEB'Y 3rd, 1859

The Parliament.

Parliament met on Saturday last, when Sir Edmund Head delivered his opening speech. There is nothing in it remarkable, beyond the peremptory demand that Ottawa shall be confirmed as the Seat of Government. In the Legislative Council the answer to the speech was carried in favour of the Government by 23 to 12. In the House of Assembly no decision has yet been come to, and until the vote there is taken no one can tell what the issue of the Session may be. If they affirm the selection of Ottawa, the Ministry will have every thing their own way; if not, there will be a new election. Appearances seem to indicate that Ottawa will be upheld. If the vote were now re-considered, Montreal would, in all probability, be selected.

The Municipal Law.

Almost everywhere, difficulties have arisen in the way of electing persons qualified to sit in the Municipal Councils. The object of the framers of the Act having been, to prevent the slightest opportunity in a Councillor of favoring his own interests by his public position; the consequence, in effect is, to lessen very materially the number from which they may be chosen.—To remove this inconvenience, without injuring the very wise provision of the original framers, it will be only necessary to reduce the qualification of Councillors. There is no reason why the trust of acting as Councillor should not be permissible to those who are entrusted with the power of making a Councillor. If it is safe to allow a £5 holder to vote for a man, he ought also to be held capable of being the man. In Parliament there ought to be no property qualification, as is now the case in aristocratic England; and, for the same reason, whoever is a Municipal elector, ought to be eligible, before the law, to be elected. Were this remedy applied, much of the inconvenience we are now suffering from, would be removed, and the right of citizenship would be more evenly and more equitably enjoyed.

Boiler Explosion.

A sad affair occurred, on Tuesday last, at Peplow's mill, in this Town, by which a young man, by the name of Edward Perry, lost his life. The mill is supplied with water power and steam, and, on this day, both were being used to drive it. In the afternoon an explosion of the boiler took place, by which the whole of the furnace end above the flues, was blown out, striking, in its passage, the fireman, who appears to have been sitting in front of the furnace, and occasioned his instant death. The boiler was imperfectly constructed, the end plates being much too thin to compare in strength with the shell, and never sufficiently braced Of the three braces containing the part torn away, one seems to have slipped its key, as it shows no signs of violence, and the other two were wrenched off. No certain theory is suggested as the cause of the explosion; it may have been shortness of water, or it may have been the overpressure allowed by the sticking of the safety valve. But, whatever the cause, this is certain, that the boiler never had but a very limited capacity for resistance of pressure.—These cheap made articles should not be permitted in such situations; neither should they be let run, without a second safety valve, both to be kept in good working order, and a steam gauge beside. And as a further security, their sufficiency should be tested occasionally, by cold water pressure, to a much greater height than they are let blow off at. Such precautions, though involving expense, would be a great means of preventing such accidents as these which rarely happen without involving loss of life as well as property.

Mr. Heathfield's concert came off with great eclat, on Thursday last. The lady performers sang with bewitching sweetness, taking the house by storm, the audience expressing their delight by repeated encores. Mr. Rackett executed some beautiful pieces in a masterly manner, on the French horn. Mr. Templeton Brown sustained his reputation. Mr. Heathfield and Mr. Sheridan played very nicely on the flute, and Mr. James Gallon displayed his loyalty, by bringing up the rear in "God save the Queen"—a mighty defender.

A Lady Lecturer.

Although quite common in the United States, it has not, hitherto, been usual for ladies to lecture, in Canada. There is, therefore, naturally a prejudice against their appearance on the platform. Not, however, on all occasions; for ladies of the highest rank (such as the Countess of Eroll) and of the greatest respectability, lend the valuable aid of their "most sweet voices," and their musical knowledge and taste, in those delightful Concerts with which, from time to time, the public are regaled.

If the lady be in every respect capable of the effort, there can be no reason why she should not read in public her own composition, as sing or play in public the compositions of another. The only objection is that it is not usual—it is not fashionable. Well, what of that? Was there not a time when it was not usual for ladies to make themselves up into the shape of an Isosceles triangle, by means of demi-semi-quiver bonnets and Brobdignagian petticoats? And who, now, would be hardy enough to ridicule such an exhibition? If it be not usual for ladies to lecture, let one or two commence, and if they succeed let others follow the example, and thus by degrees it will become usual and fashionable; and the great objection will be done away. But there must be a beginning. Our gracious Queen does a great many things that Queens in former days did not; the last thing we heard of, was that she had given orders for a most beautiful pair of skates for her own use. So we shall soon see the Balmorals balooning it on every mill-pond in our world-wide Empire.

We do not pretend to advocate what is commonly meant by the expression "Woman's rights," but for women, as well as for men, we are in favor of the old British cry "Fair play, and no favor."

We are informed that a highly esteemed lady, for some time resident in Port Hope, where she has been engaged in the responsible but unremunerating task of teaching, has been lecturing in the Town Hall, Port Hope, on the subject of "Education."—The Rev. Dr. Shortt, Rector of the Parish, was in the chair; and a most respectable audience testified their warm approbation of the Lecture.

Mr. Gordon, the able Principal of the successful Union School was present, and expressed himself highly pleased. He thought that Mrs. Fry gave the comparative advantages and disadvantages of Public and Private Schools with great lucidness and effect. Another very successful lady teacher present expressed herself warmly in favor of what was said by Mrs. Fry. In fact we have heard but one expression of opinion from those who were at the Lecture. Even those who attended the lecture merely from respect and friendship to Mrs. Fry, but with the usual prejudices against lady lecturers, acknowledged that their prejudices were overcome by their presence at Mrs. Fry's lecture.

Several good judges, who are well acquainted with Mrs. Fry have encouraged her to seek in literature a more congenial and more remunerative employment than the drudgery of teaching children affords. Having read her compositions, and being aware of her talents as an accomplished, pleasing, and effective reader, they have suggested that she would succeed and be very useful as a public lecturer; and the trial has proved that they were right in their advice.

We believe that the inhabitants of Peterboro' will soon have an opportunity of testing the question for themselves. It is Mrs. Fry's intention soon to repeat her lecture on Education in this Town. Her terms are very low, and we trust that notwithstanding the hard times, a numerous and intelligent audience will testify their approbation of our Pioneer Canadian Lady Lecturer.

American Antiquities.

The first of a series of lectures upon the Antiquities of America, was delivered on Saturday evening at the Hall of the Historica Society, New York, by Dr. de Hass. The Hon. George Folsom occupied the chair, and introduced the speaker, alluding to his long devotion to Archæological research, and to his familiarity with the subject. Some half dozen diagrams were suspended on the walls, illustrating the formation and peculiarities of the ancient mounds or tumuli of the West and South, which formed the main feature of the discourse. Dr. Hass came forward amid great applause. In the great valleys of the South and West he said, far removed from the abodes of civilization, and the pathways of ordinary travel—buried up the depth of an unbroken wilderness, lay sleeping in solitary grandeur, hidden beneath the growth of centuries, vast and mysterious monumental remains of a people who had forfeited from the face of the earth without leaving more than a vestige of their history behind! These ruins were all alike objects of wonder to the adventurous Spaniard and intrepid pioneer—the one, as he threaded his way through vast solitudes of tropical forest—the other through the illimitable wilderness of the great West. There they had stood in solitary, dismantled ruin; and there they still stood, hoary chronicles of ages long past, bewildering the imagination as it wandered in quest of their history and builders. Who were they that erected them? Whence came and whither went that race?—When were these monuments built? how constructed? for what purpose designed? These are questions that had long been asked, but as yet had not been satisfactorily answered. The Red man, who for centuries had roamed over these great plains and valleys, could say nothing concerning the origin and history of the mysterious remains which loomed up amid the solitude of the wilderness. In profound and melancholy admiration, the simple minded savage stood before the venerable monuments, and gazed and pondered, and turned away! A favorite hypothises with some was that the mound builders of America flourished contemporaneously with the Ancient Egyptians.—Admitting this, how very different has been that of the more advanced nations of the South—the builders and dwellers in the great stone cities of intertropical America, which bewildered us by their size, and mystified us with their wonderful history.

On the discovery of America by the Europeans, the most astonishing evidences of former semi-civilization were found throughout the pathway of conquest.—Through the shadowy mist of the story of Anahuac could be traced the tradition of a long line of victorious kings. Huge monumental piles, of great antiquity, rose up on every hand. The ruined city; the pyramid and temple; the broken column; the tryliph and metope; the ancient military way; the via sacra, and consecrated tinchi; the accurately drawn line and tumuli of faultless symmetry and giant proportions; the most beautiful and elaborate sculpture in stone—household gods—the Lares and Penates—wrought from the finest and firmest materials; the most exquisitely worked ornaments of porphyry, turquois and other valuable stones; terra cotta of the fine texture and high finish; knives of obsivian, or itzli; axes of granite and copper, these with many other objects of great interest, pointed to a people who had been swallowed up in the all absorbing past. The impulse given to the study of Archæology by the researches of Cowlinson, Layard, and others abroad, and by the investigations of many of our own countrymen, had the effect of directing inquiry to the subjects of our local antiquities. Hundreds, if not thousands, of these interesting memorials had already been utterly destroyed, and they must all sooner or later, perish under the march of improvement. The lecturer glanced at the Spirit of archæological research abroad—in Egypt, Nubia, Assyria, Chaldea. Nineveh and Babylon were more familiar to us, through the zeal of Layard and Rawlinson, than many of the living cities of Central Asia. The researches of Sir Henry Rawlinson had placed his name high on the list of the worlds benefactors. His discoveries had fully confirmed the divine record, and he had been enabled to trace, by means of monumental descriptions, oriental history from the time of Abraham's departure from Ur. of the Chaldees down to that of Alexander the Great, a period of two thousand years. An important fact stated by this distinguished archæologist at a meeting in London, was that whenever history came in contact with that of the Jewish people, there was an absolute coincidence between these records and the details of scripture. The striking features revealed by the examination of mounds and temples had been an unprecedented quantity of terra cotta coffins. The antiquities of America, stretched from the regions of the great lakes of the north and west to Central America, and Peru on the south, and from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west. In the whole of the vast territory lying between the Alleghany and Rocky Mountains, and stretching from the unexplored regions of the far North to the rippling surface of the Southern Gulf, these silent and mysterious remains abounded. Spread over the immense intertropical regions, extending down into the ancient home of the Incas, we found the most wonderful vestiges of extinct civilization. The vast inter-mountain country watered by the Rio Gila, the Rio Colorado and other large streams abounded with these monuments, remarkable for their character, extent, and the mystery which surrounded them. At a distance of twelve hundred miles north-westward from the seat of the Azetec Empire, were found extensive remains of ancient cities. The number of mounds in the United States might safely be estimated at one hundred thousand. These were coilal, pyramidal, or pacrform; truncated pyramids, or terraced elevations in the vicinity of mural remains; squares and parallelograms. They were almost invariably of earth. The animal-shaped mounds peculiar to Wisconsin were tolemic, or emblematical, and not to be regarded as true antiquities. These tumuli abandoned in the greatest number, and were of the largest abandoned size, in the central division of the Mississippi Valley. In the North they were generally small; in the South in some instances of great size, but less numerous. They were found in almost countless numbers along the principal tributaries of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, occupying the finest and largest bottoms, indicating that their builders were an agricultural people. They bore a strong resemblance to the mounds of tropical America, of Siberia, Tartary, and the whole of Northern Europe and Asia.

Dr. Hass exhibited several specimens—stone arrow-heads, axes, and charcoal mingled with what was supposed calcined bones of human beings—which were found at the bottom of these vast mounds. A small tablet taken from the Grave River mound, in Marshal County, Virginia, and curiously inscribed, was an object of much attraction.

A Submarine Boat.

(From the London Times.)

An American invention has just been brought to this country, with a view to its being disposed of either to this or any other European government, and which, if it does one half of what the patentee guarantees can be done with it, will make such a change in the mode of carrying on a naval war as will put steamers out of the question, and render of no avail the tremendous forts of Cronstadt and Cherbourg. It is nothing less than a submarine boat made only for working under water, in form much resembling the shape of a porpoise, but capable of being made large enough to contain 8, 10, or 15 men if necessary, with a proportionate quantity of explosives. In a kind of specification which has now been laid before this and the French Government the patentee says he has invented and constructed a submarine boat, navigating about eighty tons, in which he has, with others, sunk in Lake Michigan, and remained under water four hours, without any air tubes or other communication leading from his boat above the surface of the water, and propelled the boat in and near the bottom of the lake for several miles, at the rate of about three miles an hour. He has, while in his boat and under water, by means of mechanism working through its side, sawed off timbers 14 inches square. He can sink his boat from the surface to most instantly, either to a few inches or feet from the surface of the water, or to 100 or more feet, and again rise quickly or very slowly to or near the surface; go forward, back, or sideways, or come up bows first or otherwise, as may be required. He can attach powder torpedoes to the outside of his boat on the deck or sides, and proceed under water out to sea, in any weather, to an enemy's ship in sight, fix or anchor the torpedoes, simultaneously or at intervals, and retire, still under water, out of danger from the explosion, and out of reach from the enemy's guns. He can also convey powder torpedoes inside his boat 100lbs. (or more) weight, and when under an enemy's ship, pass them out of the side of his boat through his patent hatch, and fasten them to a ship's bottom, and fire them as above-named. He can enter an enemy's harbour under water and make surveys, only showing above the surface a sight tube, no more than half an inch in diameter, and retire still under water, and proceed outside to sea and make his report to the commander of a fleet or ship. He can go out to sea, meet a hostile fleet, go under their bottoms, fix torpedoes to go off by clockwork, or bore holes in their bottoms, and come away unseen. With a large boat he can carry a 12 or 24 pound (or even larger) gun in the forward end of his boat near the top, so rigged that he can load in 100 feet depth of water, rise near the surface, sight the horizon for an enemy's ship, and if one is in sight take the course for her and proceed towards her, even within a stone's throw, rise quickly, so near the surface as only to show the muzzle of the gun through the outside port-hole valve, aim at the ship near her water line, fire, then instantly sink to reload, and rise at another point to fire again and repeat. If required, with a large boat, he can remain under water with several men with him, and do service at sea off or in harbors for several days, without landing or showing one inch of his boat above water. If the boat is required for pearl fishing he can work all day on a pearl bed, raking up and stacking in pearls and suffering no inconvenience from impure air, and as the boat is provided with light or deep water work, he can move about on the bottom like a fish, and see pearls where a diver would not.—If the boat is required to visit wrecks and remove treasures or goods, it is so constructed that he can saw, bore, or make fast chains or ropes to any point of a wreck, and if required, one or more persons can, while under water, go out of the boat through the side hatches, enter a wreck, or do other service, and return inside of the boat again without inconvenience.

Curiously enough, the gentleman who has come over here with this invention, and who, though not the inventor, is part proprietor of the patent, was instructed not to offer it to the British Government until it had first been offered to the Emperor of the French. The reasons for making such a distinction arises from the notion which our Transatlantic cousins entertain of the red-tape system of the English government and their slowness to adopt any sudden or great improvements. That this idea is hardly well founded is shown from the fact that when this invention was first brought under the notice of the Secretary of the United States Navy, he merely wrote to the inventor by way of badinage, that the American ships were required in the water and never wanted to go under it. The proffer to the Emperor of the French received even less attention, as no answer was returned to the letter at all. Contrary to American expectation, when the invention was brought a few days since under the notice of the English Board of Admiralty, it received prompt and full attention, and Sir Baldwin Walker has already had interviews with the gentleman to whose care was entrusted the disposal of the patent. Nothing definite has yet resulted from these audiences, though, as the cost of building the submarine boat is very small, we believe that one will eventually be constructed in this country, and if it only fulfils half what the patentee expects of it the invention will be purchased by the British Government.

A Terrific Cavern.

Mr. J. W Atkinson, F. R. G. S. delivered a lecture at the Mechanics' Institute and Literary Society a few days ago, and in the course of his lecture described a fearful cavern with which he met in the course of his travels. While travelling on the steppe, near the foot of the Alaton mountains, he said he came to the brink of one of the dry river beds frequently found in those regions. This was the evident trace of the sudden disruption of a mountain lake by a fearful earthquake at some period. Traveling along the bed of the stream he came to a deep valley, about 15 miles long and four miles wide, surrounded by mountains varying from 5,000 to 7,000 feet in height. This had been a deep mountain lake, proved beyond all doubt by the sand and shells spread over its bed. "I also found continued Mr. Atkinson," "the water line on the cliffs, showing that the depth was 560 feet. Nearly opposite to the gorge by which we had entered there was another in the mountains to the north. On reaching it I found this was also a deep and narrow ravine, and no doubt formed by the earthquake; through this the water had rushed, draining the lake and had formed the great watercourse on the plain. We shortly entered the chasm which I found was about twenty yards wide covered with fallen rocks, among which a torrent was foaming with great fury. Our way was a rough and dangerous one; sometimes several hundred feet above the stream and then descending nearly to the level of the water. At last we reached a spot beyond which to all appearance we could not proceed. We were now a little above the torrent, which was hidden from our view, and close in front of us the rocks rose up like a wall to an enormous height. A loud roaring of the water was heard, which induced me to suppose it was rolling over a deep fall. The old guide told me it was Shaitan's Cavern swallowing up the river. The mouth of the cavern was formed by a rugged arch above 50 feet wide and 70 feet high. The river entered this opening by a channel cut into the solid rock: it was about 30 feet wide and 19 feet deep. A ledge of rocks, about 12 feet wide, formed a terrace along the edge of the stream, and just above the level of the water. When my astonishment somewhat subsided, I prepared to explore the cavern by placing my packet of baggage and my rifle on a rock, and the two Cossacks followed my example. The guide watched these proceedings with great interest, but when he beheld us enter the cavern he was horrified. Having proceeded about 20 paces, the noise caused by the falling water was fearful, and a cold chilling blast met us. From this point the cavern extended both in width and height, but I could form no idea of its dimensions. We cautiously groped our way on in the gloom for about 80 yards from the entrance, when we could see the river bound into a terrific abyss,—' black Erebus,' while some white vapor came wreathing up giving the spot a most supernatural appearance. Few persons could stand on the brink without a shudder; the roaring of the water was dreadful as it echoed in the lofty dome.—It was impossible to hear a word spoken, nor could this abyss be contemplated long: there was something too fearful for the strongest nerves when trying to peer into these horrible depths. We turned away and looked towards the entrance; for a distance the sides and arch were lighted up, but the great space and vast dome were lost in darkness. I sat down about 50 yards from the entrance, and in the twilight made a sketch of the scene. Having emerged from the ravine, we looked down on the last low ridge; this appeared about three miles across, and at a distance beyond we saw the fire of our companions blazing brightly.

An Extraordinary Case of Ossification.

The Portage County (Ohio) Democrat gives the particulars of the ossification of the joints of a citizen of that county, a Mr. Perkins, now forty-five years of age, which certainly is one of the most extraordinary cases we ever heard of. The Democrat says:

Until he was eleven years old he enjoyed robust health. At that time the family had removed to Kirtland, Lake County, in this State. In June of the year he was eleven he was thrown from a horse and hurt one knee, and then going into the river to bathe he took cold in the injured part; inflamation ensued, and the cartilages and ligament were destroyed, and ossification took place. After this had transpired, the uninjured knee was attacked with inflamation, and finally became completely ossified.—Then joint after joint passed through the ordeal, until he is now in the condition mentioned. The same disease commenced at the roots of the finger and toe-nails. The nails came off, and a new substance resembling nails grew out at right angles for his finger and toes, full half an inch.

His jaws have been set and motionless for thirty years; and his front teeth have loosened and come out, forming an aperture though which he talks and receives his food. His food is all prepared for him in a suitable manner, and has always retained a good appetite, though he is not gluttonous.

Twent-four years since he became blind in one eye, and for twenty-three years he has been totally blind. All his other senses remain as perfect and acute as those of any other person.

His limbs remain near the size they were when he was hurt. His head and body have attained the full size. His neck is nearly as large as his head, and measures nineteen inches in circumference, while his wrists measure only four and a half inches. His weight is about one hundred pounds.

His body is in a semi-reclining position, and he is not affected by heat or cold as much as persons ordinarily. He is always cheerful and is very fond of talking. His intellectual powers are fairly developed for one in his position, and his memory excellent. It is said of him that he can tell the names and ages of a large proportion of the the town of Mantua with accuracy. He does not sleep more than persons in good health, and is not troubled with sickness, aside from the disease which has taken possession of him. He talks freely of death, and at times entertains different opinions upon the subject.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Annual Report of the County Agricultural Society.

The Annual Meeting of the County Agricultural Society, was held in the Town Hall, on Saturday, the 29th January, at 12 o'clock. The report being read and adopted, it was resolved that one of the local papers be requested to publish it in their next issue, when the following Officers and Directors were chosen for the year:

JOHN WALTON, President.
JOHN HARVEY, Vice President.
E. BROWN, Vice President.
J. W. GILMOUR, Treasurer & Secretary.

JOS. WALTON,
W. H. MOORE,
ISAAC GARBUTT,
EM. MANN,
JOHN CARNEGIE,
ROBERT BROWN,
JOHN WHYTE.
} Directors.

It may not be the part of your Board to discuss upon the gloom that now pervades the community for, who need be reminded of the present financial distress, yet they cannot refrain from expressing their regret that the commercial embarrassment felt through the Province upon their taking office, still exists; and among the Agriculturists, is felt more severely than even last year. The hopes then entertained of an average harvest, which would in a great measure mitigate the ills felt, gave some encouragemet; but these hopes are crushed. Another harvest past, and the yield much less than that of 1847, has left its effects, the consequences of which are easier told than averted.

Fall Wheat has been much injured. In some cases barely justifying the labour of harvesting and threshing, in other cases half the usual amount, and in few instances has the yield exceeded or even amounted to 20 bushels an acre.

The same may be said of Spring Wheat, and even to a greater extent has the cereal failed. As in former years the early-sown Fall Wheat generally succeeded best.

In the year 1857 the midge was the principal cause of the failure of the wheat crop. This insect appears to have caused comparatively little injury the past season.—Rust has been at work; but even were this the only disease that affected the wheat, a much greater yield would have been secured. Though from either of the above causes the yield of wheat would have been much lessened, yet what seemed to be the most serious enemy was a sort of blight of a very unusual character, blasting whole fields at one swoop. In examining ears affected by this blight there will be found in the same ear good sound pickles and chaff enclosing the barely formed grain, showing the peculiarity of this disease in selecting as it were so nicely the subjects of its attacks without any apparent reason; hence the common remark that the wheat, although so small in quantity, is fair in quality; the imperfectly formed, blighted grain, being blown out in the cleaning.

Many conjectures have been formed as to the cause of this blight, but no satisfactory explanation has yet been given. There is room for theorising and speculating on the subject, and every means should be used to discover if possible the cause of this and every phenomena that has a bearing upon agriculture, as thereby sound means may be discovered that would lessen the ills of such visitations. From the observations of the past it is found that wheat sown early is less subject to attacks from its various enemies, and better able to withstand them when made. Good farmers taking advantage of past experience have this season made most determined efforts to get their wheat sown early, and your Board venture to say that never was there in this County such a breadth of wheat sown in the early part of September as this year. The grasshoppers considerably injured the early-sown wheat, yet it is hoped that success will follow this effort made by farmers, prompted by observation and experience.

Peas are a fair average crop, and in general a good sample.

Oats are a very light crop, owing in a great measure to the depredations of the grasshoppers. About the latter part of harvest these creatures made their appearance in myriads, eating almost everything before them, and Oats were destroyed by them to such an extent as in some cases to render the crop next to valueless. Even what the grasshoppers left is very light, the grain not being properly filled, and in but few instances have oats yielded an average crop.

Hay is not heavy, but the harvest being very favourable it was well secured, and if the quantity does not equal that of former years, it will be made up to a great extent by a superior quality. The after math was scant from the ravages of the grasshoppers, and for the same cause the pastures were very bare, consequently the produce of the dairy after harvest has been very deficient, farmers requiring in some parts to commence feeding their cows in the beginning of October, such was the scarcity of grass. Cattle in general have suffered much from this cause, and were not in such good condition as was desired at the commencement of long and dreary Canadian winters.

Potatoes have been excellent, yielding bountifully and of superior quality. The culture of this root has been attended with unusual success this season. May it be the beginning of a series.

Turnips have been this year a failure.—The fly in the beginning of the season was very resolute in its work, injuring the plant in its early growth, and so unsparing it that often twice and even three times had fields to be plowed up and sown over again. The plant was thus weakened and retarded in its first stages of growth. Towards the end of the season the grasshoppers commenced their work upon the leaves of the turnip, devouring the tender and fleshy part of these organs. They at length became such adepts at the work of destruction that not satisfied with the leaves they next attacked the neck of the plant, which they seldom left until it was entirely eaten through, then separating at once the neck from the tuber. The plant thus deprived of its principal and almost sole means of collecting nutriment was stopped in its growth; and the root stripped and unnatured was of no value.—Although some places have altogether, and others but partially escaped the ravages of these intruders, yet the deficiency of this vegetable is general and its want much felt, as farmers in this vicinity have of late depended much upon Turnips for the proper wintering of their cattle having recently cultivated pretty generally and rather largely this highly esteemed root.

The events of the past two years may lead to serious inquiry and reflection. The failure of the Farmer's staple crop, and that upon which he almost altogether depends, has plunged him into great difficulties. From these circumstances the wisdom of continuing thus to depend upon wheat for his returns naturally forces itself upon his consideration. It is an established fact that when the midge has made its appearance in any locality, it generally continues to hold possession, doing more or less injury until it is starved out, by discontinuing the raising of wheat and thus depriving it of its natural food. This fact alone would lead to a doubt as to the prudence of continuing the growth of wheat to such an extent as formerly. When added to this the many other difficulties attending the culture of this cereal, it becomes a matter of careful enquiry whether the farmer might not more profitably pay greater attention to the cultivation of the other products of the farm, neglecting wheat culture to such an extent as circumstances might dictate. A few years ago when scarcely anything could command money but wheat and perchance pork, this matter would be surrounded with difficulties; but things are now changed, there is a Cash market almost at our doors for all kinds of produce.

Your Board would also call your attention to the fact that the Province is dependant to a very large extent upon foreign exports to supply you with the general products of the farm, and that it will require a large increase in the growth of these articles before the supply will equal the demand, a reference to the imports of the United States for 1857 will show this:—

Animals	$570,033
Butter	39,897
Cheese	152,269
Eggs	18,658
Firewood	64,218
Lard	58,739
Meats	903,264
Poultry	8,045
Tallow	277,569
Vegetables	65,803
Seeds	123,412

The above figures are very suggestive, but your Board would say nothing, more than simply recommend them to your consideration.

Another matter naturally suggests itself from this subject, and, to which simple allusion may be made, the importance of all Canadians and especially the farmer, encouraging any Branch of industry and home manufacture, that can be profitably engaged in, as thereby a greater demand for all products will be created, and he need raise only such articles as are best adapted to his locality, and this would be a direct advantage to him. Indirectly he would participate in the general prosperity of the Province which would arise from an increase in profitable manufacture.

The annual Spring Show, was held in the month of April, at which there were sixteen entries. The animals exhibited were by no means of a superior class. In this County, there is great need for improvement in this class of stock.

The usual Fall Show was held in October. Your Board, in order if possible, to create and promote a greater and more extended interest in the Society, enlarged the premium list, by increasing the premiums offered for Farm produce, Vegetables, Farming Implements, Domestic Manufactures, and adding a department altogether new, viz., Ladies work and fine arts.

The day of the exhibition was exceedingly unfavourable, the morning being very wet, yet the show was good, the animals shown were on the whole excellent. Although the introduction of many articles into the list of premiums, had not engaged the public attention, until it was too late to make up such articles in time for the Exhibition, yet even this department was not a failure. It also proved that our Mechanics, Ladies and others, are quite competent by their united efforts, to make a very creditable show. Your Board scarcely anticipated much more for the first season, than simply to direct the public mind to this new feature in their operations, and induce timely preparations in future. Your Board would highly recommend a continuance of this enlarged premium list as they feel satisfied it will add much to the prosperity and welfare of your Society.

There were in all 286 entries.
Amount offered as premiums $261.
Amount awarded $204.

Your Board purchased 16 bushels of clover seed which, together with 11 bushels on hand from last year, was dispensed of to members of the Society at costs and charges.

There are 172 members in your Society for the year, a considerable increase on last year, but far short of what it ought to be.

The Treasurer's account shows a balance in your favor of $99.06.

For the Examiner.

Wilkie Christian Missions in Canada.

The annual meeting of the above Society was held on Friday last, in their place of worship, in this town. After reading the report, from which it appears that the increase of the last year, was 4, Missionaries, 10 Chapels, and about 1000 members, a meeting was addressed by Messrs Hodle, Cameron (Baptist), Roach, Roberts and Hooper, who ably presented the claims of Missionary Societies, and urged the Congregation to increased liberality, in view of the great work yet to be accomplished. Proceeds of the Meeting £15.

COMMUNICATED.

For the Examiner.

The Indian's Lament.

BY ——.

It was a summer's evening, and balmy was the air.
I wander'd out up Ures hill, to view the scene so fair;
Many a song, and jutting rock, my pathway did assail,
But fearlessly on, on I trod, and reach'd an airy vale;
Can words describe the beauty then, I looked on with delight,
No! no! I feel but cant express, its true poetic sight;
Before me lay one waving fields, and pastures green and wide,
Many a clump of noble trees, and parterres side by side.

To the right—there stretched a lake, crested with islands green,
Whilst the declining sunbeams back, sent rays of gold it seem'd;
A forest dense and black as night, the eastern hills adorn,
One wigwam's smoke there slowly curl'd, for others seemed to mourn;
But while I pensively did gaze, on nature's calm sublime,
An aged man slowly approach'd, with brow furrow'd by time;
His tread was firm, his form unbent, but snowy white was his hair;
With many sighs he gain'd the top, but saw me not so near.

Then he turn'd him 'round as 'twere, to bid his last goodnight,
The moon had risen o'er the trees, with silvry radiance bright,
One searching look he gave to me, as silently I stood;
"And why dost thou paleface" he cried, "on my last hours intrude?"
"Nay, nay, old man I know thee not, nor wherefore thou hast come,
But if thou will, ah! tell to me the griefs that weigh thee down?"
"Come then," and beckoning with his hand, as hidden pain's he fel',
"I'll take thee where a bete sleeps, I'll show thee to my bed."

Through winding paths he 'e'm ed, by deep half hidden caves,
We gain'd at last a lofty mound, with one lone Indian grave;
"There rests the eagle of his race," he murmur'd softly low,
Then stepping back he gazed at me, waved to the hills below;
"Oft many moons

Murder in Ops.

It falls to our lot once more to record another of those dreadful tragedies, which have of late become so prevalent in our country. A spirit of blood-thirstiness seems to be on the increase, and we arrive at the conclusion that the many commentations of justice, passed upon the guilty, has proved, to a fearful extent, the production of capital crimes, in our community. The knife and revolver are the inseparable companions of many of our rising population; and, when the passions are inflamed with intoxicating drinks, a recklessness of conduct, and disregard for human life predominates, we sincerely believe, in consequence of the mitigation of punishments, before alluded to. How long this is to continue, we know not; but, for the peace, well-being, and good government of our country, we hope to see the laws of our land executed with firmness; and, unless extenuating circumstances can be shown, we would gladly see the law carried out to its fullest extent; though we do not, in all cases, advocate the extreme penalty of the law, which has become a mockery and a jest with the disturbers of the peace, not only in this County, but throughout the Province. We hold, however, that he whoever he may be, that wilfully takes a fellow creature's life should be placed beyond the reception of the crime. In the matter which has called forth these remarks, we find again the beautiful effects and deadly results arising from the establishment of low groggeries. Year after year, they are on the increase. Had not the Burke's hovel, which is dignified by the title "Saloon," stood in the way of the unfortunate deceased and unfortunate prisoner we would not have to record the name of another to the—too long already—bloody list, and two families would not have to weep their loss. We refrain from making any comment upon the prisoner, as we subjoin the principle portion of the evidence, taken before the Coroner, Dr. Irons, on Friday last, the 21st inst., on view of the body of the deceased, at the dwelling of Arthur Collins, of Ops.

Since the above was written, we learn that a petition is going the rounds on behalf of Murray. Who is it, we ask, that desires peace, would subscribe to such a document? It implies a tampering with justice, and is, in our opinion, reprehensible in the extreme. If mercy be extended to the prisoner, let justice first be recorded.

Dr. Fidler, of Lindsay, being sworn said—On examining the body of Patrick Conser I found five wounds on the left side of the chest, one about an inch in length between the second and third rib slanting upwards and penetrating the left ventricle of the heart; another about an inch in length and further back, penetrating the upper part of the left lobe of the left lung; a little lower, between the fifth and seventh ribs, there was a large wound two inches in length. The cavities of the chest were filled with blood; the two other wounds were still lower, penetrating the integument, but being situated over the ribs did not cause any internal injury. I believe that any one of the three wounds was sufficient to cause death.

Bridget Burk, sworn—Said that four men, one of whom was the deceased called at the house and had liquor about the hour of eight or nine o'clock in the evening of the 20th inst.; keeps a saloon in Lindsay; Arthur Collins was with deceased at the time, so was Patrick Collins and Phelix Murray; Murray treated after the deceased had treated; deceased asked Murray to pay his (deceased's) treat as he had no money. Murray said he would pay for it; deceased then said to Murray "do you recollect when you said you would daub my face at Mr. Carew's"; Murray replied "I am your gossip, and I am not going to fall out with you." After that deceased went out and returned without a coat; deceased struck Murray once in the face when Murray staggered; none of the other men were in bad humour; they then left; Murray did not appear angry; heard Murray say after they left the house "Oh, Arthur! oh, Arthur!" saw deceased knock Murray down outside near the sleigh; did not see anything more.

Thomas Burk, sworn, said—I have heard the evidence of Bridget Burk and corroborate the same, with the exception of what transpired out of doors, of which I know nothing.

Patrick Carew, tavern-keeper, of Lindsay, being sworn, said—Two Collins, Patrick Conners and Phelix Murray, were in his house on the evening of the 20th inst., all four appeared to be harmonious and sober; no angry words passed between them; they left together; about an hour after Murray returned when deponent washed Murray who said he had been beaten by the lads who were with him; Murray said, "there is one of them worse hurt than I am?" deponent then said, "you can stop all night;" saw a scratch on his forehead, wanted to dress it; Murray said it would not signify; washed all his head and saw no marks; felt his head closely and found no cuts, but bruises.

Arthur Collins sworn—said he was at Mr. Carew's in the evening of the 20th inst.; Murray came in soon after, and asked for a ride home; and something to drink but not much; deponent and Phelix Murray, together with the deceased and Patrick Collins entered the sleigh for the purpose of coming home; on reaching Burk's saloon Murray and Conners wanted to go in and drink; the night was dark; Conners called for a treat; Murray called next; Conners had no money to pay for his treat; Murray called for another treat and paid for both; Murray and Conners had some words; does not know how they commenced but the words were angry; Murray said that Conners might not impose upon him there because he (Conners) had back; he said if he (deceased) had back, he (Murray) had a revolver; Murray put his hand in his pocket; deponent was sitting beside him, but did not see him draw anything therefrom; Murray tried to get up three times; did not say anything in attempting to rise from the bed on which he was seated only that deponent could not hold him; Conners was then outside doors; Murray rushed after him; deponent followed out, and saw Murray and deceased in holds; heard no words from Conners; after Conners fell witness knocked Murray down Murray asked witness was he going to beat him; witness replied not; Murray then got up and made back to the town. In the meantime the horses had left the place and went home; they were pursued by witness's brother, Patrick; when he returned with the horses, the deceased was placed in the sleigh; the horses were not two minutes away; witness was looking for his cap in the meantime, and did not think Conners was so badly injured; after leaving the place where Murray and Conners were engaged, with Conners in the sleigh, witness, after travelling about three miles, discovered that Conners was dead; could not say when placing deceased in the sleigh whether he was insensible or not; shook deceased in the sleigh but got no answer; did not see a knife in Mitchell's hand; did not follow Murray, nor did his (witness's brother) after Murray left for the town; could not say whether Collins (witness's brother) was worse of liquor or not, Murray was the most sober; believes that he (deponent) was as capable of doing business as properly as now; Murray is never drunk; Murray and Conners have had a spite to each other for some time past; in Carew's, on Monday last; Murray said he would dirty his (Conners') face; heard him say these words; could not say whether he struck Murray after Conners fell, more than once, thinks he was within five yards of the place where Conners and Murray were scuffling; Murray drank two or three times in Burk's that night.

John Douglas, of Lindsay, Constable, sworn—said Mrs. Conners, wife of the deceased, came to him between the hours of seven and eight o'clock this morning, and complained that her husband had been killed and that Phelix Murray had committed the dead; deponent asked her how he was killed; she said he was stabbed five times with a knife; deponent went after Murray and met him; arrested him; and took from him the knife now presented at this inquest.

The jury returned the following verdict:—"That Patrick Conners came to his death by means of several wounds inflicted by a knife in the hands of Phelix Murray, and that the said Phelix Murray is Guilty of the Wilful Murder of Patrick Conners."—Omemee Warder.

MAJOR SIR HARRY HAVELOCK.—Among the various exploits which have conferred honor on the British character during the present insurrection in India there are few more extraordinary than that which has been recently performed by Major Havelock, the son of the illustrious General whom the nation delights to honor. He accompanied the force under General Douglas to Jugdespore. After some minor skirmishes, six columns converged to shut the enemy in but they contrived to break through and make their escape, scarcely firing a shot. Their number was computed at 4,500, horse and foot, all Sepoys and mutineers. On the 18th of October it appeared certain that they were making for the Soane, and it was equally certain that if they were able to get into Behar and to reach Cya the havoc committed by them would be fearful. Brigadier Douglas intrusted 200 cavalry to Major Havelock to follow them and check their movements. He started without tents, baggage, followers, or regular supplies, and in the course of six days pursued the enemy 200 miles, and with the aid of Colonel Turner's column had three skirmishes with them, in which upwards of 500 were slaughtered, and the whole body of rebels driven into the Kymore hills, and the district brought completely into our possession. The chief Umer Singh, escaped capture only through the exhausted state of the horses, of whom more than 60 perished through this tremendous exertion. There are few examples in our military history in India of such a march under such circumstances, or of such complete success.

A Practical Joke.

A few years ago, a butcher, who had purchased a calf not far from Lewes, in Sussex, sat with it on a horse at a public house door. A shoemaker, remarkable for his drollery, knowing that the butcher had to pass through a wood, offered to the landlord to carry off the calf, provided he would treat him with a six-pennyworth of grog. The landlord agreed; and the shoemaker setting off, dropped one shoe in the path near the middle of the wood, and another near a quarter of a mile from it. The butcher saw the first shoe, but he did not think it worth getting down for; however when he discovered the second, he thought the pair would be an acquisition, and accordingly dismounted, tied his horse to the hedge, and walked back to where he had seen the first shoe. The shoemaker, in the meantime, unstrapped the calf, and carried it across the fields to the landlord who put it in his barn. The butcher, missing the calf, went back to the inn, and told his misfortune, at the same time observing, that he must have another calf cost what it would, as the veal was bespoken. The landlord told him he had a calf in the barn which he would sell him. The butcher looked at it and asked the price.—The landlord replied, "Give me the same as you did for the calf you lost, as this, I think, is full as large." The butcher would by no means allow the calf to be so good but agreed to give him within six shillings of what the other cost, and accordingly put the calf a second time on the horse. Crispin, elated with his success, undertook to steal the calf again for another sixpennyworth, which being agreed on he posted to the wood, and there hid himself. When the butcher came along, he bellowed so like a calf that the butcher, conceiving it to be the one he had lost, cried out in joy, "Ah! you are there! Have I found you at last?" and immediately dismounting, ran to the wood. Crispin taking advantage of the butcher's absence, unstrapped the calf, and actually got back with it to the publican before the butcher arrived to tell the mournful tale which he attributed entirely to witchcraft. The publican unravelled the mystery; and the butcher after paying for and partaking of a crown's worth of punch, laughed heartily at the joke.

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, January 24th, 1859, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay 9.50 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 1.30 p. m.

Leave Port Hope 3.20 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 7 p. m.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope 11 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 12.50 a. m.

Leave Peterboro' 4 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 5.30 p. m.

Morning trains cross at Millbrook, 12.10 p. m
Afternoon " " " 5.30 p. m

Giving Passengers from Lindsay and Port Hope, 3 hours and 10 minutes at Peterboro' and return same day.

☞All the above Trains run in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. T. WILLIAMS, Superintendent. D. McLEOD, General Manager.

Peterboro', January 22, 1859. 4.

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

IF you want to secure a copy of that elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the ART JOURNAL, with the other premiums, so soon and subscribe $2, before the 1st of January, 1860. Specimen copies of the above, and full particulars given, by applying to R. S. Patterson, Agent. See advertisement elsewhere headed—New Features, &c. 46

DENTISTRY.

A[illegible] respectfully solicits the notice of [illegible] to his system of performing dentistical operations. He begs to inform the public that he will be in PETERBORO' for the following periods, viz:—[illegible] at TRAFFORD, or TENTH GLENELG and ASHBURNHAM, [illegible] his residence, corner of Hunter-street and Aylmer-street, on every Monday after the second, [illegible] every subsequent.

☞All the dental parties will be visited on at their residences.

TEETH—on Pivot Plates with Gold (soldered cavities) to fit each; will silver, &c., &c., to fit; [illegible] TOOTH ACHE cured for [illegible]; and all operations warranted.

E. MOORE. 44

Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1858.

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGOU, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confect'ers,) Yellow Refined, COFFEE, SYRUP, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

RICE, Redpath's refined.

TOBACCOS, Arrican, Patna & South Carolina,

PIPES, 5s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

RAISINS, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bums, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

WINES & LIQUORS, Batty's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (ease Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Found & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 Hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles. Superior articles. For sale by

S. E. CURRY & Co.

Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. 44

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM DOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 31, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL

INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,987,680. Paid up Capital, $120,256.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, GEO. DUGGAN, JR., Esq. J. S. HOWARD, Esq. WM. H. PERRIN, Esq. HON. J. H. CAMERON. CAPT. P. WALLACE, E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq. GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq. JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P. A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D. DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 2-tf.

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. BENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will always be ready to act on such to them requiring his services.

Auctioneer,

He also begs to intimate, that he has opened an Auction Room, that Store on George Street, first door North of Messrs. Ormond & Gilmour, Druggists, (Hamilton's Block,) where he will receive for sale by Auction, Goods of every description, on which he will if desired, make advances until such time as said articles be sold.

Punctuality and strict attention to business may be relied on by those entrusting to him Commissions for sale.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1858. 46

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorised, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested, are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE,
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter,

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.

September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporated the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Manvers Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board,
THOMAS RIDOUT.
Secretary.
P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.
Port Hope, Dec. 15, 1858. 50

TO THE TRADE!

PETERBORO'

Soap and Candle Works.

A large stock of very superior

CANDLES AND SOAP

now on hand and for sale at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞Orders are respectfully solicited.

Cash for Lard, Tallow and Soap Grease.

OGILVY & HOOD.
Peterboro, Dec 30th, 1858. 51

Mr. C. R. DEARNALY,

WILL open a FENCING SCHOOL, or school of ARMS in the large room over Mr. Lundy's store, on January 1st, when young men desirous of acquainting themselves with this gentlemanly and athletic exercise will receive instruction in the art.

Application to be made to the drill master at Dublin Castle.

Peterborough, Dec. 29th, 1858. 51

NEW BOOT, SHOE,

AND

LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlands Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at VERY LOW PRICES FOR CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. B. BISBEE.
Peterborough, Dec. 16th 1858. 49.

NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Peterborough & Chemong Lake Railway Company will apply at the next session of the Provincial Parliament for an Act to amend their Act of Incorporation and to enable them to extend their Railway to some point on French River or Lake Nipissing and for other purposes.

ASA A. BURNHAM.
President.
P. & C. L. R. Co.
Peterborough, Jan. 10th 1859. 2-6

NOTICE.

THE subscriber begs to notify all those indebted to him by

Note or Account,

that all debts remaining unpaid at the end of the current month, will be charged with interest at the rate of 12 per cent.

LEWIS GLOVER.
Ashburnham, Jan. 7th 1859. 2-6in

NOTICE.

MRS. DUNBAR, has commenced business in the

Millinery, Dressmaking,

AND

STRAW BONNET LINE,

☞In the House next door to Mr. Sweastons Bakery, Ashburnham.

Ashburnham, Jan. 15th 1860. 3.

LOST.

ON Friday, 24th ult, a Small Bundle of Papers, tied with red tape. The finder will confer a favour by leaving them at this office.

CHARLES PERRY.
Peterboro,' Jan. 15th 1859. 2.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

Farms, &c., For Sale.

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 42tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 38.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MCCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT
Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber has been instructed to sell on very reasonable terms, some valuable

PARK LOTS,

in the vicinity of the town of Peterboro.'

TITLE GUARANTEED.

Apply to

GEORGE A. STEWART.
Surveyor and Land Agent.
Mill Street, Port Hope.
Port Hope, 15th January, 1859. 2-tf

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Moncck, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprocedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 9th, 1857. 16.

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL, which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features." 46

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,

THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 25 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 18 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address
C. L. DERBY,
548 Broadway, N. Y.
December 6, 1858. 48

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,

CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

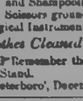
EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and set, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 7, 1858. 48

BOOTS & SHOES



THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 13th, 1858. 2

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL, Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DUNDAS STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

RITCHIE'S HOTEL, BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.
Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 21

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 8

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give such satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.
Port Hope, May, 1857. 21

TERMS OF THE

MONTREAL WITNESS FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WEEKLY EDITION

2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to

JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambaia," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS,

AND

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & Co., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY [Conservative].
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW [Whig].
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW [Free Church]
4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW [Liberal].
5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE [Tory].

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these Reprints, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

TERMS.

	Per ann.
For any one of the four Reviews....	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews....	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews....	7 00
For all four of the Reviews

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
[illegible]
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 6.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

[illegible]

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	0 7 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 5 0
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 3

☞ Advertisements without instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobacco, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND Draughtsmen,

Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.

W. M. CLEMENTI. T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more recent prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the most reasonable terms.

Painting, Glazing and Varnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENNAN, PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS. Office in Scott's Buildings, corner of George and Simcoe Streets Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & B. having lately surveyed the outlines of [illegible] Township now included in the County of [illegible] will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rutledge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' 9tf.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

JOSEPH HEAVYSIDE

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 26th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1858. 9

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 30

1859.

A. FOWLIS & Co.,

RETURNING THANKS to their customers for their kind support during the last year, would state, that

CASH PURCHASERS,

would find it to their advantage to call, and in future their stock of

HARDWARE, &c

will be larger, better assorted and at lower prices than formerly, as they have now adopted a [illegible] system.

In future, accounts will not be opened or contracted under special agreement.

Parties whose Notes or Book Accounts are over-due are requested to call and settle immediately.

Always on hand,

Iron and Steels of all sizes and qualities,

Heavy Shelf Hardware, Ironmongery,

Mechanics Tools, &c.,

Agents for the sale of Hoyt's Saws and other Teeth.

Stove Grates, Moderator Lamps,

Carriage and Buggy Furniture, &c.,

Paints dry and in Oil, Putty and Glass,

Boiled Oil, Olive Oil, boiled and raw Linseed Oil, Bleached Sperm Oil, Varnishes, &c.

Peterborough, January 5th, 1858. 1

F. C. CALLENDER,

Surveyor and Mechanical Dentist,

KNOWN to the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity for the past 10 years, [illegible] to inform the public that he has [illegible] Peterboro', where he intends to remain for the future, and [illegible] to continue to do [illegible] and carefully, (except [illegible] days, each month,) at [illegible] Peterboro', Oct. 21st, 1858. 39

The Earl of Shaftesbury's Address to the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, on Public Health.

You will find the matters which must be brought under sanitary arrangement will be divided into two great aspects—the physical and the moral: in detail, they may be considered apart; but they cannot be considered apart as not to be frequently, constantly, nay, perpetually brought into contact.—They act and re-act upon one another in a way quite indivisible. A low moral state will bring on intemperance, and with intemperance all that dreadful catalogue of disease and crime which ever follows in the wake of intoxication. But those habits of drinking are engendered by foul air and the disgusting and depressing influence of the localities in which the people live; by a defective supply of water, by its deleterious quality. Therefore, although a moral and physical influence may in detail be considered apart, they must when you come to deal with them, be taken in and violence, and corruption, and ignorance, and everything that is inimical to God and man, as also a political and social aspect. I am quite convinced that there is a time coming, and that at no great distance, when we really shall be in want of hands for all the industrial, social and military purposes of the country. (Hear, hear.) Moreover, it becomes a very serious consideration, politically speaking, that there should be in the country so few who survive a mature age. It is a fearful thing that all the elective powers, that all the powers of Government should be consigned to young persons, for all will admit that the gravity and experience of persons of mature years are necessary to keeping the whole working system in order. These things concern in a great measure the national honour and the national character. How constantly do we have it written by those who have the courage to do it, from kindness and sympathy for England wishing to tell her of her faults in all gentleness,—and how often it is written in newspapers abroad, and said in speeches in foreign countries, that our poor are in a very sad condition. I do not deny their sad condition, because we could give very satisfactory answers for it; but this is really a very strong argument why we should introduce those sanitary arrangements which we know full well will tend to the diminution of pauperism, and present to [illegible] a state in which [illegible] a progressive, and a hale population. The circumstances of this country are such that there is no reason whatever for pauperism. If the population were all in that state in which we desire to make them, the wages of the laborer, the demand for labour, and the conditions to which the working man is subject are such that there is no reason at all why they should not abide with the very highest, the very best, and the most affluent population of the world. I would now draw your attention to a part of the remedies we propose, because these remedies are well worthy of your consideration, and you will see that many of them have been tested by experience. There is no doubt that there may be many subsidiary causes for those events; but, we shall find that the main evils to which I have alluded arise from two causes—from bad water and from bad air. Wherever we have applied the remedies of good water and good air the circumstances have ensued which we predicted, and in ever instance, depend upon it, they will be found to have the same result. We should first, as far possible, regulate the building of houses, the width and construction of streets. I have seen the greatest possible effect produced by destroying a court which was a cul de sac, by knocking down the end house and making it a common thoroughfare. You must also erect houses for the people to live in, or ad pt old houses. These, as they have been seen by proof, have been most effective in their operation. There has been no measure more productive of good results than the registration of common lodging houses. Although in the whole population of London there are from 50,000 to 60,000, sleeping nightly in the common lodging-houses, there has not been for the last few years one single case of fever engendered in those houses. You must look too, very attentively to all regulations affecting quarantine, and enquire most minutely whether quarantine is not to be found in the regulations for cleanliness of ships, of towns, and of the country at large. And among your other remedies you must exert to parks and playgrounds. Not only are they beneficial as open spaces, but they are greatly beneficial as affording wholesome amusement, relaxation, and pleasure. The mind must occasionally be amused as well as the body cared for; and I have often thought there was a good deal of truth in what was said by the well known Dr. Jackson, of Christ Church, who when asked whether he would wish to have his college consist of the profoundest and ablest students replied, "No, I would have no such thing. There must be a certain number of dull men always to amuse the reading men." Whether you would like to see that carried out in the Queen's College and other places I cannot say; but of this I am sure, that the principle was correct—that there must be a degree of amusement for all who are engaged in constant work, whether it be of the head or whether it be of the hand.—There is great advantage in the Saturday half-holiday, and I should like to see gymnasiums attached to every one of our schools, for I believe that such exercises ought to be an essential part of education.—I should like to see every woman of the working classes have some knowledge of cookery, for I am certain, from experience of the working classes, that they are too often more improvident and wasteful than the destitute people of the land. It appears from a variety of causes one of which is my [illegible] in illustration of which I will tell you a story. I came to the Town connected with [illegible] and [illegible] its northern portion. They although [illegible] any wages, and were brought to the door of families, with a magnificent supply of fish of the coast; and I said to one of two women, "Why don't you get fish and make a dinner of that?" and the answer was, "Oh, they are so nasty, they have no taste at all." But if, instead of a Lancashire woman, it had been a French woman, with a couple of sous in her pocket, she would have bought some savoury herbs and made a dinner of fish fit for a Royal t ble. Read Soyer, and the effect he produced in the Crimea, and you will see this proposition is not to be set aside with indifference. The London Ladies' Association for the diffusion of Sanitary Knowledge among the people is an admirable association. They have put out two treatises: one is "How to Manage a Baby," and the next "How to feed a Baby with a Spoon." These things are of very great importance in the domestic life of working men and working women; therefore none of them should be despised. All these various associations should have their branches to diffuse this humble and most useful knowledge; and depend upon it there will be far more decency, happiness and general employment. These are some of the evils and the remedies, of which many will be accepted and many rejected; but [illegible] Public Health Act showed in Evesham that the town might be as healthy as the country; it shows a marvellous reduction of mortality which is 17 in 1,000 when the mortality of rural districts amounts to 21 in 1,000. It is the same in Croydon; and in Liverpool, I am informed—greatly to your honour, that the sanitary arrangements save 3,500 lives a year as compared with former times. Surely it is a matter for deep and solemn consideration when we are told that the preventable mortality in this country amounts to no less than 90,000 a year. Let us say 40,000, that is four lives an hour. We may be told these things are but in the course of nature, and we ought not to interfere; on such we will turn our backs. We may be told these things are costly, but we may safely answer that it is disease that is expensive and it is health and is cheap. There is nothing economical but justice and mercy towards all interests temporal and spiritual, of all the human race. I have also heard it said that we ought to trust a great deal more to spiritual appliances, and that we ought not to think so much of the perishable body. My answer to that is, that spiritual appliances, in the state of things to which I allude, are altogether impossible. Make every effort—push them forward—never desist—lose [illegible] in such a state in things you will in the end be utterly baffled. But when people say we should think more of the soul and less of the body, my answer is, that the same God which made the soul also made the body. It is an inferior work, perhaps, but never the less, His work, and it must be treated and cared for according to the end for which it was created—fitness for His service. I maintain that God is worshipped not only by spiritual, but by material things. You find in the Psalms—"Praise him sun and moon praise Him all ye stars of light." If St. Paul, calling our bodies the temples of the Holy Ghost, said we ought not to be contaminated by sin, we also say that our bodies, the temple of the Holy Ghost, ought not to be corrupted by preventable disease ought not to be degraded by filth when it can be avoided, and ought not to be disabled by unnecessary suffering. Therefore all that society can do it ought to do to give every man full, fair and free opportunity to exercise his moral, intellectual, physical and spiritual energies, so that every one may be able to do his duty in that state of life to which it has pleased God to call him.

A Brave Sailor.

The Dutch merchantman Cassandra, was wrecked near the port of Hakoda in Japan. One life was lost, that of a Norwegian sailor, who endeavoured to rescue a lady who was on board. "To save her, he slung under a hawser, which they succeeded in securing from the ship to the rocks, and received the lady on his knee. Then they both holding on to the hawser, worked themselves towards the rocks, he lifting their united weights, and she sliding the bow line on which they went a few inches shoreward with each succeeding lift. Of course man's strength could not bear up against this exertion long; it was simply a question of time, and if that time was long enough they would succeed, if too much they must fail, and to fail seemed certain death. When half the distance had been accomplished, the failure came. A heavy sea struck the vessel, caused the hawser to vibrate like a sharp string and as it happened just as the lady was pushing along the slack bowline she lost her hold and fell backward; at the same time the sailor, unexpectedly relieved of her weight fell in the opposite direction, and they were both covered by the breaking sea. Several pieces of bamboo were thrown from the ship, and as the lady rose, supported three other sailors, who sprang overboard and swam to her assistance. The poor Norwegian, however, never came to the surface—he was doubtless, too exhausted to make the exertion. The next morning his body was drifted on the beach, and upon examination his cold brave hands were found torn and mutilated; he had held bravely on to the last."

The Monroe Doctrine.

From the London Times January 13.

"The standing policy of the United States is presumed to be embraced in the principles of James Munro, who, from 1817 to 1825, was president of the great transatlantic Confederacy. The "Munroe doctrine" forms a staple of American diplomacy and is produced on all fitting occasions as a solemn text for the customary determination of argument. For all this, we doubt very much whether one person in a thousand knows what the Monroe Doctrine means. . . . In the mouth of young America, the "Monroe Doctrine" implies that no European power has any real business on the American Continent, or at least on his government, upon handing in to the Inspector for Toronto. He (Mr. Smith) was described as a renegade. His reputation was completely taken away—if it could be taken away. (Laughter.) In short he was glorified as a "white-washer." [Laughter.] Hon. Mr. Morris, the Postmaster General for the Hincks Government, was at first charged with official misconduct, and five years afterwards they had taken him to their bosoms and appointed him to fill the Speaker's chair in the Legislative Council. Day after day the senior member for Toronto had maligned both branches of the Legislature, the Government, the head of the Executive, and the Judges by declaring them corrupt. He thanked the Hon. member for South Oxford [Dr. Connor] for having given his late colleagues a stinging rebuke for the course they had taken in regard to the Judges—it was a gentlemanly thing for him to do so and he would not injure his reputation in his profession.—[Laughter.] The hon. gentleman went on to say that although he had voted against the reference he would uphold the decision of the Queen. He conceived that Her Majesty had been advised correctly. This country had many advantages, those of a free press, railways and other facilities.—He thought that this country would attain a high position. With regard to the School system he would say that the Superintendent had pursued a course that satisfied a majority of the people of Canada. It was very well to attack him. If a man repudiated a debt then it was not time to attack him. How many men had paid their debts when they owed them? [Laughter] He did not think that the character of the Superintendent would suffer by the accusation of the junior member for Montreal.—As to the school system he thought it was as near perfection as possible. The Chief superintendent had enquired into almost every school system, and done more for the education of the people than any other man in the Province. With regard to the policy of the present Government he would say that they had a policy upon the Seat of Government, upon the Federal Union question, and upon all measures that now come before the House. The Opposition should not condemn them after they had declared in a clear manner their policy. The present Government had been honest and come before the House declaring their policy manfully. But he would ask, had the Government of August last a policy? and if they had, he would like to know what it was. He and his colleagues did not care what course the members of the opposition would take. The present Government would abide by the decision of Her Majesty; and if he was not much mistaken he hoped that the majority of the House would take the greatest pleasure in doing the same.

Hon. Mr. BROWN rose to make an explanation on what had been stated with regard to Hon. Mr. Morris. He understood the Postmaster General to say that while he [Mr. Brown] and the senior member for Montreal were on the committee appointed to enquire into the charges brought against the Hincks administration, that they charged Hon. Mr. Morris with official misconduct.

Hon. Mr. SMITH—I read the resolution.

Hon. Mr. BROWN—Yes; the hon. gentleman read it so as to give the impression to the House. But he stood up to declare that no such meaning was attached to it.—When the hon. gentleman got up with the papers in his hand, he should have quoted correctly from them, and not have acted with him had done for the last ten years,—producing such impressions by quoting parts of sentences which the context would not justify. He would read the resolutions which the hon. gentleman had garbled—deliberately garbled. [Hear, hear.] The hon. gentleman read a portion only of the second resolution. The first resolution was as follows:—"Mr. Dorion moved in amendment, that all after the word 'That' be expunged, and the following inserted: "By the evidence taken from this committee it is shewn that Mr. Inspector General Hincks and Mr. Postmaster General Morris, while members of the late Administration, were interested in the purchase of public lands, at an auction sale specially ordered and regulated by the Executive Government." The second resolution read thus:—"Mr. Dorion moved in amendment that all the words after 'That' be expunged, and the following inserted: "In the opinion of this committee evidence has been adduced in the course of this investigation which establishes official misconduct of a grave character on the part of Mr. Inspector General Hincks and acts on the part of Mr. Postmaster General Morris, Mr. Receiver General Tache, and Mr. Attorney General Ross with their positions as responsible Ministers of the Crown, and calculated seriously to injure the public service.'"—Where were the words "official misconduct" as applied to Hon. Mr. Morris? [Hear, hear.]

Hon. Mr. SMITH had no doubt that it would be a source of satisfaction to Mr. Hincks and the country to know that the opinions of the hon. gentleman had changed very much with regard to the character of the Hincks Government.

Hon. Mr. BROWN—Not in the slightest degree. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. McGEE said the Postmaster-General and the Commissioner of Public Works had this afternoon and last evening made charges against himself which it might be necessary to dispose of in a very few words. One of the charges was that of inflicting upon the House a speech on personal matters, and which was not called for by any public necessity at present existing. It was quite time that he did take the first opportunity he had after the opening of the session, on meeting those who were the authors of the slanders which have been dealt out against him during the last six months, of giving such explanations as would vindicate his character from the aspersions which had been cast upon it; and which, were these slanders believed, his usefulness as the representative of his constituents would be irreparably injured. He said he had come to Canada one of thousands and tens of thousands of emigrants who had arrived here to reclaim the wilderness, and not as the Postmaster General had attempted with the small sophistry which was the only substitute for argument which could be discovered in his remarks—(laughter)—not as that hon. gentleman had attempted to represent to reclaim and alter the institutions of the country. In no other sense was the word "reclaim" intelligible, and he trusted that at least he made himself intelligible when he addressed the House. He had hoped that having once disposed of these various charges in a general way, he would not have had to return to them. It was his earnest desire that personalities might not be made the staple of discussion; but he would say this, that it was not the fault or misdemeanor of the Commissioner of Public Works—(laughter),—or the most theatrical of the Postmaster General—(renewed laughter)—that would introduce him from [illegible] when interested in this House.—(Hear, hear.) The pretext (Government seem to be agreed in putting also but to attack the Members of the Brown-Dorion Administration. That application seemed to be to abuse that Administration as much as possible. They spoke in such a way as to lead people to think that there were two Governments in the House. The Prosecutor-General, for instance, had said that night that the discussion now going on in the House would enable the people to decide between the two Governments.—What two? was that? Did the hon. gentleman, in making that remark, feel that legally, if not technically, according to the spirit of the law, de jure if not de facto, the Government of this country was on his [Mr. McGee's] side of the House? Did the hon. gentleman feel that if certain influences had been brought to bear, the hon. gentlemen of the Brown-Dorion Administration would now be propounding their policy on the other side of the House? He [Mr McGee] thought that the scheme of the present Government became quite clear, through their attacks on himself, the senior Member for Montreal and the senior member for Toronto. Their tactics were quite plain. They reminded him of a certain solicitor who, on the brief which he sent to counsel, wrote the words, "No case, but abuse the plaintiff's attorney." The Postmaster-General had been rather severe in his remarks in relation to a statement of his, to the effect that there was a large number [some two or three hundred thousand] of persons in this country who sympathized with him, under what he [Mr. McGee] called the unmeasured abuse that had been heaped upon him. With reference to this matter he would say, that he would not be precise as to figures. He did not exactly remember whether he named 2,000 or 3,000 that night, but so much he knew that there were a great many persons who shared with him the indignation he had adverted to.—These persons said, "Here is an emigrant, one of the same origin as ourselves, and who came to this province to make a home for his children. How is it that he is attacked by a Government pretending to be liberal and just to all subjects of Her Majesty?" Mr. McGee then went to say that he had been attacked for his "Irish antecedents," of which the Government journals knew very little indeed, and about which he had no inclination to enlighten them. [laughter.] He had been attacked for what had been styled his "Irishism" and "ultra Catholicism." To this he would reply, that no man could rise and put his finger on any paragraph he had written, or quote any words of his in which he had attacked the religious convictions of any man. [Hear, hear.] The newspaper which he had published for some time was in the library of the House, and he invited the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House to find in it one sentence disrespectful of any class of Her Majesty's subjects in this Province. [Hear, hear.]—The persons he had alluded to as sympathizing with him said that the present Government attacked him [Mr. McGee] on the grounds mentioned, because he was in a conspicuous place; that the Government had the same feeling against them, but did not express it, because they were in private life. It was for this reason he was sure he had their sympathy, and he was not at all alarmed at the prophecy of the Commissioner of Public Works. As long as he [Mr McGee] did his duty, he felt quite confident that he would have whatever measure of sympathy and co-operation he deserved. While he was up he would refer to the fact, that the hon. member for Champlain [Mr. Turcotte] had on two or three occasions selected him as an object for description, and held him up as a Catholic fanatic just as he was holding up the hon. member for Toronto as a Protestant fanatic. He [Hr. Turcotte] seemed to be in that it was no matter whether he was a Catholic or Protestant, his house being equally distant from the Protestant and Catholic Churches. He [Mr. Turcotte] had a religious position of his own; and, balancing himself upon his light and airy toe, he looked down with contempt upon hon. gentlemen on the one side and on the other. His idea seemed to be that "Providence was on the side of the Government." Mr. McGee compared Mr. Turcotte's recent attacks to the proceedings of the Chinese, who, on the first English invasion, came out with human faces covered with hair, beating kettle-drums, and sounding gongs. Just as little as the Europeans minded these Chinese, did he [Mr McGee] care for the hon. gentleman's appearance of determination. He would say, in answer to Mr Turcotte's assertion, that he had never used the word Orangemen in any of his speeches in the present session, and that he had never gone round the country exciting Ribbonmen against Orangemen. [Hear, hear.] On the contrary, he had always condemned any such association as that of Ribbonmen. [Hear, hear.] He [Mr McGee] now called upon him [Mr. Turcotte] to name one single place where he had excited Ribbonmen against Orangemen. Mr. Turcotte making no reply, Mr. McGee went on to say that he had never been connected with any such institution as that referred to. The Postmaster-General had been pleased to allude to a debate in that House in which he [Mr. McGee] made some reflections on his [Mr. Smith's] peculiar style of speaking English. He expressed his regret if he had given the hon. gentleman any pain in that way. One very often spoke in the heat of debate what in cooler moments he could not approve. He admitted that it was not his place to point out the hon. gentleman's defects in that respect. Still it was quite certain, and he hoped the hon. gentleman would excuse him for saying so, that if he had made the remark, it was not altogether a mistaken one. It may have been out of temper, and out of place, but it was certainly not out of the mark. He believed that it took place in a debate in which he charged the Government with being a government of corruption, and the hon. gentleman with doing his best to corrupt his mother-tongue. The fact was undoubtedly true, and having said it as a fact, it was not in his power to retract it. He would be disposed to pardon the hon. gentleman's unsound English provided he were sound in his principles.—Often an indifferent position might be excused, if there was general honesty to support it; but when one heard bad principles enunciated in bad English, it became doubly provoking. The hon. gentleman was not only incorrect in his manner, but also in his matter. He [Mr. McGee] repudiated the comparison which the Hon. Commissioner of Public Works imagined to be a great goad-send to him, when, in his feeble style he had the prurience evening referred to the case of Lord Derby, who, he stated, immediately after assuming office had fully explained the principles on which his ministry was formed. Now, the fact was exactly the reverse. Lord Derby merely explained the general spirit, but not the principles upon which he had taken office.

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Did he not indicate his intention of bringing in a measure of Reform and his policy respecting the difficulty with France?

Mr. McGEE—The leading up the breach with France could not be called a matter of policy but of negotiation, such as a change of postmaster or the like, which did not involve any inquiry of policy or principles. But what was the fact with regard to Lord Derby's proposed measure of reform? Why, he had only up to the present time given any explanation of his nature. In proof of that assertion, Mr. McGee alluded to the rebuke which Lord Derby administered to the Lord Mayor of London, who, during the course of the annual dinner given by that functionary to His Majesty's Ministers, took the opportunity of expressing his hope that that measure of Reform which it was the intention of Government to bring before Parliament would be such as would meet the wishes of the country. The reply given by Lord Derby was, that he would make it known when the proper time came, and that he could not possibly gratify the curiosity of his Lordship on that particular. Mr. McGee then instanced the Maynooth question as another point on which Lord Derby refused to commit himself and his prompt correction of the mistake into which Sir Culling Eardley had fallen regarding his Lordship's views on that subject. The hon. gentleman had not stated the case in his speech of last night as it actually stood with regard to those matters. With respect to the Seat of Government, the hon. gentleman at one time said that the reference was made to Her Majesty in virtue of her prerogative, at another time, as an arbitress, and that it was all the same to him in which of the two views it might be looked at. Again, the ministerial journals strenuously insisted that Her Majesty had acted in the matter as an arbitress. But he asked how could that be. How could subjects appoint their Sovereign as an arbitrator? The power to make the decision must be invested in Her Majesty by virtue of her prerogative. For, how could the people of Canada give to Her Majesty power which she had not?

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Her Majesty acted as a third party.

Mr. McGEE asked who was the second? An arbiter could not be chosen by one party. There must be two. The hon. gentleman was silent. If, after the recess, the hon. gentleman would oblige him (Mr. McGee) with an answer to that and some other questions to which he begged to direct his attention, he would confer on him (Mr. McGee) an additional favour.

It being six o'clock, the House adjourned till half-past seven.

After the recess,

Mr. McGEE again rose. He said when the house adjourned he had concluded what he had to say in relation to the course which it had seemed fit to the hon. the Postmaster General to pursue, with the exception of one single point. The hon. gentleman had drawn the attention of the House to certain passages in an old historical lecture, delivered several years ago. The main point, the thread of the argument, he (Mr. McGee) believed if it were to be discussed in this House, he could maintain. But he would like to know what relation had quotations from a lecture in relation to the history of the great religious event of the 16th century, to the question of the Seat of Government, as mooted in the address, and as treated in the amendment of the hon. member from St. Hyacinthe. His (Mr. McGee's) religious opinions, unless he obtruded them upon the House, which he trusted he never should be guilty of doing (hear, hear,) had nothing whatever to do with the selection of Ottawa. Whether he believed a little more or a little less of the ancient and common stock of Christian doctrine than the hon. gentleman, it could have nothing to do with the selection of a Seat of Government for Canada. [Hear, hear.] The Postmaster General declared, that for his part he desired to see religious dissentions put an end to, and the Commissioner of Public Works, in whose footsteps he followed, also declared that he desired nothing of sort, and pursuing altogether apart from the subject, quotations which could have no other effect except to perpetuate those dissensions [hear, hear], he asked why did we not bury them? He first played the part of resurrectionist, and then called upon others to bury that which he had brought from the grave [hear, hear.] The Postmaster-General said that for his part he was in favour of the School system as it was. That hon. member would do well to remember under what pretensions he was returned to this House. He [Mr. McGee] held by mere accident in his hands one of the hon. gentleman's electioneering placards, issued the last time he was a candidate. The document was headed,—"Protestantism in danger; come to the rescue—vote for Smith." [Loud laughter.]

Atty. Gen. CARTIER.—Ah, ah, ah!—That is very good.

Mr. McGEE proceeding.—"Mr. Burnham is supported by Father Smith," a Catholic clergyman in the town of Cobourg, "who boasts he can return Mr Burnham by holding up his right hand." "Remember the civil butcheries of Rome." This was one of the documents which the Hon. Postmaster-General, who is opposed to religious dissensions, had put forth,—"It is part of a deep laid scheme to bring Canada under the dominion of the Pope, by means of Separate Schools." [Loud laughter.]—This was the placard and the platform of the hon. gentleman when before the electors.

Hon. Mr. SMITH said he was in favour of maintaining the present School system in its integrity; and had declared the same sentiments before his constituents.

Mr. McGEE challenged the hon. gentleman to deny the genuineness of the document, which had been circulated by hundreds through the Riding. No! The hon. gentleman did not use the language of the placard personally; because no man, whatever miserable strattling of a pretence he might have towards the character of a statesman, would dare, in his own proper persona to utter such sentiments as those. No! He put them on the corners of the streets, and the market place, and gave them to his friends to circulate through the riding. Those documents had inflamed the public mind, and to that inflammation the hon. gentleman owed his return to this House. If there was one member more than another who came here in consequence of a better, religious cry; it was the Postmaster General. (Cheers.) When the hon. gentleman spoke last, he had dwelt upon the great discrepancies which had formerly existed between members on this side of the House. In the last sessions of Parliament the hon. gentleman had himself voted for Representation by Population, without any "checks," without any "balances," and yet he, forsooth trusted others with inconsistency, although his colleagues were utterly opposed to him on this important question. But perhaps by (Mr. McGee) was drawing more attention to the hon. member than he deserved. (Hear hear.) The hon. gentleman happened to be Postmaster General and a member of that very extraordinary combination Cabinet appointments, and so long as the three, devised a fictitious importance from the position he occupied. (Cheers and laughter.) He (Mr. McGee) came over to the "middle" member for Montreal. In the course of the address which that hon. member delivered to the House, in the opinion of every unprejudiced man, he had very successfully demolished whatever pretensions he might have had when he entered Parliament. The learned member for Quebec-Mr. Burnby, Mr. Pelletier and the first to oppose Mr. Dorion. Mr. Pelletier's address was published on each day, and Mr. Pelletier disappeared on the day following. (Laughter.) Mr. Beaudry then took Mr. Pelletier's address, and striking off Mr. Pelletier's name, he attached his own signature to it; and in this Beaudry-Pelletier-Cartier-Rose address—(laughter)—the "inalienable right" of Montreal to be made the capital of Canada were set forth. But the people of Montreal were not deceived by the "species of humbuggery" which at Kingston the Attorney General West designated the system his Government had acted upon in playing off one city against the other.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD—I never said anything of the kind.

Mr. McGEE—If the hon. gentleman will give me 48 hours, I will get an affidavit from at least fifty citizens of Kingston to prove that, upon the hustings, he used these precise words.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD—I did not.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER—Let us have the affidavits now—come. (Laughter.)

Mr. McGEE—You shall have them next Tuesday night—if the Postmaster General does not intercept them. (Laughter.)

Hon. Mr. GALT—How long is this debate to last, pray?

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman might have made it short r by two days had they been prepared with their resolution. (Hear, hear.) Mr. McGee then went on to say that the member for Montreal on the other side of the House stood in such a position before his constituents and the country, that he obtained confidence under the impression that the local interests of his constituency would be promoted by his election. But the hon. gentleman had done all in his power to vote in votes against Montreal with reference to the Seat of Government. Thus he had been untrue to his constituents, and been the instrument of rival men. He had taken the fee from both sides; from one side the portfolio of public works, and on the other side the membership for Montreal. This was the hon. gentleman's position, and was it for him to talk of conscience? Mr. McGee then referred to the old scrap-book of Mr. Mackenzie, from which the hon. gentleman opposite had read extracts. He did not admire or envy the position of the man who had collected such trash[illegible] condemned the course he had taken in that House.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER—I don't care for the opinion of Vercheres.

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman only cares for opinion when it happens to coincide with his own. He (Mr. McGee) asked the hon. gentleman (Mr. Rose) whether he was not expected by his constituents to advance the local interest of Montreal by using his influence to take the Seat of Government there?

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Go on, go on.

Mr. McGEE—Silence gives consent.—Was it not on the strength of that expectation he obtained a majority over the rejected candidates. There was a very respectable prejudice, a little antiquated he would admit, in favor of a man's adhering to his promise. But the hon. gentleman had totally disregarded it. He had broken faith with his constituents, and if he acted up to his professions he ought to resign his place and leave it at their disposal. The hon. gentleman had talked a great deal about his conscience, and said, that he would follow its dictates, no matter what the result would be. It was evident that he had ceased to represent the opinions and wishes of his electors. In fact, he represented nobody but himself. He ought to be called the member "for Conscience."—He was doing his utmost to prevent Montreal from becoming the seat of Government, his constituents for the purpose of thwarting their wishes. The hon. gentleman had said he never went to any of their public meetings. But he would tell him why. If he did, he would raise a hornet's nest about his ears. Right well did he know that his best course was to lie low, and, riding at the anchorage of the Public Works until the storm would blow over, at last make his retreat to the locality whose interests he had preferred to those of his constituents. The hon. gentleman was fond of quoting English examples. With his permission, he also would quote one which exactly suited his case. Mr. McGee then referred to the course Sir Robert Peel had taken towards his constituents when he had made up his mind to grant Catholic Emancipation. Having received their support principally on the grounds of his previous resistance to the Catholic claims, he then thought it his duty to place his resignation in their hands. Would the hon. Commissioner for Public Works follow that example? For no consideration would he (Mr. McGee) act as the honorable gentleman had done. He (Mr. Rose) had been elected on the express understanding that the local interests of his constituents should be cared for.—If such understanding had not existed, he would have found himself at the last election out of suit, and as far behind as the hon. Premier himself, who, in truth, was almost as far as any person well could be. But he [Mr. McGee] need not have gone to England to find examples which the hon. gentleman ought to follow in consequence of the position in which he has placed himself towards his constituents. There were examples nearer home—in their own city. When, in 1843, it was moved and carried that the Seat of Government should be taken to Kingston, what did Mr. Moffat, member for Montreal, who refused to advocate the opinion of his constituents, do? He resigned. Was the hon. gentleman opposite disinclined to discredit the example of one of his constituents?

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Should Mr. Moffat's approbation or disapprobation be taken as a guide for my conduct?

Mr. McGEE approved of the course which Mr. Moffat had pursued. In some respects it was a question of feeling. If the hon. gentleman did not adopt Mr. Moffat's theory, he should at least follow his example.

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Perhaps the whole Ministry ought to resign?

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman ought to resign, but evades it by a species of humbug. Mr. McGee then referred to the case of Mr. Harrison, who, after having done his utmost to continue the seat of Government at Kingston, and disapproving of the resolution by which it was transferred to Montreal, immediately sent in his resignation as a Minister of the Crown, accompanied by a memorandum to his Excellency the then Governor General. Had the hon. member pursued the same course in relation to the Seat of Government? [illegible] exactly an example deserving the attention of the hon. gentleman opposite. [illegible] Commissioner of public works, [illegible] and his colleagues had done [illegible] at Montreal—that they had never given it to be understood that they were in favor of that city as the Seat of Government. He would show that such was not the case.—When the senior member for Montreal was before his constituents for re-election, the Premier was busily employed, in writing against him himself. He [illegible] could find it convenient to support him, but if not he should [illegible] part of [illegible] Mr. Dunbar, Mr. Pelletier and the first to oppose Mr. Dorion. Mr. Pelletier's address was published on each day, and Mr. Pelletier disappeared on the day following. (Laughter.) Mr. Beaudry then took Mr. Pelletier's address, and striking off Mr. Pelletier's name, he attached his own signature to it; and in this Beaudry-Pelletier-Cartier-Rose address—(laughter)—the "inalienable right" of Montreal to be made the capital of Canada were set forth. But the people of Montreal were not deceived by the "species of humbuggery" which at Kingston the Attorney General West designated the system his Government had acted upon in playing off one city against the other.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD—I never said anything of the kind.

Mr. McGEE—If the hon. gentleman will give me 48 hours, I will get an affidavit from at least fifty citizens of Kingston to prove that, upon the hustings, he used these precise words.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD—I did not.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER—Let us have the affidavits now—come. (Laughter.)

Mr. McGEE—You shall have them next Tuesday night—if the Postmaster General does not intercept them. (Laughter.)

Hon. Mr. GALT—How long is this debate to last, pray?

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman might have made it shorter by two days had they been prepared with their resolution. (Hear, hear.) Mr. McGee then went on to say that the member for Montreal on the other side of the House stood in such a position before his constituents and the country, that he obtained confidence under the impression that the local interests of his constituency would be promoted by his election. But the hon. gentleman had done all in his power to vote in votes against Montreal with reference to the Seat of Government. Thus he had been untrue to his constituents, and been the instrument of rival men. He had taken the fee from both sides; from one side the portfolio of public works, and on the other side the membership for Montreal. This was the hon. gentleman's position, and was it for him to talk of conscience? Mr. McGee then referred to the old scrap-book of Mr. Mackenzie, from which the hon. gentleman opposite had read extracts. He did not admire or envy the position of the man who had collected such trash[illegible] condemned the course he had taken in that House.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER—I don't care for the opinion of Vercheres.

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman only cares for opinion when it happens to coincide with his own. He (Mr. McGee) asked the hon. gentleman (Mr. Rose) whether he was not expected by his constituents to advance the local interest of Montreal by using his influence to take the Seat of Government there?

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Go on, go on.

Mr. McGEE—Silence gives consent.—Was it not on the strength of that expectation he obtained a majority over the rejected candidates. There was a very respectable prejudice, a little antiquated he would admit, in favor of a man's adhering to his promise. But the hon. gentleman had totally disregarded it. He had broken faith with his constituents, and if he acted up to his professions he ought to resign his place and leave it at their disposal. The hon. gentleman had talked a great deal about his conscience, and said, that he would follow its dictates, no matter what the result would be. It was evident that he had ceased to represent the opinions and wishes of his electors. In fact, he represented nobody but himself. He ought to be called the member "for Conscience."—He was doing his utmost to prevent Montreal from becoming the seat of Government, his constituents for the purpose of thwarting their wishes. The hon. gentleman had said he never went to any of their public meetings. But he would tell him why. If he did, he would raise a hornet's nest about his ears. Right well did he know that his best course was to lie low, and, riding at the anchorage of the Public Works until the storm would blow over, at last make his retreat to the locality whose interests he had preferred to those of his constituents. The hon. gentleman was fond of quoting English examples. With his permission, he also would quote one which exactly suited his case. Mr. McGee then referred to the course Sir Robert Peel had taken towards his constituents when he had made up his mind to grant Catholic Emancipation. Having received their support principally on the grounds of his previous resistance to the Catholic claims, he then thought it his duty to place his resignation in their hands. Would the hon. Commissioner for Public Works follow that example? For no consideration would he (Mr. McGee) act as the honorable gentleman had done. He (Mr. Rose) had been elected on the express understanding that the local interests of his constituents should be cared for.—If such understanding had not existed, he would have found himself at the last election out of suit, and as far behind as the hon. Premier himself, who, in truth, was almost as far as any person well could be. But he [Mr. McGee] need not have gone to England to find examples which the hon. gentleman ought to follow in consequence of the position in which he has placed himself towards his constituents. There were examples nearer home—in their own city. When, in 1843, it was moved and carried that the Seat of Government should be taken to Kingston, what did Mr. Moffat, member for Montreal, who refused to advocate the opinion of his constituents, do? He resigned. Was the hon. gentleman opposite disinclined to discredit the example of one of his constituents?

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Should Mr. Moffat's approbation or disapprobation be taken as a guide for my conduct?

Mr. McGEE approved of the course which Mr. Moffat had pursued. In some respects it was a question of feeling. If the hon. gentleman did not adopt Mr. Moffat's theory, he should at least follow his example.

Hon. Mr. ROSE—Perhaps the whole Ministry ought to resign?

Mr. McGEE—The hon. gentleman ought to resign, but evades it by a species of humbug. Mr. McGee then referred to the case of Mr. Harrison, who, after having done his utmost to continue the seat of Government at Kingston, and disapproving of the resolution by which it was transferred to Montreal, immediately sent in his resignation as a Minister of the Crown, accompanied by a memorandum to his Excellency the then Governor General. Had the hon. member pursued the same course in relation to the Seat of Government? [illegible] exactly an example deserving the attention of the hon. gentleman opposite. [illegible] Commissioner of public works, [illegible] and his colleagues had done [illegible] at Montreal—that they had never given it to be understood that they were in favor of that city as the Seat of Government. He would show that such was not the case.—When the senior member for Montreal was before his constituents for re-election, the Premier was busily employed, in writing against him himself. He [illegible] could find it convenient to support him, but if not he should [illegible] part of [illegible] should [illegible] regard the interests of the whole province. He maintained that the great body of the people of Montreal had self-evidently in favor of that city being made the capital of Canada. A meeting was called in that city a short time ago, and so little interest was excited that the attendance was meagre in the extreme, and the parties present did not even so much as propose a resolution.

Hon. Mr. DORION—And why was not greater interest taken in the subject by the people of Montreal?

Mr. DUNKIN—Because they were of opinion that the decision ought to be in favour of that city, on public grounds.—[Hear, hear.] Last session he brought forward a motion in favor of the city of Montreal, although he was free to confess that he had at the time little [illegible] of carrying it; and he would now be happy to see any reasonable prospect of that motion being given effect to. He, however, felt it to be his duty to vote for the Address and to do what he could towards carrying out the Queen's decision. The hon. gentleman then passed in review the action of the House last session on the Seat of Government question, and proceeded to criticise the amendment proposed by the hon. member for St. Hyacinthe. The first part of the amendment stated strongly that the vote of a majority of this House ought to be upheld, but contrasted as was the Legislature of Canada, it was not desirable that they should too confidently assert the Parliamentary omnipotence of this House. It should be remembered that the vote of another body, partly elective in its character, had to be considered; and he feared that when the Legislative Council was purely elective, collisions would take place between them, were not the greatest forbearance exercised on the part of both Houses.

Hon. Mr. FOLEY.—How, on your own principle, can the Government go to Quebec in the face of the vote of the Upper House. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. DUNKIN would reply to the question before he resumed his seat. He preferred the course taken by the Government last year than that now proposed by them. He saw no necessity for calling upon the House to sustain the Queen's decision. It was the duty of the Government to maintain her Majesty's decision until [illegible] Legislature should pray the Queen to reconsider her award. However, they had taken a different, and, he thought a more rash course. But that was their look-out not his. He would not discuss the side issues which had been dragged into the debate. The Government might have done wrong in the course they had taken on what had been called the "double shuffle," [hear hear, and they might deserve an ignominious defeat because of many of their other doings—upon that subject he would give no opinion—but he did say this, that if the Government were to be turned out, they should be defeated for some wrong act they had done, and not for maintaining the Queen's award, in the making of which they had no voice. At length he stated that the House had every Parliament but one been involved in grave difficulties in selecting a city for the Seat of Government; at last, in sheer desperation, it was sent for settlement in England, and now there was a project on foot to set aside the Queen's award, and to leave it still an open question. Now, a great deal had been said about the Queen's award being the personal act of Her Majesty. For his part he had no doubt the Queen in fixing upon Ottawa as the Seat of Government, acted upon the advice of her Cabinet. [Hear, hear.]—He admitted that the decision in favour of Ottawa was not to be regarded as the [illegible] opinion [illegible] but he contended that this did not make the award [illegible] less binding. He held that Her Majesty's decision had the force of law, and something more than law, for it had been given by the Queen in a capacity higher than that which Her Majesty ordinarily acted towards the Province. They could not turn round and reject the award without branding themselves not being disloyal, but with being ignorant; and if they wanted to undo what had been done, they should undoe it in the same manner in which they had done it.—They should pray the Queen to name some other place. He was in favour of Montreal being the Seat of Government, but as he felt persuaded that a resolution in favour of that city would not carry, he was now desirous of its being located in Ottawa, believing that to be the second best city in the Province; but in the meantime he would not vote for the Government going to Quebec unless it were shown to him that its being taken to Quebec was necessary to the preservation of good faith. The leaders of the Brown-Dorion Government had stated that a place would have been selected by them for the Seat of Government, simultaneously with the settlement of the question of Representation by Population, and it was well understood that Montreal was to be that city. But had the question been kept in abeyance until Representation by Population was conceded, then the members of that Cabinet would have snapped their fingers at Montreal and Lower Canada, and have asked "Don't you wish you may get it?" In the event of a federation of the Provinces, which would undoubtedly include the Red River and the Saskatchewan, Ottawa would be the most advantageous city for the capital; and therefore there could be no force in the argument that it would be impolitic to select that city in view of the federation of the Province.

Mr. HOGAN moved, seconded by Mr. Wallbridge the following amendment to the amendment of Hon. Mr. Sicotte:—"That the said motion of amendment be amended by leaving out all after the word 'that' and insert in lieu thereof, 'the said paragraph be amended by inserting the following after the word 'Canada:'—'And we feel it our duty to express our devoted attachment to Her Most Gracious Majesty, and our gratitude for the interest she has taken in the welfare of her Canadian subjects, by selecting the city of Ottawa as the future Seat of the Provincial Government; but we would at the same time, respectfully beg leave to submit to your Excellency, that the Federal Union of all the North American Colonies having been mooted by your Excellency's constitutional advisers to the Imperial Government, and also to the Governments of the other Colonies,—which, should a union take place, might be desirous of having a voice in the selection of a Seat of Government,—it is inexpedient at present to take any steps towards the erection of public buildings at Ottawa."

The House adjourned at a quarter past eleven until three o'clock on Monday.

TWO YEARS WITHOUT EATING.—There is a lady now residing in Minnesota (not formerly of this city, who for the past two years, has lived entirely without eating! Her age is twenty-eight, she is the mother of three children, and enjoys moderate health. She has the use of all her faculties is not emaciated, and apparently robust, and yet she does not take into her stomach a particle of food of any kind, save a cup of coffee three times a day, this [illegible] only substance, she also chastly, usually occupying the countenance she with others at the table.—Minnesotian.

Provincial Items Respecting the Encouragement of Commerce.

In New York City, the greatest commercial centre on the Continent of America, where every branch of trade is represented, it is inevitable that a portion—and no doubt a large portion—of commercial transactions should be of an inferior character.—The maxim upon which commercial transactions are based, to "buy cheap and sell dear," not unfrequently induces the merchant to purchase his goods on the sole recommendation of cheapness, overlooking in some important qualities which constitute a good article. The patrons of this class, influenced by a similar motive, to buy cheaply, are the real sufferers, since they are the consumers, and consequently, the bearers of the intrinsic value of the articles purchased. It is to this class we wish to address a few words of advice. It may be safely predicated that a good article in any particular line cannot be produced without a certain amount of labor, involving a corresponding expense. And although the improvements in labor-saving machinery may have lessened the cost of making many kinds of useful products, yet the merchant, as well as manufacturer, knows—and the purchaser should know—what it costs, to a fraction, to produce a good article. The tariff of prices are almost universally published to the world; and if a man, by his ingenuity, can invent something which reduces the cost of production, he avails himself of the greatest publicity to make it known.

No man in the commercial world is so purely and disinterestedly benevolent, that he engages in traffic for the sole benefit of others; on the contrary, we find it a general rule that the inciting motive in to increase his gains.

Now, if a merchant advertises that he will sell his goods at a price far below the recognized standard, we may reasonably look for the cause; and we shall find it in almost every instance to be in their inferiority. The materials or mode of construction will be found to be faulty. We will not apply a harsh term to such a class, but each one will form his own opinion of their merits. Impressed with the importance of the subject, we have been at some reference to many of the more prominent and universally-used articles, and we have no doubt they will prove valuable to many in making their purchases.

Where it is impossible for purchasers at a distance to inspect the goods they are compelled to buy, we know of but one guarantee for the genuineness of the articles purchased; and that lies in the standing and stability of the houses with whom they may deal. There are commercial establishments in this city who have a reputation to lose—not one to make, as they have already established themselves in the respect and confidence of the public. Such concerns may be established by self-interest, if by no higher motive, to deal fairly and honestly by their patrons, whether near or distant; and a moment's thought on the part of buyers will show them that it is for their interest to purchase of a large wholesale house in preference to obtaining their goods from second or third hands.

Following is a list of prominent adulterations and frauds in articles of commerce:

CLOTHING.—In the manufacture of clothing an important fraud is perpetrated, which falls heavily in its effects upon the consumer. In making these goods in their proper integrity, the wool or cotton is taken in its pure state, and after being passed through the various processes of manufacture[illegible] through the fibres being fresh and natural, and imparting to the garment the quality of durability. The fraud consists in taking old clothes, or those which have been partially worn, and subjecting them to a cutting process, until they are rendered of a pulpy consistency; and then, by mixing a sufficient proportion of new cotton or wool, to make this mass adhere, it is manufactured into cloth in the usual manner. After being finished, it is subjected to a high pressure, which renders it smooth and likely to deceive those not versed in its manufacture. On being made up and worn, however, it is found to give way in a short time, not lasting frequently one-third or one-fourth the time of a good article.

WINE AND SPIRITS.—From their high value and general use, as also from the difficulty of detecting the chief mixtures added to them, these articles—according to the New American Encyclopedia—are almost universally adulterated to some extent; while many that are sold have no right to the name they bear, being spurious imitations made up entirely of ingredients wholly foreign to the country which produces the genuine wine. The substances added with a view of preserving wines, are sometimes poisons—lead and copper both being used—the former in the state of litharge. In England the favorite port wine is thus most shamefully treated, besides being manufactured on a very large scale, after a variety of curious recipes, from thousands of pipes of spoiled cider imported for the purpose, bad brandy, and infusion of logwood and other dyestuffs. The Champagnes, which are more in demand in this country, find here as ingenious imitators; and from our native ciders with a due mixture of cheap French wine, sugar, brandy, and a little lemon or tartaric acid, more Champagne is bottled and set off with showy French labels, than ever crosses the Atlantic. If gooseberry wine is easily obtained, it is used instead of cider for making champagne. The impossibility of supplying the demand for French brandy, and the consequent high price of the article, have led to its extensive manufacture in France from very cheap materials. The materials for adulterating and concocting French brandies are water, and spirits obtained from molasses, beet root, and more particularly cheap whiskey, which is sent from this country in large quantities to come back brandy. Burnt sugar gives the desired color, and the fine flavor is made to suit the taste by skilful admixtures of essential oils and distilled work, which is the refuse, skins and pips of the grape left after the distillation of the wine. This stuff is actually imported into England, to be distilled with molasses for making brandy. Gin is largely adulterated with water, and as the effect of this is to make the liquor whitish and turbulent, other substances must be added to correct this and "fine" the gin. These are alum, carbonate of potash, and the poisonous acetate of lead. To restore its strength and pungency, cayenne in the form of tincture of capsicum, or grains of paradise are employed; and its peculiar aroma is happily preserved by some extraordinary compounds called "gin flavorings." These are made according to established recipes, the ingredients of which are juniper berries, coriander seeds, almond cake, angelica root, liquorice powder, calamus root, and sulphuric acid. The common whiskey of the country is largely diluted in the distilleries with water, and then to restore the strength the lye of ashes, which is prepared for the purpose, is added in sufficient quantity to give the liquor the character which is expressed by the common name by which it is called, of "rot-gut."

Drugs are frequently adulterated to an extent which is truly alarming. In July, 1858, a law went into effect in this country, forbidding the importation of adulterated and dangerous drugs. But while the effect of this law has been to exclude foreign adulterations, the manufacture of them at home has been greatly increased. In the first year after its establishment, it appears by the report of Dr. J. M. Bailey to the New York Academy of Medicine, that over 30,000 packages of drugs, comprising Peru yrotic odor, often have a solution of copper added to them, to preserve their original color in a fresh state.

Isinglass suffers by the addition of gelatine, which is considerably of less value than isinglass.

Malt Liquors are not adulterated to the extent generally supposed. Bitters salt and water, tobacco decoction, cocculus indicus, and sulphate of iron are used.

Mustard is an article which it is next to impossible to obtain pure. It always contains turmeric; in most cases, wheaten flour and sometimes rape-seed.

Pepper, both white and black, is very subject to adulteration. It is often mixed with powdered husks of mustard, which are openly sold for this purpose, as are also the sweepings from the pepper warehouses, under the name of P. D., or pepper-dust; and yet an inferior kind of this adulteration is sold under the name of D. P. D., signifying the dust or dirt of pepper-dust. There are shops used for this purpose licensed, mustard-seed, wheaten-flour, pea-flour, and ground rice.

Pickles are put up with sulphuric acid and copper, the first to increase the sharpness of the vinegar, the second to render the vegetables green: and this article is often used in poisonous quantities.

Sources of almost all kinds have for their base, simply, molasses and salt. Sometimes, charcoal and oxalate of lime are added. Tomatosauce is subject to coloring and for this purpose the earth called bole Armenian is generally used. Essences of lobsters, shrimps, and anchovies are also colored with the same earth.

Sugars are deteriorated with an animalcula of the Acarus family, a spontaneous product of the sugar itself. Cheap, coarse sugars are most liable to be infested with this insect. The London Lancet Commission have come to the conclusion "that the brown sugars of commerce are, in general in a state wholly unfit for human consumption."

Tea is largely adulterated, not only by our own grocers, but by the Chinese themselves, who are in the habit of substituting the leaves of several other plants for those of the genuine tea. Catechu, a powerful astringent; logwood, black lead, starch, mineral green, verdigris, and Dutch pink, all of which are poisonous, are used to give a peculiar color or colors as to different kinds of tea.

Vinegar has for its native principle acetic acid, which, combined with large proportions of water, constitutes genuine vinegar. When too much water is added, resort is had to sulphuric acid to replace the acidity which has been lost. Chili and grains of paradise are also used to give pungency, while burnt sugar is used to color. The dark-colored vinegars are usually the least pure. Vinegar is naturally of a bright amber tint.

A Negro Burned Alive.

HORRIBLE AFFAIR.

The following account of the burning of a negro at the stake by a mob, for the murder of his master, is given by a correspondent of the Mayesville Eagle. It took place at Troy, Kentucky:

On New Years' day the annual negro sales took place at Troy, the County seat, and there was quite a collection of people there; everything went on smoothly until about three o'clock in the evening, when Mr. James Calaway, a brother-in-law of the deceased, mounted upon an old goods box before the store door, and addressed the people for about 15 minutes. He said if the mass of the people felt as he did they would do their duty, which he believed and knew, and they would take the black murderer out of jail and burn him at the stake in the presence of all the negroes that were there, to act as example to them, and show them what will be the result of all such conduct if there should ever be such again. Then he closed by saying, "All that feel as I do will follow me." He then leaped from the stand, and there was a general shout given, and he led the way to the jail, and nine-tenths of the crowd followed.—On arriving at the jail they found the Sheriff and Jailor, who did all they could to suppress the mob, but all to no purpose. They then commenced with sledge-hammers, crow-bars and axes, and in about an hour entered the jail, and brought forward their victim (the negro murderer.) They marched him to the centre of the jail-yard, drove down a large stake and chained him in an erect position, head and feet fast to the stake. There was an abundance of fine split wood and shavings piled around him—this consumed some half hour. During this time the negro talked to the negroes that gathered round him. He told them that he had a good master, and that he was always treated too well and given too many liberties, and for them to take warning in time and never do as he had done. Then the torch was applied, and he seemed to be entirely indifferent about it until the flames began to burn as high as his knees. Then he began to twist and snort, and groan, and in about a minute more he commenced to scream. He gave some of the most hideous screams I ever heard come from any human being. I could not stand to see any more and left. When I left, the flames were burning as high as his head. I was only a spectator, took no hand either for or against. I think that there were some 1,500, or 2,000 people to witness this dreadful scene, and 200 or 300 negroes.

The Newly Invented Breech-loading Gun.

Since the account of the experiments made at Chatham with the newly-invented gun, the invention has attracted a great amount of interest, the model having been inspected by several of the most eminent officers belonging to the Royal Artillery and the Royal Engineers, with other persons qualified to give an opinion, all of who an unanimous in pronouncing it one of the most valuable inventions of the day. The model, rubbish in of brass, and only four inches in length from the breech to the muzzle, has been subjected to the most severe tests, and always with the most complete and satisfactory results. The inventor, Mr. Robert Warry, Armour Sergeant of the 3d battalion at Chatham, has made repeated experiments with it in the presence of a large number of officers connected with Chatham garrison the results being as satisfactory as they were astonishing. The model gun, although of the diminutive length stated, propelled the balls to a distance of 300 yards, being effective execution at 100 yards. With the greatest ease, the gun is made to fire 10 rounds per minute, and on two occasions, 30 rounds were fired in seven seconds less than five minutes, the shot at each discharge, striking an object placed at a 100 yards distant. Notwithstanding the startling results which the model has given, Mr. Warry has not yet patented an end of the close of the experiments as it was at the commencement, the opening of the breech admitting a cartridge of the ordinary length, the gun thus entirely dispensing with the system with reversing from the opening of cartridge, caused by the present system, which it is well known will in a short space of time, render a piece of ordnance almost useless. Mr. Warry is now engaged in completing a model of his breech loading cannon, of much larger dimensions, for the purpose of submitting it to the Duke of Cambridge. This gun is of wrought iron and 18 inches in length, the interior of the bore being rifled on the same principle as the ordinary Enfield rifle-musket. The ball to be used, will be the ordinary shaped rifle-bullet, which, however, will be covered with composition coating of a peculiar character. The inventor expresses his confident belief that this cannon will throw a ball fully two miles, doing effective execution at 1,000 yards, the gun being loaded and discharged at the rate of five rounds per minute.—London Review.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

New Books—A. Sawers.
Credit Sale by Auction—Geo. Weatherhead.
Agricultural Foundry—J. Hamilton.
Dissolution—Sawers & Murray.
Lecture—Mrs. Fry.
To House-Keepers—O'Dell & Co.
The Daily Globe.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, FEB'Y 16th, 1860.

Parliament.

The House of Assembly is still occupied with the answer and amendment to be given to the Governor's Address. The two parties seem so equally divided, that no certainty can be arrived at concerning the fate of the Ministry, until the vote is taken.—There is a great talk about honor and loyalty, in accepting the Queen's decision; but quite as willing to re-open the case, upon application, as an honest Judge to give a new trial, upon grounds shown. The result of the debate must soon become apparent, and we hope that when the vote is taken, victory will be declared for the opponents of the Ottawa choice.

The Conger Trial.

The Court of Chancery is about being engaged, with hearing the complaint of the Town of Peterborough against Mr. Conger and Mr. Whitmarsh, in the matter of the £1825, which were missing, when Mr. Conger made his deposit of the proceeds of the Loan to the Town out of the Municipal Fund, with the Treasurer of the Town. The Mayor and other parties, witnesses and lookers-on, are now in Toronto, anxiously waiting the issue, which, with their kind offices, will, not improbably, be against the town. This is why Mr. Conger was so anxious Mr. Stevenson should be elected Mayor. He knew that he could depend upon his countenance, at the trial. The Town may look forward to the pleasant prospect of paying a huge bill of costs, instead of getting back their own property. By and by, when they are sufficiently compromised, the townspeople will see the profit of looking after their corporation affairs, as they are always obliged to do in their own private concerns. Until then corruption and trickery may run riot. We hope to be able to lay particulars before them, next week.

Regulation of Voters.

Mr. Wilson, of Toronto, gives his opinion in the Globe upon the effect of Clerks of Municipalities not complying with their duty, as imposed by the Registration of Voters Act, of publishing before October 1, in each year, certified lists of voters. He thinks that the Clerks neglecting their duty in this particular, the electors are not thereby deprived of their right of voting, but only that the Clerks themselves are to be made suffer for the consequence of their neglect. This opinion will be interesting to some of the Municipalities in this neighborhood.

Mr. O'Dell is now exhibiting, in this Town, his newly invented washing machines. They can be seen at Welsh's Hotel. We are quite satisfied of their economy, and general value, besides the great saving of hard and unpleasant labor to the washer-woman. Every housekeeper should make haste to procure one; as to being able to afford it, they have only to remember that they pay themselves in a very short time.

Mrs. Fry will deliver a lecture, this evening, in the Town Hall, on "Education." The friends of the young, and especially the ladies, will, no doubt, patronize the lady lecturer, in such numbers, as her claims to attention, and the interest of the subject matter of her discourse, demand. Mrs. Fry has been very successful in her lectures so far. We hope to be able to add Peterboro' to her list of admirers.

Extraordinary Suicide in New Orleans.

A MAN BURNS HIMSELF ALIVE—HIS TAKES POISON IN A TOMB.

The New Orleans Crescent of the 26th gives the following remarkable story of a suicide:—

Sylvester Rupert, 37 years of age, an Englishman by birth, and by trade a ship engineer, lived with his wife and two children in a house on Pradido street. In October last the yellow fever, then prevailing, counted among its victims the youngest child of the Ruperts—their Lizzie, about four years old, and the particular pet of the father. This was a blow from which the father never recovered. Not able to buy a tomb, he had the child buried in the Greenwood Cemetery. The grief proved heavily upon him. It was his only thought; and having out of his regular employment, he found complications in his grief. He bought a burial lot and some shrubs and other material, and with his own hands, and alone in the cemetery, built him a rustic tomb.—He had set the stones to make the tomb a stylish one; so in its worth or entrance he placed a wooden frame and on this he fitted a piece of board, and secured it with screws in its four corners. On this board with which he enclosed the vault, (in lieu of the usual brick and mortar or marble slab,) he had carved nicely with his knife the burial inscriptions of his child. The tomb finished, he disinterred the child's body and placed it there. He fastened the board with screws, in order that he might afterwards have no trouble in removing it when he felt like gazing upon the decaying remains of his child. This employment, finished, it was his habit to visit the cemetery, open the tomb, and look at the corpse of his pet. He always carried a screw-driver in his pocket with which to remove and replace the lid of the coffin. Neither the haggard aspect of the shrinking little corpse, nor the foul odour of its decay, could repel him in his morbid grief. His visits were frequent and sometimes his wife went with him. He frequently complained to her that he could not get work; and this inability doubtless fostered the despondency which was drawing him to death. He frequently spoke of having no faith in the future, and of death as a desirable thing.

On Wednesday he went to the cemetery with two shrubs which he had purchased, and planted them in front of the tomb. On Thursday when he left home, he told his wife that if he had no better luck in finding work, she would never see him again. He also said something about a place in which to rest. That evening, or that night—for no one saw him in his gloomy proceedings—he visited the cemetery, taking with him his screw-driver, an iron trunk handle, a small rod of iron, a piece of wire, some new screws, and a large vial of laudanum. Unscrewing the board of the tomb, he threw away the screws, and filled the screw-holes in the board with clay. With the new screws he then secured the trunk-handle to the inside of the board. This work, of course, had to be done outside of the tomb. Pushing his child's coffin aside he got in by its side, taking with him his poison and the other articles with which he had provided himself. His hat he placed upon the coffin; his coat, which he had taken off, he wrapped around a brick for a pillow. He shut himself in with the board, by means of the handle he had screwed to it; the board fitting outside the wooden frame. The iron bar, which was of the proper length, he placed across the frame inside. The thickness of the frame would not allow the bar to pass through the trunk handle on the inside of the board; so he secured the bar and handle by means of his wire, coiling it through the one and around the other. He did not succeed in fitting the board squarely upon the frame. One corner of it caught upon the brickwork outside the frame; this he did not discover, however, owing to the darkness of the night; and but for this circumstance his fate would probably never have been discovered, or not at least for many years. Having thus hid himself away, as he fancied, beyond mortal discovery, he drained off the contents of his laudanum bottle, composed himself on his back, placed the coat and brick beneath his head, and went to sleep, and off into the unknown region of the suicides. As he did not return home on Thursday night, his wife feared the worst, remembering well the tendency of his late conduct and the tenor of his parting words. On Friday morning she arose early and went out to the cemetery. She looked all around but failed to see her husband. She went and looked at their tomb, and was about to leave, when she happened to notice that the board did not fit snugly into the frame as usual. Looking closer, she discovered the end in the holes; and putting her hand on the board found it was standing loosely. She pulled it out a little and the first thing she saw was the dead face of her husband. She fainted away, and lay in the grass she could not tell how long. She recovered at last, got up and informed the sexton, Mr. Merritt, of her discovery. The latter went and looked at things, and sent word to the coroner; and the inquest was held, as we have stated, on Saturday. The coroner's verdict was in accordance with the facts as plainly apparent—suicide by laudanum.

A Poser for the Lawyers.—After hearing a tedious will case at Dublin on Saturday, Master Litton amused the gentlemen of the long robe by requesting their opinion on the following point, on which he had been consulted on that morning:—The governor of a gaol not a hundred miles from Dublin, was on Friday arrested and incarcerated in his own gaol for a debt of £600, the attorney for the plaintiff demanding and obtaining a certificate from him that he was in custody. Now, in execution of his duties as governor could he go beyond the walls of the gaol without being liable to arrest for escaping from prison under the above committal? Counsel seem quite pasted as to the law of the case, there being no precedent, but would consider it, and talk with his lordship on it on an early day.

Adventures of a Lady's Leg.—A surgical instrument-maker, named Bechard, yesterday brought an action before the Civil Tribunal against Madame Alexandreske, a Wallachian lady, to obtain payment of 1,055f. for two artificial legs. He represented that the lady, having had one of her legs amputated, had ordered him to make two artificial ones. He made one, and it answered very well; but she was not satisfied, and almost every day wanted some alterations made. He humored all her whims. He frequently hinted that he should be glad to receive payment, but she always carefully avoided the subject. At length he heard that she had run into debt with several tradesmen, had not paid any one, and was about to leave France. He at once hurried to the Hotel Louvres, where she was residing, and asked for his money, but she said that some new alteration was necessary in the leg, and he took it away.—When he returned, two days after, she positively refused to receive either him or the leg, and notified that she had got another leg by another maker. He, therefore, claimed payment both for the leg she had tried, and the other she had ordered. In answer to the action, Madame Alexandreske through her counsel, represented the facts in a very different light. The leg had never been perfect, and the alterations she had ordered to be made in it were necessary.—Having awakened to leave the Hotel Louvres to reside in the Rue du Helder, the landlord was greatly irritated, and told all her tradesmen; and amongst them the plaintiff, that she was about to leave France without paying anybody. The plaintiff, when he heard of this, happened to be at a wedding party in a restaurant, but he immediately hurried to the Hotel, bounced into her room, demanded payment, and, without waiting for an answer, took the leg from a cupboard, and carried it off, banging the door after him. Two days after, hearing that, instead of leaving France, she had taken an apartment in the Rue du Helder, and that she was perfectly respectable and perfectly solvent, he went back the leg, but after his former conduct, she refused to take it, or have anything more to do with him. Her counsel remarked, that under the circumstances she was perfectly justified in her refusal. He added that the poor lady had met with several tribulations since her arrival in France. First, she had lost her leg; next, some personated her that she ought to have the limb buried in Pere la Chaise, and charged her 100f. for burying it and erecting a little monument over it; and thirdly, she employed a notorious public to write her letters, but, as ill luck would have it, the man was a poet, and instead of obeying her orders, he passed his time in writing a poem on her amputated leg. She dismissed him, and he then had the impudence to cite her before the Judge-de-paix for 100f. for his poem. The Tribunal decided that the plaintiff, in carrying off the leg, had relieved the lady from the contract which she had entered into with him, and it dismissed the action with costs.—Gotignani.

The Queen and the French Soldier.—Julien Antran, the French soldier who was sent to this country by the Emperor in charge of a piece of ordnance as a present to the Queen, and who, it will be remembered, had his leg broken by the box of the limber-waggon falling upon it on the 15th of November last, is now perfectly recovered from the accident; and on Saturday he had the honor of being presented to Her Majesty and the Prince Consort by Colonel Howard Vyse, who conveyed him to the Castle in his own carriage. The presentation took place in one of the private rooms of the Castle, but without ceremony, there being present only Her Majesty, the Prince Consort, Colonel Howard Vyse, 2d Life Guards, and the French soldier. Her Majesty and the Prince Consort conversed with Antran for some time in his own language. The Queen enquired into every particular relative to the accident, and asked the soldier if he had suffered much, and upon his replying that he had scarcely suffered anything, Her Majesty observed that she was pleased to find that the reports in answer to the enquiries which she made since the accident had proved to be correct. The Queen listened attentively to the soldier's minute detail of every occurrence since the accident, and afterwards inquired if he was satisfied with the treatment he had experienced whilst at the White Hart Hotel, to which he gave the most satisfactory answer. The Prince Consort also conversed with him, and as he was about to leave, the Prince observed that he was sorry that he would bear with him to France a painful reminiscence of his visit to England; when the soldier replied, "Oh the contrary, for that he felt more than compensated for his accident by the generous kind treatment he had received from the English people during his stay in this country, but more particularly so by the honor he had now received in being presented to Her Majesty and her Royal Consort." Previously to Antran's presentation, her Majesty had kindly sent to him a splendid gold watch and gold chain. Antran is a sergeant-major, 14th Regiment Horse Artillery, at Vincennes, where he superintends the manufacture of ammunition for the garrison at Paris. He is now merely waiting for the necessary documents to authorise his proceeding to his own country.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Important Temperance Convention.

A meeting of delegates from the different Temperance organizations in the County of Peterborough, was held in the Good Templars' Hall in the Town of Peterboro' on the 3rd of February, for the purpose of organizing a Temperance League or Convention for the County of Peterborough.—The following representatives were present:

Springville Total Abstinence Society—Rev. Wm. Bleib.

Friendship Lodge, No. 146, I. O. Good Templars, Peterboro'—W. Johnston, Jos. Spencley, sen'r., W. H. Martin, D. Pentland.

Peterboro' Division, No. 45, Sons of Temperance—Rev. W. Scott, Jos. Ford, James Brown, sen'r.

Otonabee Division, No. 313, Sons of Temperance.—Thos. Ryan, G. Stewart.

Keene Division Sons of Temperance.—J. Anderson, P. McNeil, R. Spiers, John Wallace, T. Lockhart, R. McIntyre.

Band of Hope Division, Sons of Temperance, Smith—R. Chown, T. C. Fitzgerald.

Division 76, Sons of Temperance, Smith—James Morrison, J. T. Milburn.

Anchor of Hope Lodge Good Templars, Ashburnham—John Mitchell.

Wm. Johnston, Esq., was called to the Chair, and Mr. George Stewart appointed Secretary.

Moved by J. Spencley, seconded by W. H. Martin—That the delegates from the different Temperance organizations now present do agree to form themselves into a County Convention or League for the purpose of carrying out the principles of Total Abstinence.—Carried.

Moved by J. Spencley, seconded by W. H. Martin—That this Association be designated the "Abstinence Union of the County of Peterborough," and be it

Resolved, That the officers of this Association shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, and seven of a Committee, who shall meet the delegates from the several Temperance organizations throughout the County, and that the officers do draft a Constitution and Bye-Laws, embracing the object and management of this Association, and submit it to this meeting if practicable.

The Officers and Committee to consist of the following gentlemen:—Rev. Wm. Scott, President; Wm. Johnston, Vice President; D. Pentland, Secretary; and W. H. Martin, Treasurer. Committee—Rev. W. Blain, Springville; Jas. Anderson, Keene; Thomas Ryan, Otonabee; Thomas Millburn, Smith; J. Ford, Joseph Spencley, R. Rutherford, Peterboro'.—Carried.

The President and Committee then retired to consider the business referred to them. When they returned the President reported the following resolutions:

1. That every Total Abstinence Society in the County of Peterborough shall be considered a Branch of this Association, and that each about three delegates, who shall be members of this Association for business purposes, but any member of any Temperance organization shall have the privilege of attending any of the meetings of the Association.

2. That the object of this Association is to keep in view the great cause of Temperance and use every lawful and legitimate means to promote the principles and practice of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks.

3. That a Roll Book to be procured for each branch of the Association, and a general one for the Association itself, in which shall be enrolled the names of all persons joining the Association, and that these do constitute the members of this Society.

4. That each Branch of this Association shall devise such means and adopt such measures as shall secure the largest possible number of names to the Total Abstinence pledge.

5. That a meeting of this Association be held once every three months for the purpose of receiving reports from the several branches, and to consider such other means as may be efficient toward the great object which we have in view.

6. That collections be made by the several Branches and by the general Association in such manner as may to each seem practicable, for the purpose of carrying out our designs, by lectures and tracts.

7. That such other regulations as may by the Committee be deemed prudent, be prepared and laid before the next meeting of this Association, which shall be convened in Peterboro', at half-past 1 o'clock, on the last Tuesday in February, in the Hall of the I. O. of Good Templars.

The foregoing resolutions were unanimously accepted.

Moved by Mr. Atkinson, seconded by Mr. Ford—That as laboring in the power and duty of the Legislature to deal with the Liquor question in one affecting both the moral and religious interests of the community, still being convinced that no restrictive measures will prove efficacious, unless they be sanctioned, upheld and enforced by the moral and religious public; be it therefore

Resolved,—That an energetic and united effort be made to promote the great object of Temperance organizations by holding a series of public meetings at suitable places throughout the County for the promotion of the Temperance cause, and that the Pastors of the various Churches, and others in the County, be requested to aid in stimulating professed Christians to a proper discharge of their duty towards their God and society in relation to the crying evils and sin of intemperance.

Resolved,—That the Secretary of this Association do request the Reverend gentlemen of this County to consent to give at least two Temperance Lectures during the season at times and places best suited to their convenience.

Unanimously adopted.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Ford—That the Editors of the Examiner and Review, Canada Temperance Advocate and Canadian Visitor, be respectfully requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.

That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Rev. Mr. Scott, and Rev. Mr. Blain, for their valuable assistance at this meeting.

That the thanks of this Association be given to Mr. Wm. Johnston, chairman of this meeting, for the very able manner in which he has conducted the business of this Convention.

Carried.

The Association then adjourned to meet again on the last Tuesday in February.

W. Johnston, Chairman.
G. Stewart, Secretary.
Peterboro', February 7th, 1859.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—As I am about negotiating for a lease of the Cobourg Railway, and that the business is likely to be a great deal more next Summer than it was last, I now take the opportunity of informing the inhabitants of Peterboro' that I will use my utmost endeavours to do their business to their entire satisfaction over the Cobourg Railway. I intend chartering Mr. Short's steamboat to run across Rice Lake with passengers, until the whole of the bridge is filled up.—It is my intention to push the Chemong road up to Strickland's, and across from there to Chemong Lake at as early a day as possible, when I intend purchasing Mr. Sawers' steamboat "Fly," which is able to do all the business on the back-lakes for some time to come, and which I shall use as a feeder to the Cobourg Road, and kill the Lindsay supply to the Port Hope Road from the back-lakes.

[illegible] amicably with the Port Hope people. If you noticed an article in the Atlas, I think you will not be surprised at me taking hold of the Cobourg road. I intend building the station of the Millbrook Branch at the southern limits of the Corporation when I get the Cobourg road put into good working order, so as it will be able to do all the business that it will be required to do. I expect the filling in of the Lake will commence next month, and go on more vigorous than ever, as all the cars, steam excavator, &c., are on the place, and I am about arranging for the use of them. I think the road will be running about the first week in April, as at will be that time before the ice is out of Rice Lake.

If Port Hopers intend having a share of Peterboro' business, they will have to pay a little more respect to the inhabitants of Peterboro', and not kick up a fuss because some of the Peterboro' people are elected Directors; they will likewise have to treat me a little different to what they ever have done, or they will find I can put them to a little inconvenience. They talk of their fine harbour, but what will it be without the Peterboro' business. I guess their harbour debentures will not be worth 10 cents on the dollar; and if they are not, they can only blame themselves for being so selfish. They got me to take £10,000 stock in their broken-down road, and then wanted to prevent me from having anything to do in the electing of Directors. They want to ride over both Peterboro' and myself. They appoint their own Station-master for Peterboro', likewise all the officers along the line, without asking any questions from either Peterboro' or me. They will find that such high-handed work will not do; they will have to alter their course, or they will regret it.

Yours truly,
John Fowler.

Cobourg, Feb. 2, 1859.

For the Examiner.

Loyal Orange County Meeting.

At the Annual County meeting of the Loyal Orange Association, held in the Orange Hall this day, the Worshipful County Master, Edwin Poole, Esq., in the chair; the following resolutions were carried unanimously, viz:—

Moved by Bro. Wm. Johnston, County Treasurer, seconded by Bro. John Kennedy, District Master,—That whereas a circular has been received by the County Master, of the County of Peterborough, purporting to be a copy of an Act of Parliament, to incorporate the Loyal Orange Association of Canada, and being circulated for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the members of the Association upon the necessity of the said Act of Incorporation, Be it therefore resolved,

1st. That the members of the Loyal Orange Association, have hitherto opposed the incorporation of it Lodges in Canada, and are still of opinion that such incorporations are highly injurious to the liberties of our Country, and detrimental to the moral and religious improvement of our fellow-countrymen of the Roman Church, we therefore submit that the one sentiment, of giving to our grand "vantage" ground of opposition to them, by uniting in Act of Incorporation for ourselves.

2nd. That the tendency of all such incorporations, is to place the power in the hands of a few, creating a set of tyrants, who alike "lord it" over the consciences and property of those who are members of the fraternity as "brethren," as the case may be, and being therefore opposed to the great principle of liberty of conscience, which it is the grand boast of our Association to maintain.

3rd. That the Orange Association has now existed through several generations, without such incorporation, and prospered exceedingly, the Lodges have still been enabled to obtain good Lodge rooms, and from all appearance will continue on, as it is an Association that has little or no funds to invest, and never was intended to be such an Association, therefore this County Lodge sees no necessity for such incorporation.

4th. That this County Lodge is of opinion, that the Society does not need the Act of Incorporation, to give power to sue its members for arrears of dues, as they now have sufficient power in their own Rules and Regulations, to deal with such members, and a member who would need to be sued is not likely to be of much good to the Society, so that it would be better to deal with them in conformity with our rules, than to adopt a known evil for their benefit.

5th. That this County Lodge regrets that there are members of said Association, (with other parties outside of the Society) who have striven in and out of Parliament, and are now striving by obtaining such Act of incorporation, to wield a political influence throughout its members, and we will hail that day when such members are no more connected as brethren of said Association, (if they continue in that course) which we hold to be non-political, and purely a religious and Loyal Association.

6th. That this County Lodge, in view of all the evils which it believes would arise from an Act of incorporation, without any benefits which can be seen to be obtained by it hereby gives its unqualified disapproval of the movement, and declares the act not only unnecessary, but highly dangerous to the interests and existance of the Association.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the current year:—

Bro. Edwin Poole, County Master,
" William Rea, " Dep. Master,
" Jno. Kennedy, " Secretary,
" Wm. Johnston, " Treasurer,
" John Graham, " Chaplain,
" Geo. Johnston, " G. D. of Cer.

Moved by Br. William B. Read, seconded by Bro. James Robb,—That the Editors of the Review and Examiner, be requested to publish the above in their next issue.—Carried.

JOHN KENNEDY,
County Secretary.

Peterborough, February 7th, 1859.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Feb. 10th, 1859.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	1 20	a	1 40
Spring Wheat "	1 10	a	1 20
Oats "	0 50	a	0 55
Potatoes "	0 25	a	0 30
Apples "	0 80	a	1 00
Flour per barrel	6 50	a	7 00
Butter per lb.	0 12½	a	0 15
Cheese "	0 10	a	0 00
Pork per cwt.	4 50	a	5 50
Beef per cwt	4 00	a	4 50
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Dry Wood	1 00	a	1 50
Green Wood	1 00	a	1 25
Straw per load	1 00	a	1 50
Turkeys	0 50	a	0 60

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

NEW BOOKS!

The Subscriber has just received a large stock of new Books, to which he invites the attention of the Public. Besides a good supply of

BIBLES, TESTAMENTS, [illegible]

Wesley's Hymns, &c., &c.,

and a well-selected stock of

School-Books,

he has a selection of

MISCELLANEOUS LITERATURE,

comprising in part the following Works:—

Startling Questions
Clara Stantley
Aunt Edith
Memoir of Lady Colquhoun
Children of the Manse
Priest, Puritan and Preacher
Rich and Poor
Florence Egerton
The Person and Work of Christ
Pen Pictures of the Bible
Walter Benning
Watts on the Mind
Life of our Lord Jesus Christ
Quiet Thoughts for Quiet Hours
Decision
Tru Heroism
Bunyans Pilgrim's Progress
Kitty Brown
Fox's Book of Martyrs
Rose Hill
Honesty is the best Policy
Reuben Kent
Ellen and Clara
Robert Dawson, Annie Sherwood
Bogatzy's Golden Treasury
Brown's Concordance
The Convert and Armour
Counsel to the Young
Scripture Promise
Stories for Little Readers
Flowers from the Garden of Laurie Todd
Advice to a Young Christian
Gospel Promises—Alleine
Token for Children—Janeway
True Christian
Course of Time—Pollok
Morning of Joy—Bonar
Life of Col. Gardiner
Families from Eden—Hamilton
Baxter's Call
Phillip Colville—Kennedy
Night of Weeping—Bonar
Anxious Inquirer—James
Midnight Harmonies—Winslow
Royal Preacher—Hamilton
Mind of Jesus
Words of Jesus
More Words than One—Brewster
Dead in Christ—Brown
Story of Bethlehem—M'Duff
Young Man's Friend—James
Christian Profession—James
Mabel Grant
Tales of Covenanters
Tales from English History
Peep of Day
Precept upon Precept
Diary of a Physician, 3 vols.
Means and Ends
Poor Rich Man & Rich Poor Man
Live and Let Live
Stories for Young Persons
The Woodcutter and Esther
Jamie Gordon or the Orphan
Byron's Complete Works
Buccaneers—Scott
United States Minister, 2 vols
Reformation—D'Aubigne
Butler's Complete Works
Chambers' Miscellanies
CXIX Psalm—Bridges
Critical Works—Talboot
Wilmot's Essays
Scots Worthies—Howe
Kingdom of Christ—Wesley
Lectures on the Romanists
Divine Government—McCosh
Church of Scotland—Hetherington
Family Worship
Life Lessons, &c.—McCheyne
Josephus' Works—Whiston
Bible Light—Anderson
Romanism—Cobbin
Female Characters of Scripture—Miss Hyde
Essays in Rhymes—Jones
Which the Right or the Left
The Ministry of Life
Adventures of the Bible—Sidney
Spurgeon's Sermons
Death's Jest Book
Wife Wanted—White
Forbidden Books
Last Hours—White
Land of Promise—Bonar
Burning Bush—Fry
Pastor " "
The Heart of Mid-Lothian
Dick's Philosophies
Pastor—Pollock
Young Men's Library
Wandering Children, Illustrated
Roman Repentance—Morris
Cousin's Question—Farrell
Captain Hall's Stories
History of [illegible]—Taylor
Gospel Expository Thoughts—Ryle
Pastor's Beauty
Christian Mothers
Indian Rebellion—Dr. Duff
Young Womans Friend
Words of Jesus
Family Prayers
Rending without Tears
Daily Bible, 3 Vols—Kitto
Dodridge and Revival—Winslow
Prison World of Europe
Memories of Bethany
Passages from Home Life
Sacramental Meditations—Willison
Three Divine Sisters—Adams
Vicar of Wakefield—Goldsmith
Christian Faith—Abercrombie
Family Library, 18 Vols
Combe's Moral Philosophy
Beecher's Receipt Book
" Domestic Economy
Moral Philosophy—Smith
English Humorists
The Farmer's Companion
Olmsted's Astronomy
Ebenezer's Works—3 Vols
Principles of Taste—Alison
Farm Implements, 200 eng.—Thomas
Phrenology, 100 eng.—Combe
The Soul or Body
Body and Mind
Man and his Motives
The Farm Yard
The Garden
Tassel Horton
Magician's own Book
Scotia's Bards
Titcomb's Letters
Philip's Marys
Life Studies—Baillie
African Mountain Valley
Bible Companion—Tyng
Philip's Hannahs
Opie on Lying
Harvey's Meditations
Morning of Life
Truth and Error.—Bonar
Philip's Marthas
Philip's Lydias
Lamp and Lantern—Hamilton
Annals of the Poor—Richmond
The Rambles of a Rat
Harp on the Willow—Hamilton
Story of Grace
Flora, or Self Deception
Abbeokuta—Tucker
Passing Clouds
Greatness of the Soul—Bunyan
Eternal day
Four-fold State—Boston
Christ our Example—C. Fry
Shadow on the Hearth
English Hearts and English Hands
Memoir of Richard Williams
The Broken Rod
Christian Titles—Tyng
Morning and Night Watches
Water from the Well Spring
Johnson's Rasselas
The Bow in the Cloud
Tales Sketches &c.—Macgeorge
Live and Learn
Lowest Thou Me
Seed-time and Harvest
The Daughter at School
Cats and Dogs
Martin Rattler
The Bible Hour
The Happy Home
Ralph Gemmell
Follow Jesus
Helen of the Glen
Faithful Promises and Altar Stones
The Victory Won
Persecuted Family
Jessie Allina—Kennedy
Life of John Bunn
Man and his Religion—Bonar
Memoirs of Oberlin
Ashton Cottage
The Commandment with Promise
Charles Roussell
Daily Walk with God—Henry
Communicants' Companion—Henry
Life of Capt. Vicars
Night Thoughts—Young
Messages from God—Cumming
Christ Receiving Sinners
The Christian Contemplated—Gay
The Great Journey
Old Friends with New Faces
The Mine—A. L. O. E
Widow Directed—James
The Coronal
The Christian Wreath
Token of Friendship
Memoirs of John Kitto—Eyland
The Inheritance of the Saints
Memoirs of William Wilberforce
Eddy Ellerslie and the Mine
Course of Faith—James
Christian Duty—James
Hawker's Portions
Cawper's Poetical Works
Thomson and Gray's Works
Kirke White and Campbell's Works
George Herbert's Works
Mrs. Sigourney's Works
Fred Vernon
Cruise of the Midge
Tom Cringle's Log
Barney O'Hierdon
Marie Louise
Dick Tarleton
Craigallan Castle
Gideon Giles
Gus. Howard
Fred Arden
After Dark
Woman's Life
Fair Rosamond
Dead Secret
Minnie Grey.
Arthur O'Leary
Frank Hilton
Rochester
Woman and her Master
Amy Lawrence
Harry Ashton
Hide and Seek
Harold Tracy
Henri De la Tour
Bella Trelawney
Fred Graham
Charles Vavasour
Marion Barnard
Tower of London
Adventures of an Aid-de-camp
The Virgin Queen
Rory O'Moore
Robert Macaire
Capt Blake
Phillip Rolls
Martin Chuzzlewit
Bleak House
Sketches by "Boz"
Barnaby Rudge
Dombey and Son
Christmas Stories
David Copperfield
Frank Mildmay
The King's Own
Jacob Faithful
Newton Forster
Midshipman Easy
Japhet in search of a Father
Phantom Ship
Percival Keene
The Lollards
Will Watch
Outward Bound
Harris Trial
Wary fox's Commis
The Ruined Family
Pe Rum
The False Heir
Benvenue
Rienzie
Agincourt a Romance
Allen or the Mysteries
The Great Beggarly Statement
Eugene Aram
Paul Clifford
Rose Daubert
The Castle of Ehrenstein
Forest Days
Asmodeus Discount
The Wanderer
The Disowned
Rush Ranger of Van Diemens Land
The Last Days of Pompeii
The Forgery
The Convict
Quentin or the Kings Pist
The Smuggler
Heidelberg
A White and his consequences
Night and Morning
The R—— Family
Asmus Hall
Leonora
Headsmany or the Rover
The Pioneers Compliers
Rienzi in Rhymes
The Sinners
Jane Eyre
Lady Lee's Widowhood
Ernest
The Commissioner
Rents
John Halifax Gentleman
Sir Roger
Shirley, a Tale
The Professor, a Tale
The Land of the Saxons
Jack Shellington, and those Gifts
The Pilgrims of the Rhine
A Life of Vicissitudes
Peter Simple
Peter Jack
Monsieur Tonsonthen
Harry O'Donnahoe
Diedrich Knickerbocker
Knight of Gwynne
Con Cregan
Jack Hinton
Harry Lorrequer
Rattin the Reefer
Twelve and Three Quizzes
Packs of Many Tales
Tom Burke
Charles O'Malley
Scarletown
The Star Chamber
Windsor Castle
The Miser's Daughter
Davenport Dunn
Old Saint Paul's
Pictorial Life and Adventures of Jack Sheppard
Mysteries of the Court of the Stuarts
Countess Fleming
The Young Duke
Miriam Alroy
Venetia
Henrietta Temple
Paul Deverell
Pictorial Life of Guy Fawkes
Little Dorrit
Life Yara
King of the Winds
Prince Charles
Vivian Grey
Buccaneer's Daughter
Temptation
Stanfield Hall
Simon Tool
Canadian Homes
Bess Woodville
Quintin Matsys
Marguerite de Valois
The Young Chevalier
The Bee King
Comic Wandering Jew
The Comical Adventures of David Duffoin
The Blasted Heath
Josephine or the Maid of

The Paraguay Expedition.

LOPEZ PREPARING FOR WAR.

A correspondent of the New York Herald writing from Buenos Ayres, on the 12th of November, says:—

"I am able to lay before you some items concerning the last point—the Paraguayan preparation for war. The first defences worthy of the name are two or three leagues above the confluence of the rivers Paraguay and Parana. At what is called the Tres Bocas (three mouths of the Paraguay) there is a small station, but of too little force to be considered. But there is, a little higher up, a range of defences called Humaita, that is intended to command the river perfectly. It consists of a range of batteries extending along the shore for a distance of a mile-and-a-half, and mounting about one hundred and fifty guns. The breast-works are made of timber in front, filled in with clay from behind, making such an elevation for the guns as directs them towards the middle of the narrow channel. The bank here is about fifteen feet above the water. About the middle of this line of unsheltered guns there is a covered battery, mounting thirteen guns. The walls and covering are of brick. The embrasures or openings for the guns are bevelled from the outside instead of from within, making a large target around each gun, and making the wall so weak that a cannon ball hitting anywhere near the gun would knock the bricks over the heads of the gunners. Across the river from this line of batteries they have recently cleared away a heavy frost, and as that side would command the river for a greater distance than does the one now occupied, the probability is, that our expedition will find guns on both sides. The river at that point is narrow, and the channel is so narrow that turning round is out of the question, and so close to the Humaita fort is it that you could stand on ship board and toss a biscuit on shore. Below the fort, and on the same side, the ground is covered with low trees and tangled brush, almost impenetrable. Here and there in this forest, within sight of the river, little patches have been cleared. There is at this point also such a bend in the river that a ship does not see port until nearly upon it. But vessels that can throw shells two miles, as ours can, could lie under cover of that forest and that bend, and the range of batteries is such that a shell would have a width of target of a mile and a half, so that not a shell need be lost. Does not Lopez foresee all this, and are not these patches of cleared forest places where guns will be planted to annoy the shell throwers? Back of the defences directly on the river bank there are placed breastworks, at irregular distances, and pointing some down the river and others up, with reference to a retreat from the river side, and to be used in case of an attempted landing by the attacking party. The number of soldiers within easy call of this fort is about 12,000. They have not the skill or power in a conflict that we find in the troops of the leading nations of the world, but they are by far the best troops in South America. Their liberal mixture of Indian blood makes them far more formidable in battle than the pure Spanish. They do sometimes get into confusion, but they don't run or retreat, unless ordered. No Paraguayan leaves his post and lives another day. Every lance, lasso or knife in the republic is commissioned against him in summary execution. They are wanting in experience in using heavy guns, and the foreign instructors whom they have employed will not engage in actual conflict, being relieved from that obligation by contract. But they are not wanting in savage ferocity, or in fatal skill in the use of the 'bolas,' the 'lasso,' and the lance; and 40,000 men can be concentrated at one point upon very short notice. For distant Gaboto they are not prepared Judge Bowlin will doubtless be detained at or below Humaita until it shall please Lopez to let a negotiation commence. The result of it can only be conjectured. The sentiment here is, that he will offer a serious and tedious resistance.

The Public Lands in Canada.

INDUCEMENTS TO SETTLERS.

We have had numerous enquiries addressed to us with reference to the price of land in the British Provinces, and the conditions of settlement. We have been unable to answer these enquires for two very good reasons, because the prices have recently been undergoing a change, and because information on the subject was not very accessible. The difficulties of obtaining land in small quantities for reasonable prices in the Western States, arising from the circumstance of the wild land fit for occupation being nearly all in the hands of private speculators, has we suppose prompted these inquiries. When such prices as ten, twenty, and even as high as thirty dollars an acre are demanded for wild lands, intending settlers not unnaturally look about them for some location where they can buy farms without having to sacrifice the whole of their hard-worn earnings in the purchase of the mere surface of the earth, which they have to reclaim and cultivate, on which they have to build, to sow and to reap, before they can obtain any return for their outlay. From the "Regulations for the Sale and Management of the Public Lands" just issued, we now learn on what terms land may be obtained in Canada. The Government offer to dispose of it either in large quantities en bloc, at half a dollar an acre, the purchasers being at the expense of the surveys, or in township lots at seventy cents per acre for cash, or one dollar on time. Objection has been made to the first of the proposals on the ground that it will give encouragement to speculation, but we question if it will do so more than the system practised hitherto of leaving the public lands to be jobbed away at the will of public officials without any fixed price at all. If the conditions of settlement specified in the regulations are enforced the speculation will be nothing more than a legitimate trade in land, and the Government is certainly justified in adopting means of this kind to secure the aid of private capitalists in promoting the settlement of the country. Much better that any one desirous of engaging in such an undertaking should be enabled to purchase a tract of unsurveyed country by paying down the price of half-a-dollar an acre, than that the public lands should be left as plunder to be granted away for a mere nominal price to the favorites of the Government for the time being. Having, therefore, no partizan motives in opposing the present administration, we cannot but regard this regulation as the most expedient they could have adopted, and we hope it will be honestly carried out in so far as the enforcement of the conditions of settlement are concerned.

With reference to the sale of land in lots, we have only to point out the great advantages that are offered to industrious settlers. First-rate land, for all the handy groups whose, of course, included, is offered at seventy cents an acre, if the money is paid down, or one dollar in three equal annual instalments, free from interest. Additional to all this, the settler is allowed to select his own lot, and if he prefers it, he may have a free grant of 200 acres on condition of settlement within three years. It is this last privilege that we have to complain of. It is this that will prevent the land from being brought into cultivation, and it is this that will cause the settler to be put to the greatest expense in the matter of reclaiming the land, and bringing it under cultivation, if it ever does cost. But this has its advantages also, as settlers in the West, who have to pay such exorbitant prices for lumber and land, are well aware. For a working man and his family—and none but such should think of going into the bush—an uncleared farm in a good locality in Canada offers a certain prospect of comfort and prosperity. It is a very rough work at first, demanding considerable courage of spirit as well as energy of body. But if the settler is a man of the right sort, he fights bravely through all his difficulties, and in a few years he has the satisfaction to see the wilderness around him, not exactly blossoming as the rose, but yellow with golden grain, or green with pastures where the cattle feed. All this is his own, and surely it does not demand any unusual bravery for a man to fight his way by a few years self-denial and ordinary labor, to a possession like this, which to a man whose heritage is all comprised in his two stout hands, may surely be deemed an independence and a fortune. If he has worked well his farm at the end of ten years is worth fifty fold what he paid for it, and he can get the price when he pleases. He has in addition his stock of cattle and implements, and it may be hoped a tolerable Bank account.

Such is the prospect that may be held out to the stout working man who has a family to assist him. Canada does not want any other class, certainly not at present, unless men of capital, for whom there is always an opening. The best men for the country, those who cannot fail to do well in it and for it, if they are well doing themselves, are the industrious hinds of Scotland. With their own hands, and those of their wives and children, they want little money to start with. This class may do well if they arrive in Canada with the matter of sixty pounds in their pocket.—And they could not come at a better time than now, if they have the money, that is to say, for they will not readily get employment at present. But now is the opportunity to commence operations on one's own account. Everything is cheap, which is an advantage to the beginner, and better times will come by and by, bringing an increased demand and higher prices. Our advice, however, does not extend beyond the class we have specified. The only kind of labor for which there is encouragement at present is that which can be directly applied to reclaiming the wilderness.—Scottish American Journal.

A Revolution in Ship-Building

THE WINANS STEAMER.

The new steamer, of whose building and novel hull so much has been said by the papers, has turned out to be no myth but a fact and the vessel has already been tried experimentally on the water. Whether it will be another chimera like the Ericson failure, or prove in reality that which the projectors hope, cannot yet be ascertained, but the enterprise has been carried to a completion, and the Messrs. Winans, the owners, are exulting in the successful results of the trip. Steam was recently applied to the machinery of this singular craft at the wharf at Baltimore and the vessel steamed out into the Chesapeake. After three or four hours of testing her sea-going qualities the steamer returned to her moorings with the satisfaction of all on board. The owners, a lieutenant of the navy and a few scientific gentlemen were present at the trip, and they all concluded that the vessel had not disappointed the most sanguine friends of the scheme. Some fifty-six pounds of steam—only half the pressure allowed her—were applied, and the vessel made 13 miles an hour, a speed not usually felt on other steamers at the same speed and in the same sea. At the next trip her qualities will be fully tested and the greatest speed brought out in the roughest water before the most eminent builders and nautical men of the country. If successful for all the purposes intended a new era will commence in navy architecture, and a revolution in steam-navigation. The press is full of comments upon this extraordinary application of curved lines, and we borrow for the benefit of our readers a few ideas concerning this remarkable ship, whose structure is so much at variance with our ark-like notions of the present race of watercraft. All preconceived notions of the shape of a ship are set at defiance in her construction. She is shaped like a cigar, pointed alike at both ends, round alike at top and bottom. The part out of water is shaped exactly like the part in. She has no duck, no masts, no sails, no bulwarks.—She cannot ship a sea for there is no thing to catch it, and when a wave dashes over her it must run off "like water off a duck's back." She cannot capsize and sink for whether right side up or wrong side up, or on her beam-ends, she would float equally well. Every part of her presents an arched surface to resist the waves, and her great length and sharpness are expected to enable her to attain great speed. It is anticipated that she will work especially well in rough weather, being adapted to go safely through a wave if she cannot go over it, and as for "getting in the trough of the sea," she will be as safe there as anywhere else. All the world knows that a tightly-corked bottle, thrown overboard in a storm, will come safely ashore, though the ship itself is wrecked. The man who goes to sea in the new Winan's steamer, is in much the same condition as if he was corked up in a bottle.

The propelling power of this extraordinary craft is to be neither a paddle wheel or screw, but a compound of both. It revolves completely round the outside of the largest part of the vessel, amidships, and is expected to give her a velocity unattainable by ordinary steamers. Against these anticipated advantages there are some drawbacks, relating chiefly to the comfort and convenience of passengers. Her narrow cylindrical shape will offer few facilities for "spacious well-lighted saloons," and her curved surface (it is not a deck) few inducements for a promenade. Nor can she take aboard any great amount of freight, besides her coal. But if she proves as successful as her inventor hopes, in respect to speed and safety, passengers will entrust themselves to no other sort of vessel, and demand more of the whalelike looking craft will be launched to make up the number what they lack in capacity, and meet the requirements of the ever-going public.

FOR SALE.

50 BARRELS PRIME MESS BEEF for Sale on Reasonable Terms.

JAMES RYAN.

Peterboro', Feb. 2, 1859. 6-3t.

DENTISTRY.

A MANY persons are constantly calling on the subscriber, during the short visits he has annually made to this section of the country, to attend to the operation of Dentistry, that he has concluded to remain permanently in Peterboro', and devote his PRACTICAL attention to that branch of the profession. He will be found at his residence on the corner of George and Aylmer Streets, on any day when he is not absent on professional business.

☞ Terms moderate.

Peterboro', Nov. 10th, 1858. 44

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED

FROM

NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE.

CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGOU, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confect'ers,) Yellow Refined, COFFEE, SYRUP, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

RICE, Redpath's refined.

TOBACCOS, Arracan, Patna & South Carolina,

PIPES, 5s. 10s. & lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

RAISINS, T'd Glasgow & Montreal, Bums. Cutty and fancy Pipes.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Boxes, & do. & do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

WINES & LIQUORS, Pottle's Thime, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

Oil Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (case Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls, nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Wholesale Grocers, HUNTER STREET.

Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS, assorted kinds. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood, Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by

44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles Superior articles. For sale by

S. E. CURRY & Co.

Hunter Street, Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE

COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.

SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,

Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 26 x 32 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription,

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Season Tickets of admission to the Eastern, (or Dusseldorf,) and Western Galleries of the Association.

These GIFTS are given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable works of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Easts, Statuettes, &c., from celebrated American and foreign Artists.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1, 1859. On the evening of that day committees will be awarded to Subscribers.

For full particulars, specimen pages, &c., &c., send, prize by mail, 25 cents, (which amount will be allowed to parties subscribing,) to the Publishers, 11 Chambers st. 10 cents in postage stamps will do.

C. L. DERBY,
348 Broadway, N. Y.

Eastern Office,

Or, Western Office,

Subscriptions received by E. B. Walker and Hiram Storey, Peterboro'.

INSURANCES.

THE ÆTNA FIRE AND MARINE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A.J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HAGEY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A.J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro' March 24th, 1857. 13

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND LIFE GENERAL INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

PRESIDENT, J. S HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. ROBINSON.	E. F. WHITESIDE, Esq.
Geo. DUNBAR, Jr., Esq.	Geo. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.	JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.	A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON.	DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL.

PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 1-tf.

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT G. HENTSON, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as and that he will always be ready to act as such in the Town or in the country.

AUCTIONEER,

☞ Sales attended at Auction Rooms, Hall's Corners, George Street, Peterboro', or at Sales of Stock, Farming Utensils, Household Furniture, &c., &c., in the country, on as reasonable terms as any other Auctioneer.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1856. 46

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect said fees, under the Market By-law by which they are controlled, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.

Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858. 39-tf

Mrs. Eliza Hunter

MILLINER & DRESS-MAKER,

Opposite the Grammar & Union School, Hunter Street, Peterboro'.

Fashionable Bonnets and Cloaks made on the shortest notice. NEW YORK BONNET SHAPES kept constantly on hand.

Peterboro', Nov. 16th, 1858. 45-3m

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE

REMOVED

TO THEIR

NEW SHOP,

CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporated the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by altering the line of route for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Manvers Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board;

THOMAS RIDOUT.
Secretary.

P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.

Port Hope, Dec. 13, 1858. 50e

TO THE TRADE!

PETERBORO'

Soap and Candle Works.

A large stock of very superior

CANDLES AND SOAP

now on hand and for sale at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.

Cash for Lard, Tallow and Soap Grease.

OGILVY & HOOD.

Peterboro, Dec 30th, 1858. 51

MR. C. R. DEARNALY,

WILL open a FENCING SCHOOL, or school of ARMS in the large room over Mr. Lundy's store, on January 1st, when young men desirous of acquainting themselves with this gentlemanly and athletic exercise will receive instruction in the art.

Application [illegible]

Peterborough, Dec. 29th, 1858. 51

NEW BOOT, SHOE,

AND

LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlands Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at VERY LOW PRICES FOR CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞ Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. B. BISBEE.

Peterborough, Dec 16th 1858. 49

NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Peterborough & Chemong Lake Railway Company will apply at the next session of the Provincial Parliament for an Act to amend their Act of Incorporation and to enable them to extend their Railway to some point on French River or Lake Nipissing and for other purposes.

ASA A. BURNHAM.
President.

P. & C. L. R. Co.

Peterborough, Jan. 10th 1859. 2

NOTICE.

THE subscriber begs to notify all those indebted to him by

Note or Account,

that all debts remaining unpaid at the end of the current month, will be charged with interest at the rate of 12 per cent.

LEWIS GLOVER.

Ashburnham, Jan. 7th 1859. 2-6in

NOTICE.

MRS. DUNBAR, has commenced business in the

Millinery, Dressmaking,

AND

STRAW BONNET LINE,

☞ In the House next door to Mr. Swanstone Bakery, Ashburnham.

Ashburnham, Jan. 15th 1859. 3.

LOST.

ON Friday, 24th ult, a Small Bundle of Pamphlets, tied with red tape. The finder will confer a favour by leaving them at this office.

CHARLES PERRY.

Peterboro', Jan. 15th 1859. 3.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats & are now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Wool Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. BECOR,
Hunter, St.

Cobourg, March 16, 1858. 12

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

The Illustrated Journal, a copy of first elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the Art Journal, with the other premiums of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features," &c. 46

Farms, &c., For Sale.

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered thoroughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN DAVIS.

Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 43tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 on 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

WOODWORD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £8 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 38.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be remitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MCCOCA.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved: has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 20, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 20-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure [illegible] superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT

Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber has been instructed to sell on very reasonable terms, some valuable

PARK LOTS,

in the vicinity of the town of Peterboro'.

TITLE GUARANTEED.

Apply to

GEORGE A. STEWART.
Surveyor and Land Agent.
Mill Street, Port Hope.

Port Hope, 15th January, 1859. 2-tf

CABINET ROOMS

RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL, which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features." 46

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,

THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 50 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 18 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address

C. L. DERBY,
348 Broadway, N. Y.

December 6, 1858. 48

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, January 24th, 1859, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay 8.40 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 1.20 p. m.

Leave Port Hope 3.20 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 7 p. m.

Peterborough Section.

Leave Port Hope 11 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 12.30 p. m.,

Leave Peterboro' 5 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 6.30 p. m.

Monthly trains cross at Millbrook, 12.10 p. m.
Afternoon " " " 6.50 "

Giving Passengers from Lindsay and Port Hope, 2 hours and 10 minutes at Peterboro' and return same day.

☞ All the above Trains run in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway.

A. C. WILLIAMS, D. McLEOD,
Superintendent. General Manager.

Peterboro', January 22, 1859. 4.

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,

CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and set, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞ Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 7, 1858. 48

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or other approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & McGRATH.

Peterboro', January 13th, 1858. 2

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

RITCHIE'S HOTEL,

BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.

Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 21

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 8

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give such satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.

Port Hope, May, 1857. 21

TERMS OF THE

MONTREAL WITNESS

FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

WEEKLY EDITION

2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 4 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not of nature with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, while the former is valuable for its general information.

All letters, orders, and remittances to be addressed, post paid, to

JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor, "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambria," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson,
Gunpowder, Twankay,
Congou, Souchong.

W. H. GUNN, & Co.

Peterboro', 20th June, 1858. 25

LEONARD SCOTT & CO'S

REPRINT OF THE

BRITISH REVIEWS

AND

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & CO., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative).

2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).

3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW (Free Church).

4.
THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).

5.
BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE (Tory).

These Periodicals ably represent the three great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical,—but politics forms only one feature of their character. As Organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and religion, they stand, as they ever have stood, unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world, than can be possibly obtained from any other source.

EARLY COPIES.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 7.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Business Directory.

J. J. MARSHALL,
DEALER in Boots, Shoes, Pegs, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos, Cigars, &c. &c. Also—Prunes, Currants, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; Glover Street, Peterboro'. 4

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. H. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!
ROBERT STEVENSON,
KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from more second grades up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.
Painting, Glazing and Paperhanging executed under his own superintendence, at moderate prices.
Water Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, Commissioners for Taking Affidavits, &c. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.
Messrs. F. & B. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. BENNETOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. B. J. Ylcard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1858.

MR. JOHN MONAR,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALSEO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Ontario Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

JOHN MAWSON,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
Kingston, Ontario, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOSEPH NEWTON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the Bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 10, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
Hunter St., Peterborough, CANADA West.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 3

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Town Statesman.
Peterboro', June 8, 1856. 28—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1859. 10

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ACCOUNTANT, Cloth Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1856. 29

1859.
A. FOWLIS & Co.,
BEG RETURNING THANKS to their customers for the liberal support during the last year, would ask, that CASH PURCHASERS, would bear in mind the advantages to call, and inspect their stock of HARDWARE, &c
which the Proprietors, having entered and at lower prices than formerly, as they have now adopted the CASH system.
A. FOWLIS, Hunter St. East.
Peterboro', January 1st, 1859.
Parties from Hunter St. North Accounts are requested to call and settle immediately.

ALSO
Stoves of all sizes and qualities.
Tinware, Japanned Ware, Britannia Ware, Iron Ware, Lamps, Oils, Glass, Putty, Paints, Varnishes, Brushes, Whitewash Brushes, Shoe Brushes, Horse Brushes, Combs, Scissors, Razors, Razor Strops, Pocket Knives, Table Knives, Forks, Spoons, Butter Knives, Sugar Tongs, Steelyards, Weights and Measures, Coal Oil Lamps, Chamber Lamps, Hall Lamps, Bird Cages, Fishing Tackle, Guns, Rifles, Pistols, Powder, Shot, Caps, Percussion Caps, Gun Wads, Shot Belts, Powder Flasks, Shot Flasks, Gun Worms, Gun Screws, Gun Cleaners, Gun Locks, Gun Barrels, Gun Stocks, Gun Mountings, Gun Materials, Gun Repairing, Bellows, Vices, Anvils, Sledges, Hammers, Files, Rasps, Chisels, Punches, Drills, Taps and Dies, Screw Plates, Hinges, Screws, Nails, Spikes, Rivets, Washers, Iron, Steel, Tin Plate, Sheet Iron, Sheet Zinc, Sheet Copper, Sheet Brass, Wire, Rope, Chain, Cordage, Twine, Oakum, Tar, Pitch, Rosin, Turpentine, Glue, Sand Paper, Emery Paper, Glass Paper, Grindstones, Emery Stones, Oil Stones, Whetstones, Scythes, Scythe Stones, Scythe Rifles, Scythe Snaths, Reaping Hooks, Hay Knives, Hay Forks, Manure Forks, Shovels, Spades, Axes, Hatchets, Adzes, Mattocks, Hoes, Rakes, Cradles, Grain Cradles, Grass Cradles, Carpenters' Tools, Coopers' Tools, Blacksmiths' Tools, Tinsmiths' Tools, Gunsmiths' Tools, Shoemakers' Tools, Saddlers' Tools, Harness Mountings, Saddlery Mountings, Saddlery Materials, Saddlery Hardware, Coach Mountings, Coach Materials, Coach Hardware, Carriage Mountings, Carriage Materials, Carriage Hardware, Sleigh Mountings, Sleigh Materials, Sleigh Hardware, Cutter Mountings, Cutter Materials, Cutter Hardware, Waggon Mountings, Waggon Materials, Waggon Hardware, Cart Mountings, Cart Materials, Cart Hardware, Plough Mountings, Plough Materials, Plough Hardware, Harrow Mountings, Harrow Materials, Harrow Hardware, Cultivator Mountings, Cultivator Materials, Cultivator Hardware, Horse Rake Mountings, Horse Rake Materials, Horse Rake Hardware, Fanning Mill Mountings, Fanning Mill Materials, Fanning Mill Hardware, Churn Mountings, Churn Materials, Churn Hardware, Grindstone Mountings, Grindstone Materials, Grindstone Hardware, Scythe Stone Mountings, Scythe Stone Materials, Scythe Stone Hardware, Oil Stone Mountings, Oil Stone Materials, Oil Stone Hardware, Whetstone Mountings, Whetstone Materials, Whetstone Hardware, Emery Stone Mountings, Emery Stone Materials, Emery Stone Hardware, Grass Cradle Mountings, Grass Cradle Materials, Grass Cradle Hardware, Grain Cradle Mountings, Grain Cradle Materials, Grain Cradle Hardware, Scythe Rifle Mountings, Scythe Rifle Materials, Scythe Rifle Hardware, Scythe Snath Mountings, Scythe Snath Materials, Scythe Snath Hardware, Reaping Hook Mountings, Reaping Hook Materials, Reaping Hook Hardware, Hay Knife Mountings, Hay Knife Materials, Hay Knife Hardware, Hay Fork Mountings, Hay Fork Materials, Hay Fork Hardware, Manure Fork Mountings, Manure Fork Materials, Manure Fork Hardware, Shovel Mountings, Shovel Materials, Shovel Hardware, Spade Mountings, Spade Materials, Spade Hardware, Axe Mountings, Axe Materials, Axe Hardware, Hatchet Mountings, Hatchet Materials, Hatchet Hardware, Adze Mountings, Adze Materials, Adze Hardware, Mattock Mountings, Mattock Materials, Mattock Hardware, Hoe Mountings, Hoe Materials, Hoe Hardware, Rake Mountings, Rake Materials, Rake Hardware, Cradle Mountings, Cradle Materials, Cradle Hardware, Carpenters' Tool Mountings, Carpenters' Tool Materials, Carpenters' Tool Hardware, Coopers' Tool Mountings, Coopers' Tool Materials, Coopers' Tool Hardware, Blacksmiths' Tool Mountings, Blacksmiths' Tool Materials, Blacksmiths' Tool Hardware, Tinsmiths' Tool Mountings, Tinsmiths' Tool Materials, Tinsmiths' Tool Hardware, Gunsmiths' Tool Mountings, Gunsmiths' Tool Materials, Gunsmiths' Tool Hardware, Shoemakers' Tool Mountings, Shoemakers' Tool Materials, Shoemakers' Tool Hardware, Saddlers' Tool Mountings, Saddlers' Tool Materials, Saddlers' Tool Hardware, Harness Mountings, Harness Materials, Harness Hardware

The Wolford and Peterborough Railway Job.

(From the Toronto Globe, Feb. 14.)

On Saturday last evidence was taken in the Court of Chancery, by Mr. Vice-Chancellor Spragge, in the cause "The Corporation of the Township of Wolford vs. Cooper and others," on behalf of the plaintiffs, and Mr. Cooper, Q.C., and Mr. Boyd for the defendants.

Mr. Vice-Chancellor Spragge sat in the Court of Chancery yesterday, and resumed his evidence in the cause "The Corporation of Wolford vs. Cooper and Wilson." Mr. Cooper said he returned to Peterborough on Thursday night, and found that Mr. Wilson had been examined and cross-examined by Mr. Boyd. He had not seen the evidence, but he supposed it was all right. He had been examined in chief, cent debentures at 20 per cent discount —five per cent more than Mr. Conger had sold the fourth debenture for. Five other debentures were paid by the consul at 17½ per cent discount.

Mr. Hatton, a member of the railway committee and also of the Peterboro' town council in 1857, corroborated the statement of Mr. Clanton with regard to what passed at the meetings of the railway company and of the Council when Mr. Conger was present. Mr. Conger stated that the person who held the debentures was to get £1,500, and he further said he supposed there was back interest on them. Mr. Conger also said he thought it would be to the interest of the town to purchase these debentures as other municipal debentures were not at that time saleable. After the debentures had been obtained, I knew where they had come from. Mr. Conger sent me in the street in December and showed me Mr. Whitmarsh's receipt for £1,551. Before that time no enquiry had been made by one of the newspapers as to where the debentures came from.

To Mr. Hester—Mr. Conger said he supposed from the fact of the debentures having been issued for sometime there would be on them arrears of interest. Mr. Conger is a friend of mine, but I am not better acquainted with him than many other gentlemen present. I will not swear that Mr. Conger showed me the receipt in December; but if it was not in December it was shortly afterwards—it might have been early in January. The sale of the debentures was effected in November. I saw the receipt before I heard any dissatisfaction expressed with regard to the transaction.

This closed the evidence, Mr. Roaf having no witnesses to be examined.

Provincial Parliament.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

FRIDAY, February 11.

The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.

After the presentation of petitions, the following notice of motion given by the Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere, was called :—"For an address to Her Most Gracious Majesty, the Queen, stating that the Executive Government of this Province, having announced their intention to take such measures as may be necessary to ascertain if a Federal Union of the British American Provinces is calculated to strengthen the interests of the British Empire, and to promote the welfare and prosperity of those Provinces; it is imperatively necessary to represent to Her Majesty that such union can only be desirable to this Province, as well by consulting the interests of the empire, as by terminating the differences which have so long and unhappily subsisted between Upper and Lower Canada; and in order thereto, and for the purpose of restoring that harmony so essential to the prosperity of this portion of Her Majesty's dominions, and to the safety and good government of Canada, it is necessary that the Legislative functions of the Parliament of this Province be divided, so as to enable the same to be exercised separately by Upper and Lower Canada; and therefore praying Her Majesty would be graciously pleased to recommend to the Imperial Parliament, so to alter the Act of Union of these Provinces as to admit of such separate and distinct legislation, and provision being made for the security of public debt and engagements, that the revenues of the Province may then be appointed to each section for their separate use, founded on such just and equitable principles as Her Majesty may deem proper to recommend for the consideration and decision of the Parliament of Canada."

Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere withdrew the motion, and gave his reasons for so doing, but in such a low tone of voice that we are unable to report the commencement of his speech. Towards the conclusion of his remarks, he said there was one question which had greatly accumulated strength of late, and which he did not think was viewed with sufficient precaution by the members from Lower Canada, of French origin. He alluded to the question of Representation by Population. This question acquired strength every day. Every year it was accumulating as an avalanche, ready to overwhelm the best interests of Lower Canada, if some sure stop were not put to it before it came into operation. He was not one of those who were prepared to place the interests of Lower Canada at the mercy of a majority from Upper Canada. He had lived long enough to be aware that the possession of power was often used to the disadvantage of the weak by the strong; and although it was said this question could be satisfactorily settled by checks so as to protect the interests of Lower Canada, he feared if the subject were not taken up at a very early period, and put an end to, that his Lower Canadian friends would find that checks would be established, but that they would find themselves checkmated. He thought the question was of easy solution by the establishment of a Federal Union between Upper and Lower Canada, as a preliminary step to the federation of the whole. And he thought his hon. friend (Sir E. P. Taché) his colleagues and compatriots would be far safer under the Ægis of the British standard than they could be made by the assurance of checks to be applied to the greatly increasing power of Upper Canada.

Hon. Col. Prince alluded to the fact of his having in 1851, while a member of the other house, presented a petition in favour of Federation, and went on to declare his convictions that before many years had passed, Canada would with the consent of the Mother Country declare herself independent.

Hon. Mr. Morin gave notice that on Monday he would move that an Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will be pleased to inform the House at what date the Address of this House to Her Majesty for power to select its own Speaker was transmitted to Her Majesty, in compliance with the prayer of this House to His Excellency on the 16th of April last, and whether any answer to the said Address has been received by His Excellency.

The consideration of several bills was postponed, and the House adjourned.

Mutinies in the Bombay Army.

[From the Times' Correspondent.]

BOMBAY, Dec. 24.—The rumor that the Nana had succeeded in escaping from Oude and crossed the Ganges, even upon the public of this Presidency like a clap of thunder. The worst fiends of the Mussulmans in the rebel camp assembled together under the leadership of Furrun Shah, and rushed from Oude, leaving the Nana to negotiate, as he might, for his own safety. [illegible] and Furrun Shah, [illegible] seems clear that the passage of the Ganges by Furrun Shah and the Nana was accompanied by Feroze Shah in the [illegible] Feroze proceed to succeed—[illegible] Shah had [illegible] Oude, [illegible] the north of Oude, especially in the Bareyly districts, the rebellion has been kept [illegible]

[illegible] drive by subedhars, or Hindu land owners, in the north the leaders were mere adventurers. Khan Ali Khan, late subedar in the East India Company's service; Feroze Shah, the last Prince of the house of Delhi; Fuzl Hog, the Moulvie of Delhi, and a host of minor fanatics, sepoys, and subalterns, in the service of the late Court of Lucknow. Feroze Shah, whose headquarters were at Seetapore for many months, had also rallied to his standard Sukhur Shah, a district officer in the pay of the Begum, who incurred the displeasure of the Princess of Oude by the rapacious exactions in the district of Sundeela, and by withholding contributions due to the exhausted exchequer of Boeree.

On the 1st of December Brigadier Troup, who had already beaten Feroze Shah on the 19th of November, met him again in the neighbourhood of Biswa, where he occupied an advantageous position. The rebels endeavoured, as usual, to outflank us with their numerous cavalary, but a vigorous charge from our horse and the crushing effect of the artillery produced the usual result, and Feroze Shah retired. Rallying the whole of the Mussulman chiefs of those parts, he then conceived and executed the bold movement of retiring to the Ganges. A direct road lay open to him southwards through Sundeela. He had to ford two small rivers, to cross the Goomtee, avoid the column under Barker north of him, pass by Sundeela, and cross the Ganges. All this he did successfully in six days, and on the evening of the 6th of December he encamped on the Doab, within twelve miles of Kunnooj. From the North, as we proved by the event, he had little to fear. Brigadier Showers, who pursued him from Agra, was too late; but Brigadier Herbert, from Cawnpore, was more successful. There was also a small detachment at Etawah, commanded by a most indefatigable magistrate, Mr. Hume. That gentleman having under his orders about four hundred Etawah Horse, started on the 6th in the direction of Bela. On the 7th he learned that Bela had been plundered, and that Feroze Shah was besieging Hurebanpore, the fort of a friendly zemindar, situate near the banks of the Admee, a tributary of the Urruad Nuddee. He advanced towards Hurebunpore early on the morning of the 8th, and attacked Feroze Shah with great vigor. It was a bold enterprise. Audaces fortuna juvat. The motto unhappily was not realised. Lieut. Doyle and several Sowars were killed, and Mr. Hume retired into Hurebunpore, while Feroze Shah pursued his march towards Pulhpoond and Ooriyah. Already Brigadier Percy Herbert was advancing towards the latter point from Cawnpore. He entered Ooriyah on the 10th instant, just after the rebels had left it.—Lieutenant Angelo, thrown forward in pursuit, caught up their rear eleven miles distant, killed some men, and took the only small gun (zambouk) that Feroze Shah could boast of. On the 11th the pursuit continued from Ooriyah northward along the left bank of the Jumna, but the main body of the rebels had crossed the river before Lieutenant Angelo, with the Towana Horse, came up. A few men, however, were killed, and several horses, camels, and some baggage captured. The quicksands, which rendered the Jumna below Etawah particularly dangerous, prevented Brigadier Herbert from attempting the passage. The rebels accordingly proceeded across the tongue of land formed above the junction of the Jumna and Chumbul, crossed the latter river at Palee, the Sind at Lobor, and made their way across country due west towards Duttiah and Runnode. The nearest force at our command was that of Sir Robert Napier, at Gwalior. That officer received intelligence of Feroze Shah's approach on the 13th. Some excitement was created by it in Gwalior, and a small detachment of troops was thrown into the city. Sir Robt. in person assembled the remainder, and with a column of 300 men, including portions of the 14th Light Dragoons and 71st Highlanders, marched almost due south 140 miles to Runnode, where he arrived before the enemy on the morning of the 17th. A little after dawn Feroze Shah was seen advancing from the eastward towards Runnode, and his force was completely surprised by a charge from the 14th Dragoons, who issued unexpectedly from an orchard and dispersed them. Feroze Shah, however, soon rallied his men, and advanced towards the Mhow and Goona roads. Avoiding Colonel Seudamore's brigade, moved from Seepree to Amora to cut him off, he crossed the road, and is now on his way to Kotah, where he hopes to meet Tantia Topee. Our knowledge of his intention to reach that point is received from the reports of spies captured after the action of Biswa in Oude. Whether he will ever join Tantia Topee is doubtful. The chief, it is true, has shown a determination to enter Rajpootana again, but he will require more than his own energy to evade the numerous detachments sent out against him from Baroda, Nusseerabad, Neemuch, and Mhow.

In my last letter, after describing the action of Chota Godeppore, I informed you that Tantia Topee had gone to the northeast of Buroda. It was then made evident that he had no intention of trying his fortune in Guzerat. On the 5th of December he was past Dohad, at Simrae, and on the road to Banswarra. The Bheels, who are out in this quarter, instead of aiding him, seem to have been anxious to secure some of his wealth. They broke up the roads before him thinking to impede his progress, but with cavalry, elephants, and camels only, Tantia does not care for roads, and the only result produced by the Bheers was to retard the movements of our columns. On the 10th, Tantia Topee, still flying north, entered Banswarra, and took a day's rest, and on the 11th, frightened by the approach of a brigade under Colonel Somerset from Rathan, he proceeded to Soloomber, an isolated place encircled by hills in the heart of the Aravalli range. Fears were entertained at one moment for the safety of Oodeypore, and measures were taken to make it safe. As for Tantia, the latest news I have obtained places him at Durihad, eighteen miles west of Partaubghur, on the 18th. Captain Hutchinson has telegraphed from Partaubghur that there are three roads to Durinhad—one to Mungere, one to Chota Sedree, the third to Partaubghur. It was expected that Tantia would choose the latter, on which he will be run into the open from the Neemuch direction. The attempts hitherto fruitlessly made to communicate the Royal Proclamation to the men in his camp have at last been successful, and good results are expected in consequence. I have before me a paper which is the declaration of 3 Bersh [Mussulmans] caught by Tantia, at Rajghur, on the 3rd December. The Mussulmans all assured Tantia to give up the game, saying that, if assured of their lives, they would willingly give up their plunder and surrender. It is easy to conceive what effect the Proclamation must have upon such men.

There is [illegible] fear of what our neighbors [illegible] either of [illegible] from Tantia Topee [illegible] the Tapee, but if such [illegible] would [illegible] there are ample forces at hand to put it down.—[illegible] with the [illegible] dissipated by rebels. General Whitelock has been [illegible] to concentrate his troops towards Nagode to destroy a gathering of rebels, the silhouetting of the head lately separated from the Nawab of Banda. Another force is to be assembled at Gwalior to put down a gang of insurgents at no great distance, who hold a fort not to be attacked without breaching artillery. The Nagpore districts and Berar are disturbed by the rebels whom I have described as endeavouring to force the passage of the Nerbudda above Hoosungabad. In spite of all efforts 2500 of these got over into the Ellichpore districts, where they are easily kept in order, not put down, by Brigadier Hill's Hyderabad Contingent, 4000 strong. The rebels of those parts, in conjection with the Rohillas of the Nizam's frontier, are yet likely to give considerable trouble.

The natural order of my narrative has taken me far away from Oude. I will now revert to the events in that portion of our empire. After the action of Biswah the brigades of Troup and Barker united on the 3rd of December, and proceeded to assist Lord Clyde's combined movement for the reduction of the Beraitch district. At the latest dates the joint column was on the banks of the Chowka, above Goorbux Sing's fort of Bhatolee, and only separated from it by the stream. Lord Clyde, with the head-quarters, proceeded from Lucknow to Beyram Ghaut, on the Gogra, just below the fort of the Chowka, and Sir H. Grant held Gonda, 20 miles to the eastward, after an action in which Dabee Buksh was worsted and deprived of all his guns. I have no direct intelligence of the reduction of Bhitowlee, but I presume it has been reduced from the fact that on the 21st of December Lord Clyde, with the head-quarter camp, was at Barnitch. He had completely surrounded the Begum's force. The Begum herself had sent in to sue for terms. Numbers of Sepoys flying from our columns had crossed the frontier into Nepaul, where they were surrounded by the troops of Jung Bahadoor. Nana Sahib, forced to a precipitate flight from Churdu, 30 miles north of Barnitch, had fled to a jungle fort northwest of that place. Such in substance is the news from Oude, which shows that the work of pacification there is well nigh complete.

In Behar, though Umraur Sing, Seadha Sing, and Hurkissen Sing are still at large, their followers have all abandoned them.

The Prospects of War and Insurrection in Italy.

[From the London Times, Jan. 20.]

In all the discussions which the late continental crisis has provoked, it is taken for granted that the Austrian provinces are on the point of revolt, and that this magazine of Italian discontent may be expected at any moment to explode. Both the French Emperor and the King of Sardinia have presumed the world to be convinced of this great fact. Victor Emmanuel, speaking under the censorship of Napoleon, is not insensible to the "anguish of Italy," and the warlike journals of Paris and Turin are full of the defiance which the people of Milan are hurling at their oppressors. But observers on the spot, and notably the correspondent whose able letter we print to-day, can see no signs of this approaching outbreak. The Milanese in 1859 are pretty much what they have been any time during the last ten years—very full of murmurs and sneers against the Austrian rule, very skilful in putting petty slights on the Austrian authorities, and not careful to confine the social war to the sterner sex, great in deserting opera boxes when an Archduke happens to be present, or affecting to be engaged earnestly in conversation when an Austrian lady might claim a recognition of her presence. They know how to wear a hat seditiously, show aspirations of liberty by the tie of a cravat, or express their views of an Italian future by puffing only Piedmontese cegars. But this is all, and it is nothing more than they did last year, and will probably do for many a year longer.—Any appearance of a meditated rebellion does not exist. A placard may be posted up during the night by a man who runs on immediately, or a patriotic cry may be uttered when there are only Italians to hear it; but that there has been any braving of the Austrian power, any menace of popular rising, any refusal of obedience to the police or the taxgatherer, is the grossest misrepresentation. Whether voluntarily or not the French and their ally have imposed on the credulity of Europe; but how the Sardinian monarch, who must remember the events of 1849, can believe in a popular insurrection in Lombardy passes conception. The people are no better nor braver than ten years since, and they are more completely held down by the Austrian army.—Since the campaign of Novara the Austrian army has been vastly improved, a more rigid discipline has been introduced, a grand system of fortifications completed, and the chief cities placed at the mercy of strong citadels or military posts. Then, railways have extended themselves from the heart of the monarchy to Milan, so that as we have seen, enormous reinforcements can be thrown into Italy within a few days. Austria, intrenched in positions long since chosen and strengthened, could bid defiance to a far superior invading force of regular troops, while it is most certain that a popular rising would be put down in forty-eight hours. All this we cannot doubt that the Sardinians, from their constant intercourse with the Austrian provinces, feel more keenly than the French; and it is not surprising to find that they have always looked on a French intervention as the first step in any effective movement. While loudly proclaiming the imminence of a rebellion, the Turin papers have always avoided counselling a war unsupported by a foreign Power. Although it is possible that France was a believer in the Milanese rising, we must acquit Sardinia of any such delusion.

The strong pressure put on the French Government has accordingly removed all danger of disturbance. Leave the Sardinians and Lombards alone, and there is not likely to be a breach of the peace. Like Lord Chatham and Sir Richard Strahan at Walcheren, they will stand with sabres drawn, waiting for each other. The Sardinians will scream the frontiers when the Lombards rise, and the Lombards will rise when they behold the Sardinian bayonets on their soil. We do not blame either party; men are not bound to rush into conflict where sacrifices and ruin are certain, and the Lombards, at least, have given sufficient proof that they are worthy enemies on the field of battle. But we trust that this fall of ranting ambition will have its effect both at Paris and Turin, and that the Italian subjects of Austria will be no longer excited by false hopes spread abroad by rulers who have now learned that the world will not allow its peace to be trifled with. The Emperor of the French has still the power to effect some good in Italy. What every thinking man might have seen from the beginning, has indeed come to pass—a jealousy has been created which will make all the efforts of the French Government suspected for some time to come. It may be that Italy has been thrown back ten years by this disastrous blunder. But we must hope for the best, and opposed Treaties, as the ultimate to be an Italian Power, to quite correctly with Austria to carry out such changes in the Lombardo-Venetian state [illegible] Austria has of late given sufficient pounds of humanity to conciliate these provinces; and, indeed, it can hardly be supposed that a neighbouring State can desire to keep up permanent armies for the oppression of its own subjects. The late danger will make the Court of Vienna anxious to render its rule more tolerable; and any frank concert between the two Empires to reunite Italy and give contentment to the people will be seen with pleasure by a public which has already visited with its reprobation the planners of a European war.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DENTISTRY—R. Moore.
THE "WEEKLY GLOBE."
HOTEL FOR SALE—T. Chambers.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, FEB'Y 17th, 1859.

The Wolford Debentures.

MR. CONGER IN A TRAP.

At last, people are able to form some idea of the manner in which the debentures, withheld by Mr. Conger, have been disposed of. To-day, we re-print a letter addressed to the editor of the Peterborough Review, in March last, which the writer says, he was prompted to address to the public, on account of an alleged mis-statement of Mr. Geo. Brown in the House of Assembly. It is put forward as "a simple relation of facts." And that relation is, in effect, that in September, 1857, Mr. Conger "incidentally" heard that the Township of Wolford was possessed of an amount of unappropriated debentures, and, upon enquiry, he ascertained that, by getting the consent of the Government to an exchange of their security upon Wolford for a new security upon Peterborough, accompanied by a release to Wolford, there would be no other obstacle to a surrender of the debentures. That a by-law in accordance with a proposition, made and accepted upon the above terms, passed the Council of Peterborough; resolutions, giving authority in the matter to their Reeve, were passed by the Council of Wolford; the consent of the Government to take the security of Peterborough in place of Wolford obtained; and on the 26th October the debentures were surrendered by Wolford into the hands of Mr. Conger. He emphatically denies that any new debentures were issued, and gives the public distinctly to understand that the government had nothing more to do than put the name of Peterborough upon their books, in place of Wolford. And, by way of accounting for the missing debentures, he says that they were spent in satisfying the government for the liabilities of Wolford, on account of interest accrued since the issue of the debentures to them; that there may be no dispute about the truth of the quotation, the entire letter will be found in another part of this paper. When this letter was first published, we hesitated to put any confidence in any of the statements, because we well knew that some at any rate could not be true: as for instance, we knew that debentures issued under the Municipal Loan Fund Act for a purpose named, could not be applied to any other. Therefore there could be no privity of contract in such a matter between Wolford and Peterborough. The government and the borrowing municipality were alone parties capable of contracting; there could be no third party to the bargain.—Peterboro' might say to Wolford that, before the government could have debentures to issue, theirs must be cancelled, and therefore ask them to surrender, but there could be no interchange between themselves. And, as to interest, there could none accrue, until the municipality had paid the debentures away, because there could not until that occurred be any one to claim. Interest would be charged in the books against the municipality to which the debentures were issued, in anticipation of a demand from a third party, supposing them to have been used, but as soon as the debentures were accepted back by the Government, it became clear that there had been no use made of them, and, upon being cancelled, the charge in the books would be extinguished. This being Mr. Conger's case in March 1858, five months after the transaction had been closed, one will naturally expect that it is still the same case, to day, one year further on. But, on reading the evidence taken in the Court of Chancery, its contradiction is so very pointed, that reconciliation is utterly out of the question. In Mr. Conger's evidence there, he repudiates having dealt with the corporation; he says "I never understood Mr. Whitmarsh to be the agent of the Corporation in the matter;" "Mr. Whitmarsh refused to tell me what municipality held the debentures." "I understood he was to receive the £1500 for himself." "He did not represent that he acted for any one but himself." Then his statement of the manner of receiving the debentures contradicts the very essence of his letter, and establishes Mr. Brown's position. He says "The debentures were surrendered to the Receiver General who issued new debentures in their stead.—These comparisons may be made useful, in weighing the opposite testimony of Mr. Conger and Mr. Whitmarsh. These two gentlemen have chosen to swear to statements of fact, which are directly opposed to each other. Every thing relevant to their depositions becomes interesting in such a collision of things. Of Mr. Whitmarsh we will say, briefly, that he made use of his position as the agent of the township of Wolford, to compass a fraud upon the Town of Peterborough, by which he [illegible] being benefitted to the extent of £1545. His morality is [illegible] and would not have been valued [illegible] although he admitted having received £1551, which Mr. Conger says he paid him. It does not seem therefore, that he had any inducement to add perjury to his other crime. Had he refused to admit having taken anything, then, the two would stand upon even footing. Mr. Whitmarsh swears that what he received of his share of the plunder was £745, in fifty nine fifty's, and three ten dollar bills. Mr. Conger swears that he paid him, in cash, the whole sum of £1551, and shows a receipt. Upon this receipt, we may remark that it is quite reconcilable with Whitmarsh's story. Two persons are supposed to conspire to defraud a third, on shares, one of whom we will suppose to be the next friend of the intended victim. The friend says to his "pal," you give me a receipt for all the property, so as I may show it to the man I do business for; that will prove to him that I didn't keep it, then you and I will divide the spoil. In such a game as this, a receipt for part won't do, it were better to have none at all, it only raises suspicion, and does not cover the swindle. A remarkable circumstance too about the receipt, is that it is in Conger's handwriting, and signed by Whitmash, individually, and not as agent in the matter for Wolford. As to which of the parties who gives such conflicting evidence is to be believed, there is not matter of much difficulty. Whitmarsh is a sort of honest rascal, he confesses to what every one must admit a reasonable share of the plunder, and is not shown to have any object in committing so fearful a crime as that of perjury. How, then does Conger stand? Compare his letter with his evidence. Consider all the subterfuges and evasion he has practised.—Then reflect upon the consequence of an adverse decree, and charity itself cannot say, when, to free him is to condemn the other, that Conger's evidence outweigh's the evidence of Whitmarsh. It is a pity some other parties who gave evidence at the hearing had not considered better what they were saying. For instance there is Mr. Cluxton, called by Mr. Conger, who stated that in the Municipal Loan Fund Account kept by him, while Treasurer, he had made an entry of the then missing debentures as "bonus to Wolford," but that afterwards he had erased those words, at the instance of Mr. Conger, who did not think them sufficiently explanatory, and, on examination, we find that he has supplied their place thus: "per surrender by Mr. Conger." A much more satisfactory explanation! The fact is that "Wolford" was the trouble they wanted to get rid of. It was dangerous to let it stay there, after Conger changed his tune. Mr. Cluxton will live a long day before he brings starvation upon his family, by the exercise of his moral propensities.

Parliament.

The House of Assembly agreed, by a majority of five, in a full house, to adopt the proposal of the Government, to accept Ottawa as the future Seat of Government.—So far, it would seem, the question is settled, the Legislative Council having already pronounced favourably upon it. In the matter of going to Quebec, until the buildings at Ottawa are completed, the question was rejected by the House by a vote of fifty-nine to forty-seven. Now, we shall see what kind of stuff the Council is made of. Will they refuse the supplies?

It is understood that the Commercial Bank and the Toronto Bank are endeavouring to obtain possession of the corner of Water street and Hunter street, church property now leased to Mr. Robert Stenson, and upon which his buildings were lately destroyed by fire. The object of the banks is said to be with the intention of erecting premises suitable to the purpose of their respective agencies. Both of them are very much in need of proper accomodations, and in the matter of the Commercial Bank, it will no doubt introduce another very necessary step in the way of separating its management from the direction of a person engaged in mercantile pursuits. The Commercial must feel as other banks have, the injury it is to its interest to allow a "merchant to have the supervision of the operations of its other customers.—Besides the natural jealousies of trade, a suspicion will always lay upon such an agent that the benefits of his banking system are more open to some customers than they are to others. From such suspicion the Commercial Bank, unfortunately, for itself, has by no means escaped.

The Church Society.

A Meeting of St. John's Church was held, on Tuesday evening, in the Church, with the object of establishing in this neighbourhood, a branch of the Incorporated Church Society of the Diocese of Toronto. After church service, the Rector, Rev. Mr. Beck, took the chair, and opened the proceedings by the delivery of an eloquent and doctrinal address, in which he enforced with great emphasis, the duty of his parishioners in the matter before the meeting. The venerable the Archbishop of York, Dr. Bethune, moved the first resolution, and supported it by a speech of much warmth and Christian truth. Several other clergymen advocated the same, throwing light upon the subject, and encouraging the audience by their zeal. The meeting was dismissed, after prayer, apparently much edified by the instruction they had received, and fully persuaded of the efficacy of the doctrines of the Church of England. A Committee of Six Ladies and Three Gentlemen was appointed to collect subscriptions, in aid of the good cause; whose call, it is hoped, will be liberally responded to by all devout conformists. The Church of England, now that it is thrown more upon its own resources by the loss of the Reserves, will need more nourishment from its Members, and more activity in its Ministers, than it was wont to receive.

IN CHANCERY.

Between

The Town of Peterborough, Plaintiffs, and Wilson Seymour Conger, and E. H. Whitmarsh, Defendants.

The answer of Wilson Seymour Conger, one of the above-named Defendants, to the bill of complaint of the above-named Plaintiffs:—

In answer to the said bill I, Wilson Seymour Conger, say as follows:

That I was, in the month of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, and for some time subsequent thereto, a member of the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough, and while in that capacity became aware of the fact that the said Council were anxious to procure Municipal Loan Fund debentures to the extent of Thirty Thousand Pounds, being the amount subscribed by them in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company. That having met with the defendant Whitmarsh about that time, and having mentioned our necessities to him, he informed me that he knew of £25,000 Municipal Loan Fund debentures issued 12 or 18 months before, and held by some municipality not then named by him, which he could procure; which I communicated to the members of the Town Council and others interested therein, who urged that I should take steps to procure them. That in a subsequent conversation with the defendant Whitmarsh he informed me that he would undertake to procure and surrender the said £25,000 Municipal Loan Fund debentures to me, free of all charges or incumbrance, for the sum of £1,500 sterling money of Great Britain. That I at once communicated the facts aforesaid from Toronto, where I then was, to Mr. Clugston the treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough, and on the third day of October, I received from him a telegraphic despatch with the words and figures following—that is to say:

Peterborough, October 3rd, 1857.

To W. S. Conger, Esq., Toronto:

Would not like to lose the money even at that rate. Do better if you can possibly; and try to get him to leave the offer open for ten days to give us time to consider.

(Signed) WILLIAM CLUXTON.

That on the same day the said E. H. Whitmarsh reduced his proposition to writing, in the shape of a letter in the words and figures following—that is to say:

Toronto, October 3, 1857.

Sir,—I am the holder for one of the township Municipalities of £25,000 currency, of Municipal Loan Fund debentures, which debentures are issued in sterling money. These debentures I am willing to surrender on being paid the sum of £1,500 sterling, and the municipality being relieved of its liability on account thereof. Please inform me whether your municipality will take them on these terms.

Yours truly,
(Signed) E. H. WHITMARSH.
To W. S. Conger, Esq.

That on the same 3rd day of October, I wrote a letter to the said E. H. Whitmarsh, in answer to the letter just set forth, which was as follows—that is to say:

Toronto, October 3, 1857.

In reply to your memorandum of this date, I beg to say that I accept on behalf of my Municipality of your offer, provided the Government consent to the exchange, which shall be brought under their consideration.

Your obed't servant,
(Signed) W. S. CONGER.
To E. H. Whitmarsh, Esq.

That having so concluded the arrangement referred to I returned to Peterboro'; and having made known to the Council, of which I was still a member, the particulars thereof, they highly approved of my acts, and a By-law was duly prepared by the said Council and approved by the ratepayers of the Town, authorizing the borrowing of the said sum of £25,000. And I was deputed to proceed to Toronto for the purpose of procuring the sanction of the Government to the said By-law and transfer of debentures as aforesaid, which I accordingly did, and on the 28th day of November secured the debentures and paid to the said E. H. Whitmarsh out of the proceeds of three of the said debentures the sum of £1,551 5s. currency, and took from him a receipt therefor in the words and figures following—that is to say:

Received from the Municipality of the Town of Peterborough, per the hands of W. S. Conger, Esq., the sum of £1,551 5s. currency, being the proceeds of three debentures for £500 sterling each, as per agreement of the 3rd October, for the surrender of £25,000 Municipal Loan Fund debentures.

(Signed) E. H. WHITMARSH.
Toronto, 28th November, 1857.

All of which acts on my part were highly approved of by the said Council of the Town of Peterboro', and sanctioned and adopted by them.

And I say I know not whether the said sum of £1,500 sterling, was in reality due by the Township of Wolford to the government, but I was informed by the said E. H. Whitmarsh that the said Municipality was liable for a much larger sum which I believed to be so due; and as evidence of its being so due I found on visiting the Receiver General's office, two or three days previous to the surrender aforesaid, the account in the books of the Receiver General of the Province, as follows:

Balance of interest on £25,000 due 1st July, 1857, £500 6s. Contingent expenses and interest accumulated on arrears up to 1st July, 1857, £64 18s 8d. Interest on £25,000 due 1st January, 1858, £1,564 19s 2d.

And I deny that I know no back interest or amount for sinking fund was asked by the Government, or that I have defrauded or aided or assisted in defrauding the Plaintiffs of the money in the said bill mentioned, or any sum of money, or that I derived any profit, emolument, benefit, or advantage from or through the transaction aforesaid. And I submit that as against me the Plaintiffs show no equity in their said bill, and make no case for the consideration of this Court, and that the Plaintiffs' remedy, if any they have, is in a Court of Law.

And I claim the same benefits and advantages as if I had demurred to the said Bill for such and other causes.

And I pray to be hence dismissed with costs.

H. SCALE.

The defendant, W. S. Conger, on the 5th day of November, appeared before me at my chambers in Peterborough, and signed the foregoing answer in my presence, and thereupon was sworn before me that he had read the said answer and knew the contents thereof, and that the same was true of his own knowledge, except as to matters which are therein stated to be on his information and belief, and as to those matters he believed it to be true.

(Signed) W. S. CONGER.
(Signed) C. A. WELLER,
A Commissioner, &c.

IN CHANCERY.

Between

The Corporation of the Town of Peterborough, Plaintiffs,
AND
Wilson Seymour Conger and Eleazer Hurlburt Whitmarsh, Defendants.

The answer of Eleazer Hurlburt Whitmarsh, one of the above-named Defendants to the Bill of Complaint of the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough,

In answer to the said Bill, I, the said Eleazer Hurlburt Whitmarsh, say as follows:—

That I deny, that the defendant Wilson Seymour Conger made the statement to the Plaintiff's Council in the Bill stated with my knowledge or assent, and I was no party to the making of any such statement by any other person, and was not privy to any such statement being made. That I neither knew nor suspected that any false or untrue statement was made to the Plaintiffs, in respect of the matters in question in this suit, and if any untrue statement was made, I was no party thereto. I deny, that it was agreed between Wilson Seymour Conger and me, that the Plaintiffs should pay whatever the Township of Wolford had paid, or was liable to pay to the Government, for, or in respect of the said Debentures in the Bill mentioned. The amount to be paid to me was a fixed sum of £1500, out of which were to be paid all charges which the Government made against the said Township of Wolford, in respect thereof, and any other charges they might require to be paid to leave the amount received by the Plaintiffs free from all deductions, excepting the said sum of £1500. The said amount so to be paid to me, was to be paid irrespective of the amount to be paid to the Government. And if the Government were to make no charge at all, I believe the transaction was so understood, both by myself and by the said Wilson Seymour Conger. If he ever represented to the contrary, he did so without my knowledge or consent, and I was not, and could not have been a party to any such representation. I deny that I did, in fraud of the Plaintiff's in conjunction with the said W. S. Conger, or with any other person, or by myself contrive or arrange the delivery up of the said Wolford debentures in the bill mentioned, and the issue of the new debentures in the place of them, or contrive, or arrange any other matter or thing whatever, in fraud of the Plaintiffs, but I did at the instance of the said W. S. Conger, so arrange the surrender of the old debentures, as to facilitate the Plaintiffs in obtaining the issue of new debentures to them, and to prevent any other municipal body from obtaining them; I did so bona fide, and not fraudulently, and I say that I was no party to, nor was I privy to any contrivance or arrangement to defraud the Plaintiffs on the part of any other person. I deny that I have myself defrauded the Plaintiffs, or have been privy to any fraud practised upon them by any other person; if any such has been practised, I deny that save as hereinafter mentioned, I have ever had any debenture or other property of the Plaintiffs in my possession or under my control. I was paid the said sum of money by their agent, W. S. Conger, under contract made by him with me. In the course of my negociating with the said W. S. Conger, I was not guilty of any misrepresentation, or concealment, and I conducted myself honestly and fairly toward him as the Plaintiffs agent, and towards the Plaintiffs, through him acting on their behalf. I deny that I ever was the agent of the Plaintiffs, or in any manner entrusted by them. I never acted for them in any way or in any matter connected with the transaction which has given rise to this suit, and I was not in any judiciary position towards them.

The said W. S. Conger, as I understood for the protection of the Plaintiffs, arranged all the payments that had to be made in respect of the said Debentures, and then handed me the balance of the £1500, and I gave him a receipt for the full amount, as I placed confidence in him that he had properly applied the residue. He has repeatedly affirmed that he did not retain for himself, or misapply any portion of it, and if such assertion is incorrect, I have no knowledge thereof. The sum of $302 93, part of the said sum of £1500 agreed to be paid to me by the said W. S. Conger, was by him enclosed in a letter, signed by me and sent to the Receiver General in payment of a sum which had been charged to the Township of Wolford, and which was to have been paid out of the said sum agreed to be paid to me. The said sum was returned to me by the Deputy Receiver General, because of the irregularities in the mode of its transmission. I communicated to the said W. S. Conger, its return to me, but he gave me no instructions how to dispose thereof. I have the amount and am prepared to deal therewith as this Hon. Court, or as the Plaintiffs may direct, and have always been prepared so to deal therewith. Excepting the said sum of $302 93, I deny that I am liable to account to the Plaintiffs for any sum of money; If I am liable to account to any body at all, I submit that I am liable only to the Corporation of the Township of Wolford.

JOHN ROAF, JUN.

The Defendent, Eleazer Hurlburt Whitmarsh, on the 15th day of November, 1858, appeared before me at my Chambers, in the City of Toronto, and signed the foregoing answer in my presence, and thereupon was sworn before me, that he had read the said answer, and knew the contents thereof, and that the same was true of his own knowledge, except as to matters which are therein stated to be on his information and belief, and as to these matters he believed it to be true.

(Signed) E. H. WHITMARSH.
(Signed) A. N. BUELL,

To the Editor of the Review.

Peterboro', 12th March, 1858.

DEAR SIR,—On my return to Town yesterday, I learned that Mr. Brown the senior member for Toronto, had in a speech of his delivered a few days before, charged the ministry with issuing £25,000 of Municipal Loan Fund Debentures, contrary to law, for the purpose of buying up the electors of the County.

A simple relation of the facts, which I give below, will show the utter absurdity of such a charge.

Some time in the month of September last, the town of Peterborough—not the County—determined to subscribe for £30,000 stock in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway, to enable that Company to build a branch of their road to Peterboro'. Soon after the passing of the By-law, it was discovered that Municipal debentures were unsaleable, and that money must be obtained by some other means or the work stop. Having incidentally heard that the Township of Wolford, had some 18 months before received £25,000 sterling, of Municipal Loan Fund Debentures, which they had not used, I at once made enquiry, and found they were willing to surrender them upon being relieved from all responsibility; to this proposition I agreed provided the Government would consent to the change of security.

A By-Law therefore was introduced into the Town Council of Peterboro', passed and ratified by the people, and the consent of the Government obtained for the exchange of the Security. The Municipality of Wolford in the meantime passed resolutions authorising their Reeve to surrender the Debentures, and take up their By-Law, which was done on the 26th of October, and on the same day the Debentures were handed over to me, it will thus be seen that the Government had no control over these debentures, and really nothing to do in the matter except guaranteeing to the exchange of security. As to the Municipality of Peterborough, it should be remembered that at the time of the surrender of these debentures, the Municipality of Wolford were in arrears to the Government for something more than £1500 sterling, for interest, sinking fund, &c., &c., which they were not willing to lose.

I am, dear sir
Your obd't servant
W. S. CONGER.

THE FARMING MANIA.—The demand for Land to hire has seldom been so general. Any desirable farm has been eagerly sought after, and offers of rent made correspondingly to the furor. There appears to be little calculation gone into by parties making offers. The excitement resembles somewhat that of the railway mania of 1844-6. The rents for land agreed upon within the year bear no relation to the prospects of the profession. The disastrous harvest of 1856-7 has operated seriously against the position of many farmers, and arrears of rent have arisen, showing the hazardous character of the profession of the tenant farmer. Neither a cheaper system of cultivation nor a newly-discovered source of cheap fertilisers has been presented to account for the rents offered.—North British Agriculturalist.

Method is the very hinge of Business; and there is no method without punctuality. Punctuality is important, because it subserves the peace and good temper of the family; the want of it not only infringes on necessary duty, but sometimes excludes duty.

PRIDE AND POVERTY.—The Jamaica Standard of N

SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE!

If you want to possess a copy of that elegant Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the ART JOURNAL, with the other premiums, as more and subscribe 25s. before the 1st of January, 1859. Specimen copies of the above, and full particulars given, by applying to R. S. Potterton, Agent. See advertisement elsewhere headed—New Features, &c. 44

DENTISTRY.

A many persons are constantly calling on the undersigned during hours devoted to another business he begs to inform the public that he will be happy to attend to all parties desiring THEIR TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH CLEANED and ARRANGED. RD. EDY at his residence, corner of Sherbrooke and Sydney Streets, on any Evening other than Wednesdays excepted.

☞ When desired parties will be waited on at their own residences.

PRICES:—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary quality) 5s 6d each; with Silver, &c., &c. 1s 3d. Extracting 1s; 7½d.; TOOTH ACHE cured for 7½d.; and all operations warranted. S. MOORE.

Peterborough, Nov. 10th, 1858 44

NEW BOOKS!

THE SUBSCRIBER has just received a large stock of new Books, to which he invites the attention of the Public. Besides a good supply of

BIBLES, TESTAMENTS,
Church-Services, Common Prayer-Books,
WESLEY'S HYMNS, &c., &c.,
and a well-selected stock of School-Books,
he has a selection of
MISCELLANEOUS LITERATURE,
comprising in part the following Works:—

Startling Questions
Clara Stanley
Aunt Edith
Memoir of Lady Colquhoun
Children of the Manse
Priest, Puritan and Preacher
Rich and Poor
Florence Egerton
The Person and Work of Christ
Pen Pictures of the Bible
Walter Banning
Watts on the Mind
Life of our Lord Jesus Christ
Quiet Thoughts for Quiet Hours
Decision
Tru. Heroism
Bunyans Pilgrim's Progress
Kitty Brown
Fox's Book of Martyrs
Rose Hill
Honesty is the best Policy
Reuben Kest
Ellen and Clara
Robert Dawson, Annie Sherwood
Begatty's Golden Treasury
Brown's Concordance
The Contest and Armour
Counsel to the Young
Scripture Promise
Stories for Little Readers
Flowers from the Garden of Leurie Todd
Advice to a Young Christian
Gospel Promises—Alleine
Token for Children—Janeway
True Christian
Course of Time—Pollok
Morning of Joy—Bonar
Life of Col. Gardiner
Emblems from Eden—Hamilton
Baxter's Call
PhilipCoitville—Kennedy
Night of Weeping—Bonar
Anxious Inquirer—James
Midnight Harmonies—Winslow
Royal Preacher—Hamilton
Mind of Jesus
Words of Jesus
More Words than One—Brewster
Dead in Christ—Brown
Story of Bethlehem—MacDuff
Young Man's Friend—James
Christian Profession—James
Mabel Grant
Tales of Covenanters
Tales from English History
Peep of Day
Precept upon Precept
Diary of a Physician, 3 vols.
Means and Ends
Poor Rich Man & Rich Poor Man
Live and Let Live
Stories for Young Persons
The Woodcutter and Exiles
Jamie Gordon or the Orphan
Byron's Complete Works
Bonnaparte—Scott
United States Magazine, 2 vols
Reformation—D'Aubigne's
Butler's Complete Works
Chambers' Miscellanies
CXIX Psalm—Bridges
Critical Works—Talfourd
Wilson's Essays
Scots Worthies—Howe
Kingdom of Christ—Whatley
Brown on the Romans
Divine Government—McCosh
Church of Scotland—Hetherington
Family Worship
Life Letters, &c.—McCheyne
Josephus' Works—Whiston
Bible Light—Anderson
Reminiscences—Jay
Female Character—do
Mormonism—Rider Hyde
Essays in Biography—Bayne
Which the Right or the Left
The Ministry of Life
Attributes of the Bible—Halsey
Spurgeon's Gems
Pastor's Sheep's Rest
Cecil's Work
Illustrations—Kitto
Ezekiel—Guthrie
Lost Senses—Kitto
Land of Promise—Bonar
Morning Exercises—Jay
Evening "
The Desert of Sinai—Bonar
Dick's Philosopher
Theism—Tulloch
Young Man's Library
Ministering Children, Illustrated
Roman Expositions—Brown
Senior of Scotland—Turnbull
Captain Hammond's Memoir
History of Enthusiasm—Taylor
Gospel Expository Thoughts—Ryle
Foster's Essays
Christian Mothers
Indian Rebellion—Dr. Duff
Young Womans Friend
Words of Jesus
Family Prayers
Reading without Tears
Daily Bible, 3 Vos—Kitto
Declensionand Revival—Winslow
Prince World of Europe
Memoirs of Bethany
Passages from Home Life
Sacramental Meditations—Willison
Three Divine Sisters—Adams
Vicar of Wakefield—Goldsmith
Christian Faith—Abercrombie
Family Library, 19 Vols
Combe's Moral Philosophy
Brecher's Receipt Book
" Domestic Economy
Moral Philosophy—Smith
English Humorists
The Farmer's Companion
Olmstead's Astronomy
Shorey's Works—3 Vols
Principles of Taste—Alison
Farm Implements, 200 eng.—Thomas
Phrenology, 100 eng.—Combe
The Soul or Body
Body and Mind
Man and his Motives
The Burn Yard
The Garden
Vassal Morton
Magician's own Book
Scotia's Bards
Thomph's Letters
Philip's Marye
Life, Studies—Baillie
Atticus Mountain Valley
Bible Companion—Eyng
Philip's Manuals
Quiver Eyng
Mirage's Illustrations
Meaning of Life
Mind and Error.—Bonar
Philip's Manhood
Philip Lyglen
Lamp and Lantern—Hamilton
Annals of the Poor—Richmond
The Reunion of a Set
Memoirs of Wilber—Hamilton
Days of Queen
Spirit in Temptation
Abbeychurch—Tucker
Pointing Clouds
Gravities of the Soul—Bunyan
Samuel Eng
Bible Mines—Bonar
Christ our Example—C. Bey
Shadow on the Hearth
English Poets and English Roads
Memoir of Mahomet Wilkinson
The Broken Rod
Christian Titles—Eyre
Morning and Night Watches
Water from the Well Spring
Johnson's Entries
The Bow in the Cloud
Tales Shetches &c.—Macgeorge
Live and Learn
Lovest Thou Me
Seed-time and Harvest
The Daughter at School
Cats and Dogs
Martin Rattler
The Bible How
The Happy Home
Ralph Gemmell
Follow Jesus
Helen of the Glen
Faithful Promises and Altar Stones
The Victory Won
Persecuted Family
Jessie Allen—Kennedy
Life of John Huss
Man and his Religion—Bonar
Memoirs of Oberlin
Ashton Cottage
The Commandment with Promise
Charles Roussell
Daily Walk with God—Henry
Communicants' Companion—Henry
Life of Capt. Vicars
Night Thoughts—Young
Message from God—Cumming
Christ Receiving Sinners
The Christian Contemplated—Gay
The Great Journey
Old Friends with New Faces
The Mine—A. L. O. E
Widow Directed—James
Divine Panoply
The Corsnal
The Christian Wreath
Token of Friendship
Memoirs of John Kitto—Ryland
The Inheritance of the Saints
Memoirs of William Wilberforce
Eddy Ellerslie and the Mine
Course of Faith—James
Christian Duty—James
Hawker's Portions
Cawper's Poetical Works
Thomson and Gray's Works
Kirke White and Campbell's Works
George Herbert's Works
Mrs. Sigourney's Works
Fred Vernon
Cruise of the Midge
Tom Cringle's Log
Barney O'Riardon
Marie Louise
Dick Tarleton
Craigallan Castle
Gideon Giles
Gus. Howard
Fred Arden
After Dark
Woman's Life
Fair Rosamond
Dead Secret
Minnie Grey.
Arthur O'Leary
Frank Hilton
Rochester
Woman and her Master
Amy Lawrence
Harry Ashton
Hide and Seak
Harold Tracy
Henri De la Tour
Bella Trelawney
Fred Graham
Charles Vavasseur
Marion Earnard
Tower of London
Adventures of on Aid-de-camp
The Virgin Queen
Rory O'Moore
Robert Macaire
Capt Blake
Phillip Rolfe
Martin Chuzzlewit
Bleak House
Sketches by "Boz"
Barnaby Rudge
Domby and Son
Christmas Stories
David Copperfield
Frank Mildmay
The King's Own
Jacob Faithful
Newton Forster
Midshipman Easy
Japhet in search of a Father
Phantom Ship
Percival Keene
The Lollards
Wit Wanah
Outward Bound Hearts Trial
Weary foot's Commin
The Ruined Family
Pelham
The False Heir
Devereuse
Rienzie
Agincourt a Romance
Alice or the Mysteries
The Great Hoggarty Diamond
Eugene Aram
Paul Clifford
Rose Daubert
The Castle of Ehrenstein
Forest Days
Arabella Stewart
The Woodman
The Disowned
Bush Ranger of Van Diemens Land
The Last Days of Pompeii
The Forgery
The Convict
Gowrie or the Kings Plot
The Smuggler
Heidelberg
A Whim and its consequences
Night and Morning
The Hoe—— Family
Annah Neil
Lucretia
Beauchamp or the Error
Sir Theodore Croughton
Evelyn Marston
The Cazetons
Jane Eyre
Lady Lee's Widowhood
Zanoni
The Commissioner
Harold
John Halifax Gentleman
My Novel
Shirley, a Tale
The Stepmother, a Tale
The Last of the Barons
The Athelingor, the three Gifts
The Pilgrims of the Rhine
A Life of Vicissitudes
Peter Simple
Poor Jack
Horace Templeton
Kate O'Donoghue
Dicken's New Stories
Knight of Gwynne
Con Cregan
Jack Hinton
Harry Lorrequer
Rattin the Reefer
Pirate and Three Cutters
Packs of Many Tales
Tom Burke
Charles O'Malley
Snarleyow
The Star Chamber
Windsor Castle
The Miser's Daughter
Davenport Dunn
Old Saint Paul's
Pictorial Life and Adventures of Jack Shephard
Mysteries of the Court of the Stuarts
Centaria Fleming
The Young Duke
Miriam Alroy
Venetia
Henrietta Temple
Paul Deverell
Pictorial Life of Guy Fawkes
Little Dorrit
Life Yorn
King of the Winds
Prince Charles
Vivian Gray
Buccaneer's Daughter
Temptation
Stanfield Hall
Simon Suck
Canadian Homes
Rose Woodville
Quintin Matsys
Marguerite de Valois
The Young Chevalier
The Sea King
Comic Wandering Jew
The Combined Adventures of David Duffkin
The Blessed Month
Josephine or the Maid of the Gulf
The White Wolf
Lady Glentyan
Nora Tones
Paul Jones
St. Pierre
Dick Tarleton
Yale, College Scenes
Illustrated Wandering Jew
Old Curiosity Shop

☞ In stock of

STATIONERY

in very large and complete. The Public are invited to inspect, and satisfy themselves.

A. SAWERS.

Examiner Book Store,
Peterboro', Feb 16th, 1858. }

TO THE TRADE!

WHOLESALE ONLY.

THE SUBSCRIBERS offer a large and complete assortment of

FRESH GROCERIES,

which they have

JUST RECEIVED
FROM
NEW YORK AND ELSEWHERE,
CONSISTING OF

TEAS, HYSONS old and young, Twankay & Twankay, GUNPOWDER, CONGUO, SOUCHONG, &c. In Bond, or Duty paid.

SUGARS, Muscovado, Porto Rico & Cuba, Redpath's Crushed, A. Dry Crushed & broken Loaf, Loaves, Ground, Extra ground (for confect'ers,) Yellow Refined,

COFFEE, Java & Rio; Raw and Roast.

SYRUP, Redpath's refined.

RICE, Arrican, Patna & South Carolina,

TOBACCOS, 5s. 10s. ½ lbs, & in Bond or Duty paid.

PIPES, T D Glasgow & Montreal, Bums, Cutty and fancy Pipes.

RAISINS, Boxes, ½ do. ¼ do. M. R. Layers & Sultana in drums.

PICKLES & SAUCES, Batley's Thins, &c., Olive Oil, Quarts and Pints.

WINES & LIQUORS, Old Port, Sherry, Champaign, Claret Soutern (case Brandy,) Martell & U. V. Proprietors, London Old Tom, London Cordial Gin, Booth's Lound & Thins, Scotch Malt Whiskey in Cases, with a lot of

SUPERIOR CANADIAN WHISKEY.

OILS & PAINTS, An assortment.

PAILS & BROOMS, 2 and 3 hoop Pails; wire and cord Brooms; Wash boards Wood and Zinc; nest of wooden Bowls; nest of wooden Tubs.

ALSO

SALT, 500 Bags and Barrels Liverpool coarse Salt.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Wholesale Grocers,
HUNTER STREET.
Peterboro', 19th October, 1858. 41

RAISINS, FIGS, &c.

25 Drums Sultana Raisins. 25 Drums Figs. 50 Boxes Halves and Quarter Layer Raisins. 25 Boxes Shelled Almonds. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

GOLDEN SYRUP.

REDPATH'S Refined Sugar House Golden Syrup. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WINDOW GLASS.

100 BOXES Window Glass, assorted sizes. For Sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

Gunpowder Tea.

25 HALF CHESTS, on consignment, will be sold low.
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDIED LEMON, ORANGE and CITRON PEEL. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

PALE SEAL AND WINTER BLEACHED OIL For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

WRAPPING PAPER.

500 REAMS assorted kinds. For sale by S. E. CURRY & Co. 44

MATCHES.

ROUND Wood. Paper Boxes, Card and Split. For sale by
44 S. E. CURRY & Co.

CANDLES.

BELMONT, Belmont Sperm, Adamantine and Wax Wick Candles Superior articles. For sale by
S. E. CURRY & Co.
Hunter Street,
Peterboro', Nov. 10, 1858. } 44

NEW FEATURES.

FIFTH YEAR OF THE
COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION.
SUPERB ENGRAVINGS,
Beautiful Art Journal.—Valuable Premiums, &c., &c.

THIS popular Art Association, now in its fifth year of unparalleled success, having purchased, and engraved on steel, Herring's great painting, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," will now issue copies (to subscribers only) on heavy plate paper, 30 x 20 inches, on the following

Terms of Subscription.

Every person remitting THREE DOLLARS, will receive a copy of the superb Steel Engraving, after Herring's celebrated Painting,

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

Also a copy of the

COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL

An elegantly illustrated quarto Magazine. Also free Season Tickets of admission to the Eastern, (or Dunsdeer,) and Western Galleries of the Association.

There will also be given to the Subscribers several hundred valuable works of Art, comprising fine Oil Paintings, Bronzes, Sculptures, &c., &c., from celebrated American and foreign Artists.

Subscriptions will be received up to January 1, 1860. On the evening of that day premiums will be awarded to Subscribers.

For full particulars, see Prospectus and Journal, which do cover. Specimen copies sent to those desiring to subscribe, on receipt of 25 cents in postage stamps or coin. Address

C. L. DERBY, Actuary C. A. A.,
Eastern Office, 348 Broadway, N. Y.
Or, Western Office, 108 Water Street, } 44
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Subscriptions received by R. S. Potterton Esq., Secretary, Peterboro'.

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£200,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A.J.McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A.J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.
CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.
Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.
RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.
HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.
CAPITAL £500,000.
Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND LIFE GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.
CAPITAL £3,500,000 Sterling.
CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company,

OF TORONTO, C. W.
Subscribed Capital, $1,667,000. Paid up Capital, $833,334.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON. | E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUNCAN, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONELL, Esq
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.
ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.
AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 2-tf.

PETERBOROUGH

AUCTION ROOMS.

ROBERT S. HENTHORN, respectfully announces to the inhabitants of Peterborough and surrounding Country, that he has this day taken out a license as an

AUCTIONEER,

and that he will always be ready to act at short notice regarding his auctions.

Having had a long experience in the business as Auctioneer Bailiff, and Clerk on Queen's Bench, last four North of Simcoe, Gwillimbury, Tecumseth, (Hutchinson's Block,) where he will be found ready at all times to attend to calls.

From long and great attention to the business may be relied on by those entrusting to him Commissions for sale.

Peterborough, Nov. 17th, 1858. 6

Business Notices.

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary, trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has bought from Mr. Caisse his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for

One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.
Peterboro', Oct. 5th, 1858- 39-tf

ORMOND & GILMOUR,

HAVE REMOVED TO THEIR
NEW SHOP,
CORNER OF GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS.
Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1858. 42

NOTICE.

APPLICATION will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting, for an act to amend the Act incorporated the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company and the Acts amending the same, by reviving the provision for extending the Line to Chemong Lake, to construct a Branch from Manvers Station to Port Perry, to reduce the number of Directors and for other purposes.

By order of the Board,
THOMAS RIDOUT.
Secretary.
P. H. L. & B. Railway Co.
Port Hope, Dec. 15, 1858. 50

TO THE TRADE!

PETERBORO'
Soap and Candle Works.

A large stock of very superior
CANDLES AND SOAP
now on hand and for sale at the lowest wholesale prices.

☞ Orders are respectfully solicited.
Cash for Lard, Tallow and Soap Grease.
OGILVY & HOOD.
Peterboro, Dec 30th, 1858. 51

MR. C. R. DEARNALY,

WILL open a FENCING SCHOOL, or school of ARMS in the large room over Mr. Lundy's store, on January 1st, when young men desirous of acquainting themselves with this gentlemanly and athletic exercise will receive instruction in the art.

Application to be made to the drill master at Dublin Castle.
Peterborough, Dec. 29th, 1858. 51

NEW BOOT, SHOE,

AND LEATHER STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER would respectfully inform the inhabitants of this place and vicinity, that he has taken premises on George Street, second door South of Hunter Street (opposite McFarlands Grocery Store), where he has a large and select Stock of,

BOOTS, SHOES, LEATHER & FINDINGS,

Both home and American Manufacture, which he is prepared to sell at VERY LOW PRICES FOR CASH, and trusts by fair dealing, close attention to his business, and prices to correspond with the times, to merit a share of public patronage.

☞ Boots and Shoes made to order and repairing done with neatness and despatch.

J. B. BISBEE.
Peterborough. Dec 16th 1858. 49.

NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Peterborough & Chemong Lake Railway Company will apply at the next session of the Provincial Parliament for an Act to amend their Act of Incorporation and to enable them to extend their Railway to some point on French River or Lake Nipissing and for other purposes.

ASA A. BURNHAM.
President.
P. & C. L. R. Co.
Peterborough, Jan. 10th 1859. 3

NOTICE.

THE subscriber begs to notify all those indebted to him by

Note or Account,

that all debts remaining unpaid at the end of the current month, will be charged with interest at the rate of 12 per cent.

LEWIS GLOVER.
Ashburnham, Jan. 7th 1859. 2-6in

LOST.

ON Friday, 24th ult, a Small Bundle of Papers, tied with red tape. The finder will confer a favour by leaving them at this office.

CHARLES PERRY.
Peterboro,' Jan. 15th 1859. 3.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

Agricultural Foundry!

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the Farming Community, and the Public at large, that he has concluded to meet the hardness of the times, in some measure, by reducing his prices, FOR CASH ONLY, upon articles of his manufacture. He has on hand a good supply of Ploughs, Harrows, Scufflers, Turnip-drills, HORSE-RAKES, LAND-ROLLERS,

CULTIVATORS, CHURNS,
STRAW-CUTTERS AND TURNIP-CUTTERS.

He also desires to call attention to three particular kinds of Ploughs; the Scotch Canadian, Canadian Farmer,

AND THE Farmer's Friend,

Any one of which cannot but give the greatest satisfaction to practical Farmers.

☞ Repairing of all kinds, & good assortment of

CHEESE PRESSES, STEEL WIRE, AND WASHING MACHINES.

Call at the "Agricultural Foundry," before making your purchases, and satisfy yourselves of the advantage of buying from him.

JAMES HAMILTON.
Peterboro', Feb. 10, 1858. 6

Farms, &c., For Sale.

TO LET.

A handsome BRICK COTTAGE, on Simcoe street. The building is new, and has been papered throughly. The conveniences are such as cannot fail to make a pleasant residence.—For further particulars apply to the owner.

JOHN BAYER.
Peterborough 27th Oct. 1858 43tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,
W. MCCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building to, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are 80y acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT
Asphodel, 18th June, 1858. 24tf

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber has been instructed to sell on very reasonable terms, some valuable

PARK LOTS,

in the vicinity of the town of Peterboro.'

TITLE GUARANTEED.

Apply to
GEORGE A. STEWART.
Surveyor and Land Agent.
Mill Street, Port Hope.
Port Hope, 15th January, 1859. 3-tf

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 6th, 1857. 18.

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

THE Superb Engraving, "THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH," and the beautiful ART JOURNAL, which are furnished to subscribers of the Cosmopolitan Art Association, can now be seen at this Office for a short time only. See advertisement elsewhere headed "New Features." 46

SUPERBLY BEAUTIFUL!

JUST OUT,
THE COSMOPOLITAN ART JOURNAL
FOR DECEMBER.

OVER seventy pages—choice articles—elegantly illustrated—splendid Steel Engraving. Price 25 Cents. Specimen copy sent, on receipt of 12 Cents, in stamps or coin.

Address
C. L. DERBY,
348 Broadway, N. Y.
December 6, 1858. 46

WINTER ARRANGEMENT.

Port Hope Lindsay & Beaverton, and Port Hope & Peterboro' Railways.

ON and after Monday, January 24th, 1859, Trains will move as follows:—

Leave Lindsay 9.05 a. m., arrive at Port Hope 1.30 p. m.

Leave Port Hope 2.30 p. m., arrive at Lindsay 7 p. m.

Peterboro' Section.

Leave Port Hope 11 a. m., arrive at Peterboro' 12.30 p. m.

Leave Peterboro' 4 p. m., arrive at Port Hope 5.30 p. m.

[illegible] 12.30 p. m.
[illegible] 5.30 p. m.

Passengers from Lindsay and Port Hope to meet and 10 minutes at Peterboro' and proceed same day.

Connect the above Trains with the connecting lines Grand Trunk Railway.

M. T. WILLIAMS, Superintendent.
R. McLEOD, General Manager.
Peterboro', January 22, 1859. 4

Miscellaneous.

BROWN & CLARKE'S OLD STAND.

Professor Lee,
CHAMPION HAIR-CUTTER

EASY SHAVING, Fashionable Hair-Cutting, and Shampooing neatly executed. Razors and Scissors ground and set, and all kinds of Surgical Instruments put in order.

Clothes Cleaned on the Shortest Notice.

☞ Remember the place.—Brown & Clarke's old Stand.

Peterboro', December 2, 1858. 49

BOOTS SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 29th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

RITCHIE'S HOTEL, BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keeps first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.
Bobcaygeon, May 25, 1858. 31

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 8

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers have great pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strong's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give such satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them as to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object.

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.
Port Hope, May, 1857. 21

TERMS OF THE
MONTREAL WITNESS
FOR 1859.

SEMI-WEEKLY EDITION,
TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM.
WEEKLY EDITION
2 dollars per single copy, per annum.
6 " for clubs of 6 addressed separately.
20 " for 20 copies to one address.

When a club has been formed, additions may be made at the same rate.

Any one remitting ten subscriptions for either or both editions, will receive a copy of the semi-weekly gratis, except in a case of 20 copies to one address.

The terms for both editions are strictly cash in advance, and the paper invariably stops when the time subscribed for expires.

The Witness has from the beginning been much indebted for whatever success it has attained, to the kind efforts of friends all over the country in its behalf, and it is now as much as ever dependent on their voluntary agency.

Advertisements, not at variance with the character of the paper, will be inserted in the semi-weekly at 7 cents per line for first insertion, and 3 cents for each subsequent insertion; in the weekly, the charge will be 20 cents per line for each insertion.

Every family should take a city paper in addition to the local newspaper. The latter is necessary, on account of the local intelligence it gives, whilst the former is valuable for its general information.

All business orders, and remittances to be addressed, post-paid, to

JOHN DOUGALL,
Proprietor "MONTREAL WITNESS," Montreal.

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambria" a large assortment of

Young Hyson,
Gunpowder,
Young Hyson,
Twankay,

Which will be sold low for Cash by

R. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 28

LEONARD SCOTT & Co.'s

REPRINTS OF THE
BRITISH REVIEWS,
AND
BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

L. SCOTT & CO., NEW YORK, continue to publish the following leading British Periodicals, viz:

1.
THE LONDON QUARTERLY [Conservative].
2.
THE EDINBURGH REVIEW [Whig].
3.
THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW [Free Church].
4.

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1859.

Volume 4.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 8.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognised.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0 2 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 3 4
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

DENTISTRY.

THE SUBSCRIBER is now giving his entire attention to DENTISTRY, and will be happy to attend to all parties desiring TEETH FILLED or EXTRACTED, or TEETH ARRANGED, Upper has residence, in the brick cottage three doors west of Poole's Cabinet Warerooms, Hunter-street.

PRICES:—For Filling Teeth with Gold (ordinary or oval) cavities) 5s 6d each; (no other Filling recommended.) Shattering 7½d. All operations warranted.

M. MOORE.

Peterborough, Febry 17th, 1859. 7

J. J. MARSHALL,

DEALER in Butter, Cheese, Pork, Flour, Meal, Molasses, Syrup, Teas, Sugars, Coffee, Tobaccos, Spices and Fruits. Also—Crockery, Glass ware, Window Glass, Brooms, Pails and Wash Boards; George Street, Peterboro'. 46

MESSRS. CLEMENTI,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, AND
Draughtsmen,
Office over the Post Office, Peterboro'.
V. M. CLEMENTI, T. B. CLEMENTI.

PAINTING AND PAPER HANGING!

ROBERT STEVENSON,

KEEPS always on hand a large and varied assortment of Room Papers, from mere nominal prices up to the richest patterns manufactured, and which he will sell on the best possible terms.

Painting, Glazing and Furnishing executed under his own superintendance, at moderate prices.

Brock Street, Peterboro'. 41

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vizard, Esq.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

